DEAR DAD ...

GUESS every day was always sort of Father's Day so far as I was concerned, Dad, even the one when we had a session in the basement with a strap because I used the feather on Mrs. O'Riley's hat as target for the slingshot you had made me. You tried to look stern, Dad, but I had a hunch you would like to have taken a crack at it yourself.

Maybe the reason I remember that now is because we found the sling-shot when you were helping me clear out my corner of our workroom a few days before I joined the air force.

You had never talked much before about your days in the first World War; but I'm glad you did then, Dad, because it made me see that what American soldiers did at Chateau-Thierry and on other battlefields of the Old World then was a fight that we have to finish today. Gosh, Dad, you were the same age I am now -just twenty-five-when you went across, weren't you? Somehow, I can't quite take that in.

And, Dad, I've thought a lot about what you said at the station the morning you and Mom saw me off. You told me to fight a better fight than you did so that my son would never have to go to war. Remember?

Mom was a little shocked when you said, "Give the Heinies hell, Son, and really clean em up this time. And if worse comes to worst, I'll be over to help you finish the job." You grinned then, Dad, but I knew by the look in your eyes that you meant it. And how! Right then it did sound a little strange for you to be talking about a son I didn't have,

Dad, but I've sorta thought that through, and I get it now. What you really meant was that we Americans have to fight to give kids, who will be men tomorrow, a chance to enjoy the freedom that always has been ours.

Guess the radio, more than anything else, has made that clear to me. For when we turn it on here at the field, and listen to what America and her allies are doing, it sure makes the world seem like a small place, as though Europe and her troubles were right on our own doorstep and we had to do something—and fast!

My commanding officer told me yesterday that I was going to get my chance to take a whack at the enemy soon. Wish

I could tell you where I'm go-ing to land, but I don't know myself. And, if I did, I couldn't tell you, because no one can take any chances in this man's war, as the enemy seems to be in the very air around us. But when I take my bomber over the enemy's territory, I'll send the first bomb for you, Dad

-you and your buddies who didn't come back from the last great conflict. Not because I want to kill, you understand, Dad, but to do my part toward giving all men a chance to look up at untroubled skies without fear.

Father of four sons

is Bing Crosby, star

of radio and screen

Don't forget to keep my gun oiled, Dad, for our next rabbit-hunt together.

Give my love to Mom, and tell her Army chow is swell, but that it can't quite hit the same spot a slab of her blueberry pie used to. So long for now, Dad. I'll be seeing you.

PROUD of her country, every inch an American, Ann Sothern keeps these three bad eggs—Hitler, Hirohito and Mussolini—prominently displayed in her home, just to remind herself that they are a grade of hen-fruit that never could be hatched in America. "But," says Ann, "they're a great trio on which to practise Bronx cheers, otherwise known as the razzberry." Right now bigger and better pictures are looming on the movie horizon for La Sothern. Already under consideration for her at M-G-M is the title role of "May Flavin," which she is eager to play. Personally, we can't think of anyone who would fit it better than Ann. In the meantime, she's busy entertaining service men in Army camps adjacent to Hollywood. If present plans work out, she will soon go on a nation-wide tour of Army camps. For Ann's a prime favorite with all of Uncle Sam's nephews!

HOW BING CROSBY WILL LIVE ON $25,000 A YEAR

BING'S a happy horse-man, for his stable pays its own way. But win, place or show, Crosby is a true sportsman. With his vacation scheduled to start this week, Bing will spend hours at the track

WHEN the President urged a war-time $25,000 limit on incomes, he sent shudders along many famous Hollywood spines. Pencils squeaked far into the night as name stars tried to squeeze six-figure budgets under the $25,000 ceiling.

But Bing Crosby can take the cut without a whimper. His huge income has never turned his head. He's a regular fellow with a sincere love of simple things.

Bing's non-working life centers around his family, his home, his horses and his wide range of sports interests. He lives well and owns two comfortable houses. Wife Dixie Lee manages them with very few ser-vants, for home to the Crosbys is not a cross between Grand Hotel and Buckingham Palace. Bing and Dixie are home bodies, and the bright spots see them seldom.

Bing wants his four boys to be real kids. He may splurge in such matters as playground equipment for them, but he keeps them in public school.

Bing's strictly an "old hat and slacks" dresser. He dresses for comfort, not splendor. It's the same with cars. The singer drives his own, an old convertible. The family's other car is a Ford station-wagon.

The horses sound like an expensive hobby, but they aren't to Bing. His stable (KMH cracks to the contrary notwithstanding) pays its own way. His $400,000 investment in Del Mar Race Track has paid dividends, though these may disappear for the duration.

When Bing seeks amusement outside his home, he's usually to be found at the ball park or the boxing-arena or the golf course. It's a pleasure to sit near Bing at the ball park and hear him explain the fine points of the game to a couple of his boys.

Bing is a golfer of near-championship caliber. When he and his pal and fellow comedian, Bob Hope, played benefit matches to aid the Army-Navy Emergency Relief, the fans came out for laughs and stayed to watch fine golf. Fortunately for Bing, baseball and golf are luxuries well within the range of a $25,000 income.

In the past Bing has been a heavy contributor to many charities. If the ceiling is slapped down, his time may have to replace his money gifts, but the charities benefiting from Bing's appearances won't be losers.

All in all, Bing should make out all right, ceiling or no ceiling. If his radio and record earnings and his salary for such movies as "Road to Morocco" should be taxed to the bone, the regular fellow who lives at Rancho Santa Fe will grin and bear it. He'll still have his home, his family, and the same comfortable old clothes.

MR. AND MRS. CROSBY relax after tennis at Palm Springs. Dixie Lee is such a beauty that housekeeping talent seems too much to expect. But Dixie runs the Crosby home most efficiently and smoothly with the help of a very small staff of servants

THIRD ROAD is Bing's and Bob Hope's "Road to Morocco," from which the pictures right and left were taken. The Bing-Bob team of friendly enemies is producing box-office and salary revenue from which Uncle Sam will profit handsomely if the $25,000 salary ceiling is slapped on. Bing isn't complaining, for he will live the life he likes, ceiling or no ceiling. Meantime he has the satisfaction of knowing that roaring comedies like "Road to Morocco" help national morale by easing war-frayed nerves

CAN A WOMAN

BE BOSS?

"Take a Letter, Darling," Hilarious Paramount Comedy, Provides An Answer

HE SAYS:

OF COURSE one man can't speak for all men on the subject of "Can a Woman Be Boss?" but I venture to say there is probably more than appears on the surface to the old saying that "the hand that rocks the cradle rules the world." Right now, with so many men being called into military service, and women taking their places on the business and homedefense fronts, the question is, naturally, a vital one. But as a soldier in the armed forces at present, who will, God willing, one day return to civilian life, I don't believe that my job will be endangered because women have been carrying on in business while men were at war. Nor do I believe any man who knows his job and is worth his salt entertains any such idea. My service cap is off to women who keep their chins up and carry on alone. From where I stand, it isn't a question of "Can a Woman Be Boss?" but "How Well Is She Going to Handle a Difficult Job?"

SHE SAYS:

SPEAKING for the woman executive, I'm quite willing to admit that there are a few members of my sex who, as one man acidly put it, are gleefully taking the places of men called into service, hardly giving the chair of the evacuee a chance to cool before they are in it, making plans for a life lease on his job. But I also want to state-and emphaticallythat they are in the minority. And that flat statement stems from the fact that I have known and observed women in business from Coast to Coast. They have reached the top in a man's world for the most part because they had the patience to handle details scorned by the majority of men. Too, many of these women have carried the burden of supporting dependents. Furthermore, when you talk to these women away from their slick offices and glass-topped desks, those who wouldn't exchange both for a home and children are as scarce as the proverbial hen's teeth.

LONELY WOMEN

By IRNA PHILLIPS

IRNA PHILLIPS is one of radio's most famous writers. Since 1930 her serials have thrilled radio listeners. Just turning forty, Miss Phillips is probably the highest-paid woman in the radio industry. For years she has been turning out more than two million words of serial copy each year—enough to make twenty good-size novels.

At present Miss Phillips is supervising the writing of four famous dramatic programs. They are "Road of Life," "Guiding Light," "Woman in White" and "Right to Happiness."

To these is now added the new serial, "Lonely Women." On this page is the author's introduction.

> Next week meet some of the women whose lives are traced in "Lonely Women," a new serial to be heard on NBC beginning June 29.

Split Seconds—or Long Years—of Aloneness Are a Woman's Lot; Here Is a Story Throbbing With the Pain of Loneliness

ITHIN the cycle of the hours there comes to each one of us, consciously or subconsciously, a split second in which we experience a sense of aloneness—indefinable, indescribable, yet so poignantly real—that split second of aloneness which can never be shared with anyone. But because of the complexities of life, this split second of aloneness for hundreds of thousands of men and women has extended itself into hours, days, years.

We've all heard at one time or another the expression "I never feel so alone as when I'm in a crowd." We've laughed at the facetious remark "When I'm with you I'm alone." "You can't know how I feel—how can you, you've never been in my shoes?"—"I wish you could have been with me"—"I wish you could have been with me"—"I wish you could have seen"—"If only you'd been there"—"It's no fun doing things alone" . . . common, everyday expressions that each one of us uses, hardly knowing that we do, not recognizing at the moment the universal theme that underlies these common, every-day expressions—the theme of loneliness.

