BUILD FOR AMERICA

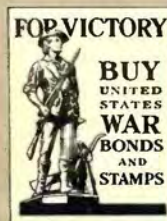

Movie-Radio Star, and One-Time Teacher
Martha Scott, Urges Schools' Cooperation

MARTHA SCOTT is a little lady, but the practical suggestion she has made in her "Build for America" program is big enough to include every young person of school age in the nation who is interested in manual arts as a means of serving in war-time. Namely: Conversion of every high-school and college wood-working and machine shop in America to war production, with students making equipment desperately needed on the home front. As a specific example Miss Scott cited the needs of air-raid wardens—desks for their posts; signs designating locations of doctors' offices, hospitals, shelters; and even small wagons with several compartments to carry first-aid, other equipment used by air-raid wardens.

Backing up her idea with figures, Miss Scott pointed out that there were twenty thousand wardens in Los Angeles alone who could use their output. "And," she added, "the thirty junior high schools and thirty-eight senior high schools of the city which have shops are already training students in aircraft metal work and other war-production courses; so it would be easy to gear part of their work to civilian defense. Too, it would do wonders as a morale-builder among the children of America, give them the sound and solid feeling that they were helping to win this war right along with the grown-ups. For they would be turning their hands directly to a task that needs to be done immediately."

Coming from a girl who was once a teacher herself, we thought the idea a sound and practical one; and we are passing it on to you Movie-Radio Guide readers. What do you think, parents and teachers of America?—The Editors.

LOU GEHRIG PEACE-TIME HERO

Gary Cooper Stars as the Iron Man in the Sam Goldwyn Production "The Pride of the Yankees"

LOU GEHRIG is gone, and the peaceful world whose hero he was is gone. It is hard to realize that his 2,130 consecutive games once stood out in our minds as a sort of Bataan defense . . . that his collapse and death were, in their time, as deeply felt, as truly inspiring as the blazing death of Colin Kelly is today.

We have heroes aplenty now, but we all hold a particular reverence for Lou Gehrig, true hero of American peace, a symbol of the deep sportsmanship to which he held in life and in the face of death.

Not long ago, Lou's friends began to gather in Hollywood. Babe Ruth came out of retirement. Bill Dickey, still a Yankee star, appeared. Bob Meusel and Mark Koenig joined them, joined a Hollywood cast organized by producer Sam Goldwyn to create a motion-picture monument to Lou Gehrig.

To Gary Cooper fell the role of Lou himself. He approached it reverently, studiously. He learned Lou's gestures, learned to throw left-handed. The ball-players and announcer Bill Stern portray themselves. Teresa Wright plays Lou's wife, and Walter Brennan has a supporting part. The picture, scheduled for early release by RKO, was edited by the real Mrs. Gehrig. Here is the story of "Pride of the Yankees," based on Lou Gehrig's life-story.

1. GARY COOPER (left) as the great Lou Gehrig. Above: Young Lou is caught by the law for smashing a window with a long hit. His parents paid

2. LOU'S CAREER was launched when "Mom" Gehrig (above) needed money for an operation. Lou secretly quit college, signed with the Yanks, in spite of parental hopes he'd be an engineer

3. "TANGLEFOOT," shouted Eleanor Twitchell (Teresa Wright) when Lou stumbled during his first day in the Yank line-up. That night they meet in a Chicago restaurant

5. BALLYHOO engulfs Eleanor and Lou as they marry, then rush to Yankee Stadium, where Lou hammers out one of his home runs in celebration. Above: Photographers go wild, while Bill Dickey (himself) watches

6. TRAGEDY STRIKES when Lou, king of the diamond, hears (above) that he has a paralysis that may be fatal, that certainly ends his career. He retires and is honored by 60,000 fans at "Lou Gehrig Appreciation Day" (below). Ball-players stand bareheaded as Lou makes his last bow

BILL STERN PREDICTS 1942 PENNANT WINNERS

Bill Stern is the unquestioned favorite sportscaster of radio. In the recent MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE Star of Stars Poll he received almost twice as many votes as all other sports announcers put together. He is no mere "mouthpiece," but an expert in sports matters, with a thorough knowledge of a wide range of fields. He appears as himself in "The Pride of the Yankees."
—The Editors.

RIGHT now it looks as though a lot of New Yorkers and Brooklynites will reach down in their jeans for a jitney come next October. I mean, of course, another "Nickel World Series" seems to be in the offing for the fans in America's greatest metropolis.

Although before the season opened the majority of experts picked the hammering Yanks to pound their way into another of their easy victories, the consensus of these very same experts had the St. Louis Cardinals easing the Dodgers out of first-place money before the season was over. So far, the experts are being proved wrong on that last count, but the season is far from over, and their pre-season opinions may yet be vindicated. But right now I'll have to string along with the two 1941 champions. Here's how I look at the possibilities of the various clubs. The toughest league to figure is the National, so I'll try to get that over with first.

The Brooklyn Dodgers: By far the best-balanced club in the senior circuit. With Curt Davis, Whitlow Wyatt, Ed Head, Kirby Higby, Larry French and Johnny Allen, they have pitching, buddy! As for power—well, right now McPhail's team is the only National League club boasting four .300 hitters—meaning Reiser, Medwick, Owen and "The People's Choice," Dixie Walker. The surprise of the Dodger team is first-sacker Dolph Camilli, last year's most valuable player in the National League. But Dolph, though he is hitting at a low clip, is still a big threat when men are on base—and for defensive play has no peer in either league. They may not win the pennant, but how they will stay out of first place I don't know.

The St. Louis Cardinals: With the youngest team in the majors, and the fastest, they seem destined for second place, with an outside chance of coping the flag. The Cards got off to a shaky start this year, but have now begun to roll. As this is being written they are well entrenched in second place, having worked up from fourth within a month. With Mort Cooper, Howard Pollet, Lon Warneke, Bill Lohrman, et al., they have a fine potential pitching-staff. They could use a couple of heavy stick-men, but all in all their "hustle" should keep them up there. With an avalanche of "good breaks" they might overtake the Dodgers.

The Cincinnati Reds: The "good-pitch, no-hit" club in the National didn't get too much of either in the first few weeks of the campaign. But of late the Reds are doing much better in both departments. The addition of a pair of rookies, catcher Ray LaManno and outfielder Max Marshall, has added greatly to their offensive power. And another rookie—a thirty-five-year-old one, Ray Starr—is the surprise pitcher of the year. Veteran Frank McCormick is still the reliable man in the clutches. The Reds look like a good bet for third place.

New York Giants, Pittsburgh Pirates, Chicago Cubs: Should battle it out for fourth place.

The Boston Braves: The big surprise of the early season, the Braves weren't expected to keep up the pace—and they didn't. Three rookies, pitchers Tost and Sain, and a veteran, Snoz Lombardi, have been playing good ball—but the Casey Stengel team hasn't got the class to get much further than seventh position. But don't bet on my prediction.

The Philadelphia Phils: Hans Lobert (or somebody) changed the name of the club from the Phillies to the Phils, period. If they had changed the team instead of the name they'd have been better off.

In the American League there is no possible way of figuring any team to cop the honors except—

The New York Yankees: It's a team that has everything—great offensive power and great defensive play. When DiMaggio is not hitting, Gordon is. If Keller doesn't get his blow, Hassett comes through. With Gordon and Rizzuto there is no better shortstop-second-base combination in the majors, and the veteran Frank Crosetti and ex-National Leaguer Buddy Hassett have stopped all of the Yankees' infield worries. Their pitching is just the best in the league.

The Boston Red Sox: Still a great hitting ball club and still greatly in need of a couple of pitchers. Their power should win them second place.

The Cleveland Indians: Still surprising the experts. Lou Boudreau, "the baby manager," has done wonders with Cleveland. With Bobby Feller in the Navy, the other Cleveland pitchers know that the load is on them, and they have been coming through. Rookie Les Fleming has added some much-needed power. They have an excellent chance of taking third-place honors and may beat out the Red Sox for the second slot.

The Detroit Tigers: Should finish out of the second division.

The St. Louis Browns: A hot-and-cold ball club, but one that is capable of putting on a big inning. I figure them to lead the second division.

The Philadelphia Athletics, the Chicago White Sox and the Washington Senators will stage the only big fight in the American League—and it will be a battle for the cellar. My guess is that the Senators will be the bottom champs, with the Athletics ending up in seventh place, White Sox in sixth.

Well, that's the way I pick 'em—but I've been known to be wrong—often—so when the season is over, don't come around and ask for a rebate on the price of this weekly—but I do think a nickel will get you to the World Series—if you're a New Yorker.

★ GUIDE TO GOOD SUMMER LISTENING ★

CONSISTENTLY one of radio's leading dramatic shows, "Those We Love" is set for the summer on NBC, Wed. Screen star Nan Grey (above) again plays the role of Kathy, Richard Cromwell continues as Kit. Newcomer is silent-screen idol Francis X. Bushman as John Marshall

RADIO this summer promises to smash all previous records for warm-weather entertainment. 1942 will see the biggest parade of stars ever lined up for a summer's listening-fare in the history of broadcasting. The "usual summer slump" is out for the duration and in its place you will find the finest talent there is in the fields of comedy, music and drama.

For example, "Victory Parade" is a summer series featuring topflight NBC shows. The premiere broadcast presented the entire cast of "Post Toasties Time," including Fanny Brice, Hanley Stafford, Frank Morgan, John Conte, Harlow Wilcox and the complete staff of writers and directors. Other shows scheduled for this series include Jack Benny, Bob Hope, Fibber McGee and Molly, Rudy Vallee, The Great Gildersleeve and Kay Kyser. And then there is "Victory Theater," a special summer series featuring outstanding CBS programs. The premiere on July 20 will have "Lux Radio Theater." This will be followed by the Fred Allen Show, "Screen Guild Theater," "Hit Parade" and other top programs.

