How Movies Can Best Aid the War Effort

RADIO—Right Arm of the U. S. Signal Corps

THIS is a radio war! On radio depends largely our coordination and synchronization of land, sea and air forces that will bring to America and her allies ultimate victory. To quote Major General Dawson Olmstead, chief signal officer of the Army, "At one time military communications meant carrier pigeons and wigwag with flags. But the electrons have pushed the pigeons and flags back so far that we don't talk much about them any more."

Certainly the importance of Signal Corps communication by radio cannot be overestimated for speed and efficiency. Plans, decisions and orders issued never win a battle unless those orders, based on enemy information, are finally executed on the battlefield. Signal Corps communication by radio does the job! Messages by wire, to be sure, play a vital part in modern warfare. For example: 12,000 telephone calls go into the building of one bomber. But the radio takes it up from there, does that which wires can't do—maneuver planes, tanks and ships. According to General Olmstead, "An airplane without a radio has been called a dead pigeon. A tank with defective communications, a blind horse. The man responsible for the condition of the radio which makes it possible for a bomber to reach Berlin is contributing as much to winning the war as the bombardier who drops the bombs."

"Modern mechanisms of communication demand an unusual type of young American manhood. For this is a war of vacuum tubes, electrons, resistors and condensers, and a lot of other technical devices, unknown when I entered the Signal Corps."

To mention how many radio sets are now in operation in the U. S. Signal Corps is impossible, for it is a military secret, zealously guarded; but it can be revealed that for every hundred soldiers in that service there must be fifty civilians, trained in accredited technical schools, to keep them operating efficiently. To meet that need, pre-service training courses are conducted in high schools, colleges, preparing students for jobs in installation, maintenance and operation of radio equipment.

More than 250 vocational schools and colleges are conducting Signal Corps courses for an estimated number of twenty thousand trainees. In addition, many civilian schools are operated by the Corps on its own premises. Here especially the trainee learns by doing under the guidance of skilled radio mechanics.

To our way of thinking, this training is double-barreled in its results, for it not only serves to strengthen America's right arm in the present global war but forms the foundation for a future when the power of radio will play a vital part in rebuilding for peace-time living a war-torn world!

How Movies Can Best Aid the War Effort

Motion Picture Producers, Directors, Writers and Actors Discussed the Subject on "The American Forum of the Air"

IN A recent broadcast of "The American Forum of the Air," the subject discussed was, "How Movies Can Best Aid the War Effort." As a secondary topic, the question, "How Indispensable Is an Actor?" was posed. To get the best-informed talent available for his discussion panel, Ted Granik, originator of the thirteen-year-old program, broadcast from the West Coast for the second time since the inception of the series. When he queried top star Rosalind Russell and Walt Disney, producer, extraordinary, both agreed that some movie stars are the world's best recruiting officers, and are, therefore, invaluable on the job. But when Miss Russell suggested that movie shorts were the best medium of civilian instruction via the screen, Mr. Disney retorted, "Why make me do all the work?" However, that query to the contrary notwithstanding, the U. S. and Canadian governments apparently agree with Miss Russell. For all Disney's characters, from Donald Duck to the Big Bad Wolf, have gone to war. In addition, a host of productions on technical subjects have been officially assigned to Disney's studio "on a basis of special equipment nowhere else available."

America's Ace Comedian Tours Northern War Zone to Bring Merriment to Fighting Men at the Front; Bob Hope's Trip With Frances Langford and Jerry Colonna Reaches Post Within Hundred Miles of Jap Positions

BOB HOPE went looking for trouble this summer. With Frances Langford and Jerry Colonna, he traveled the front-line defenses of America in Alaska and the Aleutian Islands. How much he saw and what posts he visited are military secrets, but the trio's trip carried them within a hundred miles of Jap positions.

Bob had long planned to make a personal-appearance tour of our northern Army camps. He had been set to go once, only to have his permits canceled suddenly by military authorities, for reasons the Army refuses to state. Perhaps action was flaring or great troop movements were under way.

Finally, as Bob completed the filming of Samuel Goldwyn's "They Got Me Covered," with Dorothy Lamour, word came that he could go north. An Army sergeant reported to the Goldwyn studio to finger-print and photograph Bob for his permit.

It was an exciting, busy trip for Hope, Jerry and Frances. They put on shows in thirty-five camps in fourteen days. They played to thousands of soldiers—how many thousands being a military secret. From early dawn to late at night they were on the go, either performing or traveling.

The Alaska trip was Bob's greatest adventure in camp entertaining, but not his first. He's been up to his neck in all types of war activities for many months. He has toured camps far and wide. He has turned his golf feud with Bing Crosby into a gold mine for military relief funds.

Bob Hope probably won't lose touch with the Army and Navy until victory is won. His Tuesday night broadcasts this fall will come from military establishments. The benefit golf matches with Bing continue, and a date has been made for Bob to broadcast from the new Hollywood Canteen.

Our fighting men love Bob's shows and appreciate his efforts in their behalf. But Bob doesn't think he's doing them a favor. He feels that it's an honor to appear before the men who have the world's toughest job.

This film illustrates how all soaps and soap shampoos dull lustre of hair!

All soaps—and liquid soap shampoos—always combine with the minerals in water, to form a sticky scum. (Bath-tub ring.) This scum leaves a film on hair that dulls the natural lustre—and clings stubbornly, no matter how thoroughly you rinse with clear water.

But Drene is different! It is made by an exclusive, patented process. Its action in water is different. Drene does not combine with minerals to form a scum—so it never leaves any dulling film on hair. Instead, Drene reveals up to 33% more lustre than even the finest soaps or soap shampoos!

For Instance...

"We would like to have tarried [over Tokyo] and watched the later developments of fire and explosion, but even so we were fortunate to receive a fairly detailed report from the excited Japanese radio broadcasts. It took them several hours to calm down to deception and accusation." (Brig. Gen. James H. Doolittle in news reports of Tokyo bombing)

Interesting!

Watch for radio use in the war news—you'll find it in the air—on the ground—and at home.

WITHOUT radio, the movement of war would still be anchored by telephone lines—the physical hazards of the courier and visual signals.