Thousands upon thousands of men and women have remained within the bonds of matrimony because they were afraid—are afraid of starting over again, alone. The mere physical presence of the other is enough to satisfy at least a small part of the need for some sort of human communion that is so necessary to make us comfortable.

Whether we should blame civilization with its repetition of wars for the ratio that exists between men and women today is a little difficult to decide. However, we do know that there are more women than men in the world.

Out of curiosity I called upon Webster to define the word "alone," and this is Webster's definition: "Unaccompanied; solitary; single; unmarried"; and he adds, "Usually of women, with humorous or pathetic implication; as a poor lone woman."

Perhaps because there is no one as concerned with woman's destiny as a woman, it occurred to me that an audience primarily made up of women would be interested today, of all times, when men—husbands, brothers, sweethearts.

sons—are leaving their homes to defend those homes . . . it occurred to me that these women would be interested in a story of lonely women.

Perhaps, too, I felt the woman who from time to time feels that hers is a humdrum existence of rearing a family, of preparing three meals a day, of waiting for the children, for the husband—the woman who believes she sees glamour in the lives of thousands of women who are making their way, alone—who have careers, who are in constant touch with the outside world . . perhaps I felt there was a message that could be given to these wives, these mothers, these homemakers, in the story of "LONELY WOMEN."

AT FIRST glance it might seem that being alone—feeling a sense of aloneness—implies depression, futility, unhappiness. This is not necessarily true. In fact, the sense, the feeling of aloneness can and often is an inexhaustible source from which come some of the most worth-while contributions to mankind. The scientist, the artist, the musician, the literary men and women throughout the ages have not been, as we so often think, alone. They have found an outlet for their aloneness in putting to work their God-given talents in something that could be shared by others.

Neither you nor I nor hundreds of thousands like us have been given a divine talent; but in our daily existence we, too, can use our aloneness as an impetus to contribute something worth while to others. We may not be a Michelangelo, a Tschaikowsky, an Einstein, a George Sand, an Eleonora Duse, an Elizabeth Browning; but we can create—we can express—we can give of ourselves . . . we can share with others those things that make up our daily existence.

We women are in the majority. The effect that we can have on others can be as great if not greater at times than the contributions that have been made by men and women in the arts and sciences. In other words, we need not be alone—except in that split second that comes to each of us—that split second of aloneness which can never be shared with anyone.

MYRA awoke, saw a wild-eyed man

The thrilling story of the radio program "Joyce Jordan," fictionized by Wiley Maloney, is broadcast Monday through Friday over CBS at 2:15 p.m. EWT, 1:15 p.m. CWT, 1:30 p.m. MWT, 12:30 p.m. PWT, under the sponsor-ship of General Foods Corp. for Satina. La France and Postum. A tragic episode in the life of Dr. Joyce Jordan hegins when she and her husband. Paul Sherwood, bring Margot, Paul's neurotic sister, home from the santarium to live with them. Their attempt to bring Margot back to a normal life fails miserably when Margot's mind snaps under the strain of an unsuccessful romance with Chester Hedgerow, and she attempts to kill Joyce. Paul blames Joyce for the whole affair and, when Margot re-turns to the sanitarium, he goes to the city to live. His success as a columnist attracts the attention of Sheila Brand, who invites him to help her with a book she is writing. When Paul learns that Joyce is going to heve a baby he attempts a reconciliation but she refuses.

Paul is stricken in Sheila's apartment with the disease he contracted while covering the war in Ethiopia, and Joyce is called in to handle the case. Ignoring her orders before he is well, Paul suffers a relapse. Prescribing emergency treatment over the phone, Joyce rushes to his bedside for the second time by plane in the face of a raging storm. The pilot attempts to lar on an ice-bound field, at Joyce's in sterce, but the plane noses over and see is injured. At the hospital she undergoes an unsuccessful operation to save the life of her unborn child. Paul, meanwhile, has recovered and rushes to her bedside, where they are reconciled.

When Joyce recovers she takes a position on the hospital's staff and asks for the help of Dr. Alan Webster, with whom she became acquainted convalescing. They become close friends and Joyce learns of the young doctor's fear of his father— stern, old Dr. Thomas Webster. Alan's father feels that Joyce is exerting undue influence on his son and threatens to expose her as the daughter of the dis-graced Dr. Walton if she does not leave.

Joyce hadn't told Paul about her father, whom she hasn't seen since she was a child, and is very disturbed one night shortly after leaving the hospital when Paul brings home to dinner a mysterious Mr. Walton. The elderly man proves to Joyce that he is her father and seeks forgiveness. Taken completely by surorise, Joyce begs him to leave, then tells Paul about her childhood.

Visited one day at her office by Alan, Joyce learns of the young doc-tor's wish to be reconciled with his father. He tells her of his plan to risk his life in an experiment his father is working on. When Alan volunteers the next day, old Dr. Webster is furious and accuses Joyce of plotting against him. But finally, after a bitter argument, he inoculates his son with the deadly disease and Alan sinks into a coma from which he won't recover if his father's serum is a failure. The experiment is a success, and father and son are reconciled and Joyce wins the confidence of the old doctor.

At Paul's insistence. Joyce reluctantly forgives her father. But she becomes suspicious a short time later when he introduces her to youthful, pretty Myra Lee tells her that they are to be married. Joyce is astonished at the strange match and isn't surprised when Myra and Alan Webster fall in love, and her engagement to Walton is broken. Courtney Lee, Myra's wealthy father, is strangely antagonistic to her proposed marriage to the young doctor, but Joyce encourages the young couple.

But the day they were to pick out the engagement ring, Myra rushes into Joyce's apartment on the verge of hysteria. "Joyce," she confides, "my engagement to Alan is broken. Daddy says that Mother was insane and that I, too, have inherited the strain." Now go on with the story.-The Editors.

HE children's clinic at Height's Hospital didn't seem the same without Myra Lee, the charming volunteer worker whom Dr. Joyce Jordan had become so

As Joyce went about her duties, she couldn't help thinking back over the events that had climaxed in the scene at her home the night before. She remembered Myra's white, frightened face . . . Myra's frightened words. "At first," the girl had said, "my father seemed very reluctant to speak. He seemed to be under a terrible nervoos strain. Then he told me why he and my mother had been divorced years ago. My mother was a victim of hereditary insanity, and now, of course, I've inherited it, too."

Joyce could hardly work that morning. From time to time, as she paused during the morning, she found herself thinking back, hearing once again the anguish in Myra's voice . .

"Alan and I can never be married now." Myra had said. "Everything we planned and hoped for is ruined. I don't want to hurt Alan, and I don't know how to tell him. He loves me and I know he'll want to marry me anyway, but I can't let him."

Joyce thought of Alan, too. She couldn't forget his puzzled face as he left the apartment the night before without being told why Myra was breaking off with him. He thought it was because of her engagement to Walton which had just been public-ly announced that morning in the newspapers.

"But, Joyce," he said when they met, "it—it seems incredible—a girl like Myra engaged to your father. How on earth could she become engaged to a man so much older?"

"I don't know, I certainly don't approve of the match. In fact, I was very glad when Myra broke her engagement."

"Broke her engagement?"

"Yes. She broke it a short time after she met you."

"Well, this makes it harder to understand than ever. If Walton isn't the reason she won't marry me, then what is? Joyce, I've got to find out somehow. I've got a feeling there's something behind all this . . ."

Joyce had the same feeling. It became stronger when she talked to Myra's father later that day and found him extremely evasive regarding the details of his former wife's affliction. He held no hope whatever for Myra's recovery from the disease and discouraged Joyce in seeking medical help.

"You just don't understand, Dr. Jordan. You just don't seem willing to take the advice of someone who's gone through all this before. This—this is just torture to her. Eventually it will break her because it will build

But Joyce persisted in her course. She contacted Dr. Franz Rheinhardt, the famed neurologist, and he promised to examine Myra over the protests of both Walton and Courtney Joyce knew that it would be necessary to obtain something of the clini-cal history of Myra's mother. But when Myra looked in a trunk where she'd put letters from her mother the letters, postcards and addresses were strangely missing. What could have happened to them? Why had nyone wanted them? Why was Joyce facing such hidden opposition in her efforts to prove that Myra was healthy and mentally sound?

Dr. Rheinhardt, a kind man with a beard and a cigar he smoked too short, examined the beautiful girl and, although he admitted that his was only a preliminary examination, he said that she appeared to be perfectly normal in every respect.

After Dr. Rheinhardt had gone, Joyce encouraged Myra and Dr. Webster to go out to see a show.

"Maybe that's a good idea," Myra replied. "Joyce, how can we get a case history of Mother's illness? Isn't there some way we can reach her in London without having her address?"

"I think I know how we can get her address. While you were in with Dr. Rheinhardt, I went to see Paul. He showed me some newspaper clippings reporting your mother's divorce action and they gave the name of her attorney. He may have her address."
"And," said Myra, "he'd probably know all about the whole case since they got the divorce because of Mother's mental disorder.'

"I don't think so, Myra," Joyce said owning. "The newspaper story frowning. "The newspaper story didn't mention anything of the sort." "It didn't?"

"They were divorced on the grounds of incompatibility."

Myra's hand went to her mouth. She looked surprised and shocked and puzzled.

