Hollywood Takes the Spotlight With Its Academy Awards

ONCE each year Hollywood hesitates in the mad scramble of movie-making to take stock of itself. The occasion is the annual Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences Banquet, at which awards are made for outstanding achievements of the year in all phases of the industry. Winners are selected through secret ballot by the movie-makers themselves. As proof of his accomplishment each winner receives a small golden statuette, referred to as an "Oscar."

This Academy Award Banquet is the highlight of Hollywood's professional and social year. Amid the hurrah of the film capital's proficient drum-beaters, stars, writers, producers, directors and technical experts array themselves in their best and gather for the feast, creating a spectacle more colorful, more dramatic (and more often packed with emotion as winners are announced) than the actual screen entertainment they produce.

This year the annual Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences Banquet was scheduled to be held on February 27 at the Biltmore Bowl in Los Angeles. Already the names of the winners and the feats for which they were honored should have spread to the four corners of the globe.

But to Movie-Radio Guide the banquet, with all its glamour, its color and its drama, is bigger than any individual or the awards concerned. It is the heart of Hollywood revealed.

That's why next week you'll be seeing in this publication some of the first-published pictures of the banquet itself, in addition to complete information about the winners. It will be the story behind the stories you have read about the awards told dramatically in pictures! Our advice is—to watch for it!

EVERY YOUNG COMPOSER dreams of creating a melody so beautiful and lasting that it will be played over and over again by performers to the delight of the listening public. But not even in the fondest dreams of young Stephen C. Foster could one have found the counterpart of the repeated performances given his "Jeanie With the Light Brown Hair" since BMI and ASCAP went on the warpath. Copyrighted so long ago that it is now in the realm of the public domain, it was one of the tuneful melodies which could be played by orchestras, sung by vocalists without fear of a damage suit by way of repercussion. And if

"Jeanie With the Light Brown Hair" reached a stage where it was not always a delight to the public, that must be laid at the feet of the broadcasters and disputing song-writers rather than to its composer, Mr. Foster. Now, after having her with us so constantly, we say good-by to

Jeanie and to her light-brown tresses for a while. Negotiations are under way for an armistice between ASCAP and BMI and a full peace will undoubtedly soon be made. If you're interested in what that peace promises for you, the listener; for the song-writer; for the radio stations, read

BIG CHANGES are coming in radio. On March 29 at 3 a.m. the most radical change will be made since broadcasting became your source of greatest entertainment. Seven hundred eighty-five of the 833 stations in the United States alone will change frequency (the dial position on your radio) in accordance with the Havana Treaty of 1937, recently ratified by Mexico.

As a radio listener, this is important to you. These changes will cause confusion unless you are prepared for them with complete advance information.

Movie-Radio Guide, your guide to greater listening enjoyment, is making some special plans in connection with this reallocation of station frequencies. Here they are:

In the issue of March 22-28 a special story will be published explaining the changes in detail and giving complete information (especially to the owners of push-button sets).

The issue of March 29-April 4 will carry a complete two-page log of all United States and Canadian stations arranged alphabetically by call-letters, listing new wave-lengths over which these stations will be heard.

In the issue of April 5-11 will appear a second log of all U. S. and Canadian stations numerically arranged by frequencies.

With these complete instructions and two simple charts which will show the relative changes in position of each station on your radio's dial, no reader of Movie-Radio Guide need be confused as to where to locate their favorite stations.

We feel this service is the most important Movie-Radio Guide has been privileged to gather and interpret for the continent's vast radio-listening audience in ten years of publication. We're certain you won't want to miss a single issue, so, although additional copies will be printed, play safe:

Reserve the March 22-28, March 29-April 4 and April 5-11 issues of Movie-Radio Guide at your news-dealer's today!

Olivia de Havilland

A FAVORITE TALE with story- and screen-writers is of the little understudy who does her work faithfully and, at long last, gets her big opportunity to step before the footlights and makes good, wins her boy friend. Olivia de Havilland went the story-tellers one better. Her big chance came when she was understudy to the understudy for the role of Hermia in "Midsummer Night's Dream," as produced by Max Reinhardt in the Hollywood Bowl. When the principal and number one understudy failed to appear, Olivia went on, scored a lasting triumph in a spot where movie producers were as thick as a London fog. The immediate result was a long-term contract at Warner Bros. Olivia is currently being seen in Warner's "Strawberry Blonde." Photograph is by Welbourne.—C. M.

TAKES IT EASY

It isn't every girl who gets to ride in a pumpkin coach, but Jane Russell refuses to get excited and made Paul Muni, George Raft and several assorted Hollywood stars what they are today.

But Jane isn't impressed.

She's relaxed.

Jane has a philosophy.

"If you don't count on too much, you'll never be disappointed," Jane informed me calmly. "I don't believe in getting excited or worrying about anything. If you're going to get there, in Hollywood or anywhere, you are because you are, not always because of what you do about it."

Words of wisdom don't ordinarily tumble from nineteen-year-old lips, and perhaps Jane Russell's rather fatalistic slant on Hollywood success isn't as seasoned as it might be. But with all the ambitious career girls, like Paulette Goddard, Margaret Lindsay, Carole Landis, and so forth, around playing all the angles, doing the right things and meeting the right people, at least it's refreshing to run across a gal who got there by doing all the wrong things.

It's a little pleasing, too, for most of us aimless plodders who couldn't be career Napoleons if we tried, to watch a native daughter of Lady Luck. It's pretty pleasant just to watch Jane Russell, for that matter.

Because if Janie doesn't have any gnawing ambition she has beauty enough to make it practically unnecessary. In fact, two minutes after I first saw her on "The Outlaw" set, I would go on record as saying that Miss Jane Russell is one of the most naturally beautiful numbers Hollywood has stumbled across since—well, since that same Hughes discovery mentioned before, Jean Harlow.

Only Jane's a brunette, of course, with tumbly, naturally curly brown hair and eyes to match. Her face reminds you of Katharine Hepburn, if Hepburn were only about five times prettier. It's even and chiseled, with a mouth like a ruby brooch and eyelashes that could sweep out the room. As for Jane's figure—wait until you see! Her legs are long and trim and her size-sixteen body is something that might make Venus de Milo turn green, if the lady weren't permanently chiseled in white marble.

It was this face and this figure which pulled the Hollywood glass-slipper trick, and Jane would be the last to deny it. Like this:

A photograph of it happened to be on the wall at the office of Tom Kelly, a Hollywood John Powers, where Jane had been picking up stocking money glorifying frocks for Los Angeles department stores. One day a Hollywood agent on the prowl saw it, hastily stuffed it under his coat and hotfooted it to all the casting departments he knew. He didn't get much farther than the Howard Hughes production office. Then—imagine his embarrassment! He didn't even know the girl's name, her telephone number, or where she lived! Cinderella's Prince Charming had the same trouble, you'll recall.

But Prince Charming finally got his gal—and this agent fellow finally found Jane. What he found though, was a young lady as movie-green as a pool-table. Jane's big break found her about as prepared for a screen career as Luxembourg was for the blitz.

MOST pretty young ladies who grow up in places like Van Nuys, within the rays of preview searchlights, dream of a glamorous Hollywood career. If they don't, their friends dream of it for them. Jane's cheering-section told her she ought to be in pictures so loud and so often that Hollywood was the last place she wanted to be. Jane wanted to be a fashion designer. So, after graduation, she looked around for a good designing-school. College was out of the question, since her father had died leaving Jane, her mother and four young brothers not too well supplied with what makes the world go 'round.

It was fate, Jane supposes, in her laissez faire outlook on life, that led her past Max Reinhardt's school of drama one day when she and her mother were out hunting a school of design. She still doesn't know why she went in and signed up, unless it

FAME IS THE SPUR that takes most girls to Hollywood, but Jane Russell was perfectly happy as a receptionist in a dentist's office in her home town, Van Nuys, Calif., until Hollywood discovered her

JANE RUSSELL doesn't believe in getting all worked up about anything—not even the biggest Hollywood Cinderella break a girl has had since Jean Harlow flashed to fame in "Hell's Angels."

Jane is the nineteen-year-old brunette Venus Howard Hughes picked out of nowhere to star in his new picture, "The Outlaw." Only a few weeks ago she had just bagged a ten-dollar-a-week job as a dentist's receptionist in her home town of Van Nuys, California—and Jane thought she was lucky.

Today Jane Russell is making more money than she ever saw before. She has Hollywood's swankest coiffeurs and couturiers fluttering around her, cameras bearing down on her fair face and figure, and newspaper reporters jotting down facts of her private life. She's sitting right on a rocket to the movie moon propelled by the same multimillionaire star-maker who touched off the "Blonde Bombshell" was because she knew a little poise, polish, how to walk and talk wouldn't hurt her on general principles. Right off the ranch and a tomboy at heart, Jane knew her limitations. "But, heaven knows," Jane protested, "I didn't want to be an actress!"