Now war moves swiftly over the whole face of the earth—instantaneous radio communication thru the ether instead of over copper wires has blasted the barriers of space and time.

So today all our radio production centers on war use.

But what of tomorrow—what effect will this have upon the future—after victory?

One thing is certain—it will revolutionize and speed the great new future form of transportation.

Radio has never been universally necessary in transportation before. In automobiles—on trains—it has been entertainment—in boats it has been a great aid but not an essential.

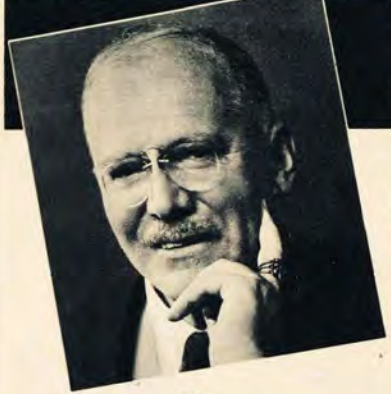

But today for the future, in that great, new universal transportation that is forming itself—the airplane—radio is essential as the engine itself.

And—mark this well—airplanes and radio are two of the four great industries destined to lead this country back to business normalcy after the peace is won.

Zenith's leadership in the radio industry has been established by a constant achievement of "firsts." Repeatedly, ideas "brand new" when Zenith "first" introduced them, later became essentials on all radios. And that same "forward thinking" of engineers and factory and organization now concentrates on war production of the thing we know—radio—exclusively radio. We are progressing—we learn every day—and this new experience will inevitably reflect itself when Zenith again produces for peace.

IMPRESSIONS OF WAR-TIME BRITAIN

Accent on Air Power, a Cry for More and Better Air Transport Strike the Keynote!

By
H. V. KALTENBORN

I WAS away from the United States for six days. Five of them I spent in the British Isles. Twice within six days I slept my way across the Atlantic.

As Sir Archibald Sinclair observed in a statement he issued on my arrival in England, the speed of my journey symbolized the speed with which U. S. armament can reach Britain. He recalled that it is only one hop from the American factory which builds the bomber to the British airfield from which it goes into service, and that it is another and shorter hop to the German target on which it will rain its bombs.

My attention has been called to a statement made by Viscount Trenchard which I should like to pin above the desk of every ground-minded general: Any nation that neglects its air-power and declines to move with the times and free itself from the trammels of military or naval tradition, does so at its own peril.

Air-power also means air-transport. Everything I learned during this week's brief but intensive contact abroad with the war confirms this fact. Every flying officer I met, British, American and Canadian, is crying for more and better air-transport. One of Britain's most progressive military minds sums it up in these words: "All divisions with their artillery, mortars, soakin' your feet. Couldn't be a nicer campin' spot. So I made it a habit, every time I went through, to stop off there an' rest for a while. Other prospectors done the same thing. The first owner o' the ranch didn't object. He wasn't usin' that corner o' the property anyhow. Everything was lovely, till one year I come along an' found a barbed-wire fence had been put around the spring."

I listened to Uncle Billy's quiet drawl and his words carried me back to the scene.

Uncle Billy looked up the road a piece and seen a feller in a wagon with a team o' horses. The feller drove up an' stopped along by the wire fence.

"Howdy," he said to Uncle Billy.

"Howdy."

"Headin' out?" the stranger asked friendly like.

Uncle Billy disregarded the question. "Say," he asked, "what's the idea o' this barbed wire? This never was here before!"

The teamster explained that the new owner of the property put it up. It was, the teamster said, one o' the first things the new owner had done. Uncle Billy explained he'd been campin' on that piece o' property for years, an' he meant to continue. The teamster grinned an' said the new owner probably would see things differently.

"That fence," he explained, "was put up to keep things out. Things like prospectors with burros."

"So," said Uncle Billy slowly. "But he ain't usin' the spring an' he certainly don't need this little patch o' grass with all his other acres—"

"He ain't usin' this corner o' the ranch no more'n Old Man Bartlett did. But it's his property, an' he ain't aimin' to let nobody else put a foot on it."

"I never heard of such a thing!" was Uncle Billy's astonished comment. "A dog-in-the-manger, that's what he is. Well, I'm not goin' to carry water for four jacks. They can water themselves!"

Uncle Billy went over to the barbed-wire fence, put a foot on the lowest wire and raised the upper strands. "Here," he said to the burros. "Come here, Alkali! Come here, Clementine, old gal!"

TALES of The Old Ranger, portrayed on "Death Valley Days" by John MacBryde (l.), are based on actual incidents in the grim history of California's Death Valley near Cajon Pass. It's quite a yarn. Would you like to hear it?"

"If you have time," I said, ordering two more beers.

"I've got all the time in the world," Uncle Billy said cheerfully. "Well, as I was sayin', this was up in the hills back o' San Bernardino. I generally spend my winters, you see, down around Mecca, prospectin' in the Colorado desert. Then, in the spring, I round up my burros an' head up toward the Mojave an' prospect there for a few months."

"Yeah."

"Which means that twice a year—spring an' fall—I go through Cajon Pass. I dunno if you've ever passed by the place, but there's a mineral spring along there, in the corner of a big ranch. Good water, plenty o' grass for burros to feed on, an' enough color in the sand to wash out the price o' the grub you eat while you set there

The burros patiently moved forward toward the fence and the teamster pushed his hat back and scratched his head. "You're goin' to take 'em through thar?" he asked.

"Sure," said Uncle Billy matter-of-factly. He turned to the burros. "Duck your heads down, now, an' step over the bottom wire. Careful! One at a time. I'll keep the wire spread for you."

He gave each burro a friendly whack across the rump as they went through the wires. The teamster said he'd watch down the road for the new owner.

"Thanks," said Uncle Billy, "but I'm afraid that'd take too much o' your time. I generally stop off here for two weeks at least on my way through an' I don't see any reason for cuttin' the time any shorter this trip."

"You'll be lucky if you stay here

MET Uncle Billy the first time in Los Angeles back in 1925. I was walkin' along the street one day, shortly after noon, an' I seen a big crowd gathered in front o' the I. W. Hellman Bank, which, as you may know, is one o' the leadin' private bankin' institutions o' the West Coast.

