PLEA FOR A MESSAGE

Movie-Radio Guide Directs This to All Red Cross Army Nurses Who Escaped From Bataan or Corregidor

AMONG the many letters that came to the editors of Movie-Radio Guide last week was a simple plea for news of a loved one. Because we had no direct way of granting that request, we are printing it in the hope that some Red Cross nurse who escaped from beleaguered Bataan or Corregidor may read it, and be able to give this sister a message about her brother, Staff Sergeant George W. Wagner. Yes, we know that the chance is a slim one; but even in this chaotic world, we still believe in small miracles. And certainly nothing can shake our stout faith in those courageous nurses. We know they will, if they can, answer this sister's plea. Here is the letter:

615 N. 2nd St.,
Richmond, Ky.

Dear Editor:

This will seem to you, no doubt, a strange letter, but strange things occur in war-time.

In the issue of your publication for the week of July 4-10, I noticed an item on the short-wave page concerning some nurses who escaped from Bataan. This greatly interested me, for I had a brother who was on duty in one of the hospitals there, he having been previously on duty at Sternberg General Hospital in Manila. He was Staff Sergeant Gerald W. Wagner. We are from Rapid City, South Dakota, but are here in Kentucky on a defense project.

We've had no word from Gerald since February 25, and a letter from the War Department to my mother shed no light either. So I am wondering if any of those nurses who escaped could be contacted, and perhaps they could tell us the date they last saw him (if they did) and how he was. We ask no more—just to know how he was is more than we can dare to hope for. If you are able to do this, would you, for us, please? All we ask is when they last saw him, and how he was. Oh, if you could only do this, how grateful we would be.

If you are unable to help, we will understand, but we hope and pray for the best. I do hope it can be done.

Sincerely,

(Signed) Mrs. G. C. Wild.

Of course we have no way of knowing whether this letter will be read by any of those fortunate nurses who succeeded in escaping from the Philippines or not. So we ask that if any readers of Movie-Radio Guide happen to know one of these nurses that they contact her. Should there be any message, it can be sent direct to Mrs. Wild at the address given on this page, or if mailed to us at 731 Plymouth Court, Chicago, Ill., we will see that it is forwarded to her at once. For like millions of others we know what it means to get a message about a loved one in our armed forces.

—The Editors.

Singing Secrets of the Stars

Tailor-Made Tunes Are Slanted to Individual Needs of Song Stars

By
Frank Loesser
Author of "I Don't Want to Walk Without You," "Jingle, Jangle, Jingle," etc.

HOLLYWOOD song-writers are the custom tailors of the music business. Their songs are made to order—and to fit the requirements of individual stars. You may not realize it, but each time your favorite screen singer starts tossing notes around he is handling a song written especially for him.

Screen singers are specialists. Each has some strong points—and most of them have serious weaknesses. Unless the composer keeps these special factors in mind, he finds himself with the right song for the wrong singer—and no cash in his pockets. Even the lyric-writers must, in many cases, slant their work to the screen personality, or "character," of the performer.

I've been writing songs for Hollywood stars for a long time, and I've come to know many of their odd traits and special needs. It may interest you to learn about these and then notice, when you see your next musical, how patly every number covers each star's special traits. Some of the traits are not common to any other vocalist.

Songs for Dorothy Lamour are serious problems. But they are problems well worth solving, for Dorothy has a knack of putting her numbers—if properly slanted to her—in the "hit" class. Incidentally, she also has fine judgment and a real intuition for the "hit" possibilities in a song. I profited handsomely from her intuition when she spotted "Moon of Manikova." Dorothy begged for a chance to record it, and you all know it because of her presentation.

Dorothy sings best with open sounds. She has a short range, and her songs must be written in one octave to allow for this. Otherwise there will be signs of strain on her face or neck as she struggles for high notes. Dottie's known for her languid beauty, and the song-writer must help make her lovely while singing. Dreamy tunes with many "oohs" and "ahs" help keep her face in charming repose before the cameras. When Dottie goes on the radio, her looks aren't important, so she can sing songs that are fast and furious.

Mary Martin needs songs that call for plenty of facial expression. They must be light and gay, for that is Mary's character. Mary can put over a song pictorially, and with this in mind I gave her "Kiss the Boys Goodbye."

Mary acts with her face while singing, but Betty Hutton acts with everything. She is at her best when she's jumping around wildly, so I give her songs suited to such rampaging. I enjoy these assignments, for such songs are fun to write.

Bing Crosby is something else again. He has the best music mind in Hollywood. He can handle almost any song and do it well, so the writer has a free hand. Incidentally, Bing has the most amazing musical memory I've ever known. Give him a new song, and he's ready to record it three minutes later.

Frederick Hollander and I wrote "See What the Boys in the Back

DOROTHY LAMOUR (above) needs songs with a narrow range and a dreamy quality so that she can look her languid, charming best when she sings

SWINGSTRESS Betty Hutton (right) uses every muscle to put over a song. As a result, song-writers can go to town when on wild numbers for her

DON AMECHE (above) thought that a song title like "I'll Never Let a Day Go By" would be misunderstood by his Italian relatives, so song-writers had to change "Day Go By" to the harmless "Day Pass By"

NO SLUSH goes when Bob Hope (above) chooses a song. The comic's songs must be light, gay and well within the limitations which Hope knows well

SALTY and suggestive are the songs Marlene Dietrich (left) sings best. Song-writers slant tunes for her in that vein. Though limited, she's fine in her field

MARY MARTIN (above) puts over songs with her face as well as her vocal cords. She needs tunes that bring her merry expressions and her gay personality into full play—tunes like Loesser's "Kiss the Boys Goodbye"

QUIRKLESS Bing Crosby (above) is an ideal singer from the song-writer's point of view. He makes no special demands, can handle any type of tune

MENACE With a Future

That's Alan Ladd
in Paramount's
"Gun for Hire"!

PARAMOUNT Studio officials struck gold when they were looking for a young man to play the role of a cold-blooded killer in "This Gun For Hire," and cast Alan Ladd to do the part. Now the Ladd's set with a long-term contract, and the studio is making big plans for his future. That reads like an easy success story, doesn't it? But back of it is a ten-year stretch of hard work, disappointment and failure, plus near starvation, before Ladd got the break that's making him a box-office sensation in theaters today. Like another young man, named Tyrone Power, Alan was dropped at Universal after four months of training for movies. A year on a small newspaper came next, then two more as an unskilled laborer in a studio. Next came a year at a reputable school of acting, but no job. Alan's pockets and stomach were both empty when he finally landed in radio, where he did 15 to 20 shows a week, playing roles that called for men of 80 and boys of 18. This developed a fine speaking voice that caught the ear of listener Sue Carol, actor's agent, who signed him as a client. But two more years elapsed before Ladd finally landed in the role that is skyrocketing him to stardom!

ARKANSAS-born on September 3, 1913, the Ladd worked as a studio laborer before he finally got a break in pictures. He's a champion diver, still keeps in trim by swimming daily. Above: Waiting for breakfast bacon and eggs after a stiff morning work-out which included an hour at clearing rocks from the back yard of his Hollywood home

LADD, as the Raven, joins forces with Veronica Lake, government agent, to expose Gates (Laird Cregar) in "This Gun For Hire"

SHADOWING saboteur Gates is grim business, and the end of the trail is not pretty; but it's satisfying

PROBABLY the screen has never recorded a more dramatic scene than the one in "This Gun For Hire," which shows Ladd (above) as a killer at bay, paying the supreme penalty to right a wrong

"Jot 'Em Down Store"
Rocked by the Little Feller's Rollicking

NAMELESS but unabashed, Lum and Abner's baby is playing hob with the peaceful routine of the "Jot 'Em Down Store." Lum and Abner seem to be enjoying their foster-parenthood, but the baby is becoming a tougher and tougher problem to handle.

Watch for more exclusive pictures of Lum and Abner's mysterious baby next week in your copy of Movie-Radio Guide.

VIC and SADE

Meet Daytime Radio's Best-Loved Family in a Tale of Bricks, Chains

FICTION VICTOR RODNEY GOOK, the chief bookkeeper at the Consolidated Kitchenware Company Plant No. 14, turned the corner at Kelsey Street. He was a medium-size fellow who probably would go unnoticed in most crowds, but he was well known and liked in his own neighborhood. Affable, conscientious and industrious, Vic was moved by three enthusiasms—his job, his lodge and his family.

And now he saw one member of the family approaching. It was Sade, his wife, who was hurrying home from a shopping-trip downtown. From another direction—this time from up the alley—came Rush Gook, Vic's fourteen-year-old son. Rush, not one to pass up life's little dramas, made something of the meeting as the three turned down the alley toward their small home half-way up the next block.

"You'd expect to bump into a stranger walking along the street," he commented, "but I call bumping into a relative quite a coincident. And bumping into two relatives a double coincident."

Rush spoke with the quiet dignity of a sophomore in high school. From his father he had inherited a certain preoccupation with large words and flowery language. His enthusiasm, like Vic's, was boyish.

"All of us bumped into two relatives," Vic observed dryly. "And what's on your mind, Marie?"

In a spirit of affectionate playfulness, Vic and Sade often addressed their growing son by almost any other name than the one he had been baptized. The boy ignored his father, but made no point of it.

"Mom," he said, "I've never in my life seen Mr. Gumpox, the garbage-man, as upset as he was this evening."

"What's the matter with him? Is his horse, Howard, sick again?"

