"ONE MAN'S FAMILY" FICTION VERSION OF THIS FAMOUS RADIO PROGRAM STARTS THIS ISSUE!

Flying Cadets "Motorize" Cowboy Gene Autry

WHEN Gene Autry, Republic movie star, visited Ellington Field, world's largest multi-motor flying-school, he first toured field in an Army "jeep"

Gene's Horse "Champ" Gets a Holiday and Master Gets a Thrill

DOL of millions of movie-goers and radio listeners, Gene Autry was in Houston, Texas, on rodeo tour, took time off to visit Ellington Field, the world's largest multi-motor flying-school, in nation's biggest state. After field personnel, cadets had entertained Gene and his "Melody Ranch" boys, they did a turnabout, played and sang for service men. When Gene sang "Don't Bite the Hand That's Feeding You," 1918 favorite, hangar in which show was staged shook with applause of America's eagles.

FIRST-AID crutches were supplied by Col. Walter H. Reid, just in case ride in hiccuping jeep might prove too jumpy for cowboy accustomed to a horse

GRUB as it's served in the Army followed crutch gag and field tour, when Autry and his radio "Melody Ranch" boys lunched with Col. Reid (seated, right), Lt. Col. A. W. Snyder (standing), cadet detachment head

BROTHER under the bonnet, pint-size cowboy in a ten-gallon hat, named Master Patten, was special guest of guest star Autry. "Patty" did his small best to imitate every American kid's hero of radio and films

JAM-PACKED with aviation cadets and enlisted air corps men was huge hangar at Ellington Field, Texas, when Autry and his CBS Sunday "Melody Ranch" entertainers obliged with some popular sing-swing tunes

BON VOYAGE says boys of "Melody Ranch" as singing-cowboy boss, with Colonel Reid, commanding officer of Ellington Field, at controls, takes off. Au<sup>2</sup>ry's next rodeo tour is scheduled to begin April 5

America, the whole civilized world, is at war this Easter season. The lilies of France lie crushed under Easter-1942! the heel of her dictators. The gay hedgerows of England are broken. So it is with a feeling of deep gratitude that the editors of Movie-Radio Guide offer its readers this picture of Linda Darnell, lovely 20th Century-Fox film star, with Easter blossoms in her hands; because it symbolizes so poignantly the fact that the flowers of America are still blooming on a thousand hillsides, untrampled by war-maddened hordes who have forgotten the true meaning of Easter and its beauty. And in that same spirit of gratitude, with thoughts fixed on tomorrow's VICTORY as we vision a world once more at peace—we say HAPPY EASTER!

Editorially Speaking ...

BEGINNING with this issue, Movie-Radio Guide costs fifteen cents.

This increase has not come as an arbitrary decision on the part of the publishers. Nor does Movie-Radio Guide stand alone. Already over 250 daily newspapers and many periodicals have raised their prices. Increases will follow on others as rapidly as their printing schedules permit. What is happening in the publishing industry?

As a loyal reader of this publication, you are entitled to an explana-tion. Here it is:

The war effort has increased costs in every phase of busi-ness. This is especially true in publishing. To create and produce the same publication costs much more than it did a year ago.

There are two ways in which a publication may meet these increased

(1) By reducing the quality of the product and selling it for the same amount, or,

(2) By maintaining quality and increasing the price.

Movie-Radio Guide has chosen the latter course. Realizing fully and feeling keenly its responsibility to its readers, aware of unwarranted hardship less complete service and fewer program listings would work on many, Movie-Radio Guide is maintaining every feature and service it now carries and adding even more as space conditions

Movie-Radio Guide's decision not to lower its flag of service is like General MacArthur's decision—to serve without compromise. Nothing will be taken from Movie-Radio Guide, the publication. True, its cost will be slightly higher. But the greater returns from radio listening and movie enjoyment, as pointed out by this publication, will also be worth more in this trying time

But in the latter Abbott is not "Rio" and Costello is not "Rita"

Anita Loos—a neater screen writer we never knew—made "I Married An Angel" into a photoplay.

She had as a basis the celebrated Broadway (and points west) stage success produced by Dwight Deere Wiman.

The entertainment is down-to-earth.

"Bud" and "Lou" in their first big Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer opus will have you rolling in the aisles.

So let's go rolling down to "Rio Rita".

Character actor, now starring in RKO's "Tuttles of Tahiti," entertains other members of the cast: (I. to r.) Peggy Drake, who plays the romantic lead opposite Jon Hall; Francine Rogers, her stand-in; Leonard Suss and Alma Ross. Above, right: Laraine Day, featured in M-G-M's "A Yank on the Burma Road," enjoys a card game with the Chinese extras on location at Calabasas, about fifty miles from the Culver City Studios. California country around this site was chosen for locale because terrain resembled China's famed Burma Road. Left: Barbara Stanwyck, just after scene in Paramount's "The Great Man's Lady," in which she was carried away in river flood aboard a horse-drawn stage-coach. Aftermath of this found Barbara with teeth chattering, and wet to the skin. But it was all a part of the day's work for dramatic highlights in picture

Premiere: Largest group of film notables to turn out for a premiere in many months was one that attended showing of Charlie Chaplin's "The Gold Rush" at the Westwood Village Theater. Reissue of this old silent favorite, released through United Artists, will have the famous comedian's own music and words to enliven second version of the comedy. Above: Chaplin as "the lone prospector" wakes up in the deserted cabin of outlaw Black Larson (Tom Murray), located on Arctic wastes. He thaws out when a hunger-crazed prospector joins him, takes him for a chicken, and tries to stew him. Center: Present at the affair were Mary Pickford, co-owner of United Artists, and her husband, Charles (Buddy) Rogers (r.), both old friends of Chaplin. Above, right: Carole Landis, who dotes on dates with men in uniform, and among those stars who belong to the "do dress for the occasion" contingent in Hollywood, attended the premiere with Greg Bautzer. Greg solved the formal idea very nicely by appearing in his naval officer's uniform, looking very natty indeed. Among those in the opposite camp, who came in informal togs, were Mr. and Mrs. Red Skelton and the newlywed Mickey Rooneys. It was Mrs. Rooney's (Ava Gardner) first night outing since doctors separated her from a troublesome appendix

Fluffy chicks are housed in yellow cages with bright-red roofs, set off pretty Jane's frock of pale-blue wool. One perched atop green pole is supported by a yellow Peter Rabbit, clad in bright red, and finishes off the wing of the turban, which is fashioned of pale-blue silk velvet to match frock. Movie-Radio Guide Brings Every Man's Family the Story of "One Man's Family"

-The Editors.

HEY are nice people—the Bar-bours. We met them first in the spring of 1931 when we became neighbors of theirs at Sea Cliff in San Francisco. They've been pleasant and interesting friends and, as neighbors sometimes do, we have lived and enjoyed their lives vicariously.

We knew from the beginning they

Meeting them for the first time, folks marvel at the fact that a couple so young have such a depth of understanding in portraying character. Secret of this is—both talk little and listen much!

were bound to be interesting. Any family made up of so many approaches to life must be so. There was the eldest son, Paul, a suave and charming veteran of the World War, who would carry a cane as a result of that war all his life. And Hazel, a beautiful girl, obviously her father's fa-vorite; Clifford and Claudia, twins, wild with the joy of living; and Jack, aged fourteen, the usual trying, amusing and sometimes pathetic adolescent.

It has always seemed strange that Paul could so well explain the other children to their father, for Father Barbour has never completely understood this son of his, so different from himself. Paul, the dreamer, the visionary, the compassionate, who has a deep and abiding love for his fellow men. To Father Barbour there could not be any shading of right or wrong. A man is strong or he is weak; a woman is good or she is bad; and Paul's deep insight into the lives of other members of the Family has always been a leavening between Father Barbour and the children he still attempts to mold, although now they are men and women with children of their own.

When we first knew them a more reactionary parent than their father never lived. A deceptively stern man, Father Barbour; deceptive because actually the man is as soft-hearted as a two-minute egg. A little inclined to pompousness, slightly pedantic, proud of his stock and bond business, which he had built by his own efforts into a prosperous established firm. He is a handsome man and one with a keen sense of humor, It is obvious from his occasional long reminiscences that he feels that he was, in his day, a rather dashing young fellow.

It is fun to watch Fanny Barbour, his wife, temperamentally eager to live and let live, take the wind from his sails with a word. Sometimes the derisive laughter of the children will cause a sheepish subsidence to his (Please turn to next page) talk. He has but one answer to a situation he cannot control. It is a patient, very-much-put-upon sigh and the words, "Yes, yes, let's say no more about it." Sometimes the family doesn't say anything more, but sometimes they do, and when that happens he leaves hastily for his one neverfailing cure for all ills, his garden.