Well, I pushed my way through the crowd to see what they was all gapin' an' a-starin' at an' there, by the curb, quite unconcerned about the commotion he was causin', stood a spare, leathery old feller in blue jeans an' a battered felt hat. He was a-tetherin' a string of burros to a fire-hydrant.

A policeman come up just then an' started gettin' the crowd to movin' along. He was downright provoked about the old feller with the burros.

"What's this, anyhow?" he asked. "What's the idea of tyin' up traffic like this?"

The old desert rat looked at the cop with mild eyes that had a twinkle in 'em. "I ain't tyin' up traffic, Officer," he said. "I'm just tyin' up my burros."

"But," said the policeman indignantly, "you can't tie up your burros to that fire-hydrant!"

"Well, there don't seem to be no hitchin'-rail round here," the old man said conversationally. "Now, I been prospectin' on the desert for thirty-five years, but only about five o' them year have I actually put in lookin' for gold. The other thirty years I've spent huntin' for my burros. That's why I want to tie 'em up now. I've got to get into the bank here to deposit this poke o' gold dust before it closes."

The upshot of the whole thing was that I stepped forward an' offered to watch the burros for the old prospector. I knew he'd be too stubborn to give in to the policeman, an' there was no sense in his gettin' into trouble. It turned out I'd heard about the old feller before—out in the desert. He was Bill

Anderson—Uncle Billy.

"I knowed our trails'd cross some day," I said, shaking his hand. "I've heard Johnny Mills an' Shorty Harris, an' all them old-timers speak o' you—"

"Say," he said, "we'll have a drink together, Old Ranger. I'll go deposit this gold in the bank, an' then we'll find some place where we can set down an' talk . . ."

Well, sir, that's just what we did. It was a warm day an' the beer hit the spot. "Gosh," I said, "that was good."

"Yeah," Uncle Billy agreed. "I was dry, too."

"How about the burros?" I asked. Uncle Billy had hitched 'em to a lamp-post outside.

"Oh," he said, "they don't drink beer."

"I mean . . . what about 'em? Reckon you'd better go out an' take a look at 'em?"

"They're all right," Uncle Billy said easily. "I tied 'em good an' secure." He turned to the bartender. "Two more beers, barkeep. Mebbe we should've invited that officer in to drink with us, but he struck me as bein' pretty onsociable." Uncle Billy took another sip of beer. "Not as ornerly as the other cuss, though." He set his glass down an' looked at me. "You know," he said, "this is the second time I've been told that me an' my burros wa'n't welcome. The other time was up back o' San Bernardino,

MAIL CALL

A Radio Show Tailored to Order
For America's Fighting Forces

"MAIL CALL" is played before a soldier and civilian studio audience every Thursday night at KNX in Columbia Square, Hollywood. Broadcast got its odd, but mighty appropriate, name from the bugle-call sounded in all parts of the world whenever and wherever American troops receive mail. Produced by the War Department, under the direct supervision of U. S. officers, it is not for local listening. Soon as the program is short-waved and transcribed, recordings are rushed by bomber plane to every distant outpost where U. S. troops are stationed. Next to real letter from home, it's tops!

ROSTER of free talent for "Mail Call" programs reads like "Who's Who in Hollywood." At rehearsal above: Don Ameche, Gracie Allen and Carole Landis. Standing: George Burns and Henry Fonda. Look on Ameche's face says plainly that he's struck one of Gracie's gags

PRESENTED in the form of a letter from home, "Mail Call" broadcasts start with Mom or Dad telling their boy home-town happenings, and Hollywood stars take the show from there, even add humorous and pungent postscripts to letter. even one night," the teamster said. "The minute you light a fire he'll see it an' come order you off."

"Let him," said Uncle Billy with vast unconcern as he led the burros to the spring. The teamster moved on and Uncle Billy went casually about the task of settin' up camp. He turned the burros loose to feed on the grass around the spring, built a fire, cooked himself a little supper, an' was settin' on the bank with his feet in the water that evenin' when he heard a car tearin' up the road. It was the new property owner an' he was hoppin' mad. Uncle Billy didn't even look around.

"Hey, you! What are you doin' there?" the owner shouted.

"Soakin' my feet," said Uncle Billy without lookin' up.

"Didn't you see this fence?"

"Yeah, I seen it."

"Well, what d'you think it meant?"

"It's meant I've got to mend my shirt. I tore a big barn-door tear in the back of it crawlin' through."

"That fence was put up to keep folks out!" the owner roared. "Tramps an' hoboes—"

"If," said Uncle Billy smoothly, "you think I'm a tramp, mister, you're mistaken. I'm a prospector. An' I got a pretty good idea who you are."

"I'm the owner o' this property."

"Yeah," said Uncle Billy, "that's what I'm sayin'. You own this property, an' you don't use it, yet you don't want nobody else to have the benefit o' it. An' that makes you a dog-in-the-manger."

"And makes you a trespasser," said the owner belligerently.

"I don't feel like one," Uncle Billy replied, wriggling his toes in the cool water. "I feel right at home. You see, I been campin' here for years. Every spring an' fall. I don't aim to change my habits."

The owner jumped from his car an' came runnin' toward the fence. His face was red with anger as he ducked under the wire. "Ouch," he roared as one of the barbs bit home.

"See," said Uncle Billy. "You done what I did. Tore the back o' your shirt. Shows the foolishness o' puttin' up barbed wire. Folks is bound to get caught in it."

Food for victory. When Joel McCrea finishes "Merry Go Round" for Columbia he will make no more pictures for the duration. From then on he will devote all his time to ranching, raising foodstuffs for the nation's needs. And he'll do it on a man-size scale on his 2,300-acre ranch. For Joel is one picture star who's a bona-fide westerner with a thorough knowledge of cattle-breeding and cross-raising, and can brand a calf just as neatly as anybody. Recently he sold a herd of calves for Government needs; in fact, he's the one really practical rancher in Hollywood. For some time now he's raised everything his family needs for food with the exception of wheat for bread. Being a family man, he feels this is the best way he can serve his country until such time as Uncle Sam's officials may find need for him elsewhere . . .