"No, it's not Howard, although I must say that Howard's cough is getting worse. No, it's Mr. Gumpox and he's mad clean through—"

"I was mad clean through in the Klondike region many years ago," Vic interrupted with pleasant irrelevancy. "It seems a beautiful woman heavily veiled and greatly agitated loved me to distraction—"

"Oh, let Willie get on with his story," said Sade. "Go ahead, Rush. Somebody been mean to Mr. Gumpox?"

"The management of the Bright Kentucky Hotel!"

Rush spoke with an air of finality as though this simple explanation told the full story. He knew, of course, that his father and mother would want to know details. Everything about the Bright Kentucky Hotel was interesting. Many of Vic's cronies, including Richigan Fishigan of Sishigan, Michigan, Stacy Yopp, Y. I. I. Y. Skeebur and Alf Musherton, lived at the Bright Kentucky in various stages of threatening to leave. But none of them ever moved. They were patient and long-suffering.

"After this indignity, though, Mr. Gumpox actually may move away," Rush continued. "The management of the Bright Kentucky Hotel's gone a step too far. It's the needle that broke the camel's back. Human flesh and blood can stand just so much and no more."

"What did the Bright Kentucky Hotel do to him this time?"

Satisfied that he had aroused his mother's curiosity, Rush developed the theme, built up the suspense.

"Mr. Gumpox is a mild man," he said gravely. "You know he is not a trouble-maker. He never was a trouble-maker. He says so himself. He says, 'I let other folks mind their business and I mind mine.' He clenched his fists as he said that to me not more than a half-hour ago, and in the darkness I could see his

GARBAGEMAN Gumpox is a patient man, but he explodes when his hotel chains his smoking-jacket to the wall eyes blazing. And Howard—in the gloomy recesses of his stall—could be heard coughing."

"You're gonna trim your story up all fancy, hey, George?" asked Vic.

"Won't ya let me lead up to it?"

Sade chuckled. "Well, get to it. What's the management of the Bright Kentucky done to Mr. Gumpox this trip?"

But Rush was not to be hurried. Quietly he ticked off on his fingers the various inconveniences that Mr. Gumpox had overlooked.

"MR. GUMPOX," he said, "didn't leave the Bright Kentucky Hotel when a freight train jumped the track an' plowed into his bedroom. He didn't leave the Bright Kentucky Hotel when some fireman threw an eight-pound chunk of coal through his window. He didn't leave the Bright Kentucky Hotel when the water main broke an' he woke up in four feet of turbulent water. No, Mr. Gumpox is not one to complain. He has submitted to much. But now he can endure no more—"

"You've been piling it on just a little thick, Marie. Besides, I've some news myself concerning the Bright Kentucky Hotel, but it will wait. Get on with your story."

"Yes," urged Sade, "get to it. What's the latest indignity?"

It was a pleasant evening and the spring air in the wide alley was fragrant with lilacs. The family walked three abreast with Rush talking as they went. He now spread his hands dramatically.

"At the Bright Kentucky Hotel," he said, "everything is chained down!"

"Oh?" encouraged Mr. and Mrs.

Gook as Rush hurried on with his story. They were approaching the back gate to their yard and Rush saw a visitor seated on the back porch. Rush knew that it was Uncle Fletcher and that if he didn't finish his story now, he might never get it completed. Uncle Fletcher was a gifted conversationalist himself.

"Your comb is chained down at the Bright Kentucky," he explained. "So is your hair-brush, your tooth-brush an' the like."

"Like a railroad station?" asked Sade. She wasn't surprised; she never was surprised about the conveniences at the Bright Kentucky Hotel.

"Exactly," Rush replied. "Mr. Gumpox' comb, for instance, has a two-foot chain on it. The chain is stapled to the wall. The reason for this is so that people won't steal the tooth-brush or other things. Having personal articles chained to the wall is a protection for the hotel authorities and also a protection for the guests. Every once in a while undesirable persons stop at the Bright Kentucky Hotel—characters who are not above prowling into the various rooms an' purloining whatever's loose—"

At this point, Sade saw Uncle Fletcher on the back steps. "Hey, hey," she observed, "we're going to have company. Did somebody steal Mr. Gumpox' comb and tooth-brush?"

"Nope," said Rush, squeezing his story to the last dramatic drop. "Nothing was stolen."

"Then what's he mad about?"

"Today is Mr. Gumpox' birthday. He has completed another four-season cycle and the ebb and flow of time

ROSALIND RUSSELL TO PLAY ROLE OF SISTER KENNY, FAMOUS ANTIPODES NURSE

Linda Darnell Issues a Flat Denial; Tyrone Power Welcomes an "American" Girl; Donna (Iowa) Reed Makes Six Doughboys From Her Home State Happy!

HOLLYWOOD

By FRANCES LONG

Here! Here! Mr. Wyler! William Wyler, who directed M-G-M's "Mrs. Miniver," hailed as the picture of the year, wrote a stirring prelude to the production before he left Hollywood to join the U. S. Army Air Force. Because we believe it will appeal to every American who reads MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE, we reprint it here:

This is a war of the people—of all the people—and it must be fought not only on the battlefield but in the cities and the villages, in the factories and on the farms, in the home and in the heart of every man, woman and child who loves freedom! Well, we have buried our dead but we shall not forget them. Instead, they will inspire us with an unbreakable determination to free ourselves and those who come after us from the tyranny and terror that threatens to strike us down! Fight it, then! Fight it with all that is in us! And may God defend the right! . . .

Hollywood Welcomes Sister Kenny, and Rosalind ("My Sister Eileen") Russell, who talked at length to Miss Kenny about her life and work in combating infantile paralysis in Australia, expressed a keen desire to portray Sister Kenny in the picture that will be based on the dramatic struggles of this modern Florence Nightingale. Joan Crawford had a yen to play the role,

—Jack Albion

MRS. Fred MacMurray smiles as Fred (sitting across the table) kids Hank Fonda about the beard he's growing for his new picture too, but Roz won the coveted part. This serious role certainly will be a far cry from the screwy comedies Rosalind's been featured in recently; but we're pretty sure that those movie-goers who remember her in pre-wacky roles (remember "The Citadel"?) will be glad to see her cast in a serious one again . . .

Donna Reed and six lucky doughboys. Donna, the little farm girl from Iowa who has been making headline movie news recently, can't swim a stroke, but she'll soon be an expert. Reason? When it became known that Donna wanted to learn how to swim, her fan mail was deluged with offers of free lessons. And last week when la Reed received an offer signed by half a dozen lads from her native Iowa who are stationed in southern California, she took the boys up on it—and pronto! We leave it to your imagination how those lucky six nephews of Uncle Sam feel about their new assignment. They've decided to a man that Donna is not to be rushed through her course of lessons; that they will be slow and thorough. Smart boys!

Linda Darnell denies any and all intentions of marrying Alan Gordon, Movietown publicist, even that she ever went steadily with him. And by way of proving her point Linda dated George Holmes and Cameraman Pev Marley. Mebbe it's all just the aftermath of a lovers' spat. We dunno. Matter came up when Linda and Alan accompanied Lana Turner and Steve Crane on their Las Vegas elopement recently, and the report got about that the pair almost decided to make the elopement double. But Linda says no! Ho, hum, Madeleine Carroll denied being in love with Stirling Hayden, and look what happened to her! . . .

Off to Rumbaland are Lucille Ball and husband Desi Arnaz as soon as Lucille finishes "Seven Days Leave," in which she co-stars with Vic Mature. Two are planning a trip to Desi's native Cuba. While there they will be the guests of the Cuban president, Fulgencio Batista, and Arnaz will be sworn in by the nation's chief executive as a second lieutenant in Cuba's military reserve. Time permitting, the pair will make personal appearances in Havana and Santiago, Desi's birthplace, where his dad was mayor for nine years before becoming a Cuban congress member . . .

From ginger ale to tap-water. Movie versions of two-fisted, hard-drinking western badmen have had to change their brand of "pizen" since war priorities cracked down on the manufacture of soft drinks. Before that they tossed off sparkling pop, ginger ale and coke, which served as imitation hard likker. Now, in keeping with the times, these hard-boiled buckaroos are gulping plain tap-water that has been colored. The boys say "it ain't got the kick a good jigger of ginger ale hed!" . . .

Arleen Whelan turns the tables. Broadway players being tested for picture roles is an every-day occurrence; but a Hollywood movie actress being tested for a Broadway play is something else again. Which is what Arleen has just done for Charles Thorndom's new play, "King's Coy," that's being readied for Broadway this fall. Things are certainly looking up for the little Whelan gal. Since her five-year contract with 20th Century expired, she's had three contract offers from other studios; but she isn't having some, thank you. Rather, Arleen, who's always had a hankering for the footlights, is going to get around a bit before she settles down to a commitment with one studio . . .

Tyrone Power paged by an "American" girl. A studio policeman on duty at the entrance of the "Black Swan" set, where Ty is working, was approached the other day by a pretty young woman wearing dark glasses who asked to see Mr. Power; in fact, she insisted. When the officer asked for her name she replied, "Just tell Mr. Power an American girl wants to see him." The officer was skeptical but he delivered the message. Mr. Power was skeptical, too, but he was also curious, so he granted the request. At the entrance he found his wife, Parisian-born Annabella, smiling at him. She had just returned from the Federal offices, where she had been sworn in as a full-fledged American citizen. And was Annabella happy! . . .