When we first knew the Barbours, Hazel was the one of his five children he could best comprehend. With her he felt a deep companionship. He loved his children, wanted everything good for them and had tried to give them a measuring-stick of the homely virtues. But, unlike Hazel, the others often presented problems he could not cope with; Paul's complete unwillingness to adjust himself to the ultraconservative and mundane living in a stock-and-bond house. Paul's dislike of the very things his father worshiped, his bitterness and unwillingness to accept the world as it was, were a cause of constant controversy between the two. It was Mother Barbour who was the buffer between them, for she seemed to be able to take the children so much more lightly than their father. She seemed to realize that Clifford's girl-craziness was something that would modify in time, that Jack's jumbling, bumbling antics were just the racket of a boy growing into man's stature emotionally. She knew that Paul's carefully guarded spells of bitterness, his hatred of injustice and intolerance, his heartache caused by the death of his young wife were things that Paul had brought back from France to live with him forever. They would always be a part of Paul. That tragic marriage of his. lasting only six weeks while he was in France, the death there of his young nurse-wife had made Paul so mindful of his fellow humans.

How well we remember Claudia's runaway marriage and how it hurt and bewildered, angered and completely upset her father. She is so WHEN family arguments get too involved for Father B. he seeks refuge in garden, cure for all his iils; so Mother B. always knows where to find him when smoke clears away. Scene above is typical one pretty and gay, and in those days was so demanding, was so completely sure the world was her oyster to be eaten when and how she chose. Johnny Roberts, her young husband, was as undisciplined as she, and the marriage was doomed to failure from the start. Claudia, so sure she was right, so eager to grab all the love and laughter in the world with her greedy little hands, grew up a bit when Johnny left her-to disappear. She must have loved him more than her family knew. Months after Johnny left, following a quarrel between them, she received word he was in China recovering from a severe wound; he had been fighting with the Chinese army. Her only thought was to get to him, and get to him she did as quickly as possible. They had three joyous months together before Johnny suddenly came down with pneumonia and died, and Claudia came home alone. Well, not quite alone, for she bore Johnny's daughter, Joan, a few months after her return. During all the lonely days and nights of that nightmare time after Johnny's death, it was her brother, Paul, who helped her most. Not even Father Barbour's rather pathetic attempts to comfort his heart-broken little daughter could mean as much as Paul's encouragement and tenderness.

Joan was born to Claudia the same night Johnny's mother died. She fought to live long enough to see her grandchild and then passed away, leaving her entire fortune, a great one, to her daughter-in-law and her grandchild. When Claudia took up her life where it left off at her marriage to Johnny she found herself a very young, very beautiful, very rich widow. True, she was a wiser, sadder young woman but more of a problem than ever to her apprehensive family, for now she was a free agent with nothing to restrain her restlessness.

T WAS during these days when Claudia and her father were at cross-purposes, when they could not see eye to eye on anything, much less Claudia's conduct, that Father Barbour turned most often for some measure of quiet and comfort to his daughter. Hazel. Dark-eved, gentle Hazel-she is the one most like her mother. She is the one who never imposed her own young and frightening ideas upon him. Though there was that short, disquieting time when Hazel seemed unhappy, sharp, and seeking something beyond her life at home. It was then that her parents sent her on a holiday trip to the Hawaiian Islands. She returned a poised, glowing and happy girl, and it was only much later that the reason for her renewed self-confidence was known. It was there she met Danny, He was so charming, so amusing, so utterly worthless, full of knowledge -book knowledge and knowledge of women, and he turned the full light of his worldliness upon Hazel. There were long days upon the beaches, soaking up the sun and listening to Danny's tall tales, tales that brought laughter and a gradual lessening of the rigid standards the Barbours set for their children. The nights were magic, and Hazel discovered for the first time that a tropic moon and solitude are potent factors in romance. She touched the stars for a brief moment in her life, and never so long as we have known her has she quite lost a certain delightful sophistication she brought back with her from the Islands. Those swiftly passing hours with Danny gave her the answer to her life; and the answer was not Danny. It was William Herbert. When Paul brought William Herbert, his old friend and war buddy, home one day. both Hazel and her father knew that this was it, this was the man. William's balanced, undying love for her was what Father Barbour had always prayed for for his daughters; a good. sound marriage with a fine man. Hazel's wedding was as solemn, her life as meaningful, as Claudia's had been thoughtless and selfish.

It wasn't so very long until all the neighbors knew—we could tell at first by the beaming proudness of her father—that Hazel was to give the House of Barbour a new and very important member. It was fun being neighbors with Father Barbour those months, for his pride in Hazel, his utter contentment at the "rightness" of her life, was good to see. And then, lo and behold, it was TWINS! What amazement! What excitement! Here indeed were grandchildren he could really enjoy, talk about, plan for, whose place in the world seemed assured. He had come to love Claudia's little girl very much, but her birth had seemed to him almost indecent, what with no father and the whole time before her birth filled with effort to get his relationship with Claudia back to its former affectionate footing. So it was Hazel whose sweet serenity gave him some measure of happiness in those days!

Everyone in the neighborhood needed serenity in large doses right then, for the youngest Barbour, aged fourteen, a nice boy, but noisy, had decided to learn to play the saxophone. No one, least of all his family, ever discovered why an instrument designed solely for the torture of neighbors was chosen by the boy, and it was a trial for all concerned while it lasted. Luckily it didn't last long, for shortly after Jack discovered the saxophone, he discovered love. His heart centered on a child living next door-Vivian I think it was, Vivian something or other, a pesty little girl who was anything but a good influence for the youngest Barbour boy. With woman's wiles and sweet talk she led him a dance, ending the whole romance in a great pyrotechni-cal display of family wrath when she invited him to a party. The party idea was good. The Barbours believed training in social intercourse a fine thing for the young and felt that a group of laughing children playing games was good and wholesome. But it was not quite like that. Vivian assured Jack that anything less than a dinner jacket could not get him past her door. That would take a bit of doing, for Jack, aged fourteen, had none of his own. Any dinner coats in the Barbour family were being worn by their unfeeling owners. By the most desperate efforts he acquired the means to rent a suit for the eve-ning. Only it was the wrong kind of suit! It had tails! And it was too large! Much too large! The gruesome ensemble left him wide open for the hurts, the scorn, the loud laughter with which children so adeptly cut the heart out of each other. It was funny but it was cruel, and we, the neighborhood, rejoiced in the way the Barbours, as one man, arose to comfort, sustain and help Jack through his first experience with woman's perfidy.

Clifford's life at this time took a new and interesting turn, for he became interested in Beth Holly. After weeks the affair became more involved than the idealist Clifford had their own, does not seem to be a part of their life plan. Every member of the family loves Beth; even the ultraconservative Father Barbour has learned to admire the unconventional woman who for years has played such a dominant role in Paul's life. She is a worldly person but a strong and wise and courageous one. The best proof of that is David. David was just when she brought him an infant back from Europe. There were no explanations of the child's birth or parentage. Only Beth and Paul knew, and despite every kind of family censure and pressure they would not re-planned, and he suddenly found his ardor cooled and no courage to tell Beth he had made a mistake. It was Paul who came to the rescue again, for Clifford appealed to his brother to help him in the entanglement he had brought upon himself. Paul volunteered to see Beth, and when he met her was pleasantly surprised to find she was the widow of an old friend of his. Paul and Beth became fast friends after her confession to him that she really had only been having fun with Clifford and had thought a little worry might be good for him. He was so cock-sure and not a little indiscreet in his affairs of the heart.

Paul and Beth have been friends, close companions and possibly more as the years have gone on. It is thought that Beth and Paul love each other, but marriage, for reasons of veal David's history until the time was right. The history is a tragic one. The child may never come into his rightful heritage, for David's homeland has been lost in the war, his parents murdered and the child himself only alive and safe because of Beth. The Barbour family no longer questions Beth's friendship with Paul. The friendship is accepted by the family as it is by Beth and Paul with no explanations and no doubts as to its fineness and no questions as to its ultimate future.

During those first years we knew the Barbours, Claudia's rebellion against her father's attempts at restraint grew until it became an issue of prime importance to every member of the family. Father Barbour knew only too well that the fortune Johnny's mother had left Claudia made her independence of parental control complete. His wish that she refuse the money was shared to some extent by Mother Barbour. The younger members felt that only someone not quite bright could possibly refuse a fortune so large. Paul alone seemed able to see that there might be two sides to the troublesome matter. He could see and share his father's fear for Claudia, and to a degree he, too, agreed she was too young really to be wise with either her money or her life. But also he sympathized with Claudia's desire to go her way without family interference and to build her life on any foundation she chose.

Of course the neighbors never heard the talks, the family councils and undoubted arguments that took place in the Barbour residence then, but it was quite evident to us that there was trouble, big trouble, some place. We knew it for sure when the trunks started leaving the house. Claudia's trunks. Trunks for the baby, Joan. All the hurry and bustle associated with a long trip; as it turned out, a trip to Europe. Suddenly one day Claudia and the baby had gone. There was some ray of happiness in her leaving, though, for Beth Holly went along as companion, and Mother and Father Barbour felt that at least she had an older, wiser woman to advise and guide her. At least they did feel that way until the newspapers started carrying little stories in the gossip columns about Claudia, and Claudia's letters began chattering about a Captain Nicholas Lacey! He seemed to be a British nobleman whom she met on the boat going over. He was big and he was handsome! This really gave Father Barbour palpitations of the heart and gave the rest of the family a going-down-in-an elevator feeling! (To be continued)

Judy Canova Steals Spotlight at Movie Premiere; Title Priorities on "Hot Rubber" Stir Up Ruckus in Hollywood; Ginger Rogers' Stock Still Soaring!