MOVIE REVIEW

"Somewhere I'll Find You"

Cast: Clark Gable, Lana Turner, Robert Sterling, Patricia Dane, Lee Patrick, Reginald Owen and Charles Dingle. A Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, produced by Pandro S. Berman and directed by Wesley Ruggles. Screenplay was written by Marguerite Roberts, adapted by Walter Reisch, and based on an original "Cosmopolitan Magazine" story by Charles Hoffman.

—Clarence S. Bull

Gable and Turner in "Somewhere I'll Find You"

Type of Picture: Adventure story of life and love in high gear against a background of war.

This Is the Story: Crack war correspondents Clark Gable and his brother, Robert Sterling, return from Europe shortly before America declares war, discover that their editor has been shutting his eyes to situation in the Pacific. They get the idea over to their reading public by a trick but lose their jobs. Both men are in love with Lana Turner, a reporter. Engaged to Robert but in love with Clark, Lana runs out on both of them to cover the war in Indo-China. Eventually both men return to China, hunt for Lana, whom they believe lost. From then on, daring plans to slow up Japanese invasion after war is declared, grim spectacles of conflict, and a heart-warming love-story keep an intriguing plot at the boiling-point to the end.

Verdict: Movie fans who clamored for Gable and Turner in another co-starring picture after "Honky Tonk" get their wish in this thriller.—Adult.

Two Music Eras Meet in The Old South

Washboard Rhythms Greet
Harry James as He Goes
South to Play for Marines

PRIMITIVE music from a rattling washboard, tin horns, a frying-pan and a guitar greeted Harry James when he got off the train at Parris Island, S. C. The apostle of sophisticated dance music was joyously serenaded by a two-man band of Negroes, blasting away at the crude but moving music of a simple people. It was a symbolic meeting between two musical groups that are worlds apart yet united in their common devotion to the American culture. Harry James and his orchestra came to Parris Island to play before 26,000 men at the great Marine barracks. His performance marked the premiere of the new Blue six-days-weekly series, "Victory Parade of Spotlight Bands."

SERENADE in style was rendered to Harry James and his vocalist, Helen Forrest, by this two-man band at the Parris Island, S. C., station (above). are working in "Power of the Press." Recalling the days that he wrote a column for the lovelorn, Otto said, "Those were the days I really learned about women. There were few situations I couldn't handle, and I often saved the day by knowing just the proper thing to say." Kibbee, who listened a little impatiently, finally broke in and asked, "Well, if you're so good, what would be the proper thing to say to Dorothy Lamour in a sarong if you met her on the beach alone some evening?" Kruger paused, looked thoughtful, then said, "Words would be superfluous, my dear Kibbee" . . .

Now it's Ensign Robert Stack, and he's at Pensacola training for combat pilot duty in the Navy. After winding up "Mex of Texas" for Universal, Stack made "Keeping Fit," a Government short, then went into service immediately . . .

Missing lady. Ida Lupino, now a lieutenant in the Women's Ambulance and Defense Corps, tells this one on her colored maid. When the doorbell rang, the girl answered, and in reply to the gentleman's request to see "the lady of the house," she retorted, "We ain't got no lady. She's a lieutenant now!" . . .

Ingenious Barbara Britton, only woman in Paramount's "Wake Island" cast, sprang a new idea in birthday parties on Hollywood recently. She held the affair at the Red Cross plasma bank and invited each guest to give a pint of blood to the bank. Nearly everyone invited came, with the result that the plasma supply swelled considerably. And just so the affair wouldn't be one-sided, Barbara took her guests out for fun afterward . . .

Commitment vs. cancelation. Bonita Granville is still in a dither. After a tour of the eastern camps had been announced for her, up pops a picture commitment that keeps her in Hollywood. Result: Letters started pouring in (six hundred in one week) from boys in service, most of them leaning toward the idea that Bonita had let them down. So Bonita figured the only thing to do was to answer each letter personally and tell the boys that her trip hadn't been canceled but merely postponed until she completes "Hitler's Children." At present Bonita's letter-writing chore has grown to such proportions that she's enlisted her mother, the Granville maid and three friends to help her as the letters continue to pour . . .

Jottings from Movietown: Betty Grable has received 650 proposals in fan letters from soldiers since she returned from her camp tour . . . Two more Nurse's Aid graduates are Anita Louise and Mrs. George Murphy. Both have pledged a definite number of hours for active duty . . . Paramount's picked Betty Hutton to play the role of Texas Guinan in a movie titled "The Smoothest Girl in Town." Swell choice, say we, and better still, Alan Ladd will co-star with Betty . . . Oomphoriginal Ann Sheridan and four-times married George Brent have come to an "amicable parting of the ways" after nine months of marriage . . . Lee Tracy returns in Columbia's "Power of the Press," and RKO's dickering for him to play a role in "Bombardier" . . . Now it's Captain Gene Raymond of the American Air Forces Combat Command in England.

RENEWAL OF BENNY-ALLEN FIREWORKS DUE . . . GARRED JOINS NAVY

Two R. A. F. Students Hitch-Hike to Hollywood to See Nelson Eddy; Afternoon in NU's Broadcasting Booth With Bill Stern Described

NEW YORK

By E. KAY

One of the gayest and most colorful broadcasts to witness is the CBS "Gay Nineties Revue." The costumes of the period, handle-bar mustachios and derby hats tend to put the audience in the mood of the program. Beatrice Kay, the soubrette, is the personality gal, and when she invites the audience to join in the chorus of an oldie, they really sing out. Beatrice is due to join the movie colony some time in March and in the meantime is making personal appearances at theaters and night-clubs. The whole cast, headed by Joe Howard as m.c., works with the greatest of ease their audience to please . . .

If two and two make twenty-two, watch out for fireworks between Jack Benny and Fred Allen when Benny comes to town some time this month. If two and two make four, you can bet they will appear on each other's programs. Get a front seat before your radio when this comes to pass, because we have a feeling something new has been added to this feud . . .