"That's funny," she said. "Daddy told me he divorced her because of this illness she inherited. Do you think Daddy could have been lying to me?"

The next day there was another surprise. Joyce told Myra that she'd just learned that Roger Walton had tried to bribe Dr. Rheinhardt to turn in a false report on Myra's condition.

Myra was speechless with shock. She hung up the receiver and then, suddenly feeling the nervous strain of the emotionally exhausting events, she lay down on the sofa in the livingroom. She couldn't help thinking back over the strange developments that made her see her father in an entirely new light. Unanswered questions tortured her.

Before she knew it, Myra fell off to sleep. How long she lay there, she didn't know. Suddenly there was a movement in the room and she awoke. She sat bolt upright on the couch. She found herself looking into the strange, wild eyes of a tattered, un-kempt man. He was weird-looking with his long, nervous fingers and queer wild eyes.

"Who are you?" Myra asked, frightened. "What are you doing here?"

"Where's your father? When will he be back?"

"I-I don't know." Myra edged closer to a telephone, but the strange man guessed what she was trying to do.

"Keep away from that telephone," he said. "Put down that phone.

The man was about to answer when there was a knock at the door and Joyce Jordan entered the room. Myra felt almost weak with relief.

"I—I didn't mean to frighten her," the stranger said apologetically, just wanted to speak to her."

"He's-he's crazy, Joyce. Insane." "Insane?" the man asked sharply. "Maybe. I-I just tried to tell her about her father. I-I was trying to be kind to her, and she thought I wanted to hurt her."

Joyce calmed the man with her cool professional voice in which he found a friendly note. He appeared less excited, more at ease.

The stranger nodded slowly and Joyce smiled. Myra hardly could believe her ears when Joyce invited the tattered man to come with them to Paul's office.

But just then Roger Walton came in. There was immediate recognition in his eyes when he saw Sparrowhill,

"What are you doing here?" asked harshly.

WANTED IN HOLLYWOOD: REAL SPIDERS TO SPIN COBWEBS FOR MYSTERY FILMS!

New York City Ex-Policeman Phil Regan Will Become a Hollywood Glamour Boy; War Priorities Put Movie Stars on Buses and Trolleys

HOLLYWOOD By EVANS PLUMMER

WE ARE back in Hollywood after seven weeks in Chicago, New York and one day and night in Washington. The latter was quite enough, thank you. Not that we don't like Washington and its lovely, moist summer weather, and not that we don't love crowds, but we have decided definitely that there are enough people in Washington to win the war and that our presence merely made it overcrowded. Anyway, there was only one hotel room left when we arrived there, and we thought it would only be the patriotic thing to do to let someone else have it for the next 364 nights of the fiscal year. Lieut. Col. Curtis Mitchell has everything very well in hand (see page 10) as far as reporting the Wash-ington "Radio Front" is concerned, but perhaps you'd like a bit of inside on the movie business and Washington. Well, first, the War and Navy Departments daily preview every frame of newsreel footage before it is released to the nation's screens, and no one had better try to escape that censorship, either . . . They have a brig and a guardhouse! . . .

Second, the War Production Board or somebody has set his foot down on the spending of huge sums of money for new movie sets, or even the use of paint to freshen up the old ones. The maximum to be permitted on single picture budgets for sets or scenery is to be $5,000—for the duration, or until cut down more—so the scenery warehouses will be inventoried carefully from here on. The movie queens and princes, too, will be making most of their love out of doors (no scenery required) and the great day of westerns galore, which many kids have hoped for, is on the threshold . . .

The tire situation, though, and gas rationing are the two things that really have Hollywood groggy. The mystery thrillers will suffer for want of cobwebs (spun of rubber cement) and it may be they'll have to hire real union spiders, hereafter, to do the job. This is tough on Hollywood, as it does not like to do anything except with mirrors and false fronts. Tire scarcity and preciousness, plus the promised ogre of gas rations, have really slowed down the trucks and delivery services of the studios. Stars even ride on public buses and streetcars (!) to location, and it is getting to be a pretty pass when one has to get up to give one's seat to Maureen O'Hara or Dorothy Lamour! . . .

The other day, famous filmland designer Irene, who is doing Claudette Colbert's clothes for her new Paramount film "No Time for Love," finished one of the gowns and phoned the wardrobe department at the studio and asked them to pick it up. They said that the new transportation restrictions forbid it. "Well, then," said Irene, "I'll send it up in a taxi." No taxi could be used, either—against the rules. So, finally, Irene hired a messenger boy to hop on his bike and ride the seven miles from her salon to Paramount carrying the $500 evening gown on his arm! . . .

The war is affecting movies another way, too, by creating a shortage of handsome young leading men. You've read weekly in these columns how the Tyrone Powers, Bill Holdens, Ron Reagans, Wayne Morrises, Tony Martins, et al., have been lured by various arms of the service. But movie-making must go on for entertainment and morale. The answer is, then, to develop either very young (under twenty-one) leading men or leading men who are over thirty-five years of age but look much younger. One of the latter is Phil Regan. He has four children, yet is just thirty-five years of age. Somewhere along the route of Phil's movie-making career he was passed up because a film he acted in had a bad story, which he didn't write. The personable young Irishman, who was discovered in a New York police uniform eleven years ago by Guy Lombardo, has everything it takes and has been singing to standing-roomonly audiences at Chicago's Chez Paree. He could stay forever but Warner Bros.' glorifier, Charles Einfeld, coaxed him to come West again.

rapher who made a practise of hiding in the bushes about screen stars' homes and hoping to catch them most embarrassingly on his celluloid. He got Mary, all right, taking a sun bath and with sun-tan oil all over her face, and proposed that he'd "be around to-morrow or else" to show her the proofs. She told the intruder she dared him to come around tomorrow or any other day, and he hasn't, and doesn't dare! . . .

The leading man shortage is giving Randolph Scott a new chance, insured the renewal of Don Ameche's 20th Century-Fox contract, given new life to the Lloyd Nolan and Bill Gargan careers, and brought Lyle Talbot back to the lots from his successful Broadway run in "Separate Rooms." Talbot, thirty-eight, will play heavy in the next RKO-Lupe Velez film, "Mexican Spitfire's Elephant"; Scott, with his smash in "To the Shores of Tripoli" under his belt, takes the leads in RKO's "China Sky" and "Bombardier"; Nolan is at work with Carole Landis in 20th Century-Fox' "Manila Calling" and has bigger deals on the fire. At last reports, Clark Gable, certainly no young and dashing Lothario, has been doing all right, too, at the box-office! . . .

The divorce mill has been grinding rapidly. Charles Chaplin, fifty-two, and Paulette Goddard, thirty-one, have actually split legally, if a Mexican divorce is legal. Paulette obtained the divorce a fortnight ago at Juarez, Mexico, on the basis of previously established legal residence in the country "south of the border" June 1 marked the end of the Myrna Loy-Arthur Hornblow marriage by action at Reno. On June 6 Myrna wed John D. Hertz, Jr., advertising executive . . . Kathryn Grayson and John Shelton moved into separate quarters May 30, preparatory to getting a divorce. Shelton, who is within first draft age limits, stated that he plans to make application to enlist in the Army Air Corps . . .

Smart girl Rita Hayworth avoided the night-spots most noticeably the while her divorce from Eddie Judson was pending. Now Rita's free she's avoiding the spotlight, but, actually, Rita has been going to bed these nights because of stiff dance routines she must go through daily with Fred Astaire in their new co-starring picture for Columbia.

JOHN WAYNE and Binnie Barnes play lead roles in Republic's colorful adventure film, "In Old California," based on gold-rush days

MOVIE REVIEWS

"Take a Letter, Darling"

Cast: Rosalind Russell, Fred MacMurray, MacDonald Carey, Constance Moore, Robert Benchley, Charles Arnt, Cecil Kellaway, et al. A Paramount picture; produced by Fred Kohlmar and directed by Mitchell Leisen. Story by George Beck, with screen play by

Type of Picture: The slickest sophisticated comedy since "Love Affair," and just as satisfying.

This Is the Story: Rosalind Russell, with Bob Benchley as her silent partner, runs the pants off a great New York advertising agency and keeps a male secretary on hand chiefly block her clients' passes, reduce the clients' wives suspicions, and keep the wives occupied through his wiles.

But she hires the wrong Joe when MacMurray takes the desk. He makes no eyes at her, so she falls for him, with an insanely jealous plunge, too! Who wins the argument, and how, is too funny to reveal here. You must go to see this for its laughs, and to take a look at Rosalind's wardrobe and everybody's acting. Note, too, the nice work of newcomer MacDonald Carey. and the come-back of Connie Moore.

Verdict: It would be hard to say who earned the most honors for turning out this grand screen comedy. Everyone was at his or her best, and the story, its dialog, its direction were all perfect. A picture for everybody!

"In Old California"

Cast: John Wayne, Binnie Barnes, Albert Dekker, Helen Parrish, Patsy Kelly, Edgar Kennedy. A Republic picture, directed by William McGann, from an original story by J. Robert Bren and Gladys Atwater. Screen play by Gertrude Purcell and Frances Hyland.

Type of Picture: Action-packed film based on California gold-rush days, with poison, rather than a gun, in the hands of the villain in his efforts to discredit the hero.