Divorce and marriage epidemic seems to be mowing 'em down in Movietown. Lana Turner was stricken first with sudden marriage to Steve Crane; then off pops Joan Crawford and weds Philip Terry. On the heels of that surprise came the wedding of oomph girl Sheridan's ex, Eddie Norris, to a newcomer in films, Jane Doe. That sounds like a gag, but it isn't. The lady's name really is JANE DOE! So much for the credit side of the Hollywood marital ledger. On the debit side it's Mrs. Martha vs. Vic Mature. Martha charges cruelty—mental and physical; says that the Mature was everything but box-office appeal at home. Mae West, too, has finally scrapped a better half of thirty-one years' standing—one Frank Wallace. After frequent denials of marriage to Wallace, Miss West finally admitted—but reluctantly—that Mr. W. must have been the man she married in Milwaukee in 1911. And even though songbird Kathryn Grayson denied she had sued for divorce from John Shelton recently, the short second get-together has turned from torrid to frigid, and for keeps. Paulette Goddard and Charlie Chaplin are again on a teeter-totter, and no one knows which camp they will land in. What's more, it will probably be kept under wraps until they see fit to disclose any plans they may have! That's the marital status quo in Hollywood this week.

CARY GRANT and Jean Arthur, together with Ronald Colman, do an excellent job in Columbia production "The Talk of the Town"

MOVIE REVIEWS

"Talk of the Town"

Cast: Cary Grant, Jean Arthur, Ronald Colman, Edgar Buchanan, Glenda Farrell, Charles Dingle, Emma Dunn, Rex Ingram, Leonid Kinckey, Tom Tyler, Don Beddoe. A Columbia Picture, produced and directed by George Stevens. Adapted from Sidney Harmon's story by Dale Van Every. Screenplay by Irwin Shaw and Sidney Buchman.

Type of Picture: Gripping drama, spiked with a purpose and leavened by witty dialog that packs a punch, as only Cary Grant, Jean Arthur and Ronald Colman can deliver!

This is the Story: Cary Grant gets caught in a shady political web. On trial for arson that he has predicted, he escapes to the home of Jean Arthur, where he meets Ronald Colman, a lawyer, who is as conservative as Grant is radical. Here the lives of the two men and the girl intertwine in a series of thrilling episodes, with Grant and Colman both vying for Jean's attention. And audiences will wonder right up to the end about which man will win her.

Verdict: Grand players at their best in a swell story. Don't miss it!—Family.

"Panama Hattie"

This is the Story: Ann Sothern as Hattie (Panama) Maloney, a nightclub entertainer, is a diamond in the rough with a heart of gold. Her trio of sailor friends—Red Skelton, Rags Ragland and Ben Blue—protect her through thick and thin, manage to round up a couple of spies in so doing. When scion of an old Philadelphia family falls in love with Hattie, there's plenty of merry fireworks, with never a let-down right up to the finale.

Verdict: If you like musical comedies, don't miss this one. Sothern, Skelton and Blue give great performances, but Rags Ragland, the old vaudevillian, is extra special!—Family.

The American Federation of Musicians is a hearty mouthful and as remote from most of our lives as the moon, or so most of us believe. Actually it controls a great deal of our listening pleasure and it controls it with a horny-handed absolutism which has given more than one broadcaster the jitters.

Quite a few years ago James Petrillo, a cornet-player with muscles and nerve, decided that musicians weren't getting a decent break. Probably he was right. So he formed a union, or perhaps he took an old union and put teeth in its mouth. In his own way, he presently made it undesirable for any musician to attempt to play in Chicago without holding a union card, at the same time persuading employers that hiring musicians who were not union members was an unhealthy proceeding. In time, he found himself at the head of probably the strongest union in America, one affecting our lives wherever we come in contact with motion pictures, hotels, radio, or any commercial use of music.

But today Jimmy Petrillo is in trouble, and the bullet-proof car in which he formerly drove about Chicago will not protect him. For he and the American Federation of Musicians have bitten off a mouthful.

They decided, some weeks ago, that to make a phonograph record which can be played on a radio station or in a juke-box is to cheat some musician out of a job. In short, if the phonograph record did not exist, they reasoned, the radio station or the tavern owner would be forced to employ a real musician.

It is probably commendable to create more work for one's friends and fellow lodge members, but virtue becomes a vice when the effort puts reputable business in jeopardy and violates long-accepted practices. It is my guess that half the radio stations in America would be forced to the wall if they could not play phonograph records. Worse than that, a recent AFM edict forced the banning, it is alleged, of the National High School Orchestra, which has played for ten years from Interlochen, Michigan.

Well, the Department of Justice here in Washington is said to have quite a dossier on Jimmy Petrillo, the little czar of the music union, and it is an accepted fact that the Department of Justice—or the D. of J., as we call it—is a tough outfit, a lot tougher than even Mr. Petrillo was during his Chicago days . . .

Records for Our Fighting Men is the name of a national drive to salvage old phonograph records. Not for the music, which is ancient and wheezy, but for that precious war-scarce substance known as shellac. Perhaps you have heard some of the pleas for your old records over the air. The response thus far is grand. Cleveland, for instance, picked up 375,000 records in no time at all. The goal is enough records to produce $1,000,000 in cash, or 38,000,000 separate platters. These records will be sold to various big record companies which have agreed to purchase them so that they can extract the shellac, and all proceeds will go into the million-dollar fund for new music for our fighting men . . .

Abbott and Costello have announced that they will make a personal-appearance tour and contribute all their salaries to Army Emergency Relief. AER officials, who know how badly our soldier families need the money, hope it is true . . .

Recently two Mutual newscasters told two conflicting stories. Cal Tinney exploded one night with a tirade about the Army Post Exchange system, which he declared was piling up profits which were used to throw parties for officers. A night or so later, Fulton Lewis praised the Army Post Exchange system without reservation.

Actually an Army PX is a general store run by the soldiers at a post, where merchandise can be bought at the lowest possible price. I know Fulton Lewis to be a great reporter and a man who is not satisfied with putting news on the air until he has investigated its authenticity. I know Cal Tinney to be a former small-town editor and columnist and a once-upon-a-time radio comedian and master of ceremonies. Without listening twice, I accepted the Lewis version. The PX is an almost sacred trust and every officer so considers it. Soldiers themselves proclaim this. We don't know Mr. Tinney's motive in blasting the officer corps of the Army.

An overdressed cowboy came to town the other day. He came with a splash of publicity, a flash of photographers' bulbs and a blare of bands—all in the fine, rich rodeo tradition. We like the cowboy. We think of him as a home-town boy who made good, for it was in Chicago that he began to click on the radio ("National Barn Dance," etc.). But that's beside the point. What makes his arrival tremendously important, deeply moving, is the fact that Gene Autry came to Chicago to shed his howling shirts and his fancy pants for the finest costume a man can wear today—the uniform of an enlisted man in the Army of the United States. SHOSTAKOVICH USES "BOLERO" DEVICE IN CELEBRATED "SEVENTH SYMPHONY"

Victor Releases Glenn Miller Version of "Serenade in Blue"; Columbia Records Danny Kaye Specialties; Decca Presents Hoagy Carmichael Album

By ROBERT BAGAR

New York World-Telegram Music Critic and Associate Program Annotator for Philharmonic-Symphony Society of New York

Shostakovich: His seventh was born of battle

WE HEARD the Seventh Symphony of Dmitri Shostakovich. We have had a tremendous experience in the performance of this symphony by the incomparable Arturo Toscanini and the NBC Symphony Orchestra. We have still fresh in our minds the romantic history of the work's inspiration—a work born out of the heart of battle, out of the courage and the suffering of a fighting Russian people during the siege of its great city, Leningrad. These things have struck us with immense force. They might be expected to exert an influence on a listener's reception of the music—as music.

While we must admire the fortitude of the Russians; while we must shrink with horror from the Nazi blitz treatment of non-military citizens, the aged and the infirm, and the women and the children who participated in one of the world's titanic struggles, one question stands clear above all else—What is the worth of this music that owes its existence to those very circumstances?

A work like the Seventh Symphony by such a composer as Shostakovich is not to be dismissed with a convenient "I like it" or a just as convenient "I don't like it." Shostakovich has shown before that he can compose music which has an immediate effect on its hearers. So it is here. The Seventh Symphony is huge in proportions and parts of it make that sort of effect.

Magnificence rides an appreciable length of the first movement, which possesses whole pages of an eerie, barbaric beauty. Its themes are of a most interesting invention and all of them carry the hallmark—Russian folk. In presenting his material Shostakovich has found it necessary to call upon a device that was shrewdly exploited by Ravel in his "Bolero." The French composer took a theme and he caused it to pass through innumerable repetitions, each successive one more ornate than the preceding in point of instrumental colors. He achieved his design, which was to hypnotize the listener with the semblance of a repetition that corresponds to the cumulative intensification of a central idea. Suddenly the chord changes to the minor, and the total effect is stunning. We recognize that as the Ravel technique.

Generally speaking, Shostakovich seems to have had a like aim. However, he has been exceedingly more ornate about it. He has thrown himself into the writing with the full force of his craftsmanship. He has maneuvered into the scheme a wealth of rhythms which play against each other with an astonishing adroitness. He has further added to the idea of thematic repetition with many complicated changes of harmony, which, with the contrasting dynamics, bring the picture to the size of a panoramic canvas.

But while some of the music in the first movement makes its sweeping effects, there is a good deal of it that seems commonplace. He seems to have been too charged with his feelings to bother with being selective—properly selective. I could not escape the feeling that Shostakovich worked in a particular hurry; that he had so much to say that it must be said at all costs. Hence, the wide difference in musical values between sections of the movement.