Jack Pearl, who returned to the air on the Mutual network after an absence of four years, has finally disclosed the fact that his famous line, "Vas you dere, Sharlie?" was not the original tagline at all. It seems that Pearl and his gag-writer had planned to have Cliff Hall (Sharlie) answer in the negative. Jack's big line was to follow when he would clap his hands at this information and then say, "Well, that settles it"—and then would tell the big lie. However, when the gag was tried out before an audience, the laughter rang out on "Vas you dere, Sharlie?" and the rest was left unsaid. Thus, one of the first taglines on the air, and certainly one of the most famous, was born.

HOLLYWOOD

By AVERY THOMPSON

This week the audience at the Nelson Eddy "New Old Gold Show" boasted two R. A. F. lads who were taking their flight training in Canada. That in itself is not unusual; how they came to be there is. The two English boys were ardent Nelson Eddy fans from way back, and when the fliers were given two weeks' leave from their Canadian base, they got the idea of "bumming" their way to Hollywood to get a glimpse of their idol in person. It took them nearly a week to travel the three thousand miles, and will take that much time to hitch-hike back . . .

You've heard many stories on how a song is born. This is one about how an arrangement was made that tops them all. Dave Rose and company were rehearsing for their "California Melodies" program at the studio. During rehearsal break, Dave and three of the boys in the orchestra casually walked out for a smoke. Standing near the KHJ parking-lot, the boys were struck with an idea. They dashed for the nearest parked auto, spread the music sheet they had with them on the hood, and with feet tapping out the rhythm—hands waving in mid-air—using vocal cords lustily—and a cry of "That's got it, boys!" a new super-special Dave Rose arrangement saw the light of day. Who says anything can't happen in Hollywood? . . .

Bob Garred, CBS newscaster, has done his final broadcast from Hollywood for the duration. Garred has been commissioned as a lieutenant junior grade in the United States Navy and is in San Francisco awaiting orders. A native of Walla Walla, Washington, Bob hopes to get back to see the folks before going on active duty . . .

Youngsters are always getting into mischief, especially Del Sharbutt's. The announcer on the "Amos 'n' Andy" program arrived in the family bathroom the other day just in time to save his two-year-old son from a watery grave in the family bathtub. The little boy had decided to play deep-sea diver in a full-drawn tub, using as a helmet a gas mask that a visiting air-raid warden had left in the reception hall.

There wasn't, by any stretch of the imagination, room enough for me in that little broadcasting-booth at Dyche Stadium. Bill Stern and a crowd of five assistants filled the tiny two-level coop beyond the comfort point. No, there wasn't room for me—but columnists can get away with murder, so I stayed, watching from between the legs of a production man and a telegraph operator as Northwestern nosed out Texas.

The game was first-rate, but the show in the NBC booth was a lot more interesting to me. Here's the set-up:

The coop was about six feet square, (Continued on Page Facing 36)

CBS PLANS HEAVY CONCERT AND RECITAL SCHEDULE FOR THIS SEASON

Rodzinski to Direct Cleveland Orchestra in New Series; New York Philharmonic Returns Oct. 25; Wanda Landowska's Recitals to Begin Nov. 2

By ROBERT BAGAR

New York World-Telegram Music Critic and Associate Program Annotator for Philharmonic-Symphony Society of New York

WHAT promises to be one of radio's most important—in the true sense of the word—series of music programs this coming season is that beginning over CBS on November 2, featuring Wanda Landowska, brilliant exponent of the harpsichord. Mme. Landowska has no peer in her field, let alone a superior, a distinction she has earned through her immense understanding of the instrument, the sheer magnificence of her playing and her encyclopedic knowledge of music.

We have heard so often the phrase "world's greatest" that it has not only lost all glamour but also all meaning, so much so that one hesitates to use it now, unless, of course, one is a circus barker. But its true essence does seem to belong to the playing of this artist, in which case the phrase surely shakes off its sawdust to hobnob once more with the elite of descriptive precision.

Mme. Landowska, a native of Warsaw, studied at the Warsaw Conservatory as well as with Michalowski, Moszkowski and Urban. She made her debut at the tender age of eleven in that city. From 1900 to 1913 she taught piano at the Schola Cantorum in Paris, and the harpsichord at the Berlin Hochschule from 1913 to 1919. Later she founded her own school at St. Leu-La-Forêt, France, a place that eventually became a veritable mecca for the great in all walks of life.

Mme. Landowska's particular reverence of old music is miraculously explained in a book of hers, "La Musique Ancienne," published in 1925. In discussing the volume, Ernest Newman, noted musicologist and critic, who was then music critic of the New York Evening Post, found this to say:

"Mme. Landowska has spent a good deal of her life fighting the grotesque ideas that are current with regard to the harpsichord and other keyboard instruments of the past. She exposes, with delicate malice, the blunders of many of the editors and authors who have undertaken to instruct the modern world in these matters . . .

"Most people have only the vaguest idea of the differences in structure, in tone and in resource between the clavichord and the harpsichord, and between the latter and the pianoforte. The delusion is widespread that the early forte-piano, as it was called, ousted the harpsichord because among other advantages, it had a bigger tone. . . . The harpsichord was beaten by the piano not because it was an inferior instrument but because, in the first place, as Mme. Landowska says,

'the double keyboard began to be superfluous in Haydn's and Mozart's time as music gradually lost its polyphonic character,' and in the second place because of 'the great practical advantages' of the piano—'its less complicated construction, its lower price, its easier and more lasting tuning were in its favor.'

Certainly to hear the harpsichord played as Mme. Landowska plays it is a voyage of discovery for the uninitiated. Her mastery of the instrument is such that legends have grown up about it, for with what is the most effortless ease she obtains effects that seem almost impossible. This, of course, is the purely mechanical aspect of her playing, because as an artist and interpreter of the classics she is a star of the first magnitude.

More Music in Store

CBS really launches out on a heavy concert and recital schedule this year. First and foremost is the thirteenth consecutive season of Philharmonic-Symphony broadcasts, originating in Carnegie Hall on Sunday afternoons. First of these events takes place on October 25. The Philharmonic-Symphony season actually began on October 7 with its first Sunday concert taking place on October 11. But neither the latter nor that of the following Sunday came under the CBS banner, because Arturo Toscanini, engaged to conduct the Society's first two weeks, is under contractual obligations to NBC, a fact which caused the first two Sunday programs to be wiped off the broadcast books.