She didn't have to worry about that. Reinhardt's dramatic lessons rolled off her, as Sam Goldwyn might say, "Like a duck's back." She lasted two months, but the Christmas holidays were coming on and her teachers were always putting on plays at night. Jane had other ideas about what to do with her evenings. So did the boy Jane calls her "True Love," a U. C. L. A. football halfback named Bob Waterfield. Bob's still her true love, by the way, and he's not so hot about Jane's becoming a star. They plan to marry in three years, and you can't blame Bob for his anxiety; it's only good sense, with all the pomaded wolves around Hollywood.

Anyway, Jane left Reinhardt's untouched by improvement or ambition. The nearest she got to show business was the time a fellow pupil talked her into trying out for Earl Carroll's Revue. The beauty king held five try-outs, and Jane, with her curves, went through four of them like a cannonball express. But by that time, as Jane confessed, she'd "had enough of hard-boiled backstage talk and stage-door Johnnies." She didn't even show up for the fifth and final tryout, when she had a job practically in her fair lap!

That's something Hollywood's ambitious hopefuls and nail-biting, wild-eyed, career-crazed cuties could never, never understand. Which makes it even, because Jane has never, never been able to understand those same c.-c. cuties, either. She ran into a mess of them the next place she landed—and, incidentally, liked—Madame Ouspenskaya's very thorough dramatic school. Jane was practically pushed into that by a pal who was going, too. Once there, she saw girls all around her burning to cinders with the divine fire. Jane didn't get it. "When I saw all those kids at Madame's trying so hard," Jane sighed, "I always thought, What if they never get anywhere at all? Think of all the effort gone to waste! Not for me."

It wasn't for her, either. Madame Ouspenskaya shook her gray head in despair at Jane. "You're the most disgusting pupil I've ever had, Jane," she said. "You have talent but you won't do anything about it! I know you can have a career if you want it badly enough, but it looks like you don't."

Jane left the school after five months.

It wasn't because she didn't like Madame Ouspenskaya's, though, or vice versa. The Russell family was running out of money. Jane didn't have the tuition to keep on.

All this time Jane had been solving the pocket-money problem modeling at Tom Kelly's. Of course modeling for department-store ads is no highway to fortune, five to ten dollars a job, if and when, and a couple of times Jane responded to proddings of friends and showed up at a movie studio. But always somebody hauled her along, protesting.

The truth is, Jane Russell never lost any sleep about being anything grand or gorgeous. That "life is real, life is earnest" stuff just didn't click with her and still doesn't. The line she likes better is, "What's the use of worrying? It never was worth while." That's Janie.

Last summer, for instance, instead of improving every shining hour she visited her godparents in Canada, hanging around Jasper Park, taking it easy and riding, hiking and fishing, which is Jane's idea of something to do, incidentally. Even the godparents thought it was a shame Jane wasn't a little more ambitious about her looks and talents. But Jane just grinned and said, "Don't shove me." She came back to southern California and spent the rest of the time collecting a sun tan on the public beach in Santa Monica and seeing Bob at night. There was just one flare-up of ambition and it was pretty funny, or ironic, depending on how you look at it.

The Jane Russell-for-the-Movies Club—that is, all her friends—finally put on the pressure enough to get Jane inside a Hollywood talent-agent's office. Buster Collier, said agent, was very nice. But, he said, his office just couldn't take chances on an unknown. "For instance," opined Mr. Collier, "Howard Hughes is looking for a new girl. But the chance is one in a million! We couldn't afford to operate on odds that long."

Jane nodded and exited. She agreed perfectly. She went back to the beach and relaxed. Jane is a dish in a bathing-suit.

But at this very time, as I said, another agent was stealing her picture from Tom Kelly's wall. He had to swipe it because even Tom, who knew Jane pretty well, said, "Now lay off Janie. She's just a country gal. She doesn't like the movies!"

WHEN Howard Hughes' office finally called Jane at the ranch, she wasn't there. She was visiting her cousin up in the country and she didn't hurry back. Finally she strolled in one day, done up in beige slacks, a red sweater, and a pair of red shoes. She talked to Hughes and took a screen test. Then she went back to Van Nuys and got herself the job with Doctor Creamer, the dentist. When they called her into Hollywood later and talked stardom, Jane said she wasn't so sure. She had a job, hadn't she? Career and fame are honeyed words, said Jane, but ten bucks a week is ten bucks and a steady job is just that!

"Now, please," pleaded Jane (melting me right down with those eyes), "don't think I'm lah-de-dah, lazy or blase. It isn't that. It's just my philosophy."

Jane's philosophy carried her through her screen tests without any appreciable rise in blood-pressure, and from the start she hasn't had any more camera "shakes" than Carole Lombard. Of course, by now, Jane is steamed up about what she's going to do. "When I do get worked up about something," Janie stated, flashing her pearly choppers, "watch out!"

The only time on record that Jane ever tossed fretfully was right after everything had been all signed and sealed and she was set to play Rio, the Mexican half-breed vixen who softens up tough Billy the Kid in "The Outlaw."

Then she proceeded to tumble down the stairs at home and crack her ankle. Keeping her in bed was pretty tough, according to the family. Luckily, Jane is a fast mender and she tossed away her crutches two days before "The

In every other Hollywood department, though, plain Jane is running true to form. Clothes? All she had to start off with, besides the slacks, sweater and red shoes, were a few high-school frocks and a beanie or two. Hughes spent a cool thousand dolling Jane up at Hollywood's elite emporiums, but she hasn't worn one fancy rag as yet. Beauty? Jane never sees the inside of a beauty shop except for studio make-up. She washes her own hair, shakes it out, runs a comb through, and perfect, natural curls are all over the place. Cosmetics? Outside of lipstick, she doesn't use 'em. People? Jane wouldn't know a Hollywood big-shot if she saw one. Night life? Well, Jane and "True Love" Bob have swung it a night or two at the Palladium, Hollywood's newest young-set jitterbug heaven and dance-hall, but you won't find the movie set there. Jane's never seen the inside of Ciro's. She has never had a "publicity romance" or a date designed to expose her to the news photographers. "I'm no glamour girl," said Jane. "I never will be."

What Janie wants to do, if her luck lasts, is to fix up the family ranch, buy back a string of horses they had to let go when her dad died, and buy her oldest brother a car. As for herself, she's going to get married to her true love in three years when he's through college, and there are no ifs, ands or buts about that, says Jane.

On the career side, she's pretty sure of herself—and why not?—but if she turns out to be a one-picture star that will be okay with Jane, too. She's got her philosophy to keep her warm. Of course, Howard Hughes didn't sign Jane up for a one-picture flash; he's not that kind of producer. He wants to make a screen property out of her and chances are ten to one he will.

MEANWHILE, Cinderella Jane is taking it easy on the tested theory that everything turns out all right in the end. She has her dates with Bob, and her high-school pals flock around in off-studio hours. Her chum, Virginia, was helping out around the set the day I called. Jane also keeps up her active membership in the Russell family orchestra. She pounds the piano and her four brothers give out with trombone, trumpet, clarinet and fiddle. A week before "The Outlaw" got rolling, Jane was happily thumping on the ivories at a Van Nuys church recital.

Even Mrs. Russell, who's probably thrilled more than anyone else about Jane's success, is well under control about the whole thing. As for the brothers, they can't be too bothered about having a Hollywood Cinderella sister. The other day somebody asked Kenneth, fifteen, how it felt to have Jane Russell, movie star, in the family.

"Okay, I guess," stated Kenneth with a deep yawn. "But for me—I'll take Lana Turner."

New Aldrich Family

Jackie Cooper and Eddie Bracken, having reached the ripe old age of twenty years, are now considered to be too old to play the respective roles of Henry and Dizzy in Paramount's "Aldrich Family" series, so taking their places in the next chapter of the laughable family group will be Jimmy Lydon and Charlie Smith. Lydon will be remembered as the young actor who played the title role in "Tom Brown's School Days" and also for his work in "Little Men" and "Bowery Boy." Master Smith, who becomes the new Dizzy, drew many laughs for his part in Metro's "Little Shop Around the Corner," and was also seen in "Cheers for Miss Bishop" and "Men of Boys Town." Not only have Cooper and Bracken outgrown their parts physically but each of the lads by virtue of his good work has jacked his salary fee to a bracket beyond the budget of the Aldrich Family pictures.

Movie Starlet Salaries

Interesting indeed are the salary figures brought to court these days when minor actresses must have their studio contracts passed upon by the superior judge of the Los Angeles district. Patti McCarty, Dorothy Lamour's secretary who was recently given a contract by Columbia Studios, is being paid fifty dollars a week to start. The same fee is on the contract of Juanita Stark, twenty, auburn-haired ex-waitress who was rescued from the unemployment relief check waiting line by a Warner Bros. talent scout. Bettye Avery, eighteen-year-old photographers' model, has been started at 20th Century-Fox at seventy-five dollars a week (she's the fiancée of Orin Lehman, nephew of New York's governor), and the same earnings are reported by Marilyn Hare, seventeen, daughter of the late radio entertainer Ernie Hare, who is employed by Republic Studios. But if a girl clicks, her wages are fattened. Such was the luck of Linda Darnell, 20th Century-Fox starlet, who started September, 1939, at the age of sixteen at the salary of seventy-five dollars a week; last week Linda came to court again to have her new contract scanned and given

Deanna said: "This is a time of sentiment, not commercialism" . . . Carmen Miranda is feuding with the Shuberts over her contract with them; she will do another show for them—providing her pay is raised. Meantime, Carmen's sister, Aurora, age twenty-three, arrived in Hollywood from Rio de Janeiro

Canal to New York, where they will attend the opening of Paramount's "The Hard-Boiled Canary," after which the couple will complete their two-month honeymoon, which has been delayed over three years by Boyd's picture commitments . . . William Le Baron has signed with 20th Century-Fox and may direct "Louisiana Purchase" . . . The Radio and Screen Actors' Guild are making big plans for their "Gambol of the Stars" March 17 at the Cocomanut Grove.