On the air every week will be such stars as Ben Bernie, Tommy Dorsey, Tommy Riggs, Edna May Oliver, Lou Holtz, Arthur Q. Bryan as Major Hoople, Nan Grey, Francis X. Bushman, Fay Wray, John Nesbitt and Meredith Willson's orchestra, to mention only a few. Besides, many shows that ordinarily vacation during the months of June, July and August plan to stay on right through the summer this year.

If you plan to stay home this summer, don't fret. Your radio will not let you down.

"VICTORY PARADE" presents a topflight NBC show every Sunday, with Lionel Barrymore (above) featured as "the voice of the Government." Fanny Brice and Hanley Stafford were on the premiere broadcast, other shows will feature Jack Benny, Bob Hope, Rudy Vallee, the McGees

SILVER-VOICED Jane Froman has joined the biggest summer parade of stars in the history of radio, is heard with Al Goodman's orchestra and a choir on CBS, Sunday

"MEN, Machines—Victory," Blue Network's contribution to the safety drive to reduce industrial accidents, presents outstanding stars and distinguished speakers every Friday. Actor Melvyn Douglas was narrator on initial program

"KEEPING Up with Rosemary" brings lovely Fay Wray to the air Saturdays via NBC in the role of the typical American girl. It's Fay's first radio series, though she's widely known for stellar roles in westerns and horror films

VIVACIOUS Dinah Shore, the girl "who starts fire by striking two notes together," has a Friday night spot for the summer on the Blue Network. Gordon Jenkins' orchestra accompanies her "blues"

YOU HAVE "A Date with Judy" on Tuesday night for the summer. This is the second season the popular "Judy" has replaced Bob Hope for the summer on NBC. Left: Judy and her girl friend, Mitzi, wait patiently for the phone to ring, although they won't admit that they are waiting for their boy-friends to call. Dellie Ellis (l.) plays the part of Judy, Louise Erickson (r.) portrays the role of Mitzi. Right: Judy's wise-cracking kid brother, Randolph, cuts in on the call. The role of Randolph is played by Dix Davis

CLARK GABLE Becomes a Soldier

WHEN the news came through from the nation's capital, on June 22, that Clark Gable had passed his physical tests at Bolling Field and was to be inducted into the Air Force, somehow we couldn't picture him as Clark Gable, movie star. We saw him as "Big Bill," the name he answered to when he started out as an unknown in a Little Theater in Portland, Oregon—a young American from the oil fields of the Midwest and the great forests of the Pacific Northwest, with a yen for the footlights in his heart. Whenever there was a tough job to be done then, whether it was moving scenery or playing a role, the director always called on "Big Bill." And he was always Johnny on the Spot.

So we give our readers William Clark Gable, who begins a new career far removed from the grease-paint and glamour of Hollywood, when he enters the American Air Force. From now on he will be Major Gable, with headquarters at the Officers Training School in Miami Beach, Florida. Again there is a tough job ahead, and Clark feels that he belongs in the scrap, rather than making pictures. That he didn't get in it before was due to the fact that he contracted to finish a film for his studio, M-G-M, before entering the service.

For Clark Gable, in his heart, really became a soldier on January 16 of this year, a few hours after the plane tragedy that claimed the life of Carole Lombard, his wife. At that time he told a close friend that he would enlist immediately after finishing "Somewhere I'll Find You"—a strangely significant title to the heart-broken man who locked up at the grim mountains where she died, and waited to take America's first war heroine, his gallant, blue-eyed Carole, home!

JOEY

And the Lone Wolf of the Panhandle

As Told to

Pauline Hopkins by Joey Brewster

Joey Takes to the Stage to Protect His Family From the Inroads of a Movie Star
Whose Coyote Howls Make Life Unbearable

JEEPERS, how did I know my sister Nancy would fall in love with the guy?

Dad says I should've known it. He says if I had one ounce of horse sense I would have known it. Sometimes I can't help thinking Dad has very little respect for my intelligence.

But, to tell you the truth, I never even thought about Nancy when I told her to invite Dick Sheridan, the great cowboy movie star, to come and have dinner at our house. All I was thinking about was the contest at the Bijou Theater. Dick Sheridan was making a personal appearance there, along with his latest movie, "The Lone Wolf of the Panhandle," and the management decided to have an impersonation contest. The boy who did the best imitation of Mr. Sheridan was to win a six-month pass to the Bijou. Six months of free movies! I figured that was plenty sharp!

For a couple of days I went around saying "Howdy, pardner" way up in my nose like I heard Dick Sheridan do in the movies, and I got pretty good at it. Then Nancy came home one afternoon and told us she'd met Mr. Sheridan, and that was when I got my big idea, and I convinced her she ought to invite him to our house for dinner. If I could listen to him talk all evening and imitate him, how could I lose the contest?

As it turned out, I hardly got to listen to him at all. Nancy and Dick Sheridan sat on the love-seat, and he whispered, "You know, you're a right purty gal, Miss Nancy."

And I said it after him, trying to sound just like he did. I said, "You know, you're a right purty gal, Miss Nancy."

And then Nancy jumped up, all excited, and said, "Joey, will you get out of here and leave Mr. Sheridan and me alone?"

I went out on the front porch, and there was Phil Hayworth sitting in the swing. He was burned to the ground. Phil and Nancy sort of have an understanding, you know.

"Bottom button, I could tear you limb from limb!" he said. "You've got to get that Class B cowboy out of here!"

Well, I'm very fond of Phil, and I approve of his interest in my sister, and some day I hope to find time to arrange their marriage—but, jeepers, how could I ask a great movie star to leave the house? And how could I keep him from coming back the next night? Which he did...And the next night after that.

Pretty soon he started bringing his guitar, and he and Nancy'd sit there on the love-seat together, and he'd keep singing the same tune over and over. It went like this:

I'd go out in the kitchen, and Mother and Dad and Phil'd be huddled out there around the table, holding their hands over their ears—and when they'd see me, a gleam would come into their eyes that I didn't like. I began to think maybe I'd better do something about getting rid of Mr. Sheridan before he became a member of the Brewster family.

Well, the big impersonation contest was to come off that Saturday afternoon at the Bijou. All the kids in town were there, and they were all talking through their noses, but they didn't sound very much like Dick Sheridan. I figured I wouldn't have much trouble winning the contest, so I wasn't nervous at all when I got up on the stage. Well, hardly at all.

Mr. Sheridan himself was the judge, and I could see him sitting up in a box, grinning and looking sort of conceited and puffed up like a turkey. And I decided I sure didn't want him for a brother-in-law. And then, all of a sudden, I got my big idea! I got it standing there on the stage—and, jeepers, it was plenty sharp!

Nancy was waiting for me when I got home that afternoon. She asked me if I won the contest. I said, "Nope, I didn't," but before I could get any further, the front door flew open and Dick Sheridan rushed in bellowing like a bull.

"Where is he?" he hollered. "Where is that ornery little polecat?"

"Who do you mean?" Nancy asked.

"That brother of yours! I'm goin' to tan his hide for him!"

"Oh, no you're not!" Nancy told him, and she was plenty mad. "And you're not going to call him a polecat, either! Now get out of here, and don't come back!"

Then I knew everything was going to be all right, and there wouldn't be any more coyotes howling in the living-room, and the family could come out of the kitchen.

It wasn't till that evening that Nancy found out what I'd done. Phil had been at the Bijou in the afternoon, and he told her how I had handled the situation.

"Joey's take-off was the funniest thing I ever saw!" he said. "It wasn't an impersonation—it was a burlesque. And was it brutal! After that, every time Sheridan opened his mouth the audience howled!"

Nancy turned to me. "Joey, you did it on purpose, didn't you? You did it for me. You threw away the contest just for my sake."

"Well," I told her, "a brother has to make sacrifices for his sister."

"Just to show how much we appreciate what you did," Phil said, "Nancy and I'll take you out with us tonight. We'll go any place you say. What shall it be?"

"That's a swell idea!" Nancy said. "Where'll we go, Joey?"

I thought it over, and then I said, "Well, I never did get to see Dick Sheridan in 'The Lone Wolf of the Panhandle.' Let's go there."

We went, too. I thought it was a good show myself, but Nancy and Phil didn't seem to enjoy it.

This merry short short story of Joey Brewster was written by Pauline Hopkins, the creator and author of "That Brewster Boy," heard on CBS Fridays at 9:30 p.m. EWT, sponsored by Quaker Oats in behalf of their product, Sparkies.

In Their Own Inimitable Manner, Amos 'n' Andy Aid in America's War Efforts

STARTING nation-wide fads is an old story for Amos 'n' Andy (Freeman Gosden and Charles Correll), but starting trends to help in America's present all-out war effort was something new to the famous pair. However, that didn't feaze the veteran duo, for they swung into it with their usual zest, started on a regular crusade to aid, conserve, and increase war-production plans via their radio show.

Before their program which featured the work of the Red Cross, they both registered for a primary course on first aid in order to give authenticity to their broadcast about women in Red Cross.

Because we believe that the simple general directions Amos 'n' Andy received in their primary first-aid work will interest readers who haven't taken the course, we publish them here:

1.—Keep the patient lying down in a comfortable position. 2.—Look for hemorrhage, stoppage of breathing, wounds, burns, fractures, dislocations, evidence of poison, etc. Be sure all injuries are found. Points in italics should be cared for first. 3.—Keep the patient warm. 4.—Keep cool, and do not be rushed into moving the injured person. 5.—Never give an unconscious person water or other liquid. 6.—Keep onlookers away from the injured person. 7.—Cheer patient in every way possible, and allay his fears. 8.—Avoid letting injured person see his own injury, and be sure nothing is done that will cause further injury. 9.—If possible, send some one to call an ambulance and a physician. In doing this, be sure to give: (a) Location of the injured person. (b) Nature, cause and probable extent of the injuries, and the supplies available at the scene of the accident. (c) What first aid is being given. This information may save a life!