HOLLYWOOD

By EVANS PLUMMER

The tire situation has brought up a new question of "priorities" in Hollywood. But this time it is the question as to who has prior right to the film title "Hot Rubber." Monogram, with the King Brothers producing, claims the name first registered with the Hays office. 20th Century-Fox has a Brynie Foy unit headed by Preston Foster, Dana Andrews and Brenda Joyce ready to begin filming just such a story (about thefted and bootlegged rubber) written by John Kine, former D. A. office investigator. In the case of such a dispute, the first company to roll its production before the cameras is awarded the title by the Hays office. The industry is betting on Monogram's King Brothers, who can make a picture, complete with trailers and critic preview, in one week! . . .

In these days when industry and arts are being dislocated without mercy and bent toward the all-out war effort of the United States, it doesn't pay for an actor to discover suddenly that he has long-lost dependent relatives, flat feet or a hitherto concealed minor ailment just bad enough to keep him making movies. It was therefore most enjoyable last week to see a young, rather unknown actor, Kenneth Howell, join the Navy and ask the recruiting officer, Chief Boatswain's Mate Ralph White, to assign him to the "lowest paying job in the service." White thought that was swell. And Howell got his request. He's an apprentice seaman assigned to radio training and drawing $21 a month...

Most important whooperdo and stuff in this town since Pearl Harbor was last fortnight's observance of Paramount's and Cecil B. DeMille's thirtieth movie - making anniversaries. Along with it, the veteran studio premiered DeMille's great new Technicolor epic, "Reap the Wild Wind," at their new Hollywood Boulevard playhouse, the Paramount Hollywood. Stealing the show, however, at the gala picture opening, the first since and probably the last until after the war, was Judy Canova. This young Republic Pictures player, whose musical "Sleepytime Gal" is just hitting the marquees, arrived dressed in an all-white formal, riding in an all-white formal, riding in an all-white sand driven by a soldier-boy escort! . . .

The extremely successful reception by the public of Ginger Rogers as "Roxie Hart"—not that the young lady's reputation needed it—has boosted her stock to new heights and made her so much in demand that studios are fighting for her able services. Her next screen play, however, will be at her home lot (RKO), where she will make a musical—possibly with Fred Astaire—and then she will go to Paramount for at least two pictures, "Lady in the Dark" and "The Major and the Minor." In the latter, by the way, other than lipstick she will wear NO make-up...

Out at Warner Bros., Barbara Stanwyck is frightening little children. It's necessary, of course, since the script of "The Gay Sisters" calls for Barbara to scare seven-year-old Larry Simms ("Blondie's" first child in that series) at least a half-dozen times. Mrs. Robert Taylor has to look stern, Larry registers fright, and runs away. "But," Larry told Barbara, "I'm not really frightened. I just look that way because the script says to look frightened. No one would be scared of you. You're too pretty" . . .

Which brings up that post-card from a disgusted (he says) reader in Wilmington, Del. He wants three pictures, now rated in the "Brief Guide to Current Motion Pictures," rereviewed and possibly rerated. One is "Woman of the Year," for which he asks five Vs instead of three. Next, a rating of four or five Vs for "Roxie Hart" (which the Church Federation would not agree to), and but two instead of four Vs for "Ball of Fire." This, folks, is the last time we even will acknowledge a post-card, especially unsigned, lobbying for or against our critics' opinions. First, we happen to be our critics, and second, if we can be wrong, can't the public make a mistake, too—or do you follow me? . . .

Certainly no epic, but absolutely solid entertainment of the first degree, is "Lum and Abner's" new comedy, "Bashful Bachelor." In it, Norris Goff, who plays Abner on the radio and in the screen play, actually "went blind" every day for a week while portraying the role for the camera. He had to wear spectacles with heavy, distorting lenses, which gave his eyes a comical, pop-eyed appearance, and they threw his eyes so far out of focus that for nearly an hour after removing them he couldn't see a thing. But be sure you see the picture.

Although Marsha Hunt (Mrs. Joe Smith in that good M-G-M picture) has been before the public since her girlhood days, she was a most self-conscious lady recently. It happened because Richard Carlson plays opposite her in "Once Upon a Thursday." They spent the entire day playing romantic scenes. Of course Marsha has played love scenes before, but this was the first time she had to enact sizzling romance with her husband's best friend and with her own next-door neighbor! . . .

Contracts and casting: Olivia de Havilland will be Jack Benny's leading lady in "George Washington S'eot Here" . . . Elmer winner Fredric March heads the cast of Thorne Smith's "I Married a Witch" opposite Veronica Lake . . . D. O. Selznick wants Cary Grant to play David in "David and Claudia" . . . Diana Barrymore will play in Universal's "Love and Kisses" ("Boy Meets Baby") opposite Robert Cummings, who will be a papa soon . . She's also the lead opposite Bob Stack in "Eagle Squadron," which cast includes Jill Esmond, ex-wife of Laurence Olivier . . Mary Martin will go back to work with Rudy Vallee and Dick

What goes and where: Bette Davis returned to Hollywood "without a stitch" as a result of the Chicago robbery . . . Fans have sent Alice Faye over two hundred bonnets, thirty-seven pairs of bootees, and many other baby-accessories Garbo is now wearing lipstick, or do you care? . . . Manuel del Campo has returned on leave from Canada, where he has rated a flight officer's wings in the R. C. A. F.; meantime, wife Mary Astor won an Oscar from the Motion Picture Academy . . . EVELYN KEYES and Glenn Ford in a scene from Columbia's "Adventures of Martin Eden," picture based on story by Jack London

MOVIE REVIEWS

"Adventures of Martin Eden"

Cast: Glenn Ford, Claire Trevor, Evelyn Keyes, Stuart Erwin, Dickie Moore, Ian Mac-Donald, Frank Conroy, et al. A Columbia picture produced by B. P. Schulberg and directed by Sidney Salkow. From the original story by Jack London.

Type of Picture: Sea-fighting story.

This is the Story: Glenn Ford is a young sailor who writes a diary of the horrors endured on his hell ship through the brutalities of Captain Butch Ragan (Ian MacDonald). When a fellow sailor is sent to prison on the charge of mutiny, Ford tries to clear him with his diary, but the court won't admit it as evidence. He swears he'll make the world read it some day as a book under the title of "Death Wagon," but finds that first he must get an education. The ship-owner's daughter, Evelyn Keyes, and the imprisoned sailor's poor sister, Claire Trevor, now both try to help him achieve his goal, and both likewise love him. In his process of becoming an author, he gets mixed up with a plagiarism mess and tries to get Butch Ragan to admit that his story, "Death Wagon," is true. Butch, after being severely thrashed, agrees, but while the fight goes on, the ship is cast off and Ford finds himself at sea. He is put in irons and it is months before he can return to the States-after an ordeal of tropical fever-to learn he is a hero and a literary lion. Claire Trevor (Connie) has done it for him.

Verdict: This is good, exciting (escape) entertainment. Family.

"Butch Minds the Baby"

Cast: Virginia Bruce, Brod Crawford, Dick Foran, Porter Hall, Dick Lane, Shemp Howard, Baby Michael Barnitz, et al. A Universal picture. Original story by Damon Runyon. Al Rogell directs.

Type of Picture: Comedy.

This Is the Story: Retired safe-cracker Butch (Brod Crawford), now on the straight and narrow, is kept there by Virginia Bruce and her baby. which she keeps Butch busy minding. But one night, he does a friend a turn and cracks a crib for auld lang syne. During the job, he takes Baby Michael along with him. The results are swift. Verdict: This little program picture is full of merits, chiefly newcomer Baby Michael Barnitz, who has copped Baby Sandy's job at Universal.

Lieut. Commander Winchell May Give Up Program; Costello Diets to Stay Fat; "Barn Dance" Dinning Sisters Heed the Call of Hollywood

The Washington report by Lieut. Col. Curtis Mitchell, usually published on this page, has been omitted this week. Lieut. Colonel Mitchell's inside reports from the nation's capital will be renewed in an early issue. Watch for them.

NEW YORK

Lieut. Commander Walter Winchell has told his sponsors they had better look around for a substitute, for one may be needed on short notice. The columnist-commentator has been officially on duty with the Navy, but has continued his broadcasts, through which he has been doing magnificent work raising funds. But he has been asking for full-time duty and evidently thinks the call may be forthcoming shortly...

Connie Boswell is now Connee Boswell. She says that during her personal-appearance tour since leaving "Kraft Music Hall" she has been scribbling her name in hundreds of autograph-albums, and that many letters subsequently received by her from fans were addressed to "Connee." So she decided that if she writes her name to look like that, that's what it might as well be. And anyway, she's just superstitious enough that she figures the change might bring new strokes of good fortune . . .

"Can America fight a war without hating her enemies?" A penetrating question that. A question charged with drama, That's what Arch Oboler thought when he received a letter posing that question from Clarence L. Menser, NBC's program manager. It was the direct inspiration for the play "Hate" you heard recently on Oboler's "Plays for Americans"...