Baby Department

Bette Davis and husband Arthur Farnsworth are considering an adoption, while Veronica Lake and Mrs. Don Barry, the wife of cowboy star Don Barry, each are having their own, and Baby Sandy is expecting a brother or sister along about April 1. Rumors, too, are that Sonja Henie is about to start a family. Mother Joan Crawford took her twenty-one-month-old adopted daughter, Christine, to her "The Woman's Face" Metro movie-set the other day, and Christine spoiled her first scene when she cried out right in the middle of a sound take—but not even the director objected!

Important Castings

It's pretty sure that James Stephenson will play the role of Bette Davis' husband in "The Little Foxes" . . . Bud Abbott and Lou Costello, whose screaming Universal comedy, "Buck Privates," sent Charlie Chaplin into paroxysms of laughter when he saw it the other day, are riding high; March 15 they will start "They're in the Navy Now" and follow that with "Ride 'Em, Cowboy." They are now finishing work in "Oh, Charlie" . . . Another funny man, Jack Oakie, who came back with a bang in "The Great Dictator," may do George Cohan's old stage success, "Song and Dance Man," for 20th Century-Fox . . . Rosemary Lane, who quit Warner Bros. because she couldn't get musical roles, has been set to play a singing glamour-girl part in "Show Business" at Columbia . . . Errol Flynn, whose "Footsteps in the Dark" will be seen shortly, returned from Honolulu to go into "Dive Bomber" for Warner Bros. . . . Pat O'Brien will be a district attorney in "Murder, Inc." at 20th Century-Fox . . . Rita Hayworth wins the plumful role of Donna Sol in the Tyrone Power starrer, "Blood and Sand" . . . On the quiet Paulette Goddard has been testing for the part of Maria in "For Whom the Bell Tolls" . . . Edward G. Robinson is to play the Boris Karloff role in "Arsenic and Old Lace" . . .

Freddie Bartholomew and Jimmy Lydon will be featured by Columbia in "Naval Academy" . . . French cinemactress Michele Morgan's first American picture is to be "Joan of Paris" for RKO . . . "Odor of Violets," Edward Arnold's next for M-G-M, will show him as a blind, middle-aged war veteran and detective; he'll be guided through the picture by a Seeing Eye dog.

Who's Who in Hollywood

Nelson and Roberto Seabra, from Rio de Janeiro, sons of the richest man in Brazil and both very handsome: The Seabras are here to invest in motion-picture productions and further cement Pan-American friendship . . . Bob Oliver, of the Wagon Wheel ranch, is not an actor and not related to the young actor, Gordon Oliver. Bob is a wealthy and eligible young bachelor who has many friends in the movie colony whom he enjoys entertaining.

It's a Date

Mothers in the News

For the second straight year Joan Blondell was elected the "Most Glamorous Mother in America" by the American Mothers Society of New York. Meantime, Dick Powell and Joan, who are now finishing Universal's "Model Wife" together, plan to take separate vacations when the picture is finished. Speaking of mothers, at a recent meeting of the Motion Picture Mothers, Inc., Tom Brown's mother, Mrs. Marie Brown, was re-elected president, and a new organization, comprising the sixty-five mothers of motion-picture children, has been started. The latter group last week voted Mrs. Winona Johnson, mother of the well-known and numerous Johnson children, as the Honored Mother of 1941 and sent her a corsage of orchids. Mrs. Hugh Buckley is president of the Mothers of Motion Picture Children.

Surprise Picture of the Spring Season

"The Hard-Boiled Canary"

Cast: Allan Jones, Susanna Foster, Margaret Lindsay, Lynne Overman, Grace Bradley, William Collier, Sr., Heimo Haitto, Kaye Connor, William Chapman, Dolly Loehr, Patricia Travers, Richard Bonelli, Richard Hageman, et al. A Paramount picture, produced and directed by Andrew L. Stone, who also directed "The Great Victor Herbert."

"THE HARD-BOILED CANARY," a "must see" picture for the entire family, proves to be one of those rare brain-children of the movie industry which logically interpolates the fineness of music with a story that starts out logically and ends the same way. At no time does one feel that the authors or director have "reached out" to bring in a musical number.

That's natural, because "The Hard-Boiled Canary" is the story of the National Music Camp at Interlochen, Michigan, where each summer one thousand of the best boy and girl musicians from high-school orchestras, numbering over three million in membership, are given scholarships and the finest of musical training for a period of three months.

The story briefly, injected for dramatic effects of course, concerns Michael Maddy (Allan Jones), son of the ailing head of the camp, Dr. Joseph Maddy (William Collier, Sr.), who returns to the camp with excess baggage in the form of Toodles LaVerne (Susanna Foster), talented, tough songstress he has discovered in a New York burlesque theater. Toodles, unused to anything but fighting for everything she gets, makes enemies right and left at the camp until Michael and Sylvia Worth (Margaret Lindsay) take her in tow and show her the error of her ways. Almost immediately she becomes the most popular girl in the camp and is groomed for the prima donna role in

—Eugene Robert Richey

Who Is SUSANNA FOSTER?

SUSANNA FOSTER—her real name's Larsen—is one of the most democratic and unpredictable people in Hollywood. Born in Minneapolis fifteen years ago, she learned to sing at an early age, and in 1929, when the depression put her father's securities business on the rocks, Susanna came to the rescue by getting a singing engagement in a neighborhood theater. But it was several years later that Hollywood heard of her. Then M-G-M signed her to a year's contract, during which year nothing really happened to the lass. It wasn't until she went to Paramount a year later and played Mary Martin's daughter in "The Great Victor Herbert" that Susanna really started. She is magnificent in "The Hard-Boiled Canary," now earns $250 per week. Her voice is one of the finest in Hollywood. In "The Hard-Boiled Canary" she imitates a piccolo, singing a C above high C, to render Sousa's famous march, "Stars and Stripes Forever."

the forthcoming appearance of picked camp members in a special performance with the Manhattan Opera Company. Complications, of course, develop. Most excellent is Susanna Foster in her role, as is likewise Heimo Haitto, young Finnish violinist who leads the camp orchestra. And long will be the talk about Patricia Travers, young girl violinist who wears a dead-pan expression and a chip on her shoulder all through the story. She has a genuine comedy talent. Other talented youngsters do well in the Interlochen Camp scenes.

Lake Arrowhead, seven thousand feet high in the Sierra Madre Mountains and 120 miles from Hollywood, doubled for the Interlochen location. But beyond that, the company was not allowed to take liberties with the noted Interlochen Camp. Dr. Joseph E. Maddy, president and founder of Interlochen, insisted that the camp be portrayed on the screen precisely as it is, and that, before it be shown, it receive his unqualified endorsement. To make matters easier, Dr. Maddy was named technical adviser on the production and worked with the film crew throughout production. Of interest to radio listeners will be the fact that, at the real Interlochen Camp, nation-wide broadcasts by radio are made each week-end by the youngsters from the camp during the months of June, July, August.

Many of the teen-age youngsters who perform musically in "The Hard-Boiled Canary" are now on solo concert tours of the United States. Among them is Heimo Haitto, considered one of Europe's greatest young violinists. Heimo's parents were killed in his native Finland during a Russian air-raid.

It is difficult to find words to describe adequately the excellence of "The Hard-Boiled Canary." It's one of those pictures everyone hopes to but seldom sees, and it has in it fun, frolic and excellent music for everyone in the family, from Grandfather to Willie, age four.

WHAT THEY THOUGHT OF IT: Los Angeles Times (Edwin Schallert), "This is one of the most striking screen instances of taking classic and semi-classic music and making it essential to theme and story. It is the most daring . . . and one of the most interesting." Variety, "Should prove a refreshing and acceptable program-topper anywhere." Hollywood Reporter, "Musically 'The Hard-Boiled Canary' is a glorious experience which lingers hauntingly in memory."

"Andy Hardy's Private Secretary"

Cast: Lewis Stone, Mickey Rooney, Fay Holden, Ann Rutherford, Sara Haden, Kathryn Grayson, Ian Hunter, Todd Karns, et al. An M-G-M picture, directed by George B. Seitz, who has directed all previous Andy Hardy pictures. Based on an original story by Katharine Brush.

KATHRYN GRAYSON, eighteen-year-old newcomer who has been in training at Metro for the past year, proves to be a Deanna Durbin-like prima donna of the first water, and almost, but not quite (no one ever does), steals the picture from Mickey Rooney's Andy Hardy in this, the latest of the always excellent Andy Hardy series.