Also launching out on a series of

INTIMATE of the late George Gershwin, Oscar Levant (above) may solo in Toscanini offering of the composer's famous rhapsody concerts is the Cleveland Orchestra under its regular conductor, Artur Rodzinski. This orchestra performed, as you probably remember, in place of the Philharmonic-Symphony on October 11, will be heard again on October 18. But the series arranged for the Clevelanders begins on October 24, for a string of Saturday afternoon events. The orchestra is celebrating its twenty-fifth anniversary.

Then, of course, the Eastman School Symphony and the Eastman Rochester Symphony begin their radio year on October 30, with alternating Fridays assigned to the groups.

Forecasts

Among the rather unusual bits of information this reporter has come across in the past couple of days are two items of special import. The first deals with the George Gershwin "Rhapsody in Blue," which, one hears, is set for a performance by Arturo Toscanini and the NBC Symphony some time this season, with Oscar Levant to play the solo part. The second has to do with a new composition of Morton Gould's, young composer-conductor-pianist, who holds forth regularly for the MBS chain. Mr. Gould's publisher received a communication addressed to the composer. The letter read something like this: "Dear Maestro Gould, I should like to perform your new work, if that is agreeable to you." The signature was "Arturo Toscanini."

Concert Records

One of the great voices of our time, the sumptuous voice of Bruna Castagna, is heard on Columbia record 71058-D in "Ces Lettres," from Massenet's "Werther" and "Amour, Viens Aider," from Saint-Saens' "Samson et Delilah." She is accompanied by Alfredo Antonini and the Columbia Opera Orchestra.

Mme. Castagna sings in that luscious, vocally opulent way of hers. Naturally, both arias come in for a fine accounting, thanks also to the intelligent orchestra accompaniment provided.

Another worthy Columbia release is the Bartlett and Robertson performance of the waltz from Arensky's Suite No. 1 and the scherzo from the Mendelssohn "A Midsummer Night's Dream." The delicately attuned temperaments of these two artists—a situation carried over into their technics and piano styles—in general goes wonders for the pieces they play on Columbia record 71398-D. The light and lilting treatment of the waltz and the fluffy delicacy of the scherzo are beautiful examples of their art.

Jerry Wald won't play songs that he doesn't like

CONTRARY to a hard and fast rule in the manufacture of dance-band maestros, Jerry Wald served no apprenticeship as a bandman at all; he started right in with the baton. He was an adept clarinetist at seven. Three years later we find him playing solos and sitting in with orchestras on radio programs over WOR in Newark, his native city. A few years later he took the leader's position in the Weequahic High School Band, showing an early predilection for the conductor's wand.

Some time ago a friend, interested almost as much as Wald in the latter's ideas, notified the leader that he had heard a unit at the City College of Los Angeles which might be just the thing for a young batonist starting out.

These things don't happen in the movies—they're too fantastic, but they do happen in real life. Wald took the friend's advice and went on to the Coast. His powers of persuasion proved irresistible to the Los Angeles musicians, so in a few weeks Wald took over, conductorially speaking.

There were the usual rehearsals, experimental stages, and so on, in the development of the ensemble. And, as luck would have it, the college had a rehearsal hall, completely equipped with amplifying system, loudspeakers and all the other paraphernalia so dear to a budding dance organization's collective heart.

The next step was to get engagements, minor ones at first. And they came on to New York. The band opened at the Brooklyn Rosemont Ballroom. A few nights later fire broke out in the rather gaudily sumptuous place, and that was the conclusion of Greater New York stand No. 1.

However, the gods smiled on the boys, for after a few months of floundering around with pay they were offered an engagement at the Roseland Ballroom in New York proper, and the talk about the band was all to the favorable. Radio spots came along, more talk and also favorable. Signing for a few weeks' appearance at the Hotel Lincoln in New York, the Wald outfit remained there long enough to break all attendance records and to set a new one with respect to length of stay there.

One thing about Wald that a lot of song-pluggers detest is his insistence on playing only pieces he likes. He says, "If I don't like a song, it doesn't go in the books." That may or may not be a short road to success, but it has its points.

A STUDY IN CONTRASTS: UPTON CLOSE AND FRAZIER HUNT, ACE COMMENTATORS

Close's Life Is a Thriller of Oriental Politics and Espionage;
World Travel Hasn't Shaken Midwest Mud From Hunt's Heels

By BILL ANDREWS

FRAZIER HUNT and Upton Close are top-notch commentators—and that is just about the only thing they have in common. It has been my pleasure in the last month to meet these two men for the first time. Some comparisons are interesting, but they must be understood as comparisons based on first impressions, not long study.

Personal Impressions

First, Frazier Hunt: Husky, raw-boned, well over six feet . . . He looks as Scotch as his ancestry, and his temperament is as midwestern as his home state . . . Yet he has a cosmopolitan poise—not smoothness, but a hearty, self-confident roughness and warmth. He's one of the few commentators who could enjoy the nickname "Spike" or the description "corn-fed mystic."

Upton Close is sharp-faced, keen-eyed, restless. His mind seems to race as he talks, seems to tackle every problem with gusto. He's easy to interview, talking well, with just a touch of ingratiation. The surface impression you get is that here is the more brilliant mind of these two but the less cautious.

Each of these men talked, at my urging, of his life and work. Here are excerpts from their stories that will give you a general background.

Roving Correspondent

Frazier Hunt: "My people crossed the mountains into the Midwest one hundred and fifty years ago. We Hunts have no memories of lands across the seas and no loyalties abroad . . . I was born in Rock Island, Illinois, fifty-seven years ago. My mother died and we moved to a cattle ranch in Arkansas. A series of moves carried us to Indiana, where I spent my school-days. Those were fine, rich years, the last of the horse-and-buggy era . . . I went to the University of Illinois. I started work in Chicago with the City News Bureau in 1906, made my first trip to Europe the following year . . .

"I've traveled a great deal since then, but I've never gotten the prairie mud off my heels. In 1909 I went to a sugar plantation in Mexico. I married my college sweetheart and took her there, but we were run out by bandits. We came back to Illinois to run a country newspaper in Alexis.