The drums beat their insistent figure, as the music grows louder and louder. There is something like a twelve-minute crescendo, which in itself is hair-raising. Shostakovich was driving relentlessly to tell his tale, and he resorted to every argument he could think of, heading tangentially into alien fields as he argued, much in the fashion of an emotional speaker who pours into a discussion every part of his thinking self, even rationalizing, even grasping at distantly related ideas, in order to make his point.

A neat block of the first movement could be chopped right off to its considerable improvement. In his fervor Shostakovich has at times confronted so many things with so many others that it all makes much too much to grasp. It results in unclear, Brobdingnagian sound—and this I noticed particularly, with all that Arturo Toscanini was conducting.

The composer shows a master hand at the construction of certain sequences of his symphony. Regrettably this is not the case with respect to the whole. All in all, keeping firmly in mind the fact that repeated hearings might bring about a change in one's opinions, I believe that fifty or sixty percent of the symphony represents Shostakovich as we more or less know him—a composer of fine moments and just as many trivial ones. The other fifty or forty percent is just plain bunk, over-exaggerated, meaningless, blabbering bunk.

These may be hard words, but they come from one who was ready to worship even before listening, from one who tried awfully hard to divorce the romantic and dramatic situations surrounding the work's composing from the consideration of the music per se. In so far as I am concerned, there is the Shostakovich of the Fifth Symphony and of the slow movement of the First and of the numberless pages scattered throughout his other opera that are touched with genius. This Shostakovich of the Seventh is altogether different voice, a voice that is louder and longer and less persuasive musically, despite its many attractive manifestations.

D'Artega: He went far beyond that first step

TO MAKE the grade in radio does not mean to be engaged for one series of programs. That is only the beginning. But having accomplished that much, it is up to performers to be re-engaged again and again. That only happens when performers have something that the public wants. So it is with bands. For instance, the past three years have seen many of these organizations get as far as the first step only to drop suddenly out of things.

One of the bandleaders who has gone much beyond that first step is D'Artega, who points proudly to having appeared on seven networks in three years. Some time back D'Artega landed the summer-replacement series for Jack Benny's "Jello" program. Until that point he had been conductor for Eddie Cantor and Olsen and Johnson productions, as well as arranger for the Kostelanetz, Whiteman and Al Goodman orchestras.

In quick succession D'Artega followed his success on the "Jello" show with such radio presentations as "Admiration," "Enna Jettick Melodies," the "Rinso Vaudeville Theater," the "Hit Parade," the "Believe It or Not," and "Pan American Holiday." He is currently connected with the latter.

D'Artega is thirty-two years of age, plays piano, accordion and saxophone expertly, flute and guitar less so. He is at present devoting a considerable part of his time to conducting symphonic programs, and he has already directed the orchestras of Buffalo, St. Louis, New Jersey and the NYA.

He is far from forsaking popular music, but he feels that all musicians should be versed in all types to understand their own specialties well.

Victor's choice selections consist of Dinah Shore's swell performances of "Be Careful, It's My Heart" and "Mad About Him," in both of which she is accompanied superbly by Gordon Jenkins, and Glenn Miller's especially appealing version of "Serenade in Blue."

"Mr. Gumpox' name's not George," Sade protested.

"George is used kinda like 'chum' or 'neighbor' or 'Jack,'" said Rush witheringly. "It was a most handsome jacket and it was delivered to Mr. Gumpox this morning—"

"Um," said Vic and Sade together. "When he arrived home from work this evening—" Rush now spoke with a new dramatic hoarseness—"he found his smoking-jacket . . . chained . . . to . . . the . . . wall!"

Sade giggled. "That is carrying matters a little farther than—"

"Isn't it, though," Rush said. "Mr. Gumpox flew into a great rage. He ran down to the lobby. He button-holed the manager. He wanted his smoking-jacket unchained immediately."

"Manager give him an argument?" Vic inquired mildly.

"Yes. Tried to soothe him with gentle talk, said Mr. Gumpox wouldn't be wearing it outside anyhow. But Mr. Gumpox hollered that he'd wear it wherever he darn well pleased. You chained my smoking-jacket to the wall with a two-and-a-half-foot chain. I couldn't even sit down on a chair with it," he cried. "If I wear my smoking-jacket, I got to stand up." But his arguments were to no avail. His jacket still is chained and he's at his garbage-wagon shanty trying to calm down."

"Stuff happens," commented Sade as she opened the back gate and greeted Uncle Fletcher. "Hi," she called, but Uncle Fletcher, slightly deaf and inclined to wool-gather, didn't look up. "Greetings," called Vic, moving closer.

"Yes," said Uncle Fletcher non-committally.

"Wonder if he's gonna stay for supper?" Sade asked Vic under her breath.

"We got enough food?"

"No. I planned on left-overs."

"There's always Croucher's Dandy Grocery store."

"Pretty day," said Uncle Fletcher. "Everybody coming home at once, huh?"

"Funny thing, Uncle Fletcher," said Rush, "we all three of us bumped into each other's society by accident."

"That's what your mother was telling me," said Uncle Fletcher agreeably. He always treated Rush like a small child, couldn't believe he'd grown up.

"Was she?" asked Rush chuckling.

"When was this?"

"Fine," said Uncle Fletcher. "Not at all, Vic. Sadie—" he turned to her—"Sadie, I took the liberty of going in your kitchen. Sit down, folks. I'll dust a spot off for you here on the steps. Reminds me of Ollie Hasher's brother. You remember Ollie likely, Sadie?"

"No-o-o," Sade replied as though trying to recall a forgotten friend.

"Belvedere fella," said Uncle Fletcher.

Sade chuckled. "You keep forgetting, Uncle Fletcher, that I never had any acquaintances in Belvedere."

"Fine," said Uncle Fletcher. "Well,

Ollie Hasher told me about this fella who give his table a coat of paint every day instead of dusting it. He was in the paint business an' had plenty of paint around handy. So every day he'd just slather on another coat of paint and leave 'er go at that. Well, it seems he ate his meals off'n that same table, and as the years went along the top of the table got higher all the time. Coat after coat of paint mounts up. Every couple seasons he'd hafta get a chair with longer legs on it, an' finally, when he was an old man, he was 'way up next the ceiling."

"That's a pretty fantastic story, Uncle Fletcher."

"Yes."

"Are you sure it's true?"

"No. I heard it from Ollie Hasher an' ya couldn't any more trust anything Ollie said than you could fly. Let's see, I believe Ollie moved to New York, Kentucky. Either he moved to New York, Kentucky, or his brother did. He had a brother, Art. Now whether it was Art moved to New York, Kentucky, or Ollie as moved, I couldn't say." Uncle Fletcher paused, then said, "Sadie, the reason I went in your kitchen when ya wasn't home—"

"Yes?"

"You told me where the kitchen key was the other day. You said to walk in an' make myself comfortable any time I felt like it."

"That's right. I bet you were thirsty an' wanted a drink of water."

"No. But I've solved my Christmas-present problem."

"By George, Uncle Fletcher," said Rush, "you certainly can jump from one subject to another."

"Always been that way, Rush. Only fella I ever knew that could beat me jumpin' from one subject to another was Harry Beekdop there in Belvedere. You remember him, Sadie?"

"Um."

"He'd change the subject like a bolt of lightning. Be sitting at the supper-table talkin' about gravy, see?"

"Um."

"Pass the gravy, Mama," he'd say, and without an instant's warnin' he'd change the subject to salt an' pepper. "Pass the salt an' pepper, Mama." Uncle Fletcher snapped his fingers to point up Harry Beekdop's mental agility. "Harry Beekdop," Uncle Fletcher reminisced. "Moved to Belvedere from Indianapolis, Ohio, left Belvedere to go to New York, Kentucky, left New York, Kentucky, to go to Los Angeles, Michigan, an' finally ended up in Cleveland, Minnesota, marryin' a woman thirty-seven years old—"

"How old was he?" asked Vic without curiosity.

"Who? Harry? Harry was thirty-eight, Harry Beekdop. Went into the granulated shoe-string business, run away with his brother's wife, automobile, furniture an' clothing by mistake, shot a barber for giving him too short a hair-cut in the elbow, an' later died. Harry Beekdop. Tell ya why I took the liberty of unlockin' the door an' walkin' in your kitchen, Sadie."

"All right."

"I put twenty-five bricks underneath the sink."

"You what?" asked the startled Sade.

"Solves my Christmas-present problem."

"You really put bricks underneath my sink?" Sade wasn't convinced. She tried to send Rush in to see, but Rush was too fascinated by Uncle Fletcher to leave. Uncle Fletcher ignored Sade's question.

"Bricks," he said importantly, "make wonderful door-stoppers."

"Well, where on earth did you—"

"An' these ain't any of your little puny pound-and-a-half bricks either," Uncle Fletcher continued. "These bricks was baked for me special by Charlie Woodburn there at the Chicago an' Alton shops. Each one weighs five full pounds and they all got smooth, rounded corners."

"Why did you bring 'em here?"

"Christmas presents."

"Christmas presents—for me?"

"Christmas presents for different friends of mine. Ed Flax, Arnie Huffle, G. G. Braw, Walter Vaphouse, Frank Knee, Willis Hushbreep, Gilbert Yetplunk, Opie Jerk, Bessie—I'm going to give one to Bessie—and a lot of others."

"But why did you bring your bricks here?"

"Yes. Make wonderful door-stoppers, bricks do. Solves my Christmas-present problem once an' for all. And speaking of Willis Hushbreep, Vic, I expect you recollect Willis Hushbreep?"