Of course, Mickey Rooney gets his share of the laughs, as always. But the big news of this picture is his "secretary," Miss Grayson. News item No. 2 is Todd Karns, handsome son of Roscoe, who plays the part of a poor but proud rival of Mickey's for school offices and honors.

This chapter of the Hardy family concerns itself with Mickey's being graduated from high school—a graduation that almost doesn't come off because he flunks his final English examination. Heaped with honors as president of his class, editor of the school annual, chairman of the graduation committee, etc., Mickey's head swells out of size and has to be deflated by his ever-present father, Judge Hardy. Dad teaches Andy a lesson in tolerance and democracy, and Kathryn Land (Miss Grayson) and her brother Harry (Todd Karns) become important factors in his life. His newborn interest in their welfare precipitates unusual complications, with himself on the receiving end most of the time. Take the whole family. It's great.

WHAT THEY THOUGHT OF IT: Los Angeles Herald-Express (Jimmy Starr), "To be quite truthful, Kathryn's lyric soprano voice is superior to Deanna's." Los Angeles Times (Edwin Schallert), "The series will certainly benefit by . . . the current picture." Hollywood Reporter, "It's the first time in the Hardys' five years of life that anyone has been able to steal the show from Mickey Rooney. Her name is Kathryn Grayson."

"Adam Had Four Sons"

Cast: Warner Baxter, Ingrid Bergman, Susan Hayward, Fay Wray, Helen Westley, Richard Denning, Johnny Downs, Robert Shaw, et al. A Columbia picture, produced by Robert Sherwood, directed by Gregory Ratoff, who also directed "Lancer Spy"; from the novel, "Legacy," by Charles Bonner.

HERALDING a future for Warner Baxter in more mature film roles, catapulting Susan Hayward into long-deserved prominence and bringing a new Hollywood personality to the fore in Robert Sherwood, former radio announcer turned producer, "Adam Had Four Sons" is an important picture to the film capital and smash entertainment for movie-goers.

Telling the story of Adam Stoddard (Warner Baxter) and his four sons during the period of from 1900 to the end of the first World War, the film traces the ups and downs of a typical family with its fine points and weaknesses impartially paraded before the camera. The death of Adam's first wife (Fay Wray), the private life of the family as headed by Adam with the aid of the children's governess (Ingrid Bergman), the second son's marriage to a vicious woman (Susan Hayward) are thoroughly etched on a screen which sparkles with pure entertainment. The picture is adult and daring, especially in that portion of the plot structure where Miss Hayward, as the wife of the second son, carries on an affair with his older brother while her own husband is serving in the army. Against this tawdriness, however, the characterizations of Baxter and Miss Bergman stand out so sharply that there is no question in anyone's mind at the finish as to the advantages of the right and decent way of life. "Adam Had Four Sons" got raves from top Hollywood critics.

WHAT THEY THOUGHT OF IT: Hollywood Citizen-News (James Francis Crowe), ". . . deeply emotional drama of American family life." Los Angeles Times (Edwin Schallert), ". . . bound to evoke a maximum of attention." Variety, "Unusually able performances." Hollywood Reporter, "A daring, deeply moving drama which reaches straight for the heart."

Review

Abbott and Costello made many friends during their years on the Kate Smith program. Now they are in Hollywood making movies. Their first picture was "One Night in the Tropics." Their second is "Buck Privates," a story of two bewildered draftees in a U. S. Army training-camp.

So many stories have been told of the unpleasant things people do, so many times reporters consider bad news the only real news, that we are delighted to present this story of Lou Costello and a heart that's as big as Paterson, N. J.—Editor.

THE Cristillos were good, God-fearing people and nothing like this had ever happened to them before. Their son, Lou—who was just a boy out of high school—was going to leave home. And as if that weren't enough, he was leaving his home for Hollywood, which, in those days, was in their opinion Sodom and Gomorrah combined.

There was only one thing to do and the Cristillos unwaveringly did it. It was what all the people in that part of Paterson, N. J., did when they came face to face with a thing like this. They called in Father Valenti.

Father Valenti—small, excitable and already ageless in a long service to parishioners of St. Anthony's—came at once. He took the lad into the parlor and pulled the doors shut behind him. Then he went to work.

Remember that this was a long time ago when Hollywood was in its mauve decade, and when the best story a press-agent could plant with the newspapers was the divorce of a star. Also, remember that the Cristillos and Father Valenti were simple, unsophisticated people.

"There's plenty of work right here in Paterson for a hard-working, honest boy like you, Lou, if you want it," Father Valenti said, "and I'm sure you do."

The stolid youngster shook his head. No one seemed to understand.

What Father Valenti didn't realize then was that Lou was a lad possessed of a dream, and that Hollywood alone was the land of dreams-come-true. Every fan magazine was busy testifying to that. The lad dreamed of coming back home some day in a big limousine. He would drive with his father and mother to the little church of St. Anthony, already a decaying hulk of clapboard and timber, and casually he'd drop a huge bill into the collection plate. Lord knows, money was badly needed in the parish where no wealthy people lived.

Lou went to Hollywood, and perhaps Hollywood was kinder to him than it is to most emigres to its inhospitable borders. At any rate, he got a job as a stuntman. One time he had to let the whole University of Southern California football squad trample over him in a scene in which he doubled for Buster Keaton.

THEN one day a very disillusioned young man awoke to the fact that he was getting nowhere in Hollywood. That very same day Lou Costello packed his grip and bought himself a train ticket.

What happened after that has been told so many times we won't go into it here—how he joined a vaudeville unit at St. Joseph, Mo., how he toured the tank towns, how he met Bud Abbott and teamed up with him in the Empire Theater in Brooklyn. Then there was more touring as a team, and one bright day they woke up and found themselves booked into Loew's State, smack dab in the middle of Broadway. It was there that Kate

Bad Boy Makes Good

Under Lou Costello's

gold—as those who

Smith caught their show and gave them a tryout on her program, and two years later they were still on it.

Lou—for the first time in a position to go back home in triumph—could hardly find time to travel the few short miles that separated Paterson from New York. At irregular intervals, however, he would manage to steal away for an hour's visit with his parents.

One day when he was on such a visit, Father Valenti came to call. He came, rather shamefacedly, to ask Lou's parents if they would ask Lou for permission to use his name as one of the sponsors of a dance and card party to be held for the church. For a great tragedy had befallen St. Anthony's.

It was never a rich parish and the years of depression had taken their full toll. Money which ordinarily would have gone to putting a few shingles on the battered roof or for replacing a worm-eaten and time-decayed timber in its foundation had gone instead to feed the hungry and to buy milk for the poor children of the parish. And now the city had condemned the church! It must be torn down, the city engineers decreed, because it was dangerous to use it any longer. In the face of this order—which Father Valenti recognized was necessary—the aged priest was desolate.

To the youth whom he had once counseled against the career which had brought him fame and, to others, happiness he poured out his troubles.

IN THAT moment, a dream which a young lad had filled with the white flame of ambition years ago—and which had smoldered within him, half forgotten—now flamed anew in the face of this direst of tragedies. Once he had dreamed of coming back to Paterson and doing something that would make the good Father Valenti and his parents very proud of him. Now was the time to do it.

"Forget that dance idea, Father," he said. Lou wasn't a rich man, but he knew his way about the theater. And if he had done 177 benefits for other actors sponsoring other worthy causes during the past year, then why shouldn't other performers help him now?

Back in 1929, when Abbott and Costello first joined hands as a comedy team, a young Jewish booking-agent, Eddie Sherman, saw their act, felt they had big-time goods, and took them under his wing. When Lou hurried back to New York and told Eddie what he had undertaken to do for Father Valenti, he half expected to have his ears knocked down. Instead, Eddie said, "That's a great idea, Lou. I'll drop everything else and go to work on it." And he did. For six weeks this

"Citizen Kane"

THERE were many in Hollywood who felt that the screen would never see an Orson Welles film. Young Mr. Welles talked too much, ignored all the rules of film production, failed to recognize the difference between radio and Hollywood. These skeptics are now busy swallowing their words, for "Citizen Kane," his first film, is a masterpiece of spell-binding suspense and thrilling photographic achievement. Had "Citizen Kane" proved a flop there would have been no loopholes through which Mr. Welles might crawl. He wrote, produced, directed and starred in the film. Furthermore, ignoring the Hollywood dictum—if you're not sure of your story, get some big Hollywood names—he used virtually unknown players recruited from radio and his Mercury Theater, and chose them for their ability. Film was released in February.

KANE starts a newspaper, and new, startling journalistic practices bring him success. He's seen with first wife, Emily (Ruth Warrick)

WITH SUCCESS comes a desire for influence. His papers conduct great crusades, which culminate with his running for the office of Governor of New York—and his defeat

JAMES CAGNEY helps Bette Davis out of phony cactus for film. Later, Bette accidentally fell into real cactus LOCATION trips sound like lots of fun, but inevitably the stars come back from them ready for a rest cure. This is even more true of the producer and director who must face conditions far from the ideal conditions possible in a studio. These pictures were taken in Death Valley while Warner Bros. was filming "The Bride Came C. O. D." Chief difficulty encountered here was brilliant sunlight which caused the stars to squint. Difficulty was overcome by giving extraordinary attention to camera angles which avoided placing stars' faces in bright sun. The players were housed at Furnace Inn, arose 5:30 each morning, drove forty miles to location, started work at 8:30 and continued, in terrific desert heat, until 5:30. Back at Furnace Inn about 7:00, they were ready for bed. The "Bride" company worked on a seven-day shooting-week.