NBC's studio 8-H in the RCA Building is the largest broadcasting studio in the world. It's from there listeners hear Eddie Cantor's show, "Johnny Presents," the "Cities Service Concert," "Voice of Firestone," the NBC Symphony program and other big broadcasts. To the listeners the regular site of a program doesn't mean so much. But the many visitors to studios had a pleasant surprise recently when 8-H was reopened with the final program of "Metropolitan Opera Auditions of the Air" after elaborate redecoration. Most striking innovations were the eighteen convex diffusors lining the stage to blend all sounds, and the upholstered chairs, which are not only more comfortable than the metal chairs used formerly but in addition possess an acoustical value for absorbing sound . : .

Alice Frost has taken over the leading-lady role in "Woman of Courage," while Esther Ralston takes a vacation for a family addition . . . Many friends mourn the death of Charles O'Connor, well known to listeners as a former announcer on "Johnny Presents" . . . It was fine of Don Dunphy, Mutual's fight announcer, to endorse in advance his check for describing the Louis-Simon bout and turn it over for the purchase of seats for service men . . . We add our congratulations to the many others tendered H. V. Kaltenborn upon the twentieth anniversary (April 4) of his first appearance at a microphone . . .

Radio City was bubbling over with sailors the other Friday evening. One group was there as guests of the "March of Time" during a dramatization of the U. S. Navy's raid on the Gilbert and Marshall Islands. The other sailors were guests of Paramount Pictures at a special Jimmy Dorsey program plugging the film "The Fleet's In"...

With the marking of the second anniversary of "Truth or Consequences" several days ago, Ralph Edwards, its originator, conductor and spark-plug, felt that an explanation for the success of the wacky program was in order. Said he: "People are seeking a release from pent-up emotions brought on by the war. The program acts as a release-valve for them both mentally and physically. Our consequences enable them to let go, get rid of stifled energies and even inhibitions." We might rebroadcast the statement to Japan in these words: A crazy radio program is popular in America because Americans believe one good belly laugh is worth more to morale than a hundred hara-kiri knives in the same region!

Uncle Sam's doughboys, "Kraft Music Hall" listeners learned last fortnight, are being fed properly and scientifically. The informant was Mary I. Barber, food consultant assigned to the supply corps of the Army. In response to Bing Crosby's questions, she said that the favorite food of the U. S. fighting men is still steak and mashed potatoes, as it was in '17-'18. The cost of feeding a soldier, she revealed, is fifty cents a day . . .

Speaking of food, Lou Costello, the heavy teammate of Bud Abbott, is dieting to add poundage! He's been worrying his money-making fat off. It's a fact! The worry to Lou resulted from the simultaneous illness of his wife with the flu, their daughters with measles and him with a strep throat. Hence the dietitian. Lou wants his overstuffed waistline back . . .

A couple of days before, that same chamber had named Ona "Lorelei" Munson its official greeter. Which reminds your reporter that an enterprising Beverly

MOST GRATIFYING, perhaps, of all the honors won by Lieut. James Stewart and Arch Oboler is the flood of congratulations they've been receiving for the play, "A Letter at Midnight," which Oboler wrote for his "Plays for Americans," and in which Lieutenant Stewart starred. Many things have been happening all at once to "Blondie and Dag-wood" of CBS, and especially Dagwood, portrayed by Arthur Lake, who has a careless way of encouraging things to happen to him in real life that would be too unbelievable for use on the air! First, St. Patrick's Day brought a contract renewal to maestro Billy Artz for both the Bob Burns and the Blondie shows, and it being his birthday, too, he proclaimed a celebration. So, hurrying to phone his wife, Pat Van Cleve, to come to the studio party, Dagwood ran into the next studio, picked up the receiver of the first phone he saw and would have been dialing yet had someone not missed him and told him, upon discovery of him wildly dialing the phone, that it was a disconnected sound-effects instrument. The someone who made the discovery was "Blondie" radio-script writer Johnny Greene, in Hollywood to meet the show's cast for the first time. 'Tis said when Greene first met Dagwood and Blondie, he let out a wild yell of fright or despair and passed out! . . .

"Mother" (that's right) Marlene Dietrich's severest critic, her beautiful adolescent daughter Maria, was in the front row of the "Lux Radio The-ater" when Mammy starred recently in "Manpower." After the broadcast she was presented to producer Cecil B. DeMille, who replied, "I'm very glad to meet you. I noticed you down in the audience." Maria blushed. "Yes," continued C. B., "you worked harder than your mother!"...

· Betty Jane Rhodes, who is star of Mutual's "California Melodies" as well as KHJ-Don Lee's "First Lady of Television," is coming into her film right at last. I don't know just what Eddie Pea-body had in mind when he made public complaint of a "banjo boycott" among orchestras. It couldn't have been personal frustration, for Lieut. Commander Peabody's shortlegged stool is right on the front row among banjo great, and he's still plunking listeners pop-eyed on the "National Barn Dance." Anyway, he struck a loud discord in the music world. Pros and cons have been flying world. Pros and cons have been hying about faster than Peabody's fingers. Percy Faith, "Contented Hour" conductor, says the banjo is too much a "rugged individualist" for musical blending. Roy Shield, NBC-Central music director, calls it a fine "auditorium instrument." George Barnes, quitar playing senestion see figure of the same of the sa guitar-playing sensation, scoffs, "Humph! A banjo is just a snare drum with strings!" Allen Massey of the Westerners backs Peabody with "The banjo's as American as a cowboy. For myself, I'd rather just sit on the sidelines and listen to Eddie play . .

It's a pronounced pleasure to make note of a new program on CBS called "Thus We Live," heard Thursday and Friday mornings. It's a pleasure because we can pat a big daytime-radio sponsor on the back for donating the time — and foregoing commercials for a Red Cross program. There are dramatizations from Chicago and news from Red Cross National Headquarters in Washington. There are visits by personalities in Red Cross work, official and volunteer. No pleas for money, no membership drives . . . Another item with a marginal "Hooray!" After several years of earstretching to the singing of the Dinning Sisters and boosting for them as the top girls' trio in the country, I'm greatly pleased to make notation of the fact that they've just made a flying trip to Hollywood to sing three songs in Universal's motion picture, 'In the Groove," now in production. That makes another chapter in a colorful success story that began in 1939, when Lou and twins Jean and Ginger and their brother arrived in (Continued on Page 32)

Love, Not War, Was Real Inspiration Back of Brahms' Immortal "Requiem," Which Will Be Broadcast Over CBS Under Direction of 28-Year-Old Erich Leinsdorf

By ROBERT BAGAR

New York World-Telegram Music Expert and Associate Program Annotator for New York Philharmonic Society

NE of radio's most valid functions is its propagation of masterworks that are rarely, if ever, heard in the concert hall. An immortal composition like the Brahms Requiem, for instance, gets occasional performances by the various orchestral and choral groups throughout the country, but these are not nearly enough to keep it alive. We are not concerned here with the reasons for the neglect of the Requiem by such organizations — though we'll wager that financial ones have an important place in the scheme—but it is easy to see how far-reaching can be the effect of, say, one performance on the radio. Of course, there we have compensation plus.

Brahms was inspired to write the Requiem by the death of his mother in 1865, and no son has poured out a greater tribute to a beloved parent than he did with this work. It was erroneously believed that the Requiem had been inspired by events of the Austro-Prussian War (1866). However, it has been established that the composer had set to work on it before the beginning of the war.

The first three numbers of the Requiem were performed in December, 1867, at a Gesellschaft concert in Vienna and, it is interesting to note, there was much adverse comment on its textual material by theological authorities. As Brahms' biographer, Lawrence Erb, says, "It has nothing in common with liturgical requiems, having to do with death and eternity, consolation for the mourner and closing with a song of victory over death and the grave." The storm of criticism was occasioned chiefly by the fact that Brahms dared himself to select passages from the Bible for his text.

The work was given in its entirety for the first time in Bremen Cathedral on Good Friday, April 10, 1868. The cathedral was filled to capacity, the listeners' enthusiasm was something unparalleled. Here, obviously, was a tremendous art work, "ranking among the loftiest music ever given to the world."

The performance to be broadcast (CBS) will be under the direction of Erich Leinsdorf, chief of the Metropolitan Opera's Wagnerian wing. Three years ago, when he was only twenty-five, he was engaged by the company to assist the late Artur Bodanzky. The present one is his fifth consecutive season with America's operatic "eden," and he has, besides, conducted performances of the San Francisco Opera Company, and concerts of various symphonic organizations.

Mr. Leinsdorf was born in Vienna. He busied himself there with many musical activities, graduating from the Staats Akademie with high honors, though depleted of financial resources. One bright morning, after a siege of walking and hitch-hiking, he arrived at Salzburg and went immediately in search of Bruno Walter, who was rehearsing a forthcoming Festival opera. Mr. Walter was conducting from the piano, leaving it for a moment to discuss some musical fine point with the musicians. Mr. Leinsdorf saw his chance. He sat down at the piano and began to play the score at the point where Mr. Walter had left off. It took the distinguished conductor but a moment to realize that he was listening to an enormously gifted young man. Result—Mr. Leinsdorf was fired on the spot as Mr. Walter's assistant.