DISNEY TO FILM "VICTORY THROUGH AIR POWER" BASED ON SEVERSKY'S BOOK

Michele Morgan Admirer Gets Into Trouble; Uncle Sam May Be Calling Mickey Rooney Soon; Dorothy Lamour Proves Conclusively She Is Not on Manhunt!

By EVANS PLUMMER

VICTORY Through Air Power," the remarkably significant book by Major Alexander P. de Seversky, will be Walt Disney's next ambitious cartoon film undertaking for RKO release. As radical himself in film trends as is Seversky, who takes up the now-proved but originally ridiculed theorem of airpower where the martyred Billy Mitchell left off, Disney has rights to the book which, he told your reporter aboard the Super Chief en route from Chicago to Hollywood, is a dream he seeks to set forth on celluloid. Disney, his studio hard at work on cartoon war-training films, has assigned every available artist to the new production with the hope that he may have it ready for fall release. Major Seversky's theme is that of advocacy of an overwhelming U. S. Air Force, and how it will beat the Axis traitors and power drunkards when the United Nations are able to turn their full strength on the cities of Germany and Japan. Long-range bombers from American bases, declares the major, can wipe out Japan, and this Disney will prove, too, in his film, which will be theatrical, yet point the facts of the Seversky book . . .

Esther Williams, the Billy Rose San Francisco Aquacade star and national swimming champ for two years, has been selected as Mickey Rooney's leading lady, or flame, in "Andy Hardy's Last Fling." Well may this film be the Mick's last fling, too, for the chances are that Uncle Sam will be calling upon Rooney for his services before he is able to start another picture. Esther is reported to be cast as a psychological vamp—whatever new variation that may be—but it still looks like Theda Bara from where we sit whether or not Esther adorns herself with less clothes and more perfume and mascara. Mickey presented Esther with a big bouquet of roses and a card of good-luck wishes, and after one day's shooting M-G-M decided to test Miss Williams for the native girl heroine in "Pearls of the South Seas" . . . And whatever happened to Mrs. Mickey Rooney? Did she get back home from her ailing mother yet? . . .

The war has caused Hollywood set-making technicians and propmen to use their heads more and more. Out to save every sliver of strategic material for Uncle Sam's battle-forces, they have done miracles during the past few months and are performing new ones every day. Some of their devices are so clever, in fact, that they are being adopted as the solutions to national defense-housing problems. Cotton gloves used in handling films are made reversible and last twice as long. Alcohol, needed for explosives, has been eliminated from paints and sizing. Scripts, once double-spaced, are now single-spaced to use half the paper. Things that look like wood are made of plaster—common ordinary gypsum—and sets are being used over and over to cut use of materials. All studios have met or bettered the requested twenty-five-percent less use of rubber-tired and gasoline-propelled vehicles, and far-away locations trips, demanding costly transportation, are out. Some of the substitutes include wood trusses for steel, wood railings for iron, iron hardware for brass and bronze, terra-cotta partitions for steel or plywood, concrete water or storage tanks for steel . . . Yes, Hollywood is doing it with "mirrors" and setting a swell example for all patriotic Americans! . . .

Another newcomer to town is a girl who first came here four and a half years ago but was then considered too young (fifteen). She had ten years of radio-acting laurels to her credit, but the film moguls said, "Come back later." Now she is doing just that. Her name is Toni Gilman, daughter of veteran Chicago radio-producer and concert violinist Harry Gilman, and now protegee of Paramount's singing star Mary Martin. Toni was a co-winner of a contest that Mary sponsored last year in New York and was given a scholarship to study music with Mary Martin's coach, Helen Cahoon. Her contest victory won for Toni a contract to do the Broadway play "The Walking Gentleman," and now Albert de Courville, famous European picture-director, has signed Toni to appear in a principal role in a film he is to make for United Artists. Here in Hollywood again, Miss Gilman, now a ripe nineteen, will continue her singing studies with Miss Martin's Hollywood coach, Dr. Stetson Humphries . . .

Shirley, there is no other girl in his life—not even Sheila Ryan. Now thirty years old, Payne wanted to get into the air force but was too old by present standards, although he has over three hundred hours of air-piloting to his credit. So after his next picture, which he'd like to complete to build an after-the-war nest-egg, don't be surprised if John enlists in the United States Marines. Meantime, Payne's ex-wife, Anne Shirley, has been cast as the feminine lead opposite Randolph Scott and Pat O'Brien in RKO's "Bombardier." Her role calls for her to be a cynical, worldly wise young heiress who buys a flying-field to keep her brother out of the draft!

Another service-joiner is John Shelton, who, with his secretary, Red Doff, announces that as soon as he returns from his war-bond-selling tour he will enter an officers' training-school. If all the young leading men keep going to war, there will be nothing left but hisses for those who are left on the screen . . .

A new facet of generosity, and certainly an indication that she isn't on a manhunt, was shown recently in Washington, D. C., by bond-selling Dorothy Lamour. Dotty was accompanied on the trip by companion Kay Coghlan, fan-magazine contact for the Paramount lot and a tall, litesome brunette colleen. At the capital Miss Lamour was met by a friend, an industrialist named Edward Whitehead, who, when he saw screen star and companion together, had eyes only for Miss Coghlan. In two weeks' time, he and Kay have become engaged, and already he has made a flying trip to Hollywood to visit her!

Love is a wonderful thing, indeed. And so thought First Class Seaman John McIlnerney until it landed him kerplunk in the Navy brig for ten days. He has been RKO star Michele Morgan's most ardent fan for the past year. He has written her regularly three times a week, and she always has answered his letters . . . And so he didn't think it was wrong to take some paint one recent day and obliterate the name of his assigned torpedo boat from its bow and substitute the to-him-more-beautiful name: MICHELE MORGAN. Anyhow, the commanding officer of the boat thought otherwise, and likewise that defacing Government property was a serious offense, so John landed in the brig.

ANN SHERIDAN and Jack Carson as they appear in "Wings for the Eagle" roles, a Warner Bros.-First National war theme film

MOVIE REVIEW

"Wings for the Eagle"

Cast: Ann Sheridan, Dennis Morgan, Jack Carson, George Tobias, Russell Arms, Don DeFore, et al. A Warner Brothers picture produced by Robert Lord and directed by Lloyd Bacon; from an original screen play by Byron Morgan and B. H. Orkow.

Type of Picture: One of the first melodramas, with a romance note, dealing with the men and women behind the planes—the workers in the nation's aircraft factories. "Joe Smith, American" was the first. This one, "Wings for the Eagle," will leave a lump in your throat, too.

This Is the Story: Dennis Morgan bums his way to Lockheed to get a defense job so as to avoid the draft; in Burbank he looks up his pal, Jack Carson, ex-football-clipping collector, who is still slaphappy over the pigskin and letting his wife, Ann Sheridan, do most of the worrying over keeping the wolf from the door. Jack is studying a fake correspondence-school course so that he can be an "executive." None of those small jobs for Jack, no, sir. Meantime, Morgan goes to the employment office and lands a job in the tool-room with Russ Arms, son of George Tobias, who is a revered old foreman who always gets his quota out ahead of time. Ann gets tired of Carson's stalling, leaves him and gets herself a job—also at Lockheed, and now Morgan really goes to work on her to widen the breach and win her away from the stodgy Jack. Meantime, Pop Tobias, because he has not ever bothered to take out his final citizenship papers, has to leave the factory on orders of the FBI until he does, and the plot thickens. All threads lead up to a very dramatic finish, and—well, Dennis Morgan sure looks swell in an air-force cadet's uniform!

Verdict: A great picture for everybody, and particularly defense-factory workers to see. It also gives America its first glimpse actually inside the great Lockheed plane-plant at Burbank, Calif., without revealing to the Axis the great production of aircraft that goes on there. Take the family—and they'll buy more war bonds the next day!

WASHINGTON

By LT. COL. CURTIS MITCHELL

This is everyone's war and certainly this town proves it. I turned a corner the other day and ran into Clark Gable accompanied by a whole platoon of aviation officers. He is being commissioned, will be trained immediately and placed in an important job in the expanding air forces. I lunched today in a medium-price grill. Across the way was Melvyn Douglas.

Hollywood's leading men want to fight, too. Those who have come to Washington are getting reams of publicity, most of which they sincerely dislike. Those who don't come to Washington, or many of them, deserve just as much credit. For in staying on their jobs they do what is just as important in many respects as jumping into a uniform. They serve by maintaining our morale through entertainment.

There can be no doubt that a nation needs relaxation, and that the people who make up a nation need an emotional surge once in a while to level out their peaks and valleys of unhappiness or elation. It is my belief that the movies provide that leveler better than any other mass entertainment.

I went to a night baseball game in Cleveland the other evening. Twenty-five thousand people saw a bang-up contest which went through the innings with the teams separated by just one run. Cleveland won by one run. DiMaggio the Great fanned three times. The tension which popped when the Yankee slugger missed the last strike was like a breath of clean air blowing through every hot and tired mind in that stadium. In war-times many minds are hot and tired.

The screen does the same thing but in a more thorough way. It is impossible to brood when the brain has been swept into a consideration of the plight of a beautiful girl who is being pursued by the villain. This may be a banal statement, but I believe that motion pictures can contribute more to public sanity and mental balance during this emergency than any other single force. Others in the Government hold similar views.