"Can't say I do. No."

"Belvedere fella. Hair turned white when he was still in rompers, grew four separate an' distinct sets of lower teeth before he was twelve, an' ended up marryin' a woman twenty-three years old."

"How old was he?"

"Willis was twenty-four. He'll appreciate gettin' a door-stop for Christmas. This woman he married is s'posed to be a sloppy housekeeper, but—"

Sade had risen and was moving toward the door.

"Where ya going, Kiddo?" asked Vic.

"In the house," said Sade grimly, "an' see about those bricks."

"Where ya going, Sadie?" asked Uncle Fletcher after a pause. "I shoved the bricks way back underneath the sink so you'll have plenty of foot-room when ya wash your dishes. If ya get to playin' with them bricks, Rush, handle 'em kinda gentle. They chip easy."

Rush chuckled and turned to Vic.

"But, gosh," he said "five times twenty-five is—what, Gov? A hundred an' twenty-five pounds. How'd ya get 'em here, Uncle Fletcher?"

"Yes," said Uncle Fletcher. "W. K. Tawplank is another fella I'm going to give a Christmas present to. W. K.

SMUG GUY is Paul Rhymer, author of "Vic and Sade," surrounded by trophies, but specially proud of Movie-Radio Guide's Award of Merit for 1942, presented to him as author of the daytime serial voted most popular by readers

Tawplank hasn't been feelin' very good these last forty-six years. His legs bother him. He'll enjoy a door-stopper. Your garbageman, Mr. Gumpox, helped me bring them bricks from the Chicago an' Alton shops. We carted 'em in the garbage wagon."

Sade returned to the porch. She looked at Vic and said, "They're there all right. Such a monstrous pile of bricks you never saw in all your life."

"Find the bricks, did ya, Sadie?" asked Uncle Fletcher, who had been wool-gathering. "They shoved underneath the sink far enough so you got foot-room to wash dishes?"

Sade pushed a wisp of hair away from her forehead and adjusted the clean apron she had put on.

"Why did you bring 'em up here, Uncle Fletcher? Why didn't you take 'em home?"

"I'll tell ya the story on that," said Uncle Fletcher. "I thought—"

"Yes?"

"You'd enjoy sewing velvet covers on those bricks." Uncle Fletcher spoke importantly as though he had conferred a big favor. "I know you like to sew an' I know you do a lot of sewing." He chuckled. "Well, I'm furnishing you with plenty of sewing."

Sade was flabbergasted. She turned to Vic and said in a low voice, "I'm to put velvet covers on twenty-five bricks."

"You're a lucky girl," Vic whispered, grinning. Uncle Fletcher spoke again.

"Of course, Sadie, I will naturally provide the velvet. Bring it to you tomorrow or the next day. Red velvet, I'm gonna buy."

"Um," said Sade.

"You can take your time about this, ya know. There's no hurry. Christmas is a long time off. Odd moments during the day you can pick yourself up a brick an' cover it with velvet."

"Uh-huh," said Sade, and then, turning to Vic, she said in low tones, "Not only have I got the pleasure of havin' twenty-five bricks underneath my sink, but I also got the privilege of makin' velvet jackets for 'em."

"So now," said Uncle Fletcher, "you know, Sadie, why I took the liberty of unlockin' the door an' walkin' in your kitchen when you wasn't home. Velvet-covered bricks make wonderful Christmas presents." Uncle Fletcher paused. "Best door-stoppers on earth."

"Um," said Sade.

"Help yourself to a brick," Uncle Fletcher said generously, "an' make one for yourself while you're at it."

Sade nodded, moved silently into the kitchen, where she began laying the table for supper. She carefully placed her "Compliments of Toledo, Ohio" gravy-boat on the table. Beside it she set Aunt Bess' olive-and-pickle shoe and the salt- and pepper-shakers shaped like two bare feet. This was Sade's very best china. Uncle Fletcher's generosity must be rewarded. It had been a very, very busy day . . .

TRANS-PACIFIC WEDDING . . . LONDON OFFERS EXPERT WAR COMMENTARY

American Gals Talk Things Over With Their British Sisters; Nazi Braggarts Sneer at Second Front to Hide Their Shudders

Hitched by Cable

WITH American doughboys scattered to the four corners of the earth, many families have been split up, many romances interrupted. To be classed in the latter category is the incident of Lieutenant Paul Skip Miller, of Cape Girardeau, Missouri, who told his story over the Melbourne short-wave station recently. Forced to leave for a point of embarkation upon a few hours notice, he was unable to get to his fiancée, Miss Mary Foster, to fulfill their plans for marriage. Arrangements were made for her to meet him in Reno, where they hoped the ceremony could be performed during a brief lay-over for the Lieutenant. Again fate stepped in, for the plane upon which Miss Foster was to arrive was delayed and Paul Skip Miller was forced to move on. Finally the bride-to-be caught up with her military boy friend at his point of embarkation, but only two hours before his boat was to sail and too late to make the necessary arrangements for the ceremony. But resourceful Lieutenant Miller was still not through. He had planned to be married and married he was going to be, even though separated by thousands of miles of water. "I'll marry her by cable," he said. His buddies laughed at him, but he knew he was within his legal rights, so off he went in far-off Australia to a lawyer, explained the situation and asked for advice. The lawyer said such a ceremony was perfectly legal, so the marriage cable was worded and sent. A few hours later, unsuspecting Mary Foster, back in Cape Girardeau, Missouri, tore open the following cable: TODAY I TAKE YOU MARY FOSTER TO BE MY LAWFUL WIFE—SIGNED PAUL SKIP MILLER. As simple as that, and Mary Foster became Mrs. Paul Skip Miller. As a wedding present to his wife, Lieutenant Miller spoke to his bride over the Melbourne short-wave station. His words were simple, but I am sure Mary read volumes into them: "In case you hear this, Darling, I hope you are all right, and I can hardly wait to see you again." (If Mrs. Paul Skip Miller reads this column, we should be glad to know if she heard her husband speak from Australia the other morning.)

CBS Shows to Antipodes

Many of CBS' top shows are now being short-waved regularly to Asia and the Antipodes by KGEI, at San Francisco. Among requested shows being short-waved are "Your Hit Parade," "The Prudential Family Hour," "Gay Nineties Revue," "Pause That Refreshes," and Guy Lombardo and orchestra. These programs are being received in Alaska, Hawaii, Midway, China, Burma, Australia, New Zealand, New Caledonia, all of the islands of the Pacific, and the southerly half of Africa. Thousands of letters have been received by KGEI from American servicemen across the Pacific, thanking them for the short-wave broadcasts. From a soldier in New Caledonia: "I am a U. S. soldier in service on the island of New Caledonia, and am taking this opportunity to write you a letter of appreciation. I am writing also for the rest of the men in my company . . . Your programs are certainly worth while, and I'm sure morale-lifting. You can depend upon us over here to support you in any way we can. "Keep 'Em Coming." From an officer "somewhere in the southwest

Pacific": "Through a hook-up of amplifiers, some five to six hundred men hear your programs at this location and several other of our batteries also tune in on their own receiving sets."

Less Meat for Swiss

Bern, Switzerland, radio announced that the meat ration for August will be two pounds, including bones. However, as compensation, each person will receive three-quarters ounce more of cheese and two ounces more of tea.

One Woman to Another

"One Woman To Another," a new program describing the important role and the activities of the American woman in a world at war, is now beamed to the British Isles every Friday at 8:15 a.m. PWT, over NBC stations WRCA (15.15) and WBOS (15.21). The new show is written and narrated by Marjorie Brook, Canadian-born. She describes the aims of the broadcast in the words of the opening script. "We, over here in America, want to tell you how we are getting along during these worrisome times. We want you to know not only our serious side but also our lighter side. We're going to tell you about our newly formed Woman's Army Auxiliary Corps, about our factory girls and Red Cross units, and government workers—but we're also going to tell you a bit of our gossip—how the fashion world is adapting itself to the new restrictions, what's going on in Hollywood and along Broadway, and what the latest shades of nail-polish are."

Berlin Asks for It

Like the little boy whistling to prove his bravery as he walks by the village cemetery at night, Berlin radio is doing a lot of loud shouting about the proposed Allied second front. Lord Haw Haw said this: "In Germany there is a calm and quiet confidence that should the Allies invade Europe they will be defeated. Germany has made all her preparations down to the most minute detail. We cannot lose." Said Fred Kaltenbach: "Germany is prepared for any kind of a second front. The United Nations are not ready for a full-scale invasion. Nothing less would do them the slightest good. They undoubtedly will make a pretense of an invasion by landing a few hundred soldiers somewhere along the coast."

Short Waves Guide Ships, Aircraft

According to William C. White, head of General Electric's electronic laboratory, in a broadcast over the Schenectady short-wave stations, the development and use of high-frequency radio waves that resemble light waves in some respect and which can be formed into beams and made to do things that cannot be done with light, will be a part of the contributions to be made by science of electronics toward better living when the war is over. Mr. White explained how they can penetrate clouds, smoke, fog and storm and thus become a great navigation aid to ocean liners and aircraft.

HOW TO USE THIS SECTION

All daytime programs for Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday between the hours of 7:00 a.m. and 3:15 p.m., inclusive, are listed in this section.

The daytime programs listed under the heading "Monday Through Friday Programs" are all programs broadcast Monday through Friday at the same time each day.