This Is the Story: John Wayne, an easterner, sets up a pharmacist shop in a boom town with aid of Binnie Barnes, dance-hall singer engaged to dishonest political boss Albert Dekker, past master at villaining. Plot includes a near lynching, discovery of gold at Sutter's Mill, and an epidemic of disease that promotes Wayne.

Verdict: A swell adventure film for the whole family!

SONGSTRESS AIDS THE ARMY ... JOLSON TO BRAVE JAP BOMBS IN ALASKA

Nick Carter, Grandpa's Favorite Sleuth, To Be Aired; John Barrymore's Curtain Speech; Eddy Duchin Gets a Commission as a Navy Lieutenant

WASHINGTON By LT. COL. CURTIS MITCHELL

Jeanette MacDonald sat in my office the other day in a simple, tailored suit with a fur collar. She was dressed very un-Hollywoodish and except for the flaming red hair, which is her trade-mark, she seemed much more like a young American housewife. Most of her talk was of Lieutenant

Most of her talk was of Lieutenant Gene Raymond, who is in Washington en route to wherever the Air Force decides to send him. But her visit to the War Department was to offer her services to Army Emergency Relief.

The most sensationally successful concerts of any artist in the United States have been those of Miss MacDonald. She has toured the country regularly for several years and met with acclaim. She now proposes that she do this in order to help raise funds for Army Emergency Relief, the fund which is being created in order to finance the emergency needs of soldiers and their dependents.

The schedule of cities to be visited will be announced later . . .

The "Army Hour" continues to make radio history. Did you hear the broadcast of May 31? It offered the final message heard by the outside world from Corregidor. The sender was an American soldier who operated the radio key of the besieged fortress. He possessed no special sense of drama or literary ability, but when he felt the Japs closing in after General Wainwright had been forced to surrender, he put his thoughts into simple, heart-wrenching prose that made the year's most dramatic broadcast . . .

OPENING GUN in an all-out drive to sell war bonds in every American movie box-office was fired at a special Mutual broadcast. In the cast were (I. to r.) Edward Arnold, Edna Skelton, Marjorie Main, Red Skelton Tune in to that "Army Hour" on Sunday afternoon on any National Broadcasting Company station. It brings the war closer to us than anything else you are likely to hear . . .

Those who have heard Al Jolson only on the air have missed a great and important part of his personality. Soldiers in Alaska are going to hear him in person very soon. No star is giving himself more unstintedly than is Al Jolson. He has already made several trips among the camps and wherever he has gone, he has lifted the spirit of those who listened.

Not for nothing has Al been dubbed the greatest entertainer in the world. There are times when he really is. Even today, at an age when most men prefer cozy corners and easy chairs, he is our leading trouper. Which reminds me of something I was told by a radio director who first put Jolson on the air.

"The fellow is mercurial," he said. "He is great when he thinks you like his work. But you've got to keep building him up. You must tell him he is good and the audience must tell him he is good. Then, brother, he really is good! But let him get the idea that his stuff isn't going over and he turns moody and morose and his performance goes to pieces."

Many of us are like that, too. A pat on the back and we'll knock the world over, but a blast of criticism and we want to crawl in a hole.

Jolson leaves soon for Alaska. After the Jap attack on Dutch Harbor, one might think twice before taking that trip. Al insists on going. His schedule will be to appear twice a day before our soldiers up there. His only support will be a pianist, and he will sing all of the songs the boys want.

They'll want plenty!

"Radio's job to a large extent is to help make people shockproof," so declared Niles Trammell to the 1942 graduating class at De Pauw University where he was awarded an hon-orary Doctor of Laws degree. Mr. Trammell continued, "The morale of the American listener must be such as will prepare him for any contingency. We are a people who can take it. The American public with every advantage of observations and information knows that it cannot cheer itself to victory. It knows that bombast is no substitute for bombers. Radio has the serious job not only of informing and inspir-ing, but of awakening those whom apathy and complacency may have put to sleep." We feel there is little one could possibly add to the above. Radio is doing its job and doing it well in this great emergency . . .

They buried John Barrymore last Tuesday. He was put to rest honored by the largest turnout of friends and fans since Thelma Todd's interment. Carole Lombard's might have been a great funeral, but Clark and Carole's brother preferred to keep it quite private. Which reminds that Clark Gable came, alone of course. John Barry-more's body was put away at Calvary Cemetery but his spirit lives on. His daughter Diana, ex-wife Elaine Barrie, also the sister and father of ex-wife Dolores Costello, and brother Lionel were genuinely in mourning. Brother Lionel was heard to mutter a prayer for "young Jack" as he took his one last look inside the coffin. And so ended a great theatrical, screen and radio career, and happily, too, for John Barrymore's curtain speech—his dying words-were, "It's a wonderful place" . . .

The lassies who flock around the bandstand when Eddy Duchin is in action at the keyboard received a real thrill when announcement was made of the pianist-bandleader's commission as a U. S. He will serve as assistant to Lieutenant Commander Eddie Peabody . . .

According to the version that came my way, Glenn Miller, who is headquartering in Chicago while playing at near-by training camps, visited Duchin and was shown by Peter the lad's collection of Glenn Miller records. Glenn Miller's music, Peter revealed, was his favorite. To acquaint the boy with his dad's work, Glenn Miller presented him, the next day, with a complete record collection of Duchin numbers . . .

New York World-Telegram Music Critic and Associate Program Annotator for Philharmonic-Symphony Society of New York

GENEVIEVE ROWE won an Atwater-Kent contest some years ago, and that made her a big fish in a little pond back home in Wooster, Ohio. She was now very definitely a somebody, you see. Miss Rowe had studied piano under her father's watchful care at the Wooster Conservatory—director, Rowe pere—but winning that top prize in a rather difficult competition convinced him that hers was to be a singer's career.

Miss Rowe, a tall, willowy—that's the word—brunette, confessed, "Mother and Dad thought that I might become a concert pianist. I knew, however, that it wouldn't be so, though I didn't tell them for a long time how I felt. "Studying piano with my father was "Studying piano with my father was a hard assignment. He gave me lessons in theory and organ besides, which didn't make a daughter-student's life easier. Probably because I was his daughter he went all-out on the severity. But, please understand, these weren't the reasons for my wanting to study voice. That was something deep inside." As Miss Rowe spoke those words, there was the slightest trace of irony in her smile.

The Atwater-Kent award brought her prominence in spheres outside of Wooster, so that presently she was doing sustaining programs for NBC. She had the foresight to finish her studies, however, and then came to New York.

"And in New York," she explained, "I became the little fish in the big pond. But that's retributive justice for you. In the meantime, I waded into the contest thing for all I was worth and, I'm glad to say, I took first honors in a couple of other ones. There was the competition conducted by the National Federation of Music Clubs, some time ago, which brought me a neat $500—the Atwater-Kent amounted to $6,000, you know—and then a contest sponsored by the MacDowell Club gave me the chance to make my recital debut at the MacDowell Club in New York,

"So much for the contest thing. But here's an amusing side-light on all that money. I lost it during depression days. And what a story I could tell of hardships in the hig city!

"However," Miss Rowe continued, "I began to get around, as they say. I started in with a recital at the Town Hall, which, thanks be, got me some good notices. After that I was engaged to sing with a fairly light radio program that was under the direction of Alfred Wallenstein.

. "I must have made good on that or I shouldn't have been given important roles to sing in Mr. Wallenstein's Bach Cantata Series. Later I also appeared in his Mozart opera cycle, doing such roles as the Queen of the Night in 'The Magic Flute,' Constancia in 'The Abduction from the Seraglio' and others. And in Mr. Wallenstein's latest innovation, his 'First American Opera Festival,' I sang the soprano part in 'The Devil and Daniel Webster.'"

Miss Rowe doesn't disguise the fact that opera is her chief goal. So far she has learned the coloratura parts in "Rigoletto," "Lucia di Lammermoor," "Lakme," "The Barber of Seville," and she is now working on "La Traviata" and "Mignon."

As Jenny Lynn, on the CBS "Gay Nineties Revue," Miss Rowe is called upon to sing pieces of an altogether different sort. Syrupy ballads of the 90's vintage are the thing there, and it isn't unusual for her to have to deliver in tearful tones such delicacies as "Just a Bird in a Gilded Cage" and kindred matters. On one occasion—this has to do with a different program, which she wouldn't identify—she sang Bishop's "Lo, Here the Gentle Lark" and right after that a coloratura version of "The Hut-Sut Song," all of which gives you an idea of her versatility.

The one thing that Miss Rowe would like to do more than anything else is to "act up" the way the important divas do. She would like to go into beautiful tantrums, throw things around, and so on, but, as she says, "I'm too darned normal, I guess."

Nothing ever happens to her, she avers. For instance, there has never been a faux pas that she can recall with pleasure, no contretemps, no grotesqueries.

Confidentially, it's the first time we have heard of a singer having those ambitions. All the vocal personalities we have talked to freeze stiff at the mere thought of such things.

"I wish I could crack on a high note, sometime, or give out a juicy hiccough at a dramatic moment. You see, that would then make me feel as if I were part of the legend of bad moments in great lives. Is it wrong to hope for such things?"

Dear reader, do we need to remark that Miss Rowe is a terrific kidder, or is that being too obvious?