THE METROPOLITAN OPERA COMPANY PRESENTS "ALCESTE" BY CHRISTOPHER WILLIBALD GLUCK. In Three Acts, in French, NBC. The cast: Alceste, Marjorie Lawrence, soprano; Admetus, René Maison, tenor; High Priest, Leonard Warren, baritone; Evander, Alessio de Paolis, tenor; The Herald, George Cehanovsky, tenor; A Woman, Marita Farrell, soprano; Voice of Apollo, Arthur Kent, tenor; Conductor, Ettore Panizza.

The operas of Gluck, early German composer (1714-1787), were milestones in musical history in that they marked a departure from the artificial and melodramatic Italian school. Gluck was a pioneer in wedding the music to the drama and not using it merely as a show window for the singers' trills and high notes. He was fond of Greek mythology as a basis for his librettos and in much of his music strove to express the flowing lines and purity of form of Greek art.

He greatly influenced later composers such as Beethoven, Mozart, Weber and Wagner. "Alceste" is among the most perfect examples of the new style of opera which Gluck created. The first act opens in Thessaly, Greece. Admetus, King of Pherae, is dying and his people are gathered in the Temple of Apollo to pray for his recovery. The High Priest of Apollo decrees that Admetus' life will be saved if there can be found one amongst his subjects willing to die in his stead. The people flee from the temple, leaving Alceste, Admetus' wife, who agrees to forfeit her life for that of her husband. In Act II, the king has recovered and is in his palace receiving the joyous homage of the people. Admetus asks Alceste how the miracle of his recovery was achieved. She evades answering him, and, his suspicions aroused, forces her to tell the truth. Admetus, refusing to accept her sacrifice, implores the gods to strike him dead, but Alceste begs them to spare him, and, holding to her bargain, starts on her way to Hades.

Act III is set outside the gate of Hades, where Alceste awaits her doom. She finds Admetus, who has followed her to plead with her to change her mind. At her continued refusal, Admetus challenges the gods to take his wife away. Apollo appears, and, relenting, restores the faithful Alceste to her husband. Together they return to earth.

This is an all-Czechoslovakian program, highlighted by the first performance of an orchestral version of Smetana's lovely string quartet, subtitled "From My Life," in which the Czech composer recalls episodes of his youth. All the music is gay and colorful, with a strong flavoring of Slavic rhythms. Szell was for years General Music Director of the Prague Opera and Philharmonic, and is noted for his expert conducting of Czech music.

GREAT PLAYS, NBC. "The Well of the Saints," by John Millington Synge.

John Millington Synge wrote only six plays, but he was one of Ireland's greatest playwrights. And he is considered one of the greatest imaginative dramatists of modern times. His works are colored by the typically Celtic tendency to fanciful spirituality.

"The Well of the Saints," Synge's first three-act drama, exemplifies that dream-world character. It is the story of two old blind beggars whose world of imagined beauty crashes about them when their sight is restored, and who make a pathetic but heroic decision when their sight fails a second time.

JOE AND MABEL, NBC.

Seldom have three fictional characters so taken the fancy of the radio audience as did Joe, the taxi-driver, his pal Mike and his girl friend Mabel. Late last year author Irving Gaynor Neiman turned over to NBC a riotous drama called "Height of Fashion," dealing with Joe's efforts to understand women's clothes. The flood of mail that resulted from the broadcast brought forth a sequel called "Women and Children First," telling about Joe's conflict with Mabel's jealous little brother. The response was still more enthusiastic than before.

There was nothing to do but make the doings of Joe and Mabel a rollicking radio fixture, heard each Sunday afternoon.

SCREEN GUILD THEATER, CBS. Marian and Jim Jordan (Fibber McGee and Molly), guest stars.

The vehicle in which Fibber McGee and Molly will appear on "Screen Guild Theater" this week does not aptly fall under the heading of drama. But it can't be classified strictly as a variety show or an ordinary comedy show. It is to be a sort of combination affair, an "idea" presentation. The comedy team will wander into the broadcast, making cracks about never having been on the charity-benefited dramatic show before. And from there on watch for what will happen.

EVERYMAN'S THEATER, NBC. Raymond Edward Johnson, guest star, in Arch Oboler's "The Ugliest Man in the World."

"The Ugliest Man in the World," if not Oboler's greatest and most famous play, is, at least, the most significant in his career. And Raymond Edward Johnson, very busy young radio actor, is the performer inseparably identified with it. It was this play, with Johnson starring, which Oboler recorded and played for NBC officials, so impressing them that they offered him carte blanche for the dramatic series called "Arch Oboler's Plays." With this play and Johnson, Oboler launched that series in January, 1939. Since then Johnson has played in other Oboler dramas, notably the stirring dramatic monolog, "Steel."

This week Johnson will again appear in "The Ugliest Man in the World" on Oboler's commercial series.

OF ALL radio's families the Bumsteads are the silliest—and the most lovable.

Born of Chic Young's comic strip "Blondie," the film and radio versions of the Bumsteads have at least caught up in popularity to their newspaper inspiration—and quite naturally, with the perfect casting of Arthur Lake as Dagwood and Penny Singleton as Blondie. On the air you may hear them Monday evenings over CBS, struggling with their income-tax returns, pacifying Dagwood's boss, checking up on Baby Dumpling—however simple the problem, maneuvering themselves into a perfectly ridiculous situation. The Bumsteads of radio are aided by a pair of stand-out comedians. Mr. Dithers, Dagwood's testy but benevolent boss, is played by Hanley Stafford, famous as Snooks' Daddy. Mr. Fuddle, the Bumsteads' embarrassingly helpful neighbor, is played by Arthur Q. Bryan, rotund and veteran funnyman of films and radio. Strangely, Baby Dumpling, the hub of the Bumstead menage—once played by Larry Simms as in films—currently is the voice of a girl, Miss Leone Le Doux. Hearing the Bumsteads, it is easy to believe what is true: That Penny Singleton and Arthur Lake live their parts most of their waking hours—with the minor difference that they are married, but not to each other.

FIRST FAMILIES ON AIR

Records

THE radio craze for "audience participation" is gradually infecting the record companies, which give amateur musicians a chance to do their stuff. Columbia's "Add-A-Part" albums (recordings of chamber-music with one instrument left out) are already well known, and this month's addition to the series is the Schubert "Trout" Quintet with the double-bass part missing. (S-49, $8.)

Victor, following the trend, appears with two albums called "Sing for Pleasure and Practice." (P-47, $2 apiece.) These are recordings by Frank La Forge, eminent composer, coach and accompanist, who plays the piano accompaniments of twelve songs, six for high voice and six for low, with the vocal part omitted. The list of songs is well chosen, including such favorites as "I Love Thee," "Songs My Mother Taught Me," "Beautiful Dreamer," "A Dream," "Devotion" and "Passing By" for high voice; and "Cradle Song" (Brahms), "The Two Grenadiers," "Love's Old Sweet Song," "Sylvia," "Calm Is the Night" and "None But the Lonely Heart" for low voice. If you have any kind of a voice, these albums are fun—although the neighbors might object.

Books

A NEW biography of Jan Sibelius, beloved Finnish composer, has just been published. Called "Finlandia," by Elliott Arnold (Henry Holt and Co., New York), it was written for children, but may be read profitably by adults as well. It is illustrated with imaginative woodcuts, and is a comprehensive and interesting study of the man and his work. The author evidently feels great reverence for Sibelius, and this feeling is reflected in the book.

Another charming children's book is "Curtain Calls for Wolfgang Mozart," by Opal Wheeler and Sybil Deucher (E. P. Dutton and Co., $2). It is in the form of a play, presenting scenes from Mozart's life, with selections from his work. It would make a delightful play to put on in school, with the class' best musician in the leading role of Mozart.

FOR AMATEURS composer Frank La Forge has recorded piano accompaniments of songs with vocals omitted

GREAT MUSICIANS

This Week Kirsten Flagstad

TRYING to capture the essence of Kirsten Flagstad in a few words is like attempting to reproduce in a snapshot the grandeur of a sunset, the first glimpse of the Alps or the majestic peace of Flagstad's own Norwegian fjords. One could describe the noble placidity of her face, her fair, transparent skin that blushes so easily, the clear gray-blue eyes, the honey-colored hair, the firm, rounded, well-proportioned contours of her body. One could say that she is essentially a simple person, liking simple things; that she is kind, beloved of colleagues and co-workers alike, respected by conductors as a thorough musician; that she is devoid of all pretense, truly humble, a prodigious worker and sincere in her desire for privacy. All these things could be and have been said of her and all of them are true.

But none of them explains the mystery of this woman, who, on the stage, becomes a being from another world, shedding a radiance that at times is wholly supernatural.