Which is why I believe that many a male star in Hollywood is yearning for a soldier's life to which he will never succeed, because someone older and wiser has told him that he has another job to perform. Don't blame too hastily any young leading man you see on the screen whom you think would make a better soldier. The chances are he is being a good soldier right where he is, working under orders to stay before the public and not before a battle-line . . .

Lieutenant Gene Raymond, recently a Hollywood actor and song-writer of considerable ability, is now at a secret American base overseas. While he fights for Uncle Sam, his wife, who is Jeanette MacDonald, will sing for the benefit of the Army Emergency Relief Fund in a concert tour which will start in about six weeks. Its last stop will be in Washington before a gala audience . . .

I cannot resist calling to your attention again the "Army Hour," heard Sunday afternoon on the NBC network. It leaps with gigantic strides from one hemisphere to another, from one camp to another. Any listener who knows radio should be proud of the work of the men who produce this program. The initiated know how difficult it is to prepare a show which hurdles space a dozen times yet rolls smoothly to a climax without drags and pauses . . .

Speaking of million-dollar movies, the Army Emergency Relief Fund will profit by that much when Irving Berlin's "This Is the Army" is turned into celluloid. The stage show opened July 4 on Broadway. Two occupants of front row seats were Kate Smith and Ted Collins. Kate paid $10,000 for those two seats.

Lieutenant Jimmy Stewart came down Constitution Avenue one afternoon just as the War Department offices closed for the day. Officers of higher rank poured along the sidewalk and Jimmy saluted thirty times a minute until he got inside the Munitions Building. "Never again," sighed Jimmy. "They ought to change the name of Constitution Avenue to Pump Handle Row." Now everyone calls the street before the War Department Pump Handle Row.

At this point Cashman saw "red," went to the phone and proceeded to tell off the hotel management. He was informed the laundry was for Kyser and his men and was delivered to his room on Kay's instructions. Ed was to take the twenty-three bundles of stuff and things with him when he went to the Marine base at Quantico, Virginia, from where Kyser was to do his broadcast. If you think sugar-rationing and threatened coffeeless, cocoaless and tealeess days are tough, you should be a German and have nothing but "ersatz" (substitute and synthetic) food for a week or two. Just to show the newspapermen of Hollywood how Germans have to eat, Harry W. Flannery, last CBS Berlin correspondent, now doing a news commentary from here, proposes to provide a German ersatz luncheon shortly—and follow it up with a few staple and solid good American dishes so no one present will starve! He has only one trouble holding up his luncheon—the obtaining of the necessary ersatz food materials. It seems that Americans have only real food, the spoiled brats. Flannery's new book, "Assignment to Berlin" is now on the book-stalls and going like hot cakes . . .

A chance meeting last week in the RKO-Radio lot commissary of Jim and Marian Jordan (Fibber McGee and Molly) and Tim Ryan recalled to the former an incident of seventeen years ago that sounds very amusing now. Fibber, in 1925, took his first radio job in Chicago. He and Molly were also playing vaudeville, because radio paid little, if anything, so they billed themselves as a "radio act." Tim Ryan, with

For the part, Oscar Brown, a sixteen-year-old Negro high-school student, was chosen. The boy's father is a Chicago lawyer and manager of the Ida B. Wells housing project for Negro families. Oscar rates as a good scholar at Chicago's Englewood High School.

And a new sequence in CBS' "Romance of Helen Trent" has Nettie Saunders in a major role. She was selected for the part because her portrayals are realistic characterizations which do credit to her people. In "Helen Trent" she has the role of Maudie Walters, a Negro seamstress with two children. The sequence recognizes the stake which the Negro people have in the war effort and the significant part they are playing and can play in winning victory . . .

SOPRANO EILEEN FARRELL GUEST OF CBS BROADCASTING SYMPHONY, SUN.

Goldman Band Presents Program of Victor Herbert Music, Monday; Egon Petri Plays Masterpieces of Classic and Contemporary Composers, Sun.

By ROBERT BAGAR

New York World-Telegram Music Critic and Associate Program Annotator for Philharmonic-Symphony Society of New York

THE American singer is coming into his own—but en masse. The opportunities now presented to native talents have never before been equaled, thanks to the war which has practically thrown this country back on its own vocal resources. Of course, certain singers of American birth have carved out distinguished careers for themselves. The star-studded opera and concert rosters will show that to be true. But our representatives in the field have been few compared to the hordes of foreign importations.

Whatever the reasons for that—and they have had to do principally, one should guess, with lack of proper training—the idea that America has not had as good material as other countries is ridiculous in the extreme. Something like real system has come into the picture. Youngsters now know that to attain the blessed vocal state means hard work, endless work, given natural gifts.

All of which is by way of introduction to the fact that in Eileen Farrell, 22-year-old soprano, the Columbia Broadcasting System has one of the most promising young artists to have come along in many a day. Miss Farrell's voice is of the pure dramatic timbre. It is big and luscious and warm. It is an operatic voice in the truest sense, rich in quality, of fine texture throughout its lengthy range.

There are in it glints of color that remind one of certain tones in Rosa Ponselle's scale. On the whole, it is the Kirsten Flagstad, Helen Traubel type of voice, substantial and utterly musical.

Miss Farrell has been a regular member of the CBS staff for a little over three months. She has been in New York only three years, where she is working with Merle Alcock, long a Metropolitan Opera luminary.

Some time ago the singer made a routine audition for CBS. Nothing happened for a while, but James Fasset, assistant director of music for the company, was going through these voice tests when he came upon Miss Farrell's. Attracted by her unusually fine voice, he suggested that she be made a member of the staff.

She appears regularly on the network now, but her big moment comes on July 12, when she sings the Liebestod from Wagner's "Tristan and Isolde" with the Columbia Broadcasting Symphony under Howard Barlow's direction. The Liebestod, if you need to be informed, is one of the most taxing soprano sequences in all opera.

A handsome, dark-eyed, dark-haired girl of heroic proportions, yet completely feminine, Miss Farrell told us that her big ambition is grand opera.

She related that she was born in Willimantic, Conn., and brought up in Woonsocket, R. I. Her father was a singer and her mother a pianist and organist. The first piano lessons Miss Farrell received were given her by her mother, who also occasionally coached her when she was scheduled to sing at a church affair. Actually the choir was her vocal cradle.

In all the time she has been in New York, Miss Farrell has been only twice to the Metropolitan. She hasn't had much time to go, with all the work she must do—voice lessons twice a day, acting lessons, learning roles, practise at home, and so on. At CBS she is liked by everybody because of her carefree attitude and naturalness.

As Eileen Farrell, she sings on radio programs of serious and semiserious music. But she can turn out a jive chorus, too, and when she does that for CBS she appears under the name of Dimples Lunceford.

If Miss Farrell finally makes the Metropolitan grade—and she won't even make the attempt until she feels ready for it—the least surprised person in the world will be this writer. From choir singer to grand opera—it's been done before.

(Eileen Farrell sings the Liebestod from "Tristan and Isolde" with the Columbia Broadcasting Symphony over CBS Sunday, July 12.)

The Goldman Band

One of the major symphonic band organizations of our time is the Goldman Band, conductor Edwin Franko Goldman, which gives concerts on alternate nights at Central Park, New York, and Prospect Park, Brooklyn. Mr. Goldman, whose organization this year celebrates its silver jubilee, has received many honors for the valuable contribution he has made to musical enjoyment.

His programs are always judiciously put together. Novelties frequently appear on them and every so often he presents a whole evening of music by one composer. On the thirteenth, via the Blue Network, his list brings forward compositions of Victor Herbert.

(The Goldman Band, conducted by Edwin Franko Goldman, offers a program of Victor Herbert compositions over the Blue Network Monday, July 13.)

A Piano Titan

If you were to mention the names of the greatest living pianists you could scarcely do so without including Egon Petri, brilliant Busoni pupil, who recently began a new series of events for CBS. Mr. Petri is a pianist's pianist,

A "THANK YOU" for her series (Thurs., CBS) saluting war-workers filling orders ahead of schedule is delivered to Vera Barton by Coast Guard Ensign Bob Flouton one of those rare individuals whose extraordinary attainments bring praise even from competitors. In this series he will play masterpieces of classic and contemporary composers.

The son of a noted Dutch violinist, Mr. Petri was brought up in a household frequently visited by such celebrities as Clara Schumann, Brahms and Grieg. In 1902 he made his concert debut after being advised to take up the career of pianist by Busoni and Paderewski.

He is a retiring, rather shy person, but, as one of his contemporaries once remarked, "he talks very articulately at the piano."

(Egon Petri, concert pianist, may be heard Sunday, July 12, over CBS.)

Bandleader Cab Calloway's scat-singing goes on

THE career of one of our best-known dance-band maestros might reasonably be called "The Strange Case of Cab Calloway." Statistics show that the popularity span of any star in the entertainment heavens averages ten years. In five years said star attains the peak of his renown, the next five occupying the gradual fade-out period. Calloway, however, has been at the zenith for eleven years and he is currently enjoying his greatest popularity.

When he first streaked across the theatrical firmament, Calloway's Afro-Tin Pan Alley hi-de-ho-ings were what the public wanted. They paid little heed to the playing of the orchestra, being content to listen to his rhythmic rantings exclusively. This proved ideal for eight solid years.

Three years ago his Royal Highness of Hi-De-Ho, as he is known by his many devoted subjects, broke up the band, retaining only one man of the original forces. That was the pianist, Benny Payne. He engaged fifteen new men, all of them ace performers, plus a battery of big-time arrangers headed by Buster Harding.