First and Worst

"By 1913 I had begun to sell articles to New York magazines and fiction to Collier's. I decided I could set the world afire, so I sold the paper and moved to New York to write. I was a total flop. I went back to newspapers and worked on the old New York Sun. I covered Army camps and wrote the first—and probably the worst—of the books on Army life . . ."

From that point Hunt's story is history. He told how he went to Europe in 1918, joined the staff of the Chicago Tribune, went to Archangel, where he wrote the articles that led to the removal of American troops from this ill-advised expedition against Russia. Against orders and despite warnings that the Bolsheviks would kill him, Hunt entered Soviet Russia. Instead of death he found a ready welcome, and performed the almost impossible feat of securing an interview with Lenin. His reputation established, Hunt became a roving correspondent, traveling widely, writing constantly. In time he came to radio and presented to listeners a long series of interviews with famous people. More recently he has become a commentator roaming America to study at first-hand the work of our people at war.

Rowboat to China

Josef Washington Hall, whom you know as Upton Close, was born on a ranch in Washington state in 1894. He was raised beside the Columbia River and was, even as a child, much impressed by the manners and philosophy of the many Chinese workers in the district.

"I had a rowboat," Close told me. "People would point out to the sea and say China was that way. I planned to row over there some day. Instead, my first move was east, to George Washington University in Washington, D. C. When I was only twenty-two I was offered the job of editing a missionary magazine in China and I took the job. When I got there the elders in charge were shocked at my youth and told me that I should learn about China first. So they sent me out as their bill collector.

Inside China

"I traveled Chinese style, wore Chinese clothes, lived in Chinese inns. In three months I learned the language—and I learned about China from the inside. Then the first World War came along and our 'allies,' the Japs, stole Shantung province under the excuse of attacking a German treaty port. We had no intelligence service there, so the State Department organized one. I was put in charge, training young Chinese students and gathering their reports. I always signed my reports 'Up Close.' A newspaper opposed to the administration of Wilson published my secret reports as the observations of 'Upton Close.' That's how I got my pen-name.

"I secured a list of heroin and morphin houses operated by the Jap army in Shantung to undermine the upper-class Chinese. This list was used by the State Department in the peace conference. The Japs were furious. The commander of the Jap forces in Shantung called me in one day and offered me five thousand yen to find Up Close for him. I agreed but pointed out that I needed a pass to travel in my search. The general gave me this pass, which made my work as Up Close a great deal easier."

Revolution

Later Close became an adviser of Wu Pie Fu, who led the students' revolution in north China. As a colonel of horse he saw action. He also led an expedition to the scene of the Kansu earthquake, and wrote his famous article, "When the Mountains Walked," for the National Geographic. Typhoid struck in 1922, and Close returned to America in broken health. Political enemies confiscated his Chinese property and he landed in the United States penniless. But the Geographic article won him a bonus, and lectures kept him going. He turned to education for a few years, reorganizing the oriental department of the University of Washington. Tired of campus politics, he became a traveling journalist and writer, analyzing the situation in the Orient through countless articles and many books.

For a time the Japs liked him because he opposed the Oriental Exclusion Act, which he still feels was a major blunder. But in 1934 he published "The Challenge Behind the Face of Japan," which exposed the plans of the Japanese to attack America. The Japs promptly deported him from Manchuria.

Close was about to return to the Orient in December, 1941. The day before his plane was to leave, Pearl Harbor was bombed. So Close has remained here, carrying on with his writing and radio comments.

Some Final Words

I asked both Hunt and Close to give me some sort of summing up of the present situation as they see it. Here are their answers:

Hunt: "I am passionate about the need for a humane world. We must fight this war to its bloody conclusion, but with our American goal of a humane world always in view. This dream can come true, but it must come true in America first . . . If we can win this, then our sons will not have died in vain."

Close: "No nation has ever attained its objectives as readily as has Japan in this war. She will gain more than she bargained for—India, Australia, Siberia—if she can hold on to what she already has won. If she can hold what she has for two more years, she can never be dislodged . . . We must deal with Japan within two years, and we can only do this along the northern great circle route into the heart of Japan."

Frazier Hunt is heard every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday over CBS at 6:00 p.m. EWT, 9:45 p.m. CWT, 8:45 p.m. MWT and 7:45 p.m. PWT. Upton Close is heard over NBC every Sunday at 3:15 p.m. EWT, 2:15 p.m. CWT, 1:15 p.m. MWT, 12:15 p.m. PWT.

BBC'S WAR-TIME AUDIENCE ESTIMATED TO BE 200,000,000 LISTENERS

AEF in Britain Hears World Series; Agronsky and St. John Return to U. S.; Priestley Discontinues Broadcasts to Give Listeners a Change

"This Is London Calling"

IN LESS than three years the BBC has grown from a domestic concern into a vast international instrument. It is the world's largest word-factory. In addition to English, Welsh and Gaelic, the BBC broadcasts in forty-three languages, including such languages as Albanian, Bulgarian, Bengali, Chinese, Finnish, Gujarati, Hindustani, Slovak, Tamil and Thai. The total number of broadcasting hours in English in all services of the BBC for overseas reception are twenty-three hours and forty-five minutes. In addition, the BBC broadcasts foreign-language transmissions for a total of thirty-nine hours and twenty-seven minutes daily. Twenty-two English news bulletins are broadcast daily, including twelve in the Empire and North American Services; four in the European Service, and six in the Home Service. One hundred and seven news bulletins in languages other than English are broadcast daily by the BBC. Total listeners to the war-time BBC are estimated at over two hundred million.

Britain Broadcasts World Series

As host to thousands of baseball-hungry soldiers far from home, Britain took the unprecedented step of canceling peak-hour programs on its domestic network in order that special daily broadcasts from the United States covering the World Series might be available. These radio close-ups of the World Series, including resumes and play-by-play accounts of the games in their final stages, were carried directly to London on beamed commercial short-wave circuits and heard each day of play beginning at 5:15 p.m. EWT (10:15 p.m. London Time). The decision to describe the World Series within a few minutes of the close of each game follows a policy emphasized by Sir Cecil Graves, joint director general of the BBC, during a recent visit to the United States, of "giving American listeners—and particularly those in uniform—what they want to hear while on British soil." It is needless to say with what enthusiasm these broadcasts were greeted in Britain by our lads in khaki.