Half-way down the same column and under the same time-line you will note the word "exceptions." All programs listed under this heading are those which are not broadcast at the same time Monday through Friday but are different every day or broadcast in a series of two or more, such as Monday-Tuesday, Monday-Wednesday-Friday, etc. In other words, if you are looking for a news program or a dramatic serial broadcast at the same time each day it will be listed under the "Monday Through Friday" heading. All other programs will be found under "Exceptions."

It's Adolf Now

A new catchphrase has appeared. It is "Dear Adolf," title of the program scripted by Poet Stephen Vincent Benet. Radio folk, newspapermen and John Doe are using "Dear Adolf," and it's replacing "Schickelgruber." "Dear Adolf" carries so much more subtle feeling.

KELA-Treasury Star Parade

Eloise Kummer, Carolyn Kramer in "Right to Happiness," was out this week buying silver bars on order from her husband, Capt. Wayne Cameron, U. S. Army. He had just received his promotion from first lieutenant and, unable to buy the bars in Iceland, where he is stationed, Captain Cameron asked his actress-wife to send them from Chicago.

No Specialists

Frank Black's musicians are versatile, to say the least. On Friday nights they play music ranging from the popular to the semi-classic. On Sundays during Black's "We Believe" airing over NBC they play nothing but sacred music.

Topicals Don't Click

Songs about current events range from the dictators to the draft, but Andre Kostelanetz, conductor of "The Pause That Refreshes" over CBS Sundays, finds that only a few reach the list of ten most popular songs. And as far as the boys in the service are concerned, they don't care for that type of song at all. A survey reveals that such numbers as "Tangerine," "I Don't Want to Walk Without You" and "Strings of Pearls" are what the uniformed lads prefer.

Hobby: Babies

Helping underprivileged children has been the hobby for the last fifteen years of Mrs. Donald Nelson, wife of the head of America's War Production Board, and she told Dave Elman about it when she appeared as a guest on his "Hobby Lobby" program over CBS. "There's little we can do for the children of the war-torn countries, but here in this nation there is something everyone can do to give our American children a happy childhood," she told listeners. Incidentally, when Elman suggested that being the wife of the WPB head "is an exciting life," she retorted: "The only time I see Donald is in the newsreels. I didn't know it was possible to be a widow when the husband is still alive."

Room Will Have" for Marlene Dietrich. Marlene is effective only when singing salty, suggestive songs. She has great confidence in Mr. Hollander and insists on his presence whenever she rehearses a song.

The late Victor Schertzinger and I wrote "I'll Never Let a Day Pass By" for Don Ameche, and thereby hangs a tale. We called the song "I'll Never Let a Day Go By," and that was its title until the moment Ameche stepped up to the recording microphone. Suddenly he refused to go on with the song. He was afraid his Italian relatives would misunderstand the words "Day Go." We had to change the title before he would sing.

Bob Hope needs songs which match his personality—not too much maudlin romance but lots of gaiety and life and a touch of "tongue in the cheek." Bob's a very self-conscious performer, and he knows his own limitations. Timing is something else that is very important to the comedian—and therefore to his song-writers. My "Two Sleepy People" is an example of a Hopeful song.

One of the most difficult assignments I have ever handled concerned the folk-songs in "Tortilla Flat." The singers had no special singing quirks—they simply couldn't sing. The whole group—Spencer Tracy, John Garfield, Akim Tamiroff and Allen Jenkins—was incapable of singing a note on key. Finally, in despair, I suggested to the director that the song should be sung while the characters acted slightly drunk. The sour notes, which were bound to come, would then appear as part of the effects of liquor. The stunt worked out very well, and a real load was lifted from my worry-box.

These examples will give you an idea of the Hollywood song-writers' problems. But don't think we wail over our lot. We know that when we slant our work to the special talents of individual stars we're assuring you better entertainment.

ROAD of LIFE

In the Final Instalment Linden Wade Solves the Strange Case of City Hospital's Missing Patient

PART 6

The exciting story of the radio program "Road of Life," fictionized by Wiley Maloney, is broadcast Monday through Friday over NBC at 11 a.m. EWT, 10 CWT, 9 MWT, 3 p.m. PWT, under the sponsorship of Procter and Gamble for Duz. When Dr. Jim Brent, ace surgeon, is permitted to bring in Doc Thompson as his resident physician, City Hospital's proud chief of staff, Dr. Reginald Parsons, considers the matter a personal affront and resigns.

A few days later a mysterious case comes under Dr. Brent's supervision when the Hurleys bring their niece, Claudia Wilson, to City Hospital. Brent's skill saves her life, but for some strange reason the Hurleys don't seem to want Claudia to get well, intimate she is not sane. Though Claudia is twenty years old, she has a governess, a Miss Radcliff, who resents the interest shown in Claudia at the hospital. After quarreling bitterly with Doc Thompson about securing Claudia's release, Miss Radcliff returns to the hospital at night and removes the girl to a private sanitarium.

Claudia's disappearance creates great excitement at the hospital. To avoid unsavory publicity, Dr. Brent does not notify the police, instead hires his friend, Linden Wade, to investigate the case privately. Though this attempt is made to keep the case secret, a nurse accidentally lets a hint slip to a newspaper reporter. Like a bombshell, the news of City Hospital's missing patient breaks in the morning paper, concurrently with the announcement of Dr. Brent's appointment as chief of staff.

Knowing the story could not be suppressed for long, Dr. Brent finds himself in a bad spot. Linden Wade is optimistic, continues his investigation. Meanwhile, in the sanitarium to which Claudia was taken, the Hurleys and Sarah Radcliff make plans to flee from the state. Later, when Miss Radcliff tries to get Claudia asleep, the girl becomes suspicious and difficult to handle, refusing to go to sleep or leave the sanitarium. Miss Radcliff is furious and prepares to give the girl a hypodermic to quiet her when a knock on the door is heard and a man's voice demands entrance. Confusion, hatred and fear creep into Sarah Radcliff's eyes. Had something gone wrong with her plans? Would Claudia try to tell this man the truth when he came into the room? Now go on with the story.

—The Editors.

SARAH RADCLIFF, with anger in her eyes and hatred in her soul, opened the door of Claudia Wilson's room at Crestview Sanitarium. Two stern-faced men burst into the room and glowered at the older woman.

"Are you Miss Radcliff?" one of them asked.

"Yes."

"And you're Miss Wilson, aren't you?" the man asked, turning to Claudia.

"Yes," said Sarah, "she's Miss Wilson. But who are you—and the gentleman with you?"

"Officers Roberts and Buckley, Private detectives, Miss Radcliff. We'd like to have a little talk with you and your patient."

"My patient," she said, "is getting ready to retire, officer. She hasn't been well. If you don't mind waiting out in the hall—"

But the private investigators employed by Dr. Jim Brent's friend, Linden Wade, could not be put off. Detective Joe Buckley interrupted the woman and took a step forward. His out-thrust jaw was determined and stubborn.

"Wait a minute," he said. "You can't bluff your way out of this. The sanitarium records show that you and the Hurleys lied about where this girl had been operated on and by whom. We know that she was never at Municipal Hospital, as the Hurleys said, and that she never was operated upon by a Dr. Kent—"

"That's right," cried Claudia, breaking her silence for the first time. "I was at City Hospital—Dr. Brent looked after me." Despite Sarah's dark glance, Claudia poured forth her story. "Dr. Thompson took care of me. They tried to make me believe I was never there—they tried to make me believe I'm out of my mind, officer. But I'm not. They were planning things tonight, they—"

"The more you talk, dear," said Sarah, "the more evident it'll be that you don't know what you're talking about." She looked as though she could kill the girl right there, although her voice remained even-tempered and sweet. Too sweet. The detectives weren't fooled.

"Never mind that, Miss Radcliff," Frank Roberts said. "The girl knows what she's talking about. We've had just enough time to do a little checking up and we happen to know that Mr. and Mrs. Hurley were planning to leave here tonight. Happen to know that the doctor in charge already has dismissed your patient."

Claudia looked from the detectives to Miss Radcliff. She was almost panic-stricken by the swift movement of events.

Sarah Radcliff bit her lips and tried to control her voice. She almost succeeded.

"We were going to leave here tonight—yes," she said. "We were going to St. Louis to see a psychiatrist. We didn't want the girl to know—it's got to the place where she'll have to be institutionalized. We didn't want to tell her. She hasn't been in her right mind for over eight years—she isn't in her right mind now."

"Don't say that," cried Claudia hysterically. "I'm not out of my mind. I'm not! I'm not! You've been trying to make me believe that for over eight years. I didn't realize what you were doing to me—what my aunt and uncle were doing to me—not until after I was operated on, not until Dr. Thompson told me I was like other girls, that there wasn't anything wrong with me."

There was a tap at the door. The detectives whirled on Miss Radcliff, who was about to answer the knock. They took over. It was an attendant outside who said there was a telephone call for Sarah Radcliff. But Buckley answered the call. He listened carefully but didn't recognize the man's voice at the other end of the wire. The man was George Hurley, who, with Jane Hurley, had been waiting near the sanitarium for a signal from Sarah Radcliff. The fact that a man answered the telephone was warning enough for Hurley that the time had come to put as much distance between himself and the sanitarium as possible. He knew the game was up!

Miss Radcliff, too, realized that bluffing would help her no longer when Linden Wade arrived and lis-

Tricks of the Beauty Trade

SOME are born beautiful, others with a Phi Beta Kappa key dangling from their diaper. And if Dame Nature played hookey the day you arrived for the glamour handout—be a phony! We're all for fooling the public—making them think Cleo's been brought back to life. What if your glamour glides down the drain to a soap-suds refrain—mirror, mirror on the wall will keep your secret. And so will we!