A Modern Romantic

Howard Hanson, director of the Eastman School of Music at Rochester, N. Y., composed his second symphony, which he subtitled "Romantic," for the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The work was given its first performance by that organization under Serge Koussevitzky's direction on November 28, 1930.

For that premiere Dr. Howard wrote an explanatory comment of the work, which was printed in the program. We quote a portion of it below:

"Concerning my second symphony, as the subtitle implies, it represents for me a definite and acknowledged embracing of the romantic phase. I recognize, of course, that romanticism is, at the present time, the poor stepchild, without the social standing of her elder sister, neoclassicism. Nevertheless, I embrace her all the more fervently, believing, as I do, that romanticism will find in this country rich soil for a new, young and vigorous growth."

Dr. Hanson's views are refreshing, to say the least. Here is one composer, at any rate, who doesn't feel it obligatory to listen to the siren voice of le dernier cri. It would take too much space to write about such things now, but there does seem to be a great deal of talk, among composers, as to what kind of music to write, what gods to follow and all that.

Perhaps, the same sort of thing existed in earlier times and, perhaps, too, it may have wielded its influence in giving to the world the masterpieces we now take for granted.

The important thing, it appears to this watcher of the musical skies, should be the inner urge to compose, to express what is in one's mind or heart, without restricting oneself by following the customs of any special cult.

Dr. Hanson, as he expresses in his own words, has attempted to write something he wanted very much to write. That is an uncommon thing in these times. Regardless of the worth of his music one may be thankful for the sincerity and personal urge that went into the writing. There should be more such creators. It would clear the atmosphere of much confusion.

(Howard Hanson's "Symphony No. 2" will be presented by the NBC Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Frank Black, on Saturday, June 20, Blue Network.)

Concert Records

The Columbia list for the month is impressive, considering the WPB curtailment. The disks we have heard, which are listed herewith, have several things in common: First-rate tonal qualities, mechanical finish and effective interpretations.

They are the Mendelssohn "Mid-summer Night's Dream," played by Artur Rodzinski and the Cleveland Orchestra; an album of Bach pieces, transcribed by Leopold Stokowski and played by the All-American Orchestra, which he directs; the Second Symphony of Robert Schumann, played by Dimitri Mitropoulos and the Minneapolis Symphony, and the Mozart "Piano Concerto in B Flat" (K. 595), played by Robert Casadesus, as soloist, and the Philharmonic-Symphony conducted by John Barbirolli.

The "Recordrama" idea, which Victor featured in conjunction with its Maurice Evans-Judith Anderson abbreviated version of "Macbeth," is this time carried out with respect to Rossini's "Barber of Seville," The album of particular value to students, though the Rossinian initiates will find little fault with the singing of Bruno Landi, Hilde Reggiani, Carlos Ramirez, Lucielle Browning and the others assembled in a well-balanced cast. The Victor Symphony and a chorus take part in the performance, which is under the direction of Giuseppe Bamhoschek.

POPULAR MUSIC

EW radio fans associate Margo, singing star of the "Cugat Rumba Revue"—heard over the Blue Network every Tuesday evening—with the Margo whose few appearances on the stage and the screen occasioned much favorable comment. Her performances, for instance, in "Lost Horizon" and "Winterset" won plaudits from critics and public alike.

However, the deep beat of Mexican music and, as a matter of fact, the pulsating and colorful rhythms of all Hispanic music are things to which she has been heir. It is easy to understand how she could give up the role of tragedienne because it meant that in being one she could not give voice to these strong musical impulses.

When she was four years old she manifested her first interest in dancing. Two years later her grandmother placed her in a dancing school over the protests of her parents. Leaving her native Mexico, she went with her family to Spain, where dancing and singing are so much a part of the lives of the people.

She returned to Mexico an accomplished artist in her respective field and she was lauded as a national heroine might be lauded. She even appeared with the National Symphony Orchestra of Mexico, under the lead-ership of the noted Carlos Chavez.

Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur were responsible for launching her theater career. They had scoured Hol-lywood, New York and London for a girl to play in their new picture, 'Crime Without Passion." They fortunately came upon Margo in a New York movie studio, where she had gone to accompany a friend. To make the story brief, she was engaged. There followed her work in the theater and on the screen, which finally ended with her appearance in Sidney Kingsley's "The World We Make."

She joined the forces of Xavier Cugat—he happens to be her uncle and with this organization she found the outlet for her musical heritage.
Usually it is the other way round.

Some of the greatest of theater and screen personalities began as singers or dancers. We know also that a number of eminent opera singers got their start in the world of popular song and dance. Margo represents, perhaps, the only instance of the reverse being true. She is to be congratulated for following her self-selected star.

ITALY'S FOOD SHORTAGE REVEALED . . NEW BBC FREQUENCIES

China Resumes Broadcasts From Chungking; Japs Pose as Filipinos' "Protectors"; London Airs Special Show for AEF in Great Britain

Italy's Food Situation

CCORDING to David Colin, NBC foreign correspondent who was interned in Italy since the entry of America into the war and who just recently returned to this country, most of the general discontent in the Fascist country is due to the ever increasing food shortage. While Italians cinch up their belts and enjoy one meat meal a week-Saturday noon-Germans in Rome's Deutschesheim glory in meat every meal, with unlimited quantities of bread. Butter, he said, has disappeared from the Italian table and eggs com-mand a farm price of from twenty to twenty-five cents each. Italians, muttering in their synthetic coffee, find the real article priced at $20 a pound, tea at $40.

In England, according to a talk from London by Lord Wilton, Minister of Food Supply, there is plenty of food but of the simpler kinds. There is no rationing of the important foods such as potatoes and other vegetables, bread and flour. Items such as fresh fruit and coffee are definitely rationed. Meat, butter and sugar are not available in the ample quantities of peace times. The Ministry of Food Supply, realizing the importance of good health for its workers and fighting forces, has planned the distribution of available foods in a scientific manner so that everyone-even the poorestwill have a sufficient quantity of the proper calories and vitamins. Workers doing excessively hard work are given double rations in many instances. Government canteens have been in-stalled in all parts of the country where a hearty, nourishing meal of plain foods may be had at the uniform price of about ten pence (approximately ten cents). No one willing to eat good, simple foods is likely to go hungry in Britain.

BBC's Summer Frequencies

The British Broadcasting Corporation recently put its summer frequencies into effect. This means that best reception from London will now be had at different spots on your dial. Frequencies and times for best reception from Britain are now as follows

6:45 to 11:15, 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. over GRE (15.39) 3:15 to 5:00 p.m. over GRP (17.89); 4:30 to 5:00 p.m. over GRY (9.60) 5:15 p.m. to 12:45 a.m. over GRG (11.68), GSD (11.75), GSC (9.58)

Voice of Free China

With China again definitely in the limelight, broadcasts from the Chungking Shortwave Station have become doubly important. Reception of programs from this station ranges from fair to good depending upon prevailing weather conditions. Transmissions from the Chinese capital are broad-cast at present as follows (EWT):

6:00 to 6:55 a.m. to Asia, Australia and East Russia over XGOY (11.90) 6:00 a.m.—News in English 6:15 a.m.—Music 6:30 a.m.—News in Chinese 6:45 a.m.—News in Russian which, called "Stars and Stripes of the Air," is broadcast by the BBC from London every Sunday night at 7:30 p.m. EWT over GRG (11.68), GSD (11.75), GSC (9.58). Bidding fair to becoming London's favorite program as far as American audiences are concerned, this new broadcast includes not only acts by, and messages from, U. S. soldiers, but regular participating stars such as Bebe Daniels and Ben Lyon, once popular American film stars, now top-notch BBC artists. The show is presented by Stanley Maxted.

Stanley Maxted was born in To-

American Service—a job he is still doing. Maxted produces other such leading radio shows as "American Night," which can be heard from London each Monday at 8:00 p.m. EWT.

Jap Sales Talk

Apparently the conquerors of Manila are having a little trouble convincing all of the good citizens that they are their "protectors and friends." Every morning at 8:45 a.m. EWT, Radio Tokyo broadcasts an appeal in English and tagalog (native Filipino language) to the youths of the Philippines. It goes about like this: "Support Japan's cause. Show the world that our flag is not to be trifled with by the white race. Asia for the Asiatics. It is the path of wisdom to throw aside partitions and personal feelings and rally to the support of the glorious cause of a Greater New Asia . . ." Which all reminds me of the old saw: "You can lead a horse to water but you can't make him drink.'

Public Radio Circuits Closed

The Defense Communications Board has directed the closure of all public domestic point-to-point radio circuits within the continental limits of the United States, effective midnight, June 30. Transmission of private messages over domestic radio circuits can be heard and easily monitored outside the United States. In many instances the nature of these private messages can give information of value to the enemy. The burden of possible censorship has been deemed insoluble within reasonable limits of available manpower and funds. In any event, the censorship which would be necessary if these circuits remained would involve a delay in transmission not necessarily found in the case of do-mestic wire circuits.

FM CLAIMS 1,500,000 LISTENERS IN U. S. . . . RECEIVER PURCHASING TIPS

Essential Parts Every Frequency Modulation Receiver Should Have; Trouble With Sets When Manufacturers Short-Cut Design

By DICK DORRANCE

FM Grows Up

A LTHOUGH it has been increasingly difficult to make any precise census of the FM receivers in the United States today, due to the inability of war-deluged manufacturers to take time out for a complete inventory of their recent sales, it seems safe to estimate that the national total stands today somewhere in the neighborhood of a half-million sets.