To meet she is a sweet, middle-aged woman, who answers your questions in correct but accented English. Her clothes would not rate a place on the ten best-dressed list. She is frank in her love of good food, good wine. Her voice is low-pitched, she speaks quietly and rarely gestures with her hands. She is the devoted wife of Henry Johansen, one of Norway's biggest industrialists, and mother of a daughter married to an American living in Montana. Her chief amusements are knitting, playing intricate games of solitaire, going to the movies and listening every free moment to the radio. She listens to everything, soap operas, news commentators, boogie-woogie and what have you.

SHE is probably the only artist at the Metropolitan who has no maid or secretary. She packs her own suitcase and makes up alone. This is not because she is frugal but because she hates to have people fussing around her. Her dressing-room at the Met, in striking contrast to the resplendent quarters of other stars, is furnished only with a bare table with her make-up box in the center of it.

This is not to say that she shuns crowds and excitement. Her biggest thrill since she came to America was having a train held up forty minutes in Detroit so that she could make it after appearing on a broadcast of the Ford Sunday Evening Hour. A police escort with roaring motorcycles and shrieking sirens escorted her flower-filled car to the station.

She believes in luck, recalling the time she found

OUTSIDE SCANDINAVIA, Kirsten Flagstad was unknown in 1933. Today she is hailed as the greatest of Wagnerian sopranos—as she appears above a fifty-centime piece on the carpet just before going to sing before Gatti Casazza and Artur Bodanzky at St. Moritz. "Of course it didn't make me sing any better, but it made me feel that I'd make out all right. I did. They signed me for the Met."

MADAME FLAGSTAD has been prominent on the stage for more than a quarter of a century, first appearing in operetta, then singing lyric opera roles such as Mimi in "La Boheme." Her early musical training she received from her mother, called "The Musical Mother of Norway" because all of her children became musicians. Many will remember the international two-way broadcast between New York and Oslo, on which her sister, Karen, was introduced to the American radio audience in 1937, when Karen, also an opera singer, sang as her sister listened, and donned headphones to hear Kirsten later. Flagstad never appeared outside Scandinavia until 1933, never sang "Isolde" until ten years ago, and only learned some of her other great roles, such as Leonore in "Fidelio"—which she sang two weeks ago on the Metropolitan Opera's regular Saturday afternoon broadcast—and Bruennhilde in the "Ring of the Nibelungen," after her sensational American debut in 1935.

Her background is not unusual for a singer. What is extraordinary is that until 1933 no one had heard of her outside of Scandinavia and that she was about to retire from the stage just before being hailed as the greatest Wagnerian soprano of this or any other age. For old-timers declare that never have the Wagnerian roles been sung as she sings them, never has anyone projected herself into these characters as she has done.

Neither Flagstad's glorious voice nor her restrained, dignified acting, so remote from the conventional operatic ranting, tells the whole story. There have been great voices and acting before. The real phenomenon, for which there seems to be no explanation, is the mysterious mutation which takes place in her as she steps on the stage, transforming a simple, unassuming, seemingly unemotional person into a grandiose figure of legend whose power to stir the emotions is unlimited. Such things cannot be analyzed but only accepted, enjoyed and treasured in one's memory. Fortunate indeed are those who have heard her, so they may say at some future time, "Ah, yes, we have good singers today. But you should have heard Flagstad . . . her like will never come again."

—Viva Liebling.

ON THE BANDWAGON

BAND OF THE WEEK honors are for Glen Gray and his Casa Lomas, pioneers of the "cooperative band," owned and controlled by members only. The Casa Lomas are currently at the Palace Hotel in San Francisco, where they broadcast frequently over an NBC network

A BAND that for the past eleven years has made musical history is Glen Gray's. The Casa Loma band was the first "cooperative" band, with its members as regular stockholders in a corporation on a "share the wealth" basis. The members also control all business moves. President and creator of the "cooperative" is Glen Gray, of whom no introduction seems necessary. Nevertheless, here are a few facts about this personable young man. He was born in Metamora, Ill., and attended high school in Roanoke, not far away. It was in this latter town that he organized a small band known as "Spike's" Jazz Band. "Spike" is Glen's nickname. The band did so well its leader was inspired to give up his job with the Santa Fe railroad and go into music seriously. To further his musical knowledge Glen enrolled in the American Conservatory of Music in Chicago, where he studied the clarinet and sax. Played with various bands and eventually wound up with the Orange Blossom band, one of Jean Goldkette's string. In 1929 the band was playing in New York when the stock-market crash caused aspirin to be substituted for music. In February, 1930, the band, on a gamble of its members, incorporated as the Casa Loma Orchestra, taking the name from a hotel of that name in Toronto, Canada. The Casa Lomas, incidentally, were one of the first bands to play "swing," although at the time they did not call it that. Present members of the band, of whom only ten are stockholders, is as follows (see picture above): Front row (left to right): Eddie Castanzo, Clarence Hutchenrider, Art Ralston, Glen Gray (standing), Frank "Pat" Davis, Kenny Sargent—the latter also being a vocalist. All aforementioned play the sax. Second row (left to right): Walter "Pee-Wee" Hunt (also a vocalist),

The music of the Casa Lomas is currently heard over the Red network of the National Broadcasting Company from the Palace Hotel in San Francisco. Because the Casa Loma band is a self-made band that came up the hard way—via the "sticks" and one-nighters—to remain on top for more than a decade, MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE nominates Glen Gray and his Casa Loma orchestra as the BAND OF THE WEEK! Next week: Horace Heidt.

Movie-Radio Guide Song-Titling Contest

How many times, when the radio announcer introduced a screwy song title, have you remarked that you could write an even better title than that? Well, here's your chance, for MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE, in collaboration with Leeds Music Company, publishers of "Beat Me Daddy," "Scrub Me Mama," "Well, All Right," "Tain't Whatcha Do," "Bounce Me Brother," "Rhumboogie," "Boogie-Woogie Bugle Boy," and many other oddly titled songs, is offering many prizes for original and screwy song titles. The contest is open to all readers of MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE! You may send as many entries as you wish. In addition to a first prize of fifty dollars, the winner's song title will be used for an original song to be introduced by the Andrews Sisters. The composer of the winning title will also receive a regular writer's contract, along with the other composers of the words and music of the song. The next eleven entries selected will be awarded one dozen recordings of their own choice. All titles become the property of MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE, and the decision of the judges is final. In case of duplicate winners, two similar prizes will be awarded.

Remember, originality and oddity are desired. Make them as screwy and novel as you can. Address your entries to Song-Title Contest, MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE, 731 Plymouth Court, Chicago, Ill.

BING CROSBY, whose crooning efforts have been handicapped seriously, may soon delight listeners with the old favorites

Good-bye "Jeanie With the Light Brown Hair"

What will armistice in the radio-music war mean to you?
Here's the story up to date

By Lorraine Thomas

IF YOU tune in your radio in the next few weeks and hear Kate Smith singing the popularly missed "God Bless America" on the air, don't fall over from shock. If you're one of the countless hundreds who wrote in to the "Kraft Music Hall" to protest that Bing Crosby no longer croons the old, familiar favorites, you're due for a surprise, too—a pleasant one.

An armistice has been declared on radio's music battlefield. Soon the struggle between rival music publishers and authors, the bitter war which made Stephen Foster's beautiful "Jeanie With the Light Brown Hair" a piece of music to be jibed at because of its frequent repetition on the airwaves, will be over.

As these lines are being written, a full, negotiated peace is being shaped between the men who write music and the radio stations which bring that music to you. Out of this peace, the radio listener will come upon a veritable golden era of popular music on the networks, an era not yet equaled for all the million-dollar broadcasts which have been a part of radio in the United States.

The armistice was signed as a result of action on the part of the Federal Government. It is in the form of a consent decree prepared by the U. S. Department of Justice and signed by both BMI (Broadcast Music, Inc.) and ASCAP (American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers), the warring parties. This consent decree is aimed at stopping, once and for all time, monopolies in music which might again ban from the radio such well-known composers as Irving Berlin, Hoagy Carmichael, Victor Herbert, Jerome Kern and others dear to music-lovers and radio listeners who have been notably absent from radio broadcasts since the first of the year. The decree provides that neither BMI nor ASCAP shall operate in such a way that their member song-writers are prohibited from making other contracts and other arrangements for disposing of their musical efforts.

As in all battles and wars, there is much to be said on both sides. But in the heat of the acrimonious battle which reached a peak late in December of last year, when the networks agreed not to use any ASCAP music on the air but to set up their own musical organization, BMI, little of the good found its way through the inky blasts to the light. Now, with peace in the offing, we can look at the merits of the quarreling parties more calmly.

ASCAP's record of achievement on behalf of its member artists is a notable one. Until ASCAP appeared on the scene, writers of songs were more often than not subject to exploitation by those who wished to use their creative efforts, and in many cases the song-writer received little or nothing for his efforts. By organization of the song-writers and composers, ASCAP has managed to provide a mutual bargaining group which has greatly raised the standards and receipts of the song-writer.