Camouflage is more than a battleship's business. The brothers Westmore—Perc, Mont, Bud and Wally, make-up directors at four of Hollywood's largest film studios—are gilders of the lily from away back. For while 'tis true that "beauty is only skin deep," all too few men have X-ray lenses. You'd do better to put up a fascinating "front."

First of all, it's important to understand that the sole purpose of make-up is to enhance your attractiveness—to create an illusion of loveliness. At certain angles, reflected light casts sharp shadows across your face—unbecoming lines that would be corrected with a proper application of make-up. You can't possibly expect to change your face, but its appearance—the illusion it presents—can be corrected.

Bud Westmore tags it "masked make-up." He described the theory to me the other day and showed me its practical application on the 20th Century-Fox movie lot.

"The average woman with a big face labors under the misconception that by making her mouth into a cupid's bow, wearing her rouge in small, definite circles on her cheeks and styling her hair into small, tight curls, she's minimizing the size of her face. Nothing could be more deadly," he laments. "This 'small' treatment serves only to accentuate size."

Make-up is not something that comes out of a jar or a box to be rubbed or dabbed on your face in haphazard fashion. It's a science that will teach you how to make the most of your God-given features. Don't think of it in terms of powder, rouge and lipstick—concentrate on the "tricks of the beauty trade" and see to it that your make-up expresses a willingness to be taken at face value.

NOW, to get down to base facts! Play up your good features and play down your bad ones with an application of foundation cream. It's equivalent to the portrait artist's ground tone and will create an illusion of roundness or elongation via the highlight-and-shadow method of make-up artistry. Correct the appearance of size by using a lighter foundation on the cheeks in the area just at the sides of the nose. Blend your cream in with your natural skin tones, over the nose and on the outer cheeks, creating an illusion of fullness for your cheek-line. You

Brautigam twins offer attractive proof that

PEPSODENT POWDER makes teeth TWICE AS BRIGHT

"I guess the first time in our lives we were really different was when Beverly and I made the tooth powder test. Naturally, as twins, we not only look alike...we usually do everything alike. But in the test, I used Pepsodent. Beverly used another leading brand. From then on, there was a big difference between us."

"We're a trio from now on!
A pair of twins and Pepsodent!"

"No test could have been fairer. But at first I thought maybe I just imagined my teeth were twice as bright. However, when a friend of mine asked me what made my teeth shine so, I was really convinced! Did I give him a selling on Pepsodent! The proof is so definite we'd never think of going back to any other brand!"

For the safety of your smile . . .
use Pepsodent twice a day . . .
see your dentist twice a year.

BRAUTIGAM TWINS TEST AND CONFIRM THIS FACT:

INDEPENDENT LABORATORY TESTS FOUND NO OTHER DENTIFRICE THAT COULD MATCH THE HIGH LUSTRE PRODUCED BY PEPSODENT... BY ACTUAL TEST, PEPSODENT PRODUCES A LUSTRE TWICE AS BRIGHT AS THE AVERAGE OF ALL OTHER LEADING BRANDS!

thus minimize nose proportions easily. However, if yours is a pekinese pug, a lighter foundation cream brought right down the center will serve you in good stead.

If your mouth is too wide for your face, use your lipstick to make it narrower. Painted full at the center, it should be tapered off gradually before reaching the smile corners. And if your face belongs to the round, triangle or square type—full cheeks and a broad jawline—a wide mouth is your beauty benefactor. It will cut down the apparent width of your cheek-line and give you the desired oval contour.

A prominent or protruding nose should be powdered last. The first application of powder or a rouge accent will highlight and accentuate a problem profile. To foreshorten a Cyrano proboscis, remove eyebrows in the center, above the nose. This will create an illusion of forehead width and decrease the obvious length of prominent features.

In color-choosing your cosmetics let your skin—not your hair—be your guide. You'll find that the majority of cosmetic preparations are based on this principle. House lines boast of matched make-up units—rouge, powder and lipstick, selling for $1, that complement your color type.

Woodbury's color-controlled cosmetics, Bourjois' harmonized make-up set, the House of Westmore's color-filtered cosmetics, Hampden's highlight-and-shadow photography kit, and Dorothy Gray's powder-blending service were designed specifically to help you choose cosmetics that key with your skin tones. Take advantage of this consumer service—color-choose your make-up "musts" and put your best face forward!

WHAT'S COOKING!

To Begin With—Breakfast

By GEORGIA SCOTT

IF YOU'RE eager to start the day right, a hearty, healthful breakfast is in order. The warm season offers a challenge to your ingenuity—don't let summer breakfast menus baffle you. Begin by realizing that a lot of food does not necessarily mean a lot of energy. Similarly, a small breakfast need not be lacking in nourishment. Whether your family likes theirs small, medium or man-sized—hot or cold—make their morning meal adequate!

Plan your breakfast menu the night before. It's a great advantage if you're the roll-over-on-the-other-side kind. Call "time out" to prepare fruit, set the table or mix a batter before doing your daily dozens—this time-saving device will allow thirty extra winks of sleep come morning. When setting your table, make the most of colorful floral settings or pretty-pretty cloths and shining service. They create a cheerful breakfast atmosphere and set a happy pace for the working day.

Make the morning-after something to look forward to! Prepare slews of fruit—try the various types seasonally on the market and experiment with the myriad ways possible for serving them. Rich prunes and apricots, cherry-circled bananas, red raspberries on peach halves and strawberries with melon wedges are excellent suggestions that have come to my desk.

And by all means be novel about your hot breads and main dishes. Coddle an egg on Monday, whip one into a batter on Tuesday, treat the family with piping-hot muffins one day and wow them with stacks of pancakes the next. You're sure to find that the family appetite grows in proportion with your culinary ingenuity.

Be wise about cereals! The Government's guide to nourishing foods, given food editors recently, plugs away at prepared cereals—the kind that have been "restored" with whole-grain nutritional values. Some of the world's largest manufacturers of ready-to-eat cereals are "enriching" their breakfast products with vitamins and minerals. Yes, it's an "all out" to get on the health bandwagon!

Restored cereals taste no different nor do they look different from those we're accustomed to eating. Actually, all that's taken place is the addition of thiamin, niacin and iron—three nutritive elements found in the whole grain. The whole grain, unfortunately, is too hard and too unpalatable for the making of ready-to-eat cereals. It also contains an oil that goes rancid in a short time. But since science has shown how necessary the whole-grain elements are, restoring them by enrichment is a wise nutritional step that benefits millions of people without changing established eating-habits.

Happily for housewives, home cooking is kind to these added elements.

BE NOVEL about your morning meal. Madaline Lee (above), who is heard as Miss Lou on "Amos 'n' Andy" over CBS, recommends tasty spoon bread

LEFT: Make the morning meal adequate. Muffins, jam, fresh fruit, enriched cereals and eggs start the family off for the day with a hearty breakfast

Very little is lost in the oven or stewpan. And this in itself points to a practical new way of getting more nutrition into meals. Puddings, cookies, muffins, pies, even meat loaves and dressings can be made with prepared cereals. The results are both taste-tempting and health-building.

Try some cool-headed ideas for a summer morning—light, fluffy, tasty things suit your summer palate. We're suggesting the following menus:

Raspberries and Cereal Flakes,
Half-and-Half, with Milk or Cream
Frizzled Ham Cinnamon Toast
Postum, Tea, or Coffee

Cantaloupe Toasties Cup with Cream
Blueberry Muffins or Cherry Muffins
Coffee or Cocoa

Cherries or Grapes
Cocoanut-Crested Bran Flakes with Milk or Cream
Marmalade Toasted Muffins
Cocoa or Coffee

Pineapple and Strawberry Fruit Plate
Soft-Cooked Eggs
Quick-Bran Cinnamon Rolls
Milk, Tea or Coffee

Cereal Flakes with Milk or Cream
Sugared Berries Soft Rolls
Sweet Butter
Cocoa or Coffee

Fresh Tomato Juice
Blueberry Flakes Griddle Cakes
Syrup or Brown Sugar
Broiled Bacon
Tea or Cafe au Lait

I KNOW, myself, what it means to have the kind of body that people pity! Of course, you wouldn't know it to look at me now, but I was once a skinny weakling who weighed only 97 lbs. I was ashamed to strip for sports or undress for a swim. I was such a poor specimen of physical development that I was constantly self-conscious and embarrassed. And I felt only HALF-ALIVE.

Then I discovered "Dynamic Tension." It gave me a body that won me the title "World's Most Perfectly Developed Man."

When I say I can make you over into a man of giant power and energy, I know what I'm talking about. I've seen "Dynamic Tension" transform hundreds of weak, puny men into Atlas Champions.

tened to Claudia's pleading voice. Wade bundled the girl up and had her put into his car. He and his officers, with Miss Radcliff, started the long drive back to Chicago in the early morning hours. The strain had been too much for Claudia. Wade looked down at her with worry in his eyes as she collapsed against the back of the seat. He put a protective arm about her shoulders and prayed that he could get her back to City Hospital before it was too late.

It was almost 3:30 a.m.—that hour of the morning when an eerie quietness prevailed in the corridors and rooms of the massive hospital. The newly appointed chief of staff made his way to the third floor, where Doc, his resident physician, had been talking to Sally Barnett, the night supervisor. Observing the lines of fatigue on Dr. Brent's face, Doc said, "Was it necessary for you to come over at this hour of the morning, Jim?"