Latest figures secured by FM Broadcasters, Inc., national trade association of frequency-modulation stations, tends to confirm this estimate.

Of the grand total the greatest percentage may be found within the 8,500 square miles of area served by New York City FM stations and probably amounts to more than 80,000 receivers. Although some of these are located in New Jersey and Connecticut towns up to fifty miles from the center of New York, the metropolitan stations are easily heard.

The total of FM receivers within the Chicago area has risen steeply in a relatively short time, and now we find noise-free, full-fidelity reception available in about 42,000 radio homes within sixty-five miles. The assigned range of Chicago stations is somewhat greater than that of New York, since the assigned coverage area is computed at 10,800 square miles—some 2,300 square miles larger than New York's.

The New England region, where FM reception has become so commonplace in every corner of the six states (except northern Maine), now has almost as many sets in its combined cities as Chicago. Boston leads the New England parade with approximately 10,000 FM homes. Other large groups of listeners are found in Hartford and New Haven, Conn., Providence, R. I., and Worcester and Springfield, Mass. The tally for all New England is put at 35,000 sets.

Philadelphia, as one of the more recent cities turning to FM, has about 17,000 receivers. Pittsburgh claims 10,000. The Detroit total is around 16,000; Milwaukee, 10,000; Los Angeles, 13,000; San Francisco, 6,500; Cleveland, 5,000; Kansas City, 3,000.

Based on the conservative estimate of three listeners to each set, the potential FM audience for the whole nation may now be reckoned at a million and a half persons. This gives startling contrast to the 50,000 pioneer listeners who had made FM's acquaintance by January 1, 1941.

The Short Cut Artists

It's unfortunate that of all the FM receivers in the nation, a certain percentage does not really deserve the privilege of being called frequency-modulation sets. They tune in FM stations and, under optimum conditions, give satisfactory reception. But when the going gets rough—when there's heavy electrical interference near by or the receiver is located at some distance from the station to be heard—these sets fall down miserably. Reception will be noisy, programs become marred by the ignition of every passing car, while the background rush and crackles are consistently objectionable.

This happens because the maker of the set was unscrupulous enough to take a short cut when he designed it—leaving out one or more of the essential parts that every real frequency-modulation receiver must have, including a "limiter" circuit.

The "limiter" consists of a vacuum

The "limiter" consists of a vacuum tube, or series of tubes, actuated when an FM signal of a certain minimum strength is picked up by the antenna and fed into the set. It serves as a kind of straining device. If unwanted noises—crackles, pops, buzzes, static bursts and other reception-busters—are mixed with the FM signal itself, the "limiter" goes to work and blocks out the interference, letting only the pure music or voices through. In the finest FM sets this limiter is extremely sensitive and operates on the weakest signals so that satisfactory reception may be enjoyed at surprising distances from FM stations. Less expensive FM sets have limiters that require correspondingly stronger signals before they function. Any orthodox frequency-modulation receiver, however, should provide suitable reception when within the mileage range assigned to the desired station.

The Penalty of Inferiority

A manufacturer who takes this short cut by leaving the "limiter" out of his so-called FM set is courting trouble. People find that their reception is not "noise-free" and, in most cases, noticeably inferior to ordinary broadcast reception. This is because electrical interference itself can be far more acute and annoying on the ultrahigh frequencies where FM operates than on the long wave-lengths of regular broadcasting. Complaints and disappointments are voiced by many people who buy these pseudo-FM sets, and it seems hard to believe that any reputable manufacturer would offer the public—which has been told to expect certain things of FM—such an obviously interior product.

Furthermore, the short-cutting didn't stop with simply leaving out the basic FM "limiter." The manufacturer also decided to skip another important gadget called the "discriminator." This again is a vacuum tube device whose duty it is to see that you receive only one station at a time—the strongest one on any given channel (or spot on the dial). This will be of mounting importance as more and more FM stations get on the air, using identical channels in neighboring towns. The "discriminator" eliminates squeals, the unpleasantness of stations fading out to be replaced by other stations (as on winter nights) and the reception of two and sometimes three stations all at once in a hash of sound.

Leaving these two vital ingredients—the "limiter" and the "discriminator"—out of an FM receiver is like building an automobile without a carburetor and an oil pump.

Let the Buyer Beware

If you're thinking of buying an FM receiver—providing your local radio dealer has some in stock or can get any—there are certain things you should look for when making your purchase. Ask, of course, if the set has a "limiter" and "discriminator." Then a satisfactory FM set must have a good amplifying system and a quality loudspeaker that can faithfully reproduce, in perfect proportions, all the tones you might expect from a good orchestra. Without it you won't get the color and brilliance that FM stations are able to broadcast. The high notes will be lopped off, the low ones muffled.

Also, check to see if the set reproduces dead silence in the pauses between music and announcements. A rushing or humming background noise either means that the set is inferior or your dealer is so indifferent he hasn't bothered to put up a suitable antenna—which may be necessary because of your distance from the station to which the receiver is tuned.

This weekly column of FM news and discussion is intended as a Movie-Radio Guide service for the swiftly growing audience of FM listeners. Letters from readers are always welcome. We shall be glad to answer your questions and, if you do not yet have FM reception in your locality, advise you whether any is in prospect.

WIOD-Tune Carnival

Turn Studio Into Roller-Skating Rink

Anyone looking in on a certain "Romance of Helen Trent" broadcast recently, might have wondered for a few awe-struck moments just what was taking place. Ostensibly, this was a routine radio program. Actually, it had all the distinguishing features of a roller-skating rink.

The real explanation-and here it is-offers an insight into the various and sundry demands broadcasting makes upon a radio actor's versatility.

Because roller-skating sound-effects, called for in the "Helen Trent" script, had the sound-man stumped, cooperative cast members had agreed to bring real skates to the studio-and use them!

Virginia Clark, who stars as Helen, borrowed her son's skates and ransacked the neighborhood for another pair. Then it fell to Muriel Bremner, as Jeanne Moreland, and Lee Young, as Rod Elgin, to put them on and glide gracefully over the studio's highly polished floor.

No virtuosos on wheels, the pair took the perilous turns as best they could, having a tough time staying on their feet. Worst of all was the job of standing still on skates before the microphone when they had speaking parts.

Ironically, Lee Young happened to be doing the part just for that day, as a stand-in for Rene Gekiere, who expected to be inducted into the Army but was refused and is now back on the show.

The actors-turned-acrobats had one break. When the scheduled fall came, the soundman took it.

Feminine Arkansas Traveler

Mary Ann Mercer, pretty songstar of "Uncle Walter's Dog House," is playing no state favorites. A native of Michigan, she has been signally honored by two other states re-cently. The State of Arkansas, through its governor, Homer M. Adkins, has just named her "Arkansas Traveler" as special recognition of her accomplishment in promoting the sale of War Bonds and Stamps. She is also a colonel on the staff of Gov. John A. Miles of New Mexico.

Hum, Sweet Hum!

Louise Massey, star of the Westerners, heard on "Plantation Party" and "Reveille Roundup," knows what the prophet without honor feels like. Louise, who does all her rehearsing at the studios, overheard her new maid talking things over with the maid next door the other day and tuned in in time to

"I sure thought when I went to work for Miss Massey we'd have music around the place all the time, but shucks she don't even HUM when she's home!"

Conservation Tips

By Gracie Allen

Hello, folks! Your radio editor has asked me to prepare an article on "Conservation" which would prove instructive to the readers of Movie-Radio Guide. Little did he know that he hit upon my favorite subject. I just love to save things. So does George. He's been saving my salary ever since we began to work on NBC.

It was only yesterday that George said to me, "Gracie," he said, "what on earth is that pile of prune seeds doing out in the kitchen?"

Silly man! Doesn't he realize that the rubber shortage is bound to affect some form of edibles, and the day is not far distant, my friends, when we will be retreading prunes. Even the olives in our new cook's salads may lose their rubbery flavor if the emergency lasts for the duration.

In that connection, I'm pretty proud of the fact that at last I can find a use for the stack of rubber checks which my cousin Agate left with me for safe keeping when he suddenly left on a world tour some years ago.

Cousin Agate isn't the only sponge I've saved. There's Uncle Claude, my aunt Philippa, and a score of jugglers and tight-rope walkers George used to know when he was in vaudeville. It came to me as a complete surprise, just recently that the ocean bottom produces a useful type of sponge—and now I'm saving them to simplify the wetting of my War Stamps for my collection.

George used to say I needed more sand if I expected to be a success in show business. I didn't quite get the drift until a nice-looking Beverly Hills fireman came to the door the other day, and left me a cute pamphlet which explained how sand could be used to extin-guish incendiary bombs. Now I'm collecting a grain or two every time the wind blows.

I'm not a particularly good swimmer, but every time I go to the beach I keep my eyes glued to the surf in the hopes I may be able to save a drowning man. Not for myself, you understand. My sister Bessie is looking for a man, and any male who can be rescued from the sea will be just dandy, because every man she dates is all wet.