The networks have felt that ASCAP's protective instincts were perhaps too strong. The networks have also objected to the manner of ASCAP's collections, which, they pointed out, were not on a basis of songs played but on a percentage basis from each station holding an ASCAP contract. This year that would have meant a bulk payment to ASCAP of more than nine millions of dollars, a hundred percent increase over ASCAP's take of last year.

Efforts at negotiation failed miserably. ASCAP felt that the networks needed ASCAP music. The networks felt that ASCAP's price was far too high. Accusations, bitterness sabotaged reasonable attempts to mend differences, and before the New Year was in the radio broadcasters announced the formulation of their own music publishing concern, Broadcast Music, Inc. Radio stations put more than four millions of dollars into this new organization, which has some 275 employees, services 670 radio stations.

PERHAPS the outstanding advantage that BMI had to offer was its recognition of the young and unknown writers and composers who had, under ASCAP, failed of recognition. Here was an organization which, almost overnight, had the tremendous and virtually impossible task of replacing the vast catalogs of ASCAP music, built up over the years. For the young and ambitious music-writer, it was a dream come true, the once-in-a-lifetime opportunity.

Various surveys showed various results. C. E. Hooper, Inc. (advertising researchers), made a survey one month after ASCAP music was banned from the air and learned that almost five percent more people were listening to musical programs than during the same month last year. Other surveys revealed a sharp dissatisfaction on the part of listeners with the absence of much of their favorite music.

Now, the armistice.

What will the peace bring? What will be the result for listeners of the negotiations now under way between radio and ASCAP? What will happen to BMI, the broadcaster's child born of the emergency at such cost?

A negotiated peace will undoubtedly leave BMI still standing on a competitive basis with ASCAP. ASCAP will be out to show that its writers and composers can turn out better music than any obtainable elsewhere.

BMI, on the other hand, will not let its dream of a vast, untapped reservoir of undiscovered genius finding its rightful place in the musical sun go by the boards.

For the public, then, the approaching period is one of the greatest promise. Back on the air will be the great names of the past—Gershwin, Berlin, Carmichael, Burke, Herbert. Deprived of these noted works for a few short months, the public will welcome them with open arms.

But in addition, the radio-listening public will have more. It will have the music of youngsters who, under the formerly existing arrangement, were given but little opportunity to have their works played so that the public might pass upon them.

Thus, the best of the old and new in music will find its way to radio broadcasts, once the peace that is now being negotiated is completed. And the bitterness that marked the ASCAP-BMI affray will be forgotten in the creative effort of both to produce better music so that the world will beat a pathway—literally speaking—to their respective doorways. That means, for radio listeners, a golden era of the finest music ever heard on the air is about to begin.

FIVE MORE YEARS of "America's Town Meeting of the Air" were assured last week when NBC and George V. Denny, Jr., Town Hall president, signed a new contract. Foremost national forum of the country, the program will remain uncensored, unrehearsed, unsponsored and non-partisan as it has been.

IN NEW YORK

with Wilson Brown

GERMAN short-wave programs directed to the United States invited Americans to give the Nazis comments and suggestions by cable collect—and the fun started. The Nazis asked for it, thought the Americans, so they'll get it. Said one New Yorker: "Please broadcast funeral of Hitler." Said another: "Please play 'There'll Always Be an England' and dedicate it to Churchill." Many of the messages used language which good taste doesn't permit our printing. The Nazis had instructed RCA to accept cables up to twenty-five words, relay them to Berlin at the expense of the German government. The result was a flood. Finally RCA was so swamped and so many of the messages were so bitter that something had to be done. RCA notified Berlin that it could not act as censor and therefore Berlin must take all the messages, including the bad ones, or none at all. After a week, when the Nazis found out that Americans were delighting in sending them insults at their expense, the whole thing was called off. But during that week Hitler paid a lot of money to permit Americans to tell him what they thought of him—something he already should have known.

Merry-Go-Round Goes Around

Some weeks ago we mentioned the "Manhattan Merry-Go-Round" as one of the old faithfuls that seldom changed, but went on and on. That status didn't remain, for on March 2 Lucy Monroe, soprano, and Conrad Thibault, baritone, stepped in to replace Rachel Carlay and Phil Duey. Checking back on this program we found that it started November 6, 1932, with Pierre LeKreun, tenor, and Gene Rodemich's orchestra. Gene died March 4, 1934, and Pierre left the program last December.

Which reminds that the stork is expected to visit the home of Charles Correll (Amos 'n' Andy) in August. On February 24 "Amos 'n' Andy" switched from selling Campbell's chicken noodle soup to chicken gumbo soup. Evidently they sold out all of the chicken noodle soup their sponsor could make! True Stories. So Help Us

It was raining cats and dogs—dogs in particular—February 14 at the artists' entrance of NBC in Hollywood. Arch Oboler, the "Everyman's Theater" impresario, was trying to get his Great Dane (180 pounds) to follow him. But the frightened dog could obtain no floor-hold on the slippery, wet pavement and kept falling to the ground. Finally, in a panic, it refused to get up. Just about that time Bill Thompson, of the Fibber McGee show, came on the scene and realized that the dog never would get on its feet until given new confidence in the form of some extra traction. NOT SO SERIOUS in weeks on the air have Bob Hope (left) and Kay Kyser gotten as here after Kay guest-starred on Bob's broadcast, February 25. The show itself was hands down one of Bob's funniest on the coat, wagged his tail, and licked the hand of Sir Walter Raleigh Thompson.

Al Pearce and Wen Niles tell a tale of stopping in the town of Dos Palos on a recent hunting trip and being unable to find sleeping accommodations. There was no hotel, but the hospital was suggested, so there they went. Next morning when they awakened they faced three doctors all having an argument about which one was to get to operate! Ann Todd, eight-year-old actress who plays Amy Foster in "Those We Love," CBS serial, was informed that she would play Linda Darnell as a child in "Blood and Sand," the 20th Century-Fox picture. But Ann is much wiser than her eight years. She asked immediately for Mickey Rooney's telephone number, saying, "If I'm Linda Darnell, I'm going to get a date with Mickey!"

Flicker Clicks

Bob Hope's Brenda and Cobina join Rudy Vallee and Rosemary Lane in his Columbia picture, "Show Business"; they are set to do a burlesque dance routine which should be something . . . The Six Hits and a Miss and Richard Lane will also appear in Vallee's new picture.

IN CHICAGO

with Don Moore

FRANK GILL and Bill Demling, comedy skippers of "Show Boat," set out recently to find a man they had heard of whose name was Xenophon Zola. They wanted permission to use the name in a script gag. They trailed Xenophon from home to the barber shop, to the pants presser's, to various other places. They found him finally—guess where. At a radio broadcast—not their own. They got permission to say Xenophon Zola on the air and dashed to their own show with not too much time to spare. Then when it came time for the gag—which involved a word-play between "Xenophon Zola" and "xylophone solo"—Demling got his tongue twisted. After all the effort to get permission to say Xenophon Zola, the gag fell flatter than a xylophone with the legs knocked from under it.

Vagabonds Settled

Those four singing Vagabonds of "Breakfast Club," "Club Matinee," and NBC spots haven't wandered so much since coming to Chicago from St. Louis, where they were all students together. They recently celebrated the fifth anniversary of their association with NBC here . . . Hugh Rowlands, Jack Hunt in "Girl Alone," has received an official "go ahead" from Uncle Sam for his airplane-refresher course. Hugh is one of the many private fliers who might be called upon as commercial pilots if the regular pilots were called into military service . . . Emcee of the new show "What's Your Idea?" is Nelson Olmsted, actor and dynamic story narrator of the "Story Dramas by Olmsted" program.

Franklyn MacCormack, who landed the distinctive post as narrator-announcer of the new Wayne King show, also got a nice break in the form of a gift from his wife for his birthday anniversary, March 8—a new Cadillac convertible . . . The fan-mal figures of Joe Emerson's "Hymns of All Churches" show that not only regular church members but many others as well from all parts of the globe are followers of the program. Methodists are represented more often than members of any other denomination in Emerson's mail.

Tito, Timely Tenor

I visited with an old favorite of mine when he was guest soloist of CBS' "Design for Happiness" recently. I say "old" because he has been known to radio listeners for eight or ten years, though he's still quite a young man. He's Tito Guizar, the Mexican tenor you've seen on the screen quite often the past several years ("Blondie Goes Latin" is the latest film). But he isn't on the air regularly now. And he should be. With all the current emphasis on Latin-American solidarity, he's a natural. He sings Latin-American and our own songs with equal finesse in a voice that's versatile and virile as well as romantic. And, incidentally, Tito's a mighty engaging personality, a mixture of Latin charm and American sociability.

TED FIO-RITO, long-time band favorite, is maestro of "What's Your Idea?" new NBC Sun. series

"FRIENDSHIP BRIDGE"

ONE of the finest examples of what our broadcasters are doing to send cheer and encouragement to our British friends overseas is the program "Friendship Bridge," which first went on the air Monday, August 19, and is now broadcast daily except Saturdays and Sundays at 4:00 p.m. EST (9:00 p.m. in London) over the international station WRUL of Boston, Mass. The programs generally originate in one of the studios of WMCA in New York City and are then carried by land wire to WRUL in Boston from which point they are radiated simultaneously on frequencies of 11.79 and 15.35 megacycles.