Some time later Mr. Leinsdorf

Some time later Mr. Leinsdorf assisted Arturo Toscanini in the preparation of the Ninth Symphony, scheduled for a concert of the Vienna Philharmonic. By this time, however, young Erich had already made a reputation for himself as the right-hand man of great conductors. Word of his talents soon reached the Metropolitan, and in 1937 he was engaged, sight unseen, by the company. While still an assistant he was given an unprecedented opportunity to conduct a performance of "Parsifal" without benefit of rehearsal, owing to Bodanzky's sudden illness. When Bodanzky passed on, Mr. Leinsdorf was made his successor and he has been at the post ever since.

Participating in the broadcast of the Brahms Requiem will be the Columbia Broadcasting Symphony Orchestra, the Boys' Choir and the Choir of the Chapel of the Intercession, Nadine Conner, soprano, and Leonard Warren, baritone, both of the Metropolitan.

(Brahms "Requiem" will be broadcast by the Columbia spiniony Orchestra, with Erich Leinsdorf conducting, Saturday over a CBS network.)

Wagnerian Easter Music

In 1865, when Wagner had already completed more than half of his "Ring des Nibelungen," all of "Tristan und Isolde" and a good portion of "Die Meistersinger," he began active work on the completion of an opera whose subject he had had in mind for a considerable time. The opera was "Parsifal," which has since been performed throughout the world as almost a ritual of Easter. The libretto was finished in 1877, based on the Parsifal poem of Wolfram von Eschenbach, the Minnesinger. Wagner, as usual, wrote his own text for the opera, and this was published in December of the same year. He had begun the music a little before that, completing the score in 1879, the orchestration in 1882.

The premiere performance of "Parsifal" took place at Bayreuth on July 26, 1882. It was given sixteen times during the Bayreuth Festival of that year, and at the last of these showings, Wagner himself took charge from the Transformation Scene to the end of Act I, a fact unknown to anyone in the audience. He had been forced to do that because Levi, the conductor, was taken ill during the first act

SOMEBODY once said, and aptly, that radio maestro Al Goodman (right) is at home with Bach and boogie, or Wagner and woogie. Only conductor to be heard on two important CBS programs on the same day—"The Family Hour," with Gladys Swarthout (above) and Deems Taylor as his distinguished collaborators, and the Fred Allen [left) airshow—Goodman is one of most flexible conductors currently on radio. He stops at no school or composer, does a fine job on either serious music or jazz, turns with ease from a Haydn "Surprise" Symphony to peppery version of popular song, "Deep in the Heart of Texas." Too, Goodman's orchestra today comprises no less than seven well-known conductors, including Waldo Mayo, Nat Brusiloff, Harry Horlick, Charles Marlowe, Kel Murray, Johnny Augustine

NOW chief of the Met's Wagnerian wing, director Erich Leinsdorf once hitch-hiked way to Salzburg to prove he was worthy of being Bruno Walter's assistant on the Philharmonic-Symphony broadcast program, had really been written in December, 1878, obtaining its first performance in Wahnfried, Wagner's house, on Christmas day, the birthday of his wife, Cosima, Naturally, Wagner conducted.

(New York Philharmonic Orchestra will present Wagner's Perelude and Finale from Act 1 of "Parsifal" as a part of its broadcast Sunday over CBS.)

Bach to Boogie Woogie and Back

Radio maestro Al Goodman is the possessor of several unique distinc-tions. First, he is the only conductor to be heard on two important programs on the same day, as witness the "Family Hour," with Gladys Swarthout and Deems Taylor as his distinguished collaborators, and the Fred Allen show, both heard over the CBS network. The second distinction has to do with the fact that he is one of the most flexible conductors cur-rently performing. He stops at no school or composer in his widespread activities, being capable of doing a workmanlike job with either serious music or jazz. On a recent "Family Hour" broadcast, for instance, he conducted the Haydn "Surprise" Symphony and later that evening on the Fred Allen program he supplied the listeners with a peppery version of the popular song "Deep in the Heart of Texas." This is just an illustration of his versatility, for on some occasions he has been responsible for even wider contrasts.

The Better Recordings

It shouldn't take the trained listener long to recognize the worth of Felix Weingartner's reading of the Brahms Second Symphony bia). The batonist, conducting the London Philharmonic, is at his best, which means, specifically, that the composer gets a proper hearing, direct, sympathetic and uncluttered by personal views. We never tire of Lotte Lehmann's singing, so it is with undiminished pleasure that we recommend highly her album of "Songs of Vienna". The noted artist access of Vienna." The noted artist, accompanied skilfully at the piano by Paul Ulanowsky, sings cherishable pieces by Arnold, Stolz, Leopoldi and others with as much enthusiasm and interpretative finesse as she might employ in works of a more serious nature (Columbia).

Claude Thornhill once had dreams of becoming a newspaperman. He was ten years old when all these ambitions took fire and he immediately set about starting his own newspaper. He rounded up all the eligible young reporters in his neighborhood, and in less time than it takes to tell he had founded a mimeographed newspaper, which, startlingly enough, won some two hundred subscribers. He even delivered the sheet every morning at 5 a.m. But one fine day a watch-dog took a neat nip out of his thighshowing bad aim, at that-and there and then ended the delivery service The fold-up of the newspaper came on the heels of that, of course.

The other day the members of the Joe Reichman band, which is now working out a New Orleans engagement, received notices to report to a Mobile, Ala., Army camp. Great was the maestro's consternation, for it appeared that he was about to lose his musicians to Uncle Sam. Investigation proved, however, that the notices had come from Ward Byron, producer of the Fitch Sunday Bandwagon show. announcing the fact that the band's broadcast would originate at the Mobile Army base, where Gary Fitch. son of the sponsor is stationed.

The Recent Popular Records

Two Columbia records by Harry James and his orchestra have been issued in advance of their regular release. They are disks 36545 and 36549. The first contains the old familiar song of Irving Berlin, "Easter Parade" and another oldie, "Crazy Rhythm." The second offers "Sleepy Lagoon" and "Trumpet Blues." Needless to say, they are all exceedingly well done-a remarkable feat, since the pieces vary greatly in mood and content. Wayne King, by way of Victor 27808, supplies engaging versions of "Deep in the Heart of Texas" and "The Lamp of Memory," which is played in a sort of beguine tempo.

On Bluebird disk B-11485, Erskine Hawkins gives us a romantic per-formance of "Wrap Your Troubles in Dreams" and a rather heated account of a new item, "So Long, Shorty," whose text is appreciably funny.

The Two-Faced Axis

THE Berlin radio is engaged in a campaign at present to persuade the listeners of the United States that they have more deadly enemies than Germany. Their repeated asser-tions that they have no ill feelings for the people of the United States, that they are fighting F. D. R., capitalism and Jewry, are a bit ridiculous, especially in view of what they are telling other nations about us in their broadcasts to them. For instance, in their home radio broadcasts they are telling Germans that the fat and corrupt United States can afford to sow war all over the world. Better yet, in a recent broadcast to South Africa, Berlin radio said most of the American people are illiterate, even more are immoral and still more are irreligious, and later in the same broadcast the Nazis stated that they felt sure the Yankees were already licking their lips at the choice morsels about to fall to them (inferring the United States was about to take over Canada, Australia, etc.). Hitler him-self said the capital of the world would never be Washington, that the people of Europe would never stand for such corruption as existed in our capital. From these few statements picked at random it would seem that the Nazis are anything but friendly toward the people of this country. Nazi propaganda is actually so childish, ridiculous and conflicting for the most part that it seems hardly worth the effort to study it-even if one's main motive in doing so is to tear it down and expose its deceit and

Special Paramaribo Broadcast

Up until a few weeks ago most people were only vaguely aware of the existence of such a place as Dutch Guiana. The landing of American troops at its capital, Paramaribo, changed all that. Now that the AVROS (Algemeene Vereeniging Radio Omroep Suriname) have initiated regular short-wave broadcasts from Dutch Guiana, this country has emerged once and for all from its former obscurity. The AVROS operate two short-wave transmitters: PZX5 (15.395), power 450 watts, and PZX3 (5.946), power 100 watts. These stations broadcast week-days from 5:40 to 7:40 p.m. and Sundays from 8:10 to 10:40 a.m. CWT. PZX3 has been furnishing quite satisfactory reception in spite of its low power, but with inauguration of the new frequency PZX5 (15.395), Paramaribo, can be heard with excellent signal strength nightly. One of our readers, Gail Beyer of Chicago, Illinois, was the first to report reception of PZX5. In order that all readers of Movie-Radio Guide and members of the International DX'ers Alliance may have a chance to hear these interesting South American stations, we have arranged for a special all-English broadcast which will be made this week, on Thursday, April 9, from 6:40 to 7:40 p.m. CWT. Both PZX3 (5.946) and PZX5 (15.395) will carry this special program, and to aid you about ten minutes prior to start of the program. It is hoped that some of the American soldiers stationed near Paramaribo will take part in the broadcast. Those hearing the special program are requested to send a report on same to the AVROS, P. O. Box 150, Paramaribo, Dutch Guiana, South America.