The scat-singing by the leader goes on, but that isn't the only reason audiences enthuse. There is now a completely equipped organization, one that can trade riff for riff or legato for legato with the best of them, an organization whose playing is not the meager background but the supplement to his own contribution.

Cabell—a family name—Calloway was born in Rochester, N. Y., in 1907. When he was six the family moved to Baltimore, where the father, a lawyer, hopefully hung out his shingle. Cab went through high school and he took voice lessons, looking toward a future as a concert artist.

From Baltimore the family moved to Chicago, when finances needed a transfusion, and there Cab got his opportunity to try out several pet theories having to do with singing. They were successful. Furthermore he began to display an unusual interest in the drums.

From there on, what with a minor squall here and there, it was clear sailing. His first band was a flop. His second, however, caught on, which meant an engagement at New York's Cotton Club and world fame.

(Cab Calloway's orchestra may be heard Tuesdays on the Blue Network.)

BRITT AIRED TO ISLANDS . . . EUROPE HEARS "COUNTER SPY" DRAMAS

Goebbels Soft-Pedals Cannibal Tales for Intelligent Audiences;
Net Shows Translated to Spanish; An Aussie Meets the A. E. F.

"Counter Spy" on Short Waves

THE spectacular adventures of David Harding, who upsets the plots of enemy spies in the Blue Network's "Counter Spy" series, are being short-waved by NBC International, Wednesdays from 10:00 to 10:30 a.m. EWT, over WRCA (15.15), WNBI (17.78), WBOS (15.21). In these programs, which are produced by Phillips H. Lord, action centers around a daring young American who has a special commission with the U. S. Government and the assignment of out-witting professional spies at their own game.

Britt Broadcasts for Service Men

Jim Britt, popular baseball announcer and commentator and head of the Yankee Network's sports department, is now broadcasting to service men in the off-shore bases of the entire Western Hemisphere nightly except Saturdays and Sundays from 7:50 to 8:00 p.m. EWT over Boston station WRUL (11.73, 9.70, 6.04). Included in the listening area will be men in such spots as Newfoundland, Greenland, Bermuda, Trinidad, Panama, British Guiana and other parts of South America.

Network Shows Go Spanish

Spanish adaptations of the following outstanding American network shows are beamed to Latin America over NBC International stations WRCA-WNBI: "The March of Time"; "Cavalcade of America"; "Plays for Americans"; "This Is War"; "Salute to Heroes"; thrice weekly news analysis by Alejandro Sux, South American newspaperman and author; "Americans All."

Day With the A. E. F. in Australia

Sergeant Feldman, an Australian journalist, after spending a day with United States troops "somewhere in Australia," broadcast the following comments over the Melbourne short-wave station: "I rode out to an American troop encampment in an Army truck with Pat McGill and George Reader, both Yankee soldiers. After being bounced along over rough country roads we came to the camp. The first thing that struck me were the American tents. They were 'honeys,' large and roomy. The men have comfortable sleeping-bags with two extra blankets each. The soldiers greeted my clothes with a hearty round of chuckles. You see, I was wearing shorts, which is the regulation summer outfit for Aussie troops. They admitted, however, that they looked cool. Once in the camp I was bombarded with questions of every sort: about Australian slang, weather, clothes. The soldiers were grumbling about having mutton so much. Said it smelled terrible when cooking; longed for good old American roast beef. The next morning we tumbled out of bed at 5:45 a.m. for roll call; then the men went down to the stream to wash their faces and hands. By 6:00 a.m. we were sitting down to steaming piles of wheat cakes washed down with hot coffee. At 7:30 a.m. the company assembled in full battle dress ready for field drills. We rattled along over more rough roads until the appointed place for the drills had been reached. Here company and regimental headquarters were quickly set up and the drills got under way. At noon piping hot food in ample quantities was served by traveling kitchens. After more drills the troops were taken back to camp over the roughest route possible, so that the men could be toughened up. I felt perfectly at home with the American troops during my stay. I talked their language, and they talked mine. We understood each other. We know these soldiers will fight for us to the last man, for they are our 'blood brothers.'"

Goebbels' Cannibal Stories

Each Saturday evening at 9:45 p.m. EWT, W. A. Sinclair of the BBC staff in London broadcasts his analysis of Axis propaganda. Recently he spoke as follows:

"The propaganda the Nazis send to the larger countries of the world is often queer enough. The propaganda they send to people whom they choose to regard as very stupid, or very provincial, is queerer still. Recently the Dutch paper Nieuwsblad van het Noorden reported a small Nazi party meeting the previous day at which some Nazi had been giving an account of his experiences in Russia. He had said, 'Cannibalism occurs very often among our opponents.' And then he went on—apparently expecting this particular audience to believe him—'Once we saw two Russian colonels eating their orderly.' This grotesque story was told only at a small meeting of Dutch Nazis, who are, we know, of a very inferior type, both in intelligence and otherwise. Perhaps they believed it. But the Nazi Propaganda Ministry had more sense than to attempt to broadcast this absurd story to wider audiences.

"For propaganda to audiences they consider somewhat less ignorant and stupid the Nazis have been using these accusations of cannibalism but in a slightly more cautious way. Here is what they broadcast on another occasion. 'In some sectors (Russian) government officials have . . . concentrated on a campaign against commercial exploitation of demands for human flesh by large gangs of well-organized cannibal butchers.' This is not quite as ridiculous as two colonels sitting down to eat their orderly, though it is ridiculous enough.

"Then for audiences whom they consider less stupid than the preceding, the Nazis have asserted that cannibalism does occur in Russia, but they have cut out from their stories all the more absurd details. And finally, for their most intelligent audiences, they have not made any serious attempt to use accusations of cannibalism as a propaganda theme at all.

"The Nazis appear to think of the countries they broadcast to as being ranked in an order of stupidity, or at any rate in an order of childishness of mind, and they broadcast to them on carefully planned levels of intelligence. According to the Nazis own documents showing how they rank us all in descending order of stupidity we find that the group the Nazis seem to regard as least stupid consists of the British, the Scandinavians, the Dutch in Holland, the Americans and Canadians, the Australians and the New Zealanders. Then next comes a group of Central European peoples whom the Nazis talk to on the assumption that they are comparatively stupid and ignorant. Then next come most of the Balkan peoples, whom the Nazis regard as stupider still. And then at the bottom of the scale come those whom the Nazis seem to think of as not having adult minds at all. This group consists of certain colored peoples, the Bulgarians, and the Afrikaans-speaking South Africans."

Hopper's Gifts to the Army

David (Spec) McClure, editorial assistant to Hedda Hopper, still continues to follow in the footsteps of his predecessor on the Hopper staff, Fred Banker. McClure took over Banker's job when the latter joined the Army as a private just a year ago. When Lieut. Banker, fresh from officers' training school, stopped in Hollywood recently on his way to a West Coast post, McClure was making his farewells before going into the Army—and he, too, hopes to win a commission.

Not Measles—But!

That wasn't a sudden measles epidemic that broke out in James Melton's home during the week-end party at his Connecticut home, even if the noted tenor and his guests did look as speckled as the proverbial plover's eggs on Sunday.

Melton, the envied possessor of several steam-driven motorcars—part of his famous collection of vintage automobiles—had taken his guests for a sightseeing tour of the countryside in his 1910 Stanley Steamer, learning too late that a picturesque side road he was following was partially tar-coated. Before stopping short, Jim and his passengers were liberally shocked with the pitch, which sprayed suddenly over the low—1910 style—windshield. A session of mopping faces and arms with cleaning-fluid and borax soap was necessary before the carful of people dared go home!

In His Element

The vast audience which listens to George Hicks' "Men of the Sea," broadcast over the Blue Network every week-day, during which he interviews Navy men and merchant marine men, may be interested in learning that Hicks has traveled many thousands of miles below, on and above the sea.

As a youth, the Blue waterfront reporter went to sea and sailed on an Arctic expedition.
He traveled 7,000 miles, mostly on water, to make a brief broadcast of the solar eclipse from Canton Island in the South Seas, in 1937.
He flew to Europe and back to record the flight of the new Atlantic Clipper, and covered the maiden voyage of the Normandie. On two occasions he traveled under-water with a Navy submarine as part of his unusual assignments.

More August Brides

The painstaking research staff in the employ of Bob Hawk, conductor of the "How'm I Doin'?" program, has discovered that the month of June is definitely not the month in which most nuptial knots are tied. According to Hawk's staff it is August, no less. February is the least popular month.

RUTH BAILEY

Ruth's father was afraid she would become an actress. Doug Fairbanks, Sr., told her she had the qualities of a great actress. The fears and hopes of these men have been fully realized, for Ruth Bailey has won top honors for her dramatic ability. Born in Pittsburgh in 1913, Ruth studied the dance and played in school dramatics. After graduation from Vassar she took to the stage in Cleveland and Pasadena. Movie shorts and Fairbanks' praise followed. In 1934 Ruth auditioned for radio and was soon given a part in NBC's "Little Orphan Annie" series. Her later parts read like a roster of Chicago-produced serials. At present she is heard as Rose Kransky in "The Guiding Light" and Meredith Jones in "Arnold Grimm's Daughter," both on NBC.

A general idea of what you have to do before you can become a radio director can be gleaned in the career of Lindsay MacHarrie, director of the "Blue Theater Players." During his thirteen years in radio, MacHarrie has created, written and directed the following types of radio programs: Dramatic, historic, variety, popular music, classical and semi-classical music, quiz, audience participation, "on the spot" special events, westerns, news dramatization, educational, serials, children's programs. In addition, he has supervised publicity, promotion, talent, writers' contracts, staff artists and orchestras.