Actors Need Sense of Humor

It takes an actor with a sense of humor to play tragedy properly, according to Russ Young, director of "Bachelor's Children." Young explains that an actor sensitive to humor can detect "subtle laughter possibili-ties" in the most innocent lines. "And seeing how a change of inflection can arouse laughs where sobs were intended," Young says, "he will avoid inflections that might inject a comic twist into a serious phrase or lines thus ruining the whole show!

Irene Rich Suggests "Warrior's Day"

Irene Rich, star of Columbia's new "Dear John" series, has sent the following telegram to President Roosevelt, thus launching a campaign to honor boys in the armed forces.

To the Honorable Franklin D. Roosevelt. President of the United States,

The White House, Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. President:

May I please make a suggestion that I hope will aid and comfort all of our men in the armed forces? In view of the fact that there have been proclaimed "Mother's Day," "Father's Day," "Decoration Day," etc., would it be possible for you to set aside a permanent date to be known as "Warrior's Day"? On that occasion everyone could send presents to the boys in all the armed forces. It would not be a day to remember the dead, but a day to honor the living, to cheer them up, and to let them know that we are thinking of them. May I suggest some date such as the first of August, so as to be not too near Christmas? With all of my best wishes and highest regards.

Irene Rich.

HOW TO USE THIS SECTION

All daytime programs for Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday between the hours of 7:00 a.m. and 3:45 p.m., inclusive, are listed in this section.

The daytime programs listed under the heading "Monday Through Friday Programs" are all programs broadcast Monday through Friday at the same time each day.

Half-way down the same column and under the same time line you will note the word "exceptions." All programs listed under this heading are those which are not broadcast at the same time Monday through Friday but are different every day or broadcast in a series of two or more such as Monday-Tuesday, Monday-Wednesday-Friday, etc. In other words, if you are looking for a news program or a dramatic serial broadcast at the same time each day it will be listed under the "Monday Through Friday" heading. All other programs will be found under "Exceptions."

Serial Changes

Many daytime serials will change time next week. You will find them all listed at the new time in next week's issue of Movie-Radio Guide on sale at all newsstands Wednesday, June 24. Reserve your copy now.

FATHER'S DAY finds Bob Burns sampling the finery his sons and daughter have bought him. Bob's on his summer vacation have a sponsor paying the bills come August. What a swell spot for Lieutenant (by then) Eddy Duchin . . . Tony Wons may not be back on the air next fall.

GENERAL ENTERTAINMENT

"Keep 'Em Entertained" is the slogan adopted by many of our radio performers who have gone "all out" for our men in the various branches of Uncle Sam's service . . .

The Camel Caravan units, now touring the United States Army camps, forts, Navy and Marine bases, have rounded out the first nine months in R. J. Reynolds' project to provide free entertainment for the men in uniform. Over one million men have been entertained since the plan was first put into operation . . .

Kay Kyser is another who has gone to great lengths to provide the men with laughs and music. His present plan calls for him to play the camps that have not had any entertainment at all up to now. He expects to do one a day and will do his broadcast from whichever camp he happens to be at on a Wednesday. Kyser will be kept pretty busy this summer as, in addition to this tour, he will remain on the air with his "College of Musical Knowledge." Kay and his boys went out to Camp Roberts, California, which is situated in the desert. There were 50,000 men spread out around him in the open. The sun beat down as only that desert sun can, and it got so hot that the trumpet-players couldn't put their instruments to their mouths. However, they all left the camp blistered but happy. Kyser and his troupe have covered practically every camp in the West and would like to make appearances throughout the East and South, but due to limitations of transportation find they can only go as far north as Massachusetts and as far south as Virginia . . .

Bob Hope, Red Skelton, "Vox Pop" and many others will continue to bring smiles to the men in service. They gladly give up their vacations.

Joyce Jordan

I'm waiting to see Courtney. I-I didn't expect to see both of you tonight. This is better than I bargained for. I heard you had become his friend -the coward and the man of evil. Yes, it was natural that you became friends. But I, too, have a friend now. Your daughter, Walton. She wants to know about you and Courtney Lee, and I'm going to tell her."

Sparrowhill left just as suddenly as he had come. Joyce tried to follow but Walton barred the way. She tried to struggle with her father, but he struck her with his hand, knocked her to the floor. She looked up into his eyes and saw evil written there. Gone was the polished man of the world and in his place was a cool criminal that she never had known. She was horrified with fright, but struggled to her feet again and raced across the room. She escaped and managed to call Paul. She hurried to her husband's office, found comfort in his arms.

She told him what had happened and begged him not to leave her when he wanted to go back and see Walton. While they talked, there was a furtive knock on the door. It was Martin Sparrowhill again.

"Why did you want to talk to me?" he asked.

"We-we're trying to help Myra Lee."

"Courtney Lee's daughter? What's he trying to do to her?"

"She's engaged to marry a young doctor, but Walton and Lee are doing everything possible to separate them. Lee's even told his daughter that she can't marry because she's inherited insanity from her mother. We think it's a lie, but we're not sure yet.'

"It's probably true," Sparrowhill said. "Yes, Lee would do anything Walton told him to. He's weak and a coward, and Walton is strong and holds the whip hand over him."

Sparrowhill told them his story. He said he had been a chemistry professor in a small mid-western college when Lee offered him a position as head of the research department in one of his plants. Sparrowhill accepted the position with the understanding that he'd share patent rights on anything he developed. But Lee stole Sparrowhill's secret process for making fabric and plastics and made a fortune. Sparrowhill said his legal suits against Lee were unsuccessful because his money ran out.

"Then one night I was beaten by thugs," he said. "I was in the hospital for three months. I knew who sent them. When I complained to the police, they didn't believe me.

"How does Walton come into this picture?" Paul asked.

"He came to me one day saying that he had read about the suit and would provide me with money to continue the litigation. I turned over all the evidence-all the papers and letters and documents that prove my case. He took them all, but he didn't help me. He used them to blackmail Courtney Lee. Now do you see why Roger Walton has so much power over him?"

The truth at last! And on the heels of this disclosure came word from Paul's office that his London correspondent had located Myra's mother.

"Darling," Paul said, turning to Joyce, "it's just as we both suspected. There never was a trace of insanity in the family. Myra's mother has always been in excellent health. Our man even checked with her physician in London!"

Both Paul and Joyce were so excited that they didn't notice Sparrowhill had left in his own mysterious way. They thought he was merely eccentric as had everyone else and dismissed the matter from their minds. Later, Joyce was to recall Sparrowhill's manner when it was almost too late. They called Dr. Alan Webster to tell him the good news so he could have the pleasure of breaking it to Myra himself.

And later that night he did. He smiled at her surprise and took her in his arms.

"You-you mean we can be married tomorrow if we want?" asked, "or even tonight, or even this minute?"

"Well," Alan replied, smiling, "there are laws about those things, but you've got the general idea.'

"Oh, Alan darling!" She threw her arms around him. They'd found happiness at last. How could they guess that a new tragedy was about to break? Alan brought Myra back to Joyce's apartment that night just as a sudden storm turned the night into a deluge of pouring rain. Myra was so happy that she hardly noticed Alan's sudden leave-taking. She remembered it only when she found Joyce in a strange, unnatural mood.

"What's the matter, Joyce?" she asked.

. I can't help remem-"Nothing bering Paul's face when I told him my father hit me. Paul doesn't get angry often, but when he does—"

"Did Paul drive away?"

"Yes. He said he went to see Sparrowhill, but I think he's going to find my father. I wish he'd phone or something. Oh, Myra, I—I'm worried." Outside the wind moaned in the treetops and around the corners of the building. Sheets of rain smashed at the casements and the windows flared purple as lightning flashed across the sky. Myra looked at Joyce with big round eyes. She was afraid . . .

"I can see how Paul might be mad," she said. "I know how Alan felt the last time I talked to him. Alan was awfully upset when he found out that Roger made my father lie to me, but I know he wouldn't do anything . that it . . . oh, Joyce, I'm going to call my father. Roger was supposed to visit him tonight.'

Myra reached for the phone, waited for the connection as a great clap of thunder rolled ominously across the sky. Joyce watched Myra's face, saw it pale as the girl spoke in quick, disjointed questions. Abruptly, she began jiggling the hook .

"Oh, Joyce, something dreadful has happened. He-he talked so strangely, and then he cut me off. He seemed to be crying, and . . . well, I just don't know what to make of it."

"Myra, get your things," Joyce said with sudden determination. "We're going over there-

"It—it just sounded like a jumble of hysterical words over the phone, Joyce, but I thought I heard him say, 'This is good-by, Myra. It's all over. Joyce, you don't think that-

"Hurry, Myra, I don't think we've got a second to lose. We must get there and quickly. Come on.'

Read this thrilling story, adapted by Wiley S. Maloney, then listen to "Joyce Jordan" over CBS-written by Julian Funt and broadcast Monday through Friday at 2:15 p.m. EWT, 1:15 CWT, 1:30 MWT, 12:30 PWT, under the sponsorship of General Foods Corp. for La France, Satina and Postum.

+ BROW PENCIL

+ MASCARA =

A "glamour-eyes" Claudia Morgan, feminine lead in NBC's "Thin Man"

FEMININE FORUM

BY EDITH HAMPTON

How to "Glamour-Eyes"

F YOUR eyes give you away, don't fret! . . . that is, unless you're downright ashamed of the real you. Eyes that express "what goes on within" add dynamic voltage to your charm and personality. Enlist your eyes for the duration. Let them reflect the courage of 120,000,000 American people. Look ahead—eyes alert and alive—to the time when men beat their planes into plowshares and "Johnny comes marching home again."