Madrid Resumes Broadcasts

EAQ, Madrid, one of the world's pioneer short-wave stations, broadcast regular programs to North America nightly for many years. Through-in tuning in, Mr. O. Groman, the loud signals although the quality is English announcer of the station, will not of the best. From 7:00 to 7:15 repeat the station call over and over p.m. is the English period and at this time a woman announcer makes announcements, gives news items and short talks. At about 7:15 p.m. the Spanish announcer (a man) takes over and the program continues in Spanish. Grady Ferguson of Charlotte, North Carolina, was the first listener to report on the new North American transmissions from Spain.

Came the end of the war in Spain and subsequent taking over of all radio facilities in Spain by the Franco administration. Soon after this, EAQ vanished from the air and since that date reception of programs from Spain has been limited entirely to the several low-power transmitters that infest the 40-meter band. A few days ago Madrid once again resumed its nightly broadcasts to North America. Although using EAQ's old frequency of 9.86 megs, the new station does not announce call letters but merely as the Spain short-wave station. It is on the air daily from 7:00 to 8:00 p.m. CWT, and may be heard with very

The men of this battalion were greatly depressed. None of them had expected to be sent to the front so soon and so suddenly. No one received any winter clothing. On February 13 we were sent into action. We were warned that any one of us who failed to shoot at Russians would be shot by our officers. During an engagement which lasted several hours our battalion was smashed and I was captured."

More Programs for Troops Abroad

Sunday, April 5, the new U.S. War Department program, "The Army Hour," will make its debut. This pro-gram will tell the people of this country what their army is doing and how they, the civilians, can best work to help the fighting men. Each program will include talks by leaders of the United Nations, pick-ups from our forces abroad, and a dramatic onthe-scene broadcast from one of America's great national shrines such as Lincoln Memorial, Arlington Cemetery, Independence Hall and Monti-cello. These broadcasts will be short-waved to the world Sundays from 2:30 to 3:30 p.m. CWT over WRCA, WNBI and WBOS . . . The Musical Steelmakers, a popular employe family show with songs and music by the Wheeling Steel Corporation's mill workers, will be short-waved by delayed broadcast to the United States troops abroad each Monday from 12:15 to 12:45 p.m. CWT over WRCA (15.15) and WBOS (11.87).

Who Are FM Listeners?

NE of the country's leading FM stations, W71NY in New York City, recently put its local FM listeners under the magnifying glass and found out some very interesting facts about them. In the first place, you've probably heard people say, "Oh, FM's too expensive for most listeners. Only the well-to-do can afford FM receivers, or people who are fanatics about good music.'

W71NY didn't find it that way. It's unfortunate that the first FM receivers offered the public were fairly expensive pieces of equipment. Some manufacturers took the view that, because FM gave quality reproduction, an FM set had to be wrapped up in a costly Chippendale or Hepplewhite cabinet. You paid as much for a piece of custom furniture as you did for a radio set. Now, however, with the number of FM fans greatly increased, the price of receivers has gone down.

W71NY had interviewers sent out to ask known FM listeners certain questions, face to face. They soon found that 70.9 percent of the families interviewed-instead of living in ivied mansions with butlers and four cars -were solid members of the middle class, and that just as many people in the lowest-income brackets had FM sets as did those in the top-income group. In other words, the average FM listener is just an average person and not—as W71NY expresses it—"a social or financial stuffed shirt."

Of the sixty thousand FM sets in the New York area on February 1, W71NY found that 46.7 percent of them are less than three months old and 79 percent have been owned for only six months or less. In the whole survey they found only four sets over two years old.

Likes and Dislikes

Another question asked by the FM interviewers was this: "Regardless of programs, in your opinion is FM broadcasting better than regular broadcasting?" A total of 78.8 percent were emphatic in stating that they thought it superior. On the other hand, percent didn't think so. Undoubtedly many of the latter group had been unfortunate enough to purchase FM receivers not manufactured under the basic FM patents and having slight-if any-noise-elimination properties. Improper installation could also result in much of the dissatisfaction. The remaining four percent interviewed simply didn't know.

Of all types of program material, the New York listeners seemed to prefer music by a 63 percent majority. W71NY declares this to be all kinds of music "from hot swing to pop to symphonic."

FM Snubs the Static

With warm weather only a few months ahead, FM will once more have a chance to prove its static-free characteristics-this time to thousands of new listeners who didn't have FM sets in their homes last year. The reception of an FM station during a heavy thunder-storm is almost weird. Clear, sharp music fills your livingroom from the FM receiver. Then you see the flash of lightning outside and instinctively flinch, waiting for crash to come ripping from the loudspeaker. But it doesn't. The music just goes on placidly, and all the noise you get is the actual rumble of thunder several seconds later.

Education by FM

No one any longer has doubts about the merits of radio broadcasting as a career for American youth. Most large colleges and universities, as well as many high schools, give courses in script writing, radio programming, studio engineering and numerous other phases of this vast industry.

A few educational institutions are lucky enough to operate their own stations, but unfortunately the cramped conditions on the regular broadcast band do not make this feasible for more than a woful few. FM. however, holds out unlimited possibilities, particularly since the Federal Communications Commission has set aside five channels in the FM broadcast band for the exclusive use of educational broadcast stations.

Several of these transmitters are already on the air and enhance edu-cational work in two outstanding ways. If the station is operated by a local school system-as is the case at Cleveland and San Francisco-FM receivers can be installed throughout the classrooms of many local school buildings. Important lectures are then broadcast and received simultaneously at all schools, eliminating the necessity for many separate lectures.

The station can also be used in training young radio technicians, a grave need of the broadcasting industry at this time with so many engineers leaving to join the armed services, as well as for "workshop" programs put on the air by classes in radio writing, music, dramatics, public speaking and kindred subjects.

This weekly column of FM news and discussion is intended as a Movie-Radio Guide service for the swiftly growing audience of FM listeners. Letters from readers are always welcome. We shall be glad to answer your questions and, if you do not yet have FM reception in your locality, advise you whether any is in prospect.

yourself and be sincere with yourself. It will show up well in your slogans, statements, letters, etc. in regard to this last-mentioned type of contest, be sure you know the product you're writing about. Buy it and try it and the competitive products, too. Do some research on the product. Make up many entries before deciding on the final one to submit. And don't buy entries from professional peddlers. Win on your own.

Deadline Approaching

The opportunity-laden "Dr. Christian" competition for playwrights is drawing near its close, which is May 1. So, polish up those plots and get the manuscripts in the mail. Already the contest has turned up over 30,000 potential radio writers, according to the number of requests for contest rules received by the officials. Here are a couple of last-minute tips from Jean Hersholt himself (he's Dr. Christian): "Scripts may be written in pencil, but we prefer that they be typed. And remember, suspense should

Carnegie Hall.

Many persons make a lucrative hobby of contesting by pursuing it scientifically. Others just go at it freefor-all, hit-and-run style-and still win prizes. Undoubtedly the latter class in general could increase their winnings by more studious application. And it is certainly wise for the contest experts to check up now and then on their methods and see that they aren't slipping.

So let's take a quick once-over of a few fundamentals. First of all, be certain you're following the rules to the letter. Slipping up on a specific rule is the surest way to be eliminated. Don't think you have to use some clever device to get your entry noticed. The judges know all the tricks and don't like them. Know

Write a Slogan!

Speaking of contests, have you tried your hand at writing a slogan to enter in Movie-Radio Guide's Defense Bond and Stamp contest? You believe in bonds and stamps, don't you? You'd like to have one that you won with your own ingenuity, wouldn't you? You can write a sim-ple slogan, can't you? See the rules in the center of this page for further details. Help yourself to a bond and help your country to victory.

All-American Speech

The southern drawi, the New England twang, the Brooklyn accent and the country's other regional dialects will be virtually eliminated in another decade, says Hugh Studebaker, known to listeners of the NBC serial "Bachelor's Children" as Dr. Bob Graham. And the speech evolution will be due chiefly to radio. Nowadays actors and announcers almost unanimously avoid regional accents and idioms in the course of natural delivery, thus most unanimously avoid regional accents and idioms in the course of natural delivery, thus creating a kind of "all-American speech," says actor Studebaker, adding that this "average" speech pattern is rapidly being recognized and more and more generally adopted by the vast American listening public.

Winners in Movie-Radio Guide's Seventh Defense Bond-Stamp Slogan Contest

Bond-slogan winner in Movie-Radio Guide's seventh weekly contest was Mrs. Coda Baggett, Lamkin, Texas. Stamp-slogan winner was Mrs. Glenn W. Kennedy of Washington, D. C. Here's Mrs. Baggett's winning slogan: "Show You Care by Buying Your Share." Her five reasons for buying bonds were: 1—To show loyalty to your country, 2—To give purse-service rather than lip-service. 3—To lay away for that after-war day. 4—To bolster our own morale, 5—To hasten the end of the war. Mrs. Kennedy's stamp slogan advised: "Concentrate on Stamps—So You Won't Concentrate in Camps!" Her five reasons were: 1—Since I can't fight, this is the most centsible thing I can do. 2—To supply fighting dollars for fighting men. 3—War is costly—I want to pay my share. 4—To safeguard my financial future. 5—To insure the American way of life. For information of all future contestants, $25 Defense Bond and $1 Defense Stamp will be awarded each week until further notice. Each slogan submitted MUST be accompanied by FIVE brief reasons for buying bonds or stamps. If winning slogans are submitted by more than one person, reasons given will decide winner. Address all entries to "Bond-Stamp" Contest Editor, 731 Plymouth Court, Chicago, Ill. No entries will be returned. Decision of judges must be considered final. No one contestant can win both bond and stamp awards the same week. The contest is open to everyone, except publication's employes and their families. More winners next week!