Blue's "Shock Company"

Around the straw-hat circuits they are known as stock companies. Around the Blue Network studios in Radio City, however, they have another name for it—shock company.

The "shock company" is the hardy band of intrepids who form the nucleus of the weekly cast of the Blue's Sunday night "Inner Sanctum Mystery" series, produced and directed by fearless Hi Brown.

Bulwarks of the "Sanctum's" banshee brigade are lovely Betty Winkler, Santos Ortega and Frank Behrens. Talented all, the "terrible trio" are heard in a wide variety of roles, sometimes as stars and others as chief supporting players.

Their extreme versatility makes Brown's job of casting one of the easiest in all radio.

SWING SHIFT LOG

This log lists stations broadcasting for two hours or more after midnight. It is presented for the use of war industry workers who often search for radio entertainment during the early morning hours. Time shown is Eastern War Time.

Table with columns: Call Letters, Kilo-cycles, Location, On The Air. Lists various radio stations and their broadcast schedules.

Everybody Writes

Picking good scripts from the bad, from the scores which arrive daily at the Blue Network script department, is like sifting wheat from chaff, according to Ron Ferguson, chief of the script division. Strangely enough, he points out, the least acceptable come from well-known fiction-writers who fail to understand the production problems of radio, and hence fail to meet its requirements. Ferguson is a veteran magazine writer and has authored a number of successful motion-picture scenarios.

How Are Crops, Anne?

Anne Seymour, who plays the title role of Mary Marlin in the popular daily serial, has added the problem of agriculture to those of the radio heroine. At her little farm up in the Connecticut hills, Anne has planted three gardens—one for the rabbits, one for the Mexican beetles and one for herself. So far the only "victory" connected with the gardens has gone to the wild creatures.

For Good Luck

Dinah Shore has only one superstition about radio, but she has not broken that one since her first broadcast. Five seconds before the red light flashes the signal to start her Friday night song programs, she crosses the two first fingers of each hand ("just for luck," says Dinah) and keeps them tightly clenched until she sings her first note.

Doubling in Brass

Back in the good old days, when the average American's idea of tops in drama was the tent-show which came around once a year, the actor who could "double in brass" was considered a valuable man to have around.

Originally the term referred to an actor who could play an instrument in the pit band too, thus giving the management two men's work for one man's salary and traveling expenses. Then along came some really versatile fellows—or perhaps they were gradually made so by some stock company impresarios who weren't just acting when they did the Simon Legree role in "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

Whatever the cause, before long, in order to qualify as a "doubler in brass," a man had to be able to act, do a between-the-acts specialty, play in the pit band, drive a team of horses, round up assorted properties on short notice, work the stage lights, set up scenery, drive tent stakes, and lend a hand on the rope that hauled Little Eva up to her heavenly abode.

Radio today has its own "doublers in brass," such as the many-voiced fellows heard on those Sunday night "Inner Sanctum Mysteries" sessions. Hi Brown, producer of the series, frequently uses Frank Behrens, Santos Ortega or other equally talented actors in as many as three parts on a single show. They are so versatile that they can even talk to themselves and sound like a whole crowd of people!

There are several good reasons for Brown's policy of using actors who can double. First of all, he gets better characterization, because the actors he chooses are top-flight men. Brown casts each role individually. It just happens that most of the time, Behrens, Ortega and the others like them are the best men available for the particular parts they are assigned. They are jacks of all dialects and masters of all.

Then, too, if Brown cast a different actor for each part, he would have a studio full of actors getting in each other's way. By using his "doublers in brass" he uses half as many, streamlining his production problems and getting the show across to the public in the most efficient way possible.

Misplaced Beauty

A booking agent got Horace Heidt to audition a girl singer recently. When she was through Heidt said he couldn't use her. "But," protested the agent, "I thought you said she sang beautifully." "No," corrected Heidt, "I said she was a beautiful singer."

His Animal Spirit

Acting talking horse for the Jim Backus radio program isn't the first time actor Art Elmer has been an animal character. He buzzed the role of "Alf," the all-American fly in a "Columbia Workshop" show. A few months ago on "Columbia's School of the Air," Elmer was cast as a western pig. And in a drama class, taught by Clifford Odets, he had to act the part of a horse. So he finds himself right at home as "Ambrose," the talkative horse of the Backus show.

Encored Encores

An encore is an encore, but Phil Spitalny and his "Hour of Charm" all-girl orchestra and choir set some sort of record along those lines, in a recent engagement at Camp Lee. Having exhausted their list of encore numbers, they had no other music to offer the servicemen. Finally, Maestro Spitalny jokingly suggested that there was nothing left to do but go through the entire show again, from the beginning. The soldiers took him up on it!

ROAD of LIFE

Continue the Thrilling Story of Dr. Jim Brent as Events Take a Strange Turn at City Hospital

PART 2 The tense story of the radio program "Road of Life," fictionized by Wiley Maloney, is broadcast Monday through Friday over NBC at 11 a.m. EWT, 10 CWT, 9 MWT, 3 p.m. PWT, under the sponsorship of Procter and Gamble for Duz. Dr. Jim Brent, ace surgeon at City Hospital, faces a very trying problem. Would the board of directors at City permit him to bring in his own resident physician? Not if Dr. Reginald Parsons, chief of the hospital's staff, had anything to say about it. There was a hostility between Parsons and Jim, and they now faced each other on an issue that meant much to both men. And Jim thought often of Carol Evans. Their marriage plans had failed. Carol couldn't seem to understand that a young doctor must work and fight for recognition. She wanted to see him a successful surgeon, but not an efficient technician without a soul. Sylvia Bertram, a nurse at City Hospital, is Jim's friend and Parsons' divorced wife. She is a beautiful woman of keen judgment, a perfect nurse, but rather too cool and calculating. When Jim is informed that the directors have denied his request, Sylvia urges him to stand up for his rights. She suggests that he threaten to leave City and associate himself with another hospital. But Jim is puzzled. What would happen to Dr. Parsons if he made a real issue of the matter? Could Parsons, one of Chicago's outstanding surgeons, be defeated? Now go on with the story.—The Editors.

THE ideas that Sylvia Bertram implanted in Dr. Jim Brent's mind fermented and grew. He found himself talking to his associate, Dr. Frasier, about them after office hours on a busy afternoon.

"I'm not going to let Parsons step all over me," Jim said. "He has interfered with me for the last time. Naturally, I don't like the idea of leaving City Hospital, but I'm fed up with the chief of staff and his petty, underhanded tactics. This time it's going to be different."

"You mean—?"

"Just this: I'm going to contact another hospital immediately. I know I can get on the staff there—they approached me some time ago. Then I'll send in my resignation to City Hospital's board. They've given me their decision—now I'll give mine."

Dr. Frasier was surprised at the definite stand Jim was taking, but of course he couldn't possibly know whose influence was responsible for that stand—the subtle influence of the day supervisor of nurses who had goaded the young surgeon slyly into taking action. And so it was that Dr. Brent sent his ultimatum to the hospital.

"Let me assure you," read his letter to the board, "that I would dislike very much to sever my connections with an institution as fine and as estimable as City Hospital, but if the board insists on holding to the decision rendered, it will be necessary for me to associate myself with some other hospital that will be willing, due to the amount of business I can bring them, to grant my request for a personal house physician . . . This is the decision I have come to after giving the matter serious thought."

Jim's letter was a bombshell. It was received and read by the chairman of the board, Mr. Johnson. Instantly the chairman called another general meeting. A dead silence followed his reading of Dr. Brent's communication aloud. This was followed by a heated discussion.

The argument simmered down to two conclusions. First, that Dr. Parsons had taken too personal a stand, and, second, that the hospital couldn't afford to lose Brent's business. There seemed only one way to decide.

Despite the standing of Dr. Reginald Parsons as chief of staff of the hospital and as one of the finest surgeons in the field, the board agreed to permit Dr. Brent to have his own resident physician. It was a complete turnabout.

Jim read the board's letter aloud to Sylvia Bertram, and as he read she watched him with an amused expression on her face.

"After going into the matter at further length this evening," Jim read, "we have decided to reverse the decision previously made and this letter will serve as your authority to bring in a man to act in the capacity of personal resident to yourself and associate, Dr. Frasier."

"Well," commented Sylvia when Jim had finished reading, "I must say that's very, very interesting, but not at all surprising—that is, it is not surprising as far as I'm concerned."

Sylvia was a subtle woman. She knew that she must never take credit for the thing Jim had done. She had to make him believe that it was his idea. She told herself she was doing this to give him confidence—to force him to realize the necessity of placing a value on himself.

There were other far-reaching reactions to the decision. Mr. Johnson, the hospital-board chairman, told Dr. Parsons about the reversal of its previous stand and Parsons was hurt and infuriated.

"In spite of the fact that Brent has been associated with this hospital for a very short time when compared to the many years I've been associated here, the board feels that his contribution to this institution has been greater than mine, does it?" he asked.

MR. JOHNSON hardly knew what to say. He had a great respect for Dr. Parsons and tried to tell him as much.

"The two contributions," he said, "are separate and apart. We are necessarily dealing with that made by Dr. Brent, and because it's been an extremely valuable one to us, we unani- mously felt it right and fair to retract our previous decision."

"In that case," said Parsons with suppressed anger, "I'll have to ask you to again reconsider your decision."

"Why, Parsons?"

"Well, Mr. Johnson, you don't think for one minute that I could remain on the staff at City in the present circumstances? It's up to the board to decide whether it's Brent or myself that leaves this institution!"

Parsons stamped out of the room and walked erectly down the corridor.