Unfortunately, although the majority of us are granted God-given powers to look—few of us see! We're as blind as the proverbial bat! Your keen observation of people, places and the commonplace things surrounding us will cultivate the magnificent habit of seeing with your mind's eye.

To begin with, turn eyesight on full-faucet—but for eyestrain sake don't "ogle" people. Look frankly, with concentrated interest, at your speaker. Men folks, by their own admission, appreciate this all-too-seldom "talk to me" quality in women. But if you're merely letting your eyelids flutter in a breeze of coquetry, he's sure to detect your studied shallowness. Don't "make with the eyes" . . . make them up instead!

Skilful eye make-up can do much to perk up your peepers and dramatize the story behind the "headlines." If you aim for professional perfection study your eyes intently. Note their color, size, contour and proportion to the rest of your features. Once eye inventory is taken, haul out the mascara, brow pencil, eye-shadow and cream—and paint away!

Start out with cream-clean lashes and brows. Apply your eye-shadow before all else, or they're sure to smudge when you mascara your "swooped-up" lashes. Creamy Maybelline eye-shadow has a glamour sheen, but if you're eager for a glass-lidded appearance, mix it with coldcream just before shadow-painting. Use light-toned shadow, blended from the center of your lid, if you're the small-eyed type. And a faint shadow line, along the eyelash ledge, will draw out deep or closely set peepers.

You can lean heavily on shadow—especially on the lower half of your lid—if you're a wide-eyed lass. But always blend shadow (as all of your cosmetics) up and out toward the line of your brow.

Brush your eyebrows into a neat, natural arch that frames your eyes becomingly. Constant "bristling" attention will keep them sleek, train them to stay put. And if you pluck your brows 'cuz they're oh-so-bushy, be sure you're only removing excess hairs. 'A sliver-slim line where your brows should be is terribly tabu! If your brows play short-stop—need patching or darkening—an eyebrow pencil will prove a trusty tool to have around. Adding depth to your eyes, a penciled brow should blend with nature's very own. Short staccato strokes, applied with a deft touch, will achieve that deceiving "and she never uses cosmetics" look.

Whether you use cream, cake or liquid mascara, one rule applies—distribute coloring evenly, with meticulous strokes, and tend each lash individually. Use an upward swoopstroke, curling your lashes while you work. And never overload your brush—return applications are always preferable for that fringe effect. Continued lash care will stimulate a healthy growth and before long even the skimpiest lashes "glamour-eyes."

Mascara, contrary to bad-rumor mongers, is neither dye nor tint. The Pure Food and Drug Act is your guarantee of that! A pure coloring with a base that holds colors together, advertised brands are definitely harmless. And an oil base recently added to Maybelline mascara products is an aid to boot—it prevents lash dryness.

If you think of your eyes as a camera taking pictures for you, you'll will the "dreamer squint" to your less fortunate myopic friends. Strain, worry, improper foods and too much work or play make Jill a dull gal—with an off-focus impression of a pretty wonderful world. Recommended: Rosecolored spectacles—the kind your ophthalmologist (eye doctor to us unmedical people) prescribes!

How to Get Rid of an INCENDIARY BOMB

1. EDWARD G. ROBINSON demonstrates the way to handle incendiary bombs. Have a pail of sand and a shovel near by. Let the bomb rest one minute after landing (a few are explosive). Then shovel sand on the bomb or play a fine spray of water over it. DO NOT attempt to soak the bomb with a heavy stream of water, for that will only increase the damage

2. CONTINUE piling sand on the bomb to keep the sparks from flying. Your job is not to put the bomb out but to keep its fire from spreading. Keep at this job until the activity of the incendiary slackens

3. THEN SLIDE the shovel carefully under the bomb and lift it into the pail. Be sure to stand well back for your safety's sake

4. INSERT the scoop of the shovel under the handle of the pail and carry it outside where it can burn out without damage

Mrs. Ralph Runkle, Macomb, Ill .-The little immigrant boy who made a few pennies a day for his mother when he first arrived in this country is the man who lived to see his name in bright lights in every town, city and hamlet in a great nation of 130,000,000 people. Since 1911, when IRVING BERLIN sat down at his piano and strummed a tune while singing "Come on and hear, Come on and hear Alexander's Ragtime Band—" the name of Irving Berlin has been on the lips of those who knew and loved modern music, fine sentiment and good humor. In 1938 the stars of stage, screen and radio gathered together to pay tribute to the King of Tin Pan Alley. Berlin's first real job was as a singing waiter in the Pell Street saloon known as "Nigger Mike's." After he had moved uptown to Jimmy Kelly's saloon, Berlin wrote his first song from which he received royalties of thirty-seven cents. Thus encouraged, he wrote another song which he sold to a publisher for twenty-five dollars. He was so successful after this that the Ted Snyder publishing company gave him a job as staff writer. Soon after he formed his famous partnership with Sam Harris and together they put thousands of dollars into the "Music Box Revue." After this huge success many shows followedand Berlin's songs were sung all over the country. His own favorite comes from the third "Music Box Revue," "An Orange Grove in California." With Moss Hart he collaborated on the Pearle Kimbell, Waukee, Iowa.— For several months now "Valiant Lady" has had a new leading man in the role of Dr. Tubby (Dr. Truman Scott). He is BARTLETT ROBINSON, of stage, screen and radio fame. Al-though a number of men were auditioned for the part of Dr. Tubby, the role fell to Robinson, who replaces CHARLES CARROLL. After appearing in opera in the famous Colorado ghost town, Central City, Robinson joined a troupe of radio actors and went to California. There he appeared in Technicolor shorts and in the full-length feature "Becky Sharp." Next Broadway beckoned. About two years ago he turned to radio. Since that time you have heard his voice in "John's Other Wife," "Light of the World," and many others. Robinson's father is the famous Boardman Robinson, artist, mural painter and political cartoonist of the last war, and head of the Art Center at Colorado Springs.

WHAT'S COOKING!

By GEORGIA SCOTT

Have You Hidden Hunger?

HEN you realize that forty percent of the American public is actually starved for a healthy, vitamin-right meal (in spite of the fact that our country has the richest food resources in the world). you'll deem it ripe prime for a foodfor-health conversation. You may not have noticed it, but an alarming number of lads-though A1 in your heart -were tagged 4F by the Army medicos. Their physical tabus were directly tracked to "hidden hunger"-malnutrition to you!

Food lost for Germany in World War I. Strategic military objectives were undermined along with the decline in health on the home and the fighting front. And all because the required protective foods-eggs, meats, green and yellow vegetables, wholegrain cereals, milk fruits and "enriched" products were entirely lacking in the German diet. Well, it can't happen here!

Military powers that be are proving that the Army rides on its stomach. And take it from me, the American civilian population would do well to thumb a ride on the road to health. Food-or, to be more specific, Victory Vittles—will help win this war, even as bonds, bombs, bullets and leaselend aid. Now, more than ever before, lunch-box deficiences for children or war-workers are deplorable. And the on-the-run sandwich and soft-drink lunch, a favorite with the American Kitty Foyle, is downright sabotage. It's up to all of us to lead with our stomachs and fight this war with food ammunition.

A properly balanced variety of foods-rich in vital vitamins, proteins, carbohydrates and fats-is the essential key to our national well-being. The gross lack of fruits and leafy vegetables in the American diet is tied up, but directly, with mental and physical fatigue-a war-time luxury. Vigor and morale grow prosperous or lean in proportion to a nutritive diet of greens and citrus fruits. And nature has conveniently stored everything our body needs for nourishment in fruits. Grapes, for potent example, contain minerals in a balanced degree that equals the content in the human blood. And the sugars of ripe fruit are easily digested to boot. Start serving more raw vegetables! Play up the infrequent guests-chicory, watercress, escarole, spinach and parsley. Let a tempting fruit-bowl mark the mouth-watering finale to your wellbalanced menus.

The quantity of food you consume depends on your activity, size andof all things-the weather. Children require more food in proportion to their size than do their parents, simply because they're growing and using up a terrific amount of energy in doing it. And as you may have noticed, you're bound to attack the ice-box with greater vigor when wintry weather calls, simply because your body is burning up its own tissues just to keep you warm.

Bread and potatoes, contrary to all you've heard rumored, will not dub you candidate for the stout-but-stylish-dress department. As a matter of proven food-fact, it's not what you eat but "how much" that really adds poundage where leanage is far more flattering. Tasting the tempting tuber will not put on waistline "tubeage," since it's three-quarters water and is actually equal, in calory content, to an average-size apple or orange.

"Enriched" (in minerals) and "irradiated" (with sunshine) foods, still test-tube new, are proud proof of the pages of progress we've added to America's food history within the past two decades. Yet each one of us has a tremendous job that we're individually responsible for. See to it that you and your family put a tabu on gulp meals. Encourage 'tween-meals snacks that provide added energy and stamina for these stomach-sinking days. And cook according to nutrition Hoyle as quickly as possible and in as little water as is absolutely necessary! Never add soda to vegetables for artificial coloring. Cook in vegetable "jackets" or peel close to skin. Serve outer leaves and bread crusts andfor Henderson's sake-cut down on food "throw-aways."