The Radio Front

Chicago in a battered jalopy with thirty cents among them. Let's add a good word for arranger Jack Fascinato, who has contributed much to the Dinning climb . . .

Don Norman's full name is Don Dalton Martin Carroll Norman Cros-noe. Not a "Juan" in the whole mouthful. But he's the guy who takes ten strange women to lunch every day! That's a pleasant assignment, of course, but it's really part of his business-which is broadcasting the program "Your Date with Don Norman" on MBS. The luncheon-bee takes place just before the broadcast. There's plenty of talking, you can bet, on everything from Junior's first tooth to General MacArthur. Don's part of the deal is paying for the lunch, giving the conversation what little spurring is needed, and making mental notes. After lunch they all troop next door to the WGN studios, where Don interviews women in the audience. It's an ad-lib show, but Don's preparation includes not only the luncheon research but also thumbing through most of the women's magazines and a background of about seven years of street interviewing in Chicago . . .

Actor-announcer Marvin Mueller has a tip for Mr. Morgenthau. And if everybody can make it work as well as Marvin, it's a good tip. Piggy banks!—that's the big idea. Marvin has managed to save enough dimes and pennies that way to buy $1,500 worth of war bonds and stamps for twenty-month-old Tony, his son. But then Marvin has one advantage over even Mr. Morgenthau in making 'silk purse out of a sow's ear." He has about a hundred varied pig banks he has collected as a hobby. Then, too, not every contributor to the national coffers has been as profitably busy as Mueller, who, among his current radio tasks, announces "That Brewster Boy" and plays Gil Whitney in "Helen Trent" . . .

Judith Waller, pioneering public-service director for the NBC central division, makes her first "Who's Who" appearance in the new edition. Last year she was chosen by the General Federation of Women's Clubs from among fifty-three women in thirty occupations as representing "the great strides made by women in the past fifty years" . . . Dave Bacal, organist on "Lone Journey," has been placed in charge of daily organ recitals at the United Service headquarters here ... Betty Ruth Smith (Nita Bennett in "Lone Journey") is represented as an artist in the All-Illinois Society of Fine Arts exhibit at the Stevens Hotel. Her work is a self-portrait. Betty Ruth, by the way, is the voice of "Helen Trent" while Virginia Clark vacations from script trouble for a real-life happy event, the birth of her second child .... "Welcome back to Chicago" to Jack Fulton, who has a "Welcome back to new singing program on WBBM Wednesday nights, and who is also playing trombone in Caesar Petrillo's CBS orchestra.

STRANGE PETS are the hobby of Harold Smith and his son, Earle Lee Smith, of Flint, Mich. When Dave Elman (center) went to Flint to act as emcee of the I. M. A. Hobby Show, he dropped in on the Smiths and invited them to be guests on his CBS "Hobby Lobby." Seven-year-old Earle Lee plays with a huge black snake while alligators cavort about

GENERAL ENTERTAINMENT

By ARTHUR MILLER

Is there anybody who doesn't enjoy a mystery story? With characters in the plot being "done away with" at just the right time to intensify the reader's already keen interest, the Richard Sale book, "Lazarus No. 7" (Simon and Schuster, $2), proves to be an extraordinarily delightful (in weird way) reading pastime. Dr. Steven Mason, in Hollywood for a brief visit, becomes embroiled in a series of deftly accomplished homi-cides. The author's ability to maintain a jocular vein in the treatment of the piece marks him as having a singular style in the murder-mystery field . . .

Adolphe Menjou, like all the others who have entertained for men in the armed forces, has a zealous desire to make public the fact that these protectors of democracy deserve even more entertainment. On his recently completed tour in this country and in Canada, he appeared before soldiers many of whom had never seen a stage play. Menjou relates that after the first act of a play in one camp, most of the audience got up to leave-not because the play was poorly presented but because they thought it was over ...

Australians seem to have the idea that American soldiers are "the gambling-est men on earth." Stories from Australia tell of almost a pack of cards for every soldier. Card-playing has served as a diversion for Americans for many years. What better pastime aboard transport ships? . . .

Some committees working in the Victory Book Campaign have reported that too many contributors have donated public-library books. This action isn't encouraged!

FEMININE

By ALBERTA NORTH

It's Spring Again

THIS year we're all thinking twice about just what we can do to look our newest, brightest selves the first morning the robins greet us and announce that another spring has rolled around. With the day for our debut here (Easter Sunday), we have to be ready for the parade and getting ready will involve some careful planning. You'll have to have an elastic budget to make your clothes money go as far as it did last year, and perhaps a few hints given here may help you to accomplish this.

After all, being practical and pennywise about our pursuit of glamour is one more way of being patriotic. We should strive to be always well groomed and to do it without the luxuries with which we've been pampered these many years. Remember the stitch in time that saved nine? Well, in a world at war this means your little voluntary sacrifices through corner-cutting may eliminate the need for bigger sacrifices tomorrow.

Step number one is to shake the moth-balls out of last year's spring outfit and check it over for minor repairs, adjustments in fittings, if necessary, and a thorough brushing and pressing; presuming, of course, that it was packed away brand clean last fall. If you were smart and bought a suit last year, your only problem now is to select new accessories that will bring it up to date. Use them to give yourself a "different" look and to put your suit on a par with your new bonnet!

suit on a par with your new bonnet!

First, experiment with color. If there's a spot for a blouse in your wardrobe, make it a fresh green one to go with gray, brown or navy. Or select one of American beauty, shocking pink or beige to wear with black.

The ever handsome white touches are sure bets, too, particularly if you'll help yourself to economy by sporting the fashionable new cottons which can be washed and washed to look fresh and new seasons from now when silk is once again easy to own.

Perhaps you have no outfit packed away to bring forth this season. In that case, profit by this year's experience and get one that will stand up to this spring, next spring and maybe even the one after that! What's more, select an "all-day" suit, one you can wear morning, noon and night. Let it be neither too dressy nor too tailored, something with simple lines and conservative color. Indulge your whims and fancies with the accessories you wear, your colorful bags, gloves or dickies. These can vary to suit any occasion. This, my dears, is economy! Of course you should, if you possibly can, finish yourself with a bonny

Of course you should, if you possibly can, finish yourself with a bonny new bonnet. Do your mixing of colors elsewhere and stick to a "match" with hat and suit! Then, if needs be, you won't have to give a thought to a hat next year and can once again refresh your outfit with another complete change of accessories. As a matter of fact, a felt hat this spring instead of the usual straw would be a smart buy, both fashion-wise and purse-wise.

SPEAKING of spring freshness, will your own face and figure be all set to greet the Easter morn? If not, you'd better give some time and care to those factors, too. Now's a good time to start a constructive program for making a new person out of yourself. Blossom along with the flowers that bloom in the spring, tra la. We can't think of a better way to do this than to enroll yourself, by mail, in a course for glamour and beauty. We've seen miracles performed on women of all ages who simply dedicated six weeks of their lives to the improvement of their appearance under the direction of Ann Delafield. Here in New York, at the famous Richard Hudnut Salon, she personally helps women make the most of themselves. But women all over the country can achieve the same wonderful results right at home with her DuBarry Success Course given by mail! The cost is reasonable, including, as it does, a complete set of DuBarry preparations, and the results are well worth a little budgeting. With summer coming on, when you can't hide behind a fur collar, and bathing-suits and playsuits reveal you, it's a wise girl who takes stock of herself and gets right down to serious reconstructions if she's not completely satisfied with what meets the honest eye.

WHAT'S COOKING!

By GEORGIA SCOTT

Tapioca From Manioca

"PEARL" tapioca is a fair-ly common staple in the cupboards of most American housewives, but I'm willing to make two wagers about this food. The first is that most housewives don't know where it comes from and the second is that they don't use it for

BELIEVE IT OR NOT, Robert Ripley, who you've been hearing every Saturday on the Blue Net talking about things South American, made

much except puddings. If anybody wants to pick me up on this wager, name your price.

If you do know where it comes from, it's probably because you saw a Ripley item. That great traveler and food connoisseur has revealed a lot of interesting facts to the public about our South American neighbors, and one of the most interesting is that the principal food of the Indians of South America is poisonous. That food is the manioca plant from which most of our commercial tapioca is derived. It's a gigantic root in its native form, filled with a milky-looking acid which is poisonous. Fortunately for us as well as our Brazilian friends, the poison disappears with the application of heat.

The native Brazilians squeeze the sap out of the plant, boil it and thereby produce a delicious sauce. The rest of the root is dried, grated and pulverized into flour, out of which various cakes are made.

Most of us like to use tapioca, particularly minute tapioca, because it comes in so handy if you're pressed for time and want to make your family a delicious and economical dessert in hurry. It's so easy to beat up the yolk of an egg, add it to milk, sweeten to taste, and then stir in your tapioca. As soon as the mixture comes to a boil your pudding is done except for add-ing your beaten egg white and whatever fruit combination you wish to combine with it when it's cold. In five minutes flat you've done all the work, no fuss, no muss, and you have a very tasty and nourishing dish.