"Friendship Bridge," developed by the British-American Ambulance Corps in cooperation with the World Wide Broadcasting Foundation, consists of messages, greetings, songs, words of friendship and good cheer from those here to friends or relatives in Britain. All kinds of people come before the mike of "Friendship Bridge," each to say his or her little "two bits' worth" for the cause. Sometimes it is sons or daughters, evacuees saying "Hello" to daddy and mother; sometimes radio's own, such as Eddie Cantor or Raymond Gram Swing; from time to time celebrities such as Mrs. F. D. Roosevelt or General Pershing speak, but more often it is just plain Mr. or Mrs. America expressing in simple—sometimes faltering—words their sincere admiration for brave hearts who, at the other end of "Friendship Bridge," are upholding the standards of democracy.

Despite the horrors of total war, despite endless defense duties, and despite difficulties of reception and irregularities of mail service, hundreds of letters continue to pour in to "Friendship Bridge" from Britain's listeners in homes, in factories, in air-raid shelters. Some are sad, some humorous, some thrilling chronicles of bravery but all are filled with heart-warming words of appreciation for such programs as "Friendship Bridge." Here are random extracts:

SALOP, ENGLAND: "We have it on the highest authority that thistles do not produce figs and that few thorns produce grapes—but it seems that beyond a hedge of thorns, the fruit may grow... we find this war thorny enough, but there's a warmth of feeling of which, if I may say so, station WRUL's 'Friendship Bridge' is a particularly fine cluster. I should like to thank you. Please carry on. Our ability to stick it out depends very largely on you" . . . LONDON, ENGLAND: "Sitting here in our air-raid post on the southeast outskirts of London, we find great encouragement and inspiration in listening to your commentators. You see, my wife, who is sitting here with me, is a Bostonian. We were married in the U. S. A. in April, 1939, and every day I feel more glad we did. Came the war, and my business returned me to London. Our little house here in the suburbs was just heaven to us—still is—but the blitz has disturbed all our routine. Kae and I are both air-raid wardens. Pardon the pencil, but the barrage is heavy tonight and a bomb last night upset our ink."

"Friendship Bridge" is but one of the feature programs broadcast over World Wide Broadcasting Foundation stations WRUL-WRUV of Boston.

Other outstanding WRUL-WRUV programs follow (time is EST):

Jewish boy worked like a demon on the Catholic charity.

It was the biggest show that Paterson ever saw, and eight thousand yelling, shouting souls filled the armory at five bucks per throw to see such Broadway stars as Helen Kane, Esther Ralston, the Three Stooges, Milton Berle, Carmen Miranda, Bobby Clark, the Hilton Sisters, Paul Ash, Paul Whiteman, Ben Bernie, Bela Lugosi, the Roxyettes and others in a long parade which was literally a Who's Who on Broadway.

But the two real stars of the show were Lou Costello—Paterson's Bad Boy, who had made good in such a big way—and the kindly Father Valenti. Lou Costello had long been a household hero to Paterson radio listeners, and now he had given Paterson a new sort of hero—the kindly, plodding, self-effacing priest who had labored so long on behalf of his flock that he had little time left for caring for himself.

When the show was over, the mortgage which had sat astride the ramshackle steeple of St. Anthony's with such persistency over the years had completely disappeared. And Father Valenti, who had long before changed his opinion of show people, shifted them even higher in his estimation. In the box-office, where a quick estimate of the receipts and expenses had been made, he was speechless and close to tears at the joy of the occasion. He took off his glasses and wiped his forehead, and then he couldn't find his glasses.

But there was no time to look for them now. He was going down to the lobby to meet Kate Smith, who had done so much to make the affair a success. As Lou and Father Valenti shoved through the crowd, the priest hardly able to see his hand in front of him without his glasses, they came upon Kate, flanked on either side by burly special policemen assigned to her by the city.

"This is Miss Smith, Father," Lou said. And the priest, overcome by emotion, reached out with both arms and . . . kissed a policeman smack on the cheek!

There is an epilog to this story. This benefit was held in October, 1939. That fall Abbott and Costello made their first movie, "One Night in the Tropics," and Universal had already booked it into a New Orleans theater for its world premiere.

One day Lou was talking to a Universal executive and, in the course of the conversation, he told about the benefit and added that he was going back again this year to do something else for St. Anthony's. The executive immediately canceled the New Orleans booking and arranged to hold the world premiere of the first Abbott and Costello film in Paterson instead. The company refused to take any rental fee for the film. It was donated for the benefit of St. Anthony's, and Abbott and Costello appeared in person before the packed audience that turned out to see it.

Thus the first instalment on the new St. Anthony's church was raised—$4,500—and on the same day that the film was premiered Lou Costello took the first spadeful of dirt from the ground where the new church will rise!

VOICE OF THE LISTENER

Express your opinions. Write V. O. L., 731 Plymouth Court, Chicago, Ill.

Poor Bonnie and Jeanie

Dear V. O. L.:

They've brought "Bonnie" from over the ocean, and now she's doing the rumba, conga and jumping jive. The old "Home on the Range" has turned into a tumble-down shack. When they have to take the beautiful old tunes and put them through the third degree just to have musical programs, it's time they do something about a settlement in the music war. I can't see the younger generation cutting the rug to the haunting strains of "Old Black Joe." Nor can I see Grandma sitting back relaxed while listening to "Jeanie" being dragged all over the air by her light brown hair.

Sarah J. Nash, Medford, Ore.

Two in One

Dear V. O. L.:

Often of late vocal soloists on many programs sing one song and the orchestras play something entirely different. That happened just before I started this letter. A girl was singing a new song, and I don't know what the orchestra was playing but I think it was a new version of "The Storm," for it certainly sounded like thunder.

Cyril A. Smack, Long Branch, N. J.

• While we're on the subject, how would you like to hear once again a few vocalists on big shows actually accompanied by a piano, a guitar, an organ or a small ensemble rather than trying to themselves accompany or keep up with a big brass band?—V. O. L.

Comedy for Daytime Cares

Dear V. O. L.:

The weary procession of depressing dramas is awful. In these so-called dramas the married people are always unhappy, young folks are always in a jam, and the likable heroes get lost on other continents. This job of replenishing the earth and caring for the young and their ornery sires may be woman's greatest career, but it is back-breaking, nevertheless. A little comedy for the housewives would be a great help during a trying day, when we are too worn with our own cares to listen to others' heartaches.

Mrs. J. L. Simmons, Fairfield, N. C.

Medicine We Need

Dear V. O. L.:

When I'm tired of hearing about war, uneasy at every news broadcast and afraid American boys may have to fight, I get comfort, hope and courage from such programs as "Wings Over Jordan" and the Southernaires' songs. Spiritual songs and sincere, inspiring talks do a great good. They are medicine we all need. I hope others will listen for these Sunday programs and others like them.

Miss N. Teen, St. Marys, Pa.—JOHN RABY is married to a non-professional in real life. He celebrated a "script" marriage (first anniversary) about the time of his real wedding anniversary. by Betsy Alden that when she applies nail lacquer she removes the latter from the tips of her nails with the side of her thumb as professional manicurists do. This, says Miss Kitty Foyle, leaves a smoother edge, less apt to smudge than the one made with cleansing-tissues or a towel. Carole Lombard declares that brilliantine is much underestimated as a beauty product. "Use brilliantine generously and with an atomizer" is her suggestion for girls with fine hair that fluffs up at the slightest provocation, adding whimsically, "The wind and the rain in your hair may sound romantic but it adds up in every-day life to a disheveled appearance. Men admire sleek streamlines in the opposite sex, and that goes from their topknots to their toe-tips. Brilliantine with its oil base will offset dryness, make your hair look brilliant, feel deliciously smooth to his touch!" Mary Martin says that smudged elbows are real charm-detractors. Good morning, reader! Did your morning bawth include an elbow-scrubbing? Better check up on this new grooming angle, sister—or isn't your elbow an angle? Wally Westmore, make-up chief at Paramount, gives us the brush-off—rather and outward at least once a day, (2) Brush your nails up (when using a nail-brush) from the tips of the fingers in order to push back the cuticle, (3) Use a brush instead of a puff to smooth powder evenly and give the skin a lovely, "mat" finish. (A baby's hair-brush works beautifully if Junior doesn't mind sharing his.) Lucille Ball cautions girls to be careful when applying rouge to put it on the highest point of the cheeks, blending it to nothing at all at the edges. "Keep rouge away from your laughter and sun lines," she advises, "for it has a mean way of accenting wrinkles." I might add that Lucille prefers a dry to paste rouge and applies it with a long-handled brush about a half-inch wide. Anna Neagle gave me a clever suggestion for using mascara that I put into immediate use. Says Anna, "You can lengthen the appearance of your eyes if you will darken only the tips and outer ends of your lashes. This is an old movie trick but it has given many ordinary-looking persons an oddly attractive distinction. And," she very thoughtfully postscripts, "it's not so much beauty but distinction that counts nowadays."