Another day has given way to evening. A day during which, as always, nurses had ministered faithfully to those entrusted to their care. At City Hospital, the activity of changing shifts was in progress. The large night force was coming on duty to relieve the tired women whose work had once more drawn to a close. Parsons turned in at the third-floor chart-room where Sylvia Bertram had just finished telling Sally Barnett about the hospital

DOC Thompson had difficulty taking the frightened girl's pulse. She was very sick and complained of abdominal pains board's decision. Sylvia left the room as Parsons came in and spoke to Sally. He asked if she'd seen Brent.

"Why, yes," Sally replied, "but it was earlier this evening. I understand the board gave him permission to bring in a man of his own."

"I'm not sure that that's going to materialize," Parsons said gruffly.

"But, Reg—"

"I know the board reversed its decision, but I'm not through with this situation as yet. What I do remains to be seen, but at the moment I'd rather not discuss the matter. I stopped in to see the patient in 314."

Parsons left and Sally noticed the slight droop in his usually erect figure. Parsons need say no more than he had to make Sally realize that he was hurt—hurt deeply. However, she didn't believe it was because an exception in the hospital rules had been made for Dr. Brent. The real reason for his being hurt, she thought, was because Reg felt he was losing ground with the board and suffering lowered prestige.

"As for Jim," she said to herself, "I'll never believe he would have left City if the decision hadn't been reversed. . . . The whole thing's due to Sylvia's influence. Whether Jim knows it or not, the day supervisor has a hold on him. I can't help wondering how far her influence can go—where it's going to lead."

And there were still other reactions. When Parsons told his former wife, Helen Stephenson, about his intention

Feminine Forum

FOR TEETH THAT GLEAM

NOT too infrequently I've overheard some poor "toothachy" individual wish he'd remained toothless from birth and that custom called for a set to fit at each birthday. Well, if you think false uppers and lowers are the boon-to-be, "ask the man who owns one!" He'd undoubtedly trade his pearly whites "on borrowed time" for a God-given set (with repairs) any time.

It's comforting to discover that the men who tinker with test-tubes are hard at work planning the day when whole populations will be protected against tooth-decay merely by treating common drinking-water supplies with chemicals (one powerful enough to eat through glass). Yet common sense reveals the impracticality of waiting for that "great day manana." And if you're of the opinion that healthy teeth are a matter of luck or trick photography, take note, please!

While the texture of your teeth is partially determined by heredity and by pre- and post-pregnancy feedings, actually their contemporary condition reflects your daily diet, cleanliness habits and general state of health. Your dentist will tell you that decay can start from the enamel surface and work its unobstructed way to the nerve center. Yet if your teeth seem to decay a bit more rapidly than usual, it may indeed be that you've inherited fragile "ivories." Don't fret—there are several very definite ways to overcome your physical "weakness."

Begin by having your dentist fill all cavities before they turn to caverns. If decayed teeth are filled immediately an extraction will not be necessary.

And a tooth saved prevents pyorrhea pockets, the eventual respacing of your teeth and shifting of jawline. Don't expect vitamin pills to prevent decay. Dentists find that teeth are worse today than twenty years ago "b. v." (before vitamins, to you)!

Eat bone-building foods instead! Fruits, leafy vegetables and milk products that make for general good health. Coarse, uncooked foods, roughage, bread crusts and vegetable jackets should definitely be included in your diet. By all means avoid excessive starches, sugars and "mush meal" menus. And be sure to brush your teeth after every meal or as often as is necessary to remove particles from 'tween your teeth. Reach way back into bite corners and brush your uppers and lowers, inside and out. Use a downward motion for upper ridge and an upward movement for the lower, remembering to "sweep out" food remnants.

If your teeth are set close together, you'll find dental floss gets between crevices with a minimum of effort and really does a job. And whether you use a ribbon of paste or palm your powder, choose a brush that has soft, non-scratch bristles. A small piece of chamois is swell to keep on hand if you would polish your teeth to a gleaming finish. And don't forget to finger-massage your gums. By pushing fleshy tissue away from the tooth base you're stimulating a beneficial flow of circulation; it's a sure way to keep teeth healthy, free of decay, and delay the eventual receding of your gums.

Mouth-washes on the market are good riddance for a morning-mouth hangover. And if you're at all halitosis-conscious, a quick gargle will assure a fragrant breath. Those "Are You an Offender?" ads you've laughed over might very well be needling you. So take inventory! Don't wait for boss, beau or best friend to deal the hard-to-take hint. Take every precaution now! Chances are if your teeth are in top condition you have little to worry about except the frequent possibility of a "something I ate no doubt" tummy or that "morning after the night before" feeling! But don't expect advertised antiseptic rinses to cure throat infections. They ward off throat ailments, but if you've a bad throat you'd best see a doctor on the dot. Definitely don't go in for self-diagnosis or the prescription of home remedies.

VITAMIN-RIGHT foods are the answer to a healthy start in life, should be yummy to the taste and attractively served in order to "sell" baby on their good qualities

—Adams, N. Y.

WHAT'S COOKING!

By Georgia Scott

Bringing Up Baby

YOU'VE a great responsibility, Mother! Whether your bundle of joy grows up to be hale and healthy or a weak-in-the-knees chronic depends, in great measure, on you. Pre- and post-pregnancy feedings lay the foundation for future health and are often the determining factor in an adult's physical condition.

I heard of a case only recently in which a man of thirty was under observation at Johns Hopkins Hospital for an undiagnosed ailment. After weeks of examinations and tests, the patient was told that his illness had been traced directly to infancy—specifically, to an impurity in his mother's breast feedings. And this, according to consulting physicians, is not entirely uncommon. It's the most potent testimony I can muster to impress you with the importance of your toddler's diet from his earliest days onward.

You must see to it that baby's daily menus include needed elements—in proper proportions and combinations. And malnutrition, a blight on your maternal record, will visit democratically at the home of the rich as well as the poor. Family food-habits—not necessarily economics—are the cause of "hidden hunger." Therefore, you'd best make a conscious effort, right from the beginning, to attain the physical ideal for your baby.

Weight should be in proportion to his age, height and type. To be posture-perfect, his back must be straight, with chest held properly in place and abdomen flat. Strong, sturdy bones with a well-proportioned trunk, and firm, well-coordinated muscles are physical "musts." And teeth should be spaced correctly, with a healthy enamel overcoat to discourage decay, while skin will reflect his general state of health by its glowing color and unblemished texture.

Rest, exercise, cleanliness, fresh air, pure water and proper foods make the ideal definitely attainable. By observing the progress of baby's weight, his physical condition can be readily determined. Your baby's weight will normally double within six months of birth and treble at the end of the year. After that a sustained gain indicates normality. And remember, please, that breastfed children have a physical leap 'n' jump over the bottled baby.

Simple foods, easy to digest because they're well cooked and attractively served, will do most for baby. Avoid strong seasonings or large portions and be sure that the menu is ever palatable. Poor cooking will develop food idiosyncrasies that carry over to adulthood. It's the very reason diet variations are important in infancy feedings. Begun at babyhood, the practise of teaching children to eat and enjoy new foods develops a healthy mental attitude toward strange menus.

The diet of a mother-to-be is important not only to a child's future but to the mother's very own. Her diet should be under strict medical care from the time of conception, since nature has a way of utilizing mother-nourishment when baby isn't getting its rightful share.

Bone-building foods are especially important for this reason. And citrus fruits, part of this body-builder family, are therefore included in mother's and baby's daily diet.

Citrus tips that make good-food sense include advice to squeeze oranges and lemons immediately before use. Strained for a baby until it's a year old, fruit juices should never be heated lest flavor and vitamin value are destroyed. Buy your oranges "by the feel!" Thin-skinned citrus fruits guarantee freedom from waste and pulp, with a resultant heavy juice-content.

Cook baby's cereals in the top of a double boiler for an hour and strain through a fine sieve. Serve at a comfort-warm temperature. Vegetables should be cooked in slightly salted water until "just done." Rub them through sieve and add melted butter for food-flavor. And when baby is old enough for eggs, prepare the coddled (soft-boiled) or poached variety.

Preparation of food for your little one is no longer the chore it was when mother raised you from a tot. Strained foods like the Gerber, Clapp and Libby varieties run the food-gamut of desserts, vegetables, meats and fruits.

Ready to serve, they're chopped and strained to a uniform consistency—promoting and proving the "less work for mother" slogan. Treat baby to:

Toddler's Baked Potato

Scrub the potato with a brush. Cut the ends to allow the escape of steam when baking. Bake in a hot oven (450 degrees F.) about forty-five minutes, or until mealy, or else bake in a covered baker on top of the stove. When done, squeeze the potato in a cloth until it bursts open to allow steam to escape.

Baked Custard

¾ cup sweetened condensed milk
2¼ cups hot water
3 eggs
¼ teaspoon salt

Blend sweetened condensed milk with hot water, and pour gradually over slightly beaten eggs. Add salt. Pour in a baking-pan or in custard-cups. Place in a pan filled with hot water to depth of custard. Bake in a slow oven (325 degrees F.) about forty minutes or until custard is set. A knife-blade inserted will come out clean when custard is done. This recipe will provide servings for six.

Cal's first paid performance on the air was for a station in Oklahoma City. One of his luckiest visits was the week he spent as a guest on the Santa Monica Ranch of Will Rogers. Another guest, Homer Croy, advised Cal to go to New York and gave him letters of introduction. Through these he obtained incidental parts in CBS' "March of Time" 1932 fall series. Since that time he has risen to be a news commentator; at present he can be heard over the Mutual Network on his own program, "Sizing Up the News." Tinney is five feet seven inches tall, weighs about 145, has yellowish-red hair—and one blue eye and one green eye. His prairie-pioneer vernacular is a natural from his youth in Oklahoma.

to resign at City unless the board again reversed itself, she saw tragedy ahead for this man who was the father of her son. She knew Reg's weaknesses and she knew he'd go downhill if he resigned. She made up her mind to prevent that happening if she could.