"No," Jim replied slowly, "not exactly necessary. I wouldn't have come if Lin hadn't told me that Miss Wilson was pretty much on the ragged edge. I suggested that if she needed medical attention, he'd better keep her at the sanitarium for the night. But it seems that she refused to stay."

"Do you feel relieved, Fellah?" Jim smiled grimly. "What do you think? I don't believe anyone can quite grasp the enormity of the strain I was under—two weeks of it. Well, now that the patient has been found, maybe I'll be able to get a little sleep."

"Maybe," said Doc, "the next time you won't be so pig-headed." He stroked his chin and looked soberly at Jim. "I suppose I did go overboard a little. Maybe I'm somewhat to blame for the loops you've been put through."

Jim raised a hand in protest. "You're a great guy, Doc. You were doing exactly what you should have done, as a doctor and as my resident. You being you couldn't have done otherwise. That's all water under the bridge." There was a pause as the two men sat in silence. Doc finally spoke.

"Jim," he asked, "what happens to a resident if he decides to get married?"

"What?"

"Well, I mean—"

"Oh—married? You mean to say all this has been going on and I haven't had the slightest inkling of it?"

"All what?" Doc asked.

"You and Sally," Jim said, grinning.

"Oh," Doc said, looking suspiciously at Jim. "So you haven't had the slightest inkling of it?"

"I may be blind to some things, Doc," Jim said good-naturedly, "but I'd have had to wear blinkers not to see what's been going on. I didn't know that it had reached—"

"Oh, now, wait a minute—I—I'm just—well, giving the idea a little consideration."

"Is Sally giving it a little consideration, too?"

"She hasn't exactly discouraged me. But I haven't asked her yet and I don't know just how to go about it."

Jim laughed and said something about how he believed that if there were any two people who could hit it off successfully, it would be Doc and Sally Barnett.

"You're both old enough to know what you want—you've both known the seamy side of life and you both know values, real values."

"You say that, Jim, almost—well, almost poignantly."

"Perhaps," Jim said, with a little catch in his voice. "Perhaps, I was caught off guard."

"That," Doc observed, "hasn't been happening as much as it should—your being caught off guard, I mean. You've built a wall around yourself, Jim, that dates back to the time you and Carol broke up. Maybe this case has brought about a crack in that wall. You're more human tonight than I've seen you in many a day. I'm almost beginning to believe that you and Carol eventually will make up again, and then we'll have the old Jim Brent back with us again—the Jim Brent who's a man and not a machine."

"I'd rather not discuss my problems now, Doc," Jim said, but Doc noticed the trace of a smile about his superior's lips.

THE telephone rang and Jim answered. The conversation was short and at its conclusion Jim turned to Doc.

"Lin just got here—the girl collapsed and they're bringing her up on a stretcher."

A few minutes later Claudia Wilson was carried into room 318 and Dr. Brent took over. A half-hour later the young surgeon left the room and Lin Wade looked at his friend questioningly.

"She'll be all right," Jim said.

"Maybe," Lin agreed doubtfully. "Maybe for the time being she's all right. But I want to have a talk with you, Jim, with you and Dr. Thompson. This girl is going to be in need of medical attention for a long time."

That morning, as the first streaks of dawn broke over the sleeping city, Dr. Brent, Doc Thompson and Linden Wade sat in an office on the first floor of the hospital discussing the case. Wade reviewed what had occurred at the sanitarium near Litchfield.

"Miss Wilson," he said, "was actually in a state of hysteria when I arrived. We got the nurse out of the room. I had to do a lot of talking to quiet the girl, but I got enough out of her to arrest Miss Radcliff and to have a warrant sworn out for the Hurleys. Claudia signed a statement that she'd been held a prisoner for almost eight years—she hasn't the faintest idea why. But I have some definite ideas and need only a few more facts to build a good case. Miss Radcliff is being held and we'll have the Hurleys within forty-eight hours. If the girl prosecutes—well, it's an open-and-shut case. There's a money angle involved, as I told you before—a will left by the girl's parents. The Hurleys—if I don't miss my guess—are going to be held on a murder charge."

"Murder charge? That's fantastic, Lin."

"It may sound so to you, but I've dealt with these situations before and, Fellah, I have my own opinion about this one. Meanwhile, there's this girl. For years she's been told, through the power of suggestion, that she's mentally unbalanced, and you doctors know only too well what the power of suggestion can do. Somebody's got to put that girl on the right track before she becomes a psychopathic case. Now do you understand, Jim, what I meant when I said the girl's going to need medical attention for some time to come?"

"Yes," Jim agreed. "A good psychiatrist might possibly help."

"No, Jim," said Doc, "what that girl needs is a good doctor—a doctor who is understanding and human. And, Jim, she's your patient. Don't forget that. And I think you're the man for the job."

Jim was inclined to argue with Doc. He maintained that he was a surgeon and unqualified to help Claudia Wilson. But Doc, in experienced wisdom, knew that the girl trusted Dr. Brent and that, if Jim could be prevailed upon to give her the medical and human attention she needed, it would help them both. It might result in Jim's finding himself, becoming his old reliable, likable self once more.

The next day Lin Wade learned the final details in the case of Claudia Wilson. The truth had been buried deeply in the girl's subconsciousness and Linden Wade's probing questions brought it to light. Wade reviewed the case, told Claudia about the will, about how her parents had left her almost $1,500,000 in real estate and securities, about how the Hurleys had had her declared legally incompetent.

Claudia looked at the investigator with troubled eyes. "They—they actually wanted me out of the way—"

"You believe that, do you?" Wade asked.

"What else can I believe? At the time I didn't think anything of it, but now—you see, Mr. Wade, I had been ill any number of times before I finally was brought to a hospital."

"You were?"

"My uncle wouldn't hear of a doctor being called in. He kept saying to my aunt, 'It'll pass over—a little indigestion.' Oh, he wanted me to die. But, Mr. Wade, I—I—you don't understand. I've just been thinking—I've been thinking about—"

"About what?"

"They hoped that I'd be killed when my father and mother—oh, I seem to remember—oh, dear God—not that. No, not that—"

Claudia's pretty forehead was knotted in concentration. Great beads of perspiration formed at the roots of her hair and trickled down her face.

"We were making plans to go to Florida," she said. "We drove south every winter—Mother, Dad and I. I remember the morning we started out. It was a cold, crisp morning. Mother and Dad were sitting in front—I was in back. We hadn't gone too far—just beyond the city limits. I remember my mother saying, 'Not over fifty now, dear, not over fifty.' That's what she said. 'Not over fifty,' and—and suddenly the car got out of control. Mother screamed and Dad—oh, what did he say? Yes, yes . . . I remember now. Oh, Mr. Wade, this is horrible and I'd forgotten all about it. My father said, 'This car's been tampered with.' And that's all I remember." Claudia's voice became hysterical as the spell of memory broke. "My aunt and uncle—they murdered my father and mother!"

So the truth was learned at last. Linden Wade talked with Jim and told him that Miss Radcliff would turn state's evidence. He said the woman had a long record and would be sent back to the state of New York, where she was wanted on another charge.

But Claudia, when she recovered from the shock of remembering her father and mother's tragic death, could not bring herself to prosecute her aunt and uncle. She begged Jim to plead with Linden Wade not to force her. Jim tried to explain to Lin.

"She's practically being overwhelmed by a sense of insecurity. She hasn't a thing to hold on to—an aunt and an uncle, a woman whom she's known for over eight years—the only people with whom she's come in contact over that period of years—well, within a matter of weeks, her whole world has crumbled. You can't expect her to have normal reactions."

Had Doc heard Jim talking, he would have known that this was the voice and expression of the old Jim Brent that he knew and liked and the Jim Brent who was loved by beautiful Carol Evans. He would have been filled with hope of an eventual reconciliation between this couple who meant so much to him. It merely was a matter of time . . .

And that night a strange coincidence occurred—a dramatic event that solved the great problem of Claudia's prosecuting an aunt and uncle who had done her so much harm but who still remained the only people she knew as close friends in the world. Lin Wade broke the news to Jim.

"This is my story," he said, "and I'll tell it in my own way. For eight years a youngster—a girl—was made to believe that her mother and father died in an accident—"

"Go on," Jim urged.

"Strange," Wade said, "very strange, Jim, that we're going to have to tell this same girl that her aunt and uncle were killed in the same kind of an accident!"

"Great Scott!" Jim cried in astonishment. "Lin, you don't mean—"

"I do, Suicide—a steering knuckle tampered with! It happened only a few hours ago on a state highway in Kansas. What remained of the car was gone over with a fine-tooth comb. The report that I just got was from police headquarters here . . ."

LATE that night Doc and Sally Barnett, the night supervisor, discussed the strange case. It seemed to draw these two people closer together. Doc actually worked up nerve enough to propose to Sally and, to Doc's surprise and joy, she accepted. It had been easier to do than he had hoped.

"Sally," he said, "I don't know what to say—I—"

"Don't say anything. That's the nice thing about us, Doc, we don't have to say—we just know."

"You certainly have a swell way of putting things," Doc said. "All of a sudden, you're so different—you know what I mean, don't you?"

"I'm afraid I don't, except that—I'm very happy."

Doc told Sally that she'd have to leave City Hospital, that he never could "see" a woman working as long as a man could provide a roof and three meals a day.

"City Hospital or any other hospital," he said, "is out so far as my wife is concerned. And, Sally, that's one thing on which I won't compromise."

"I'm not asking you to, Doc. Ever since I've been old enough to know what I really wanted out of life, I've been waiting for the right man to tell me that my place is in the home—our home."