But this energy-food, has not yet been properly appreciated as an allaround good mixer with a wide variety of other foods. Did you ever try using it with souffles and omelets? Believe it or not, Ripley made those little ramekins of souffle pictured above. It's called Thrifty Souffle and this is the way he does it:

3 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca

1/2 teaspoon salt

1 cup mushroom soup

cup chopped chicken

3 egg yolks, beaten thick 3 egg whites, stiffly beaten

Combine the tapioca, salt and mushroom soup in top of double boiler; cook eight to ten minutes, stirring frequently, and then add chicken. Cool a bit while you're beating the eggs. After adding egg yolks and mixing well, fold this into egg whites. Turn them into the ramekins, place the ramekins in a pan of hot water and bake in a mod-erate oven (350 degrees) thirty minutes, or until souffle is formed. (If you use a big baking-dish, bake for approximately fifty minutes.) This recipe serves six.

Another unusual but very practical use for tapioca is in sandwich fillings. That sounds odd, but if you try it, you'll turn into a convert. You know how soggy a sandwich can become with moisture from the filling soaking into the bread. This is a particularly good idea when you're having a party and want to make the sandwiches ahead of time-they'll be as fresh as when you made them. You combine three tablespoons of tapioca, one teaspoon salt, one-eighth teaspoon pepper, HERE ROBERT RIPLEY shown preparing the ramekins of souffle pictured at the left in his own kitchen. He calls the dish Thrifty Souffle. See below for Mr. Ripley's recipe one-eighth teaspoon paprika, one-half teaspoon dry mustard, and one cup of milk in top of double boiler. Add two and one-half cups of grated cheese (one-half pound) slowly, stirring in until it's melted. move from the fire and add one teaspoon Worcestershire sauce and three-quarters cup of chopped, stuffed olives. Don't worry about the thickness of it—it will thicken as it cools. These amounts make two and one-quarter cups of sandwich filling.

There are many other ways to use tapioca: it's an excellent binder in a meat loaf, preventing crumbling; fine as a thickener in soups and casseroles; and a wonderful holder-in of juices of fruit pies. If somebody asked me to compile a list of victory foods, tapioca would be one of my choices.

Miss Jean McIntyre, Chicago, Ill.— "That Brewster Boy" is now heard over the Columbia Broadcasting System on Wednesdays at 7:30 p.m. EWT. EDDIE FIRESTONE, JR., plays the title role. He is supported by Hugh Studebaker, Constance Crowder, Louise Fitch, Bob Bailey, Bob Jellison and Billy Idelson. Music for "That Brewster Boy" is by Glen Welty.

Miss Vera Ames, St. Louis, Mo.— LOUISE FITCH, one of Chicago's busiest young radio actresses, now plays Eloise Comstock in CBS' "Scattergood Baines." Louise was added to the cast as a result of the recent untimely death of Dorothy Gregory, who formerly played the part.

Miss Olive Davison, Southold, N. Y.-When in New York, Kay Kyser and his "College of Musical Knowledge" (heard over NBC on Wednesday nights) broadcast from the RCA Building.

Mr. Albert Neil, Detroit, Mich .--Before she even saw a primer, Lucy GILMAN (who plays the part of Ruth Johnson in "Backstage Wife") thought the three R's all meant radio. That was back in the days when she was one of the most promising of Chicago child actresses and when she was so small she had to stand on a box to reach the mike. Now (nineteen years old) Lucy is a veteran in the NBC Chicago studios. She is flame-haired and blueeyed. Her hobbies are reading, music, and collecting match boxes. She likes steak and onions, apple pie and milk, the opera "Carmen," Gershwin, and her favorite color is blue.

Miss Aileen Daly, Nashville, Tenn. -Name of the new Danish-born pianist-comedian appearing on "Kraft Music Hall" (Thursdays, NBC) VICTOR BORGE. He had been a headliner in the music halls and nightclubs of Europe for ten or twelve years when the war broke. When he came to this country, he was unable to speak a word of English, but he soon took care of that. He attended six or seven movie shows a day in the Times Square area, until, at the end of six months, he had picked up enough English to make intelligible some of his acts that used to lay 'em in the European aisles. His American debut was in a Florida night-club.

Mrs. S. Hutchins, Milwaukee, Wis.-When Dr. Thompson of the NBC and CBS serial, "Road of Life," discourses learnedly about operations, he knows what he's talking about. SIDNEY Breese, character actor who appears in the role, is the son of a physician and spent some years himself training for that profession.

Sid was a student at the University of Chicago when the grease-paint virus got into his system. There's no vaccination against the disease so young Breese gave up the idea medicine and turned to the stage. With his B. A. in hand he knocked at the door of the Goodman Theater. There he spent three years.

He was born June 4, 1907, in Coffey-ville, Kansas. Since then he has lived Wyoming, Shrewsbury, England; Tellamore, Ireland; Denver, Colorado, and Chicago.

Breese stops just short of six feet in height, weighs 155, has auburn hair and blue-green eyes. He likes to play

Mrs. Rex G. Young, Ludington, Mich.—Tony Wons' "Scrap Book" program has been heard over NBC the past couple of fall-winter seasons. It leaves the air April 5 for the summer, but will probably be back on next fall. Tony's home is in Kenosha, Wisconsin.

Miss Ruth Small, Decatur, Ill.—TED DE CORSIA plays the role of Joe, and Ann Thomas enacts the part of Mabel in the "Joe and Mabel" comedy program over NBC on Sunday nights.

Miss Joyce Davis, Cincinnati, Ohio. —MILTON BERLE, jester of the Blue Network's "Three Ring Time," will be seen soon in his new movie, "Whisper-ing Ghosts."

Mr. Clarence Little, Memphis, Tenn. -Norma Jean Ross, the new Beth Reed on "Scattergood Baines," has lived in a half-dozen or more states, but she likes Texas best of all. Despite her loyalty to Texas, however, Norma Jean currently is an up-and-coming Chicago radio actress. She also has the new role of Dolly in "Stepmother."

Pretty, brown-eyed, auburn-haired Norma Jean was born in Fremont, Nebraska, twenty-one years ago, but she went to grade school in Des Moines, Iowa, to high school in Abilene, Texas, to college at Gulfport, Mississippi. Then she went back to Texas and studied at the Dallas School of Theater.

Norma Jean and her roommate, who is also an actress, have a pair of bicycles. They thought bikes might be practical before long and now they have fun riding along Lake Michigan, sometimes before dawn. For fun, too, Norma Jean likes bowling, horsebackriding and swimming. She's a recordcollector, likes symphony music.

Norma Jean is five feet three, weighs 108 pounds.

Mr. Alfred Jones, Kansas City, Mo. -Mary Martin, featured on Bing Crosby's "KMH," was born in Weatherford, Texas, December 1, 1914. She studied professional dancing while still in high school; spent a year at exclusive Ward-Belmont School in Nashville. After her graduation, she opened her own dancing-school. In three years she had three dancing-schools, all successful. She was then able to pay back money advanced for schools by her father, a judge. Mary decided to bring her terpsichorean talents to Hollywood, but in Hollywood she was first engaged as a night-club singer. Mary dresses very fashionably and is particularly interested in hats. She is five feet four inches, weighs 118, has mischievous brown eyes, and a Texas drawl.

In 1940 she wed Richard Halliday in a surprise elopement to Las Vegas, Nevada.

Miss Kathleen Wells, Lansing, Mich. -The rise of LUCILLE MANNERS to stardom is one of the most fascinating success stories in radio. From an obscure stenographer's job to singing star soprano of the Friday night "Cities Service Concerts"—that's her story. She weighs 110, her favorite dish is potato pancakes and apple sauce.

She's Queen of the Regiment

Dinah Shore Shares a Unique Honor With Famous Singer Jenny Lind, Who Was Inducted Into 7th Regiment Ninety Years Ago

THRILLED was Dinah Shore when she was named Queen of 7th Regiment at annual New York State Guard ball, held at the regiment's armory on Park Ave., N. Y. City, primped for the occasion

SWEDISH nightingale Jenny Lind, in 1852, was accorded the same honor. Above: Dinah greets her escorts to ball, Sergeant Major James Cunningham (I.), Lieutenant Emil Schlossareck

LEAVING Waldorf-Astoria, where Dinah lives while singing in Wedgwood Room floor show. In addition she's a regular on Cantor air show, and has her own 15-minute program

CAPTAIN Raymond A. Mc-Murray administers oath which makes Dinah an honorary member of the 7th Regiment. As overseas cap was placed on her head, she was proclaimed Queen of Regiment

CEREMONY over, Dinah sang regiment's official song, "Wearing of the Gray," sung by Jenny Lind ninety years before. Entire regiment, all guests, rose and joined Miss Shore in song

"GEE, I'm proud of this cap!" says Dinah with a big grin, just before picture above, showing Captain McMurray and Queen Dinah saluting the 7th Regiment, was snapped, which climaxed event

AFTERWARD Lt. Taylor had the honor of dancing with regiment queen before she returned to Waldorf for Wedgwood Room show. Recipient of many titles, Dinah was thrilled most by this one!