At the Evans home, Bill told Carol about the rumors at City Hospital. He said there had been talk around the hospital that if Parsons resigned, Jim might be put in as chief of staff. Carol, who loved Jim deeply but who had become estranged from him, was not happy at the turn of events.

"If," she said, "Jim is made chief of staff, we're going to lose the Jim we know. We're going to have a new Jim—a Jim remodeled by Sylvia Bertram. Sylvia's going to see to it that Jim climbs up and up. There's this about it, though, he's very apt to find that he's climbed too high. Perhaps at that time he'll remember that he's part of the scheme of things . . . that he's not a god, as Sylvia tried to make him."

It was shortly after seven o'clock the next evening that Jim learned Sally's reaction to the changes at City Hospital. He had rushed to the hospital to perform an emergency operation. For three-quarters of an hour the young surgeon, garbed in a white gown, mask and gloves, lent his skill in a conscientious effort to save the life of a patient who had placed faith and trust in his ability. Once again his steady, deft and trained hands performed their duty and the patient was taken to his room. After the operation, Jim stopped to pass the time of day with Sally, who told him about her sympathy for Parsons.

"It's a sorry state of affairs," she said. "The man's been with this institution and given his all to it for years, Jim. It didn't seem quite like you to handle this thing in the way you did. Somehow you left the human element out of it. As I see it, you used an iron hand—brought power and authority into play."

Jim flushed, but defended himself. "It was the only attitude I could take," he said. "I couldn't let Parsons stand in my way again. For once I held the high trump. There's only one way to meet the chief of staff and that's on his own ground. I'm sorry if City has to lose a man like Parsons, but it was either he or myself."

"You don't sound like yourself, Jim. What's happened could very well send a man down to the depths—completely destroy him. Jim, for the first time I understand Carol—"

Jim tried to interrupt, but Sally wouldn't permit it.

"I'm going to have my say," she insisted. "I've got one more thing to tell you and then we'll consider the subject closed. If you had only had sense enough to take as much from Carol as you're taking from Sylvia Bertram, you'd be the old Jim Brent, not the changed man you are."

AS TIME passed, Jim continued to change. Doc Thompson, who now came from Pine Cone Ridge to become Jim's resident physician, noticed the change and so did others. Parsons insisted on resigning and the date set for his departure was the end of the month. The board's reversal was not changed and Parsons left the massive institution, turning his practise over to his associate, Dr. Brooks, while he took what he chose to term, a much-needed vacation. He, too, was a changed man. Deep lines of worry were etched on his face; his hair looked more gray, his once proud figure was more stooped. Helen tried to plead with Jim to do something for Parsons, but she found a man very different from the friendly, sympathetic Dr. Jim Brent she had known for so many years.

"I'm sorry, Helen," Jim told her, "but I can neither help you nor advise you in this instance. Parsons brewed his own troubles. He himself is to blame for everything that's happened to him."

Helen turned sorrowfully away. She knew that Parsons would keep going downhill and wreck his life and career unless someone lent a helping hand. She felt that Jim could, but he refused.

"You seem to be so different, Jim, from what you were," she said. "This Doc Thompson looked up in surprise, but said nothing. He reached for the patient's wrist to take her pulse, but the girl withdrew like a frightened rabbit to the far side of the bed. Despite the doctor's reassuring manner he had difficulty in taking her pulse and temperature. She was running a fever of 101 and her pulse count was 110. She was very sick, complaining of severe pains in her abdomen.

Doc Thompson learned a bare minimum of facts concerning the girl's personal history. Mrs. Hurley told him that the patient's parents—Martha and Louis Wilson—were dead. They had died on the same day, February 20, tell you much about anything," Doc said. "She does very little talking—her aunt does it for her. The girl's as timid as anyone I've ever met—seems to lean entirely on her aunt. I had a time getting Hurley to consent to bringing in three nurses—"

"We seem to have a time getting Mr. Hurley to consent to anything," Jim said. "I couldn't even get him to give his consent to go ahead and operate."

In the days that followed, the mystery of the Hurleys' strange attitude grew. Even the nurses felt there was something wrong. To the nurses, there seemed something almost sinister in the only questions the Hurleys always asked.

"Nurse, has she talked to you at all?" asked Mrs. Hurley, and George Hurley's question was:

"When do you think she'll be able to talk—I mean if she pulls through?"

DOC THOMPSON, Jim's kind-hearted resident, was again impressed with the unaccountability of the Hurleys when Mrs. Hurley approached him in regard to a certain Miss Radcliff who she wanted to be with Claudia during her convalescence. Doc tried to stall Mrs. Hurley by saying that Dr. Brent probably would not permit any visitors.

"Oh, but, Doctor," Mrs. Hurley said, "Miss Radcliff really couldn't be considered as a visitor. You see she's been a governess—" Abruptly Mrs. Hurley paused as though she'd made a slip of the tongue. "Well, she's acted as Claudia's companion and sort of nurse ever since Claudia came to live with us and that's been over eight years ago."

It was at that point that Hurley interrupted and there was a tone in his voice that Doc objected to.

"Whether Brent likes it or not," Hurley said, "we're in a position to know what is best for our niece. She doesn't realize what's going on now, but when she does, you're apt to have a little difficulty with her if someone in whom she has confidence isn't there."

Doc told the Hurleys they must get Dr. Brent's consent to Miss Radcliff's presence in the girl's room. Then, after the Hurleys left, the kindly doctor walked down the corridor with a puzzled expression on his face.

"I might be all wrong," he mumbled to himself, turning into the chart-room, "but I think I'd be willing to bet my last dollar that Hurley doesn't want to see his niece pull through!"

Sally Barnett, who had taken slightly more than a liking to Doc, heard his remark and asked him what he meant.

"I'm talking about Mr. Hurley, the uncle of the patient in 318," said Doc. "I don't think he—or Mrs. Hurley either, for that matter—is any too anxious for the girl to come through. There's something definitely wrong about this case—something those two people don't want brought to light. There's some reason why a girl who is twenty years old seems so immature and frightened. There's something wrong about a girl that age needing a governess. Something wrong about the Hurleys insisting on this Miss Radcliff's presence here. If, by chance, Claudia Wilson lives, maybe I'll be able to uncover something—something her aunt and uncle are trying desperately to keep covered up."

is the first time you've ever refused to give me help or advice when I've asked for it—the very first time. But I suppose there's a first time for everything."

And so Helen left Jim's office—a woman deeply disturbed over the change in him. Even Doc Thompson, who had been Jim Brent's best friend, couldn't understand the change in the young surgeon. Rightly, though, he blamed Sylvia Bertram and advised her to leave Jim alone.

But Sylvia persisted in her course of action, and for a time the whole problem was forgotten—or at least pushed into the background—when one of the strangest cases Dr. Brent ever had encountered came under his supervision. It was an ambulance case. The stretcher bearing a young girl was quickly and carefully carried into the emergency room late one evening. The patient was accompanied by an obviously nervous woman—a woman in her late forties. Inasmuch as there was no doctor on the case, the nurse in charge suggested Dr. Brent when the intern thought surgery necessary.

Jim sent Dr. Thompson to take the sick girl's case history, and it was Doc who first was struck with the strangeness of the circumstances.

The girl's name, Doc learned, was Claudia Wilson and she was twenty years old. About her was an air of immaturity, almost childishness. Her golden hair was parted in the middle and worn straight back in braids. She wore no make-up and her pale skin looked as transparent as waxed white paper. Her features were regular and finely chiseled, but to Doc Thompson it seemed as though an effort had been made to make the girl look as plain as possible—to look, almost, like a child. One feature of the mysterious patient Doc could not forget: Her eyes. They were big and hollow and deep within their depths the kind physician read one surprising emotion—fear!

Doc Thompson attempted to question her, but when she tried to answer, the older woman with her interrupted.

"I'll give you all the information you want," she snapped. "Claudia is very ill."

1934, in an automobile accident. Since then Claudia had lived with the Hurleys, her aunt and uncle. Mrs. Hurley said the girl had never been sick before and that the Hurleys did not have a family physician.

Doc Thompson, realizing that an emergency operation would have to be performed, the patient's symptoms indicating a ruptured appendix, advised Mrs. Hurley to procure the services of three special nurses immediately. At that moment her husband, George Hurley, arrived. Hurley was a saturnine man with an abrupt, irritating manner. He questioned the necessity for hiring three nurses.

"Well," he said finally, "I think we'd better wait until the other doctor gets here before we go ahead with anything like that."

Dr. Brent came to room No. 318 and examined the girl. Afterward, he took the Hurleys out in the corridor, where he told them definitely their niece was suffering from a ruptured appendix. Hurley questioned the diagnosis and Jim was irritated.

"This isn't any guesswork on my part," he snapped. "It's not too late to operate, but it will be if we don't get her up to surgery immediately. But we must have your consent."

"Well, I—" Hurley hedged and Jim was struck by the man's hesitation. It was Mrs. Hurley who finally consented to surgery, but even her consent seemed like it was given reluctantly.

The patient was wheeled up to surgery, where, under the cool, professional hands of Dr. Brent the operation was performed. Doc Thompson stood by as Jim worked in a determined effort to save the life that hung in the balance. Afterwards they discussed the case in the scrub-room.

"I only hope we'll be able to localize the infection, Doc," Jim said, "but at best we're going to have a fight on our hands. With this condition we found, certainly the girl couldn't have been well before she had this last attack, and yet you tell me she's never been under a doctor's care. She must have had attacks before—she could never tell me that she hasn't."

"I don't think the girl herself will