Shorts from the Short Waves

Signs bearing the single letters, "T. N. T.," may be seen in almost every factory in Britain. The letters mean "Today Not Tomorrow" . . . The parliamentary secretary to the Ministry of Supply told the following story over the London short-wave station. A meat dealer in Hull, England, having been bombed out, moved his meat market across the street and put up the following sign, "Over Here from Over There." A few weeks later the new shop was bombed and he moved back to his old location, putting up this sign, "Over Here Again." Again German bombs singled his building out. He moved across the street for the second time, opening with this sign, "Over Here from Over There Again" . . . In a recent radio speech Nazi official Ribbentrop said the Germans are counting each bomb the R. A. F. drops on Germany so that the Luftwaffe can drop the same number on Churchill . . . According to clandestine station "The Voice of Free India," no matter how many ships are built in the United States, the German naval command will see to it that many more are sunk than can possibly be built.

Personalities of Short Wave

J. B. Priestley, one of the best known and well liked of the regular speakers over the London short-wave station, is now off the air. He felt it was time the listeners had a change . . . Two of NBC's famous short-wave reporters are home. Robert St. John has just returned from London minus thirty pounds, which he lost laboring in a British war factory by day and broadcasting and writing by night. England fears the approaching long winter nights will bring renewed German blitz raids far more terrible than anything the British have yet endured, he said. There are reports that the Nazis have developed a stratosphere bomber that drops its deadly cargoes from heights far beyond the effectiveness of British detection and anti-aircraft equipment. During the thirteen weeks he is home resting his place in London is being taken by Alex Dreier. Martin Agronsky got in from Australia the other day. He has been in the thick of things for a long time. He broadcast in Singapore until the fall of the city was imminent. The Japs got there a week after he left on an ack-ack sloop, the Yarra, guarding a convoy to Java. Despite two days and nights of Jap bombing of the convoy, his ship got through. He arrived in Bali the day before it fell to the Japs. He got permission to fly to Australia in a Dutch plane with Dutch soldiers being evacuated from Java. On the way they made one landing on a tiny island and found the airport covered with holes and unexploded bombs. Departing presented a choice between facing the Japs in daylight or attempting a night take-off without field lights. They voted for the night flight. At 3 a.m. they recruited a group of natives, placed a man with a candle in each bomb-crater and threaded their way off the field for an uneventful flight to Australia. For some months Agronsky has been bringing us the latest news from the Australian front. Now he is in the United States for a short rest before going to an undisclosed post.

Notes About the Stations

According to Charles Lebouef of Webster, Mass., what appears to be a clandestine Yugoslav station is being heard on approximately 11.10 megs from 2:45 to 3:00 p.m. EWT . . . "Radio Center Moscow" is being heard on a frequency of 11.83 megs, in English, from 6:48 to 7:25 p.m. EWT . . . London's Pacific transmission now starts at 2:10 a.m. EWT . . . Daily at 2:30 p.m. EWT, Berlin broadcasts a program entitled "On the Spot," which consists of an actuality "eye-witness account" of some event of the day. Reception is best over DXZ (9.57) . . . Vichy (11.845) broadcasts to North America from 4:00 to 4:45 p.m., with an English talk at 4:30 p.m. EWT . . . DHE4A (11.84), Prague, Bohemia, is now coming on the air daily at 5:00 p.m. EWT, according to John Wilson of Wilmington, Del. . . August Balbi of Los Angeles reports hearing the news in German over DXX (6.14) at 1:00 a.m. EWT.

Now We Know

Senator Ed Ford of "Can You Top This?" says the modern toastmaster is one good reason why there aren't any women after-dinner speakers. "A woman would pass out waiting for a toastmaster to get through her introduction," notes the expert raconteur. "No woman could wait that long to talk."

Opera Not Realistic

Avid theater-goer Irna Phillips dishes out realism and falls for it herself. Author of many daytime radio serials, including "The Guiding Light" and "Lonely Women," Miss Phillips goes to every play that her hometown, Chicago, has to offer. But the opera, never. "Not realistic enough," says Irna.

Selects Moods From Book-Shelf

Florence Freeman gets set for her characterizations as Ellen Brown in "Young Widder Brown" by reading a book in keeping with the mood of the day. "A scene or two from 'Othello' or 'King Lear,' read over quietly an hour or so before the show, will do wonders for a heavy dramatic session," says Florence. "And before humorous episodes I like to read a few chapters of Mark Twain or P. G. Wodehouse."

Some Trumpet Section

The trumpet section of the Great Lakes
Naval Training Station's Rhythm Orchestra, all-sailor swing band heard Fridays on "Meet Your Navy," reads like a Who's Who of swingdom.
Among the notable horn players are blue-jacket Joe Contursi, formerly with Dick Jurgens' band; Don Jacoby, of Les Brown's orchestra; Bill Haley, who was with Lou Breese; Henry Jackson, of Jan Savitt's crew, and Georgie Schuster, of Phil Levant's band.

light tanks and supplies will be transported by air." The United Nations have greater production of aircraft and greater reserves of pilots to fly them. They are favorably situated to take advantage of this new technique of the flying army and to wrest again the initiative from the Wehrmacht.

Almost my first impression on arriving in war-time Britain was that the gardens are as beautiful as ever. Everything is clean and neat and solid; not a bit of litter on streets or sidewalks. The houses are all solidly built, and as far as anyone can see, not all run down. They build things to last in this country. The clothes worn by both men and women are much better than I expected under a rationing system. I glimpsed a twenty-five-shilling price-tag on an artificial silk blouse that would have cost one dollar in the United States. Iron railings have been removed from that side of the lawn that faces the street, but the British tradition that my home is my castle has so far prevented the contribution of those iron fences that separate a man from his neighbor.

The signs of war are omnipresent in Britain's week-day life. Motorcycle traffic guides keep things straightened out on narrow roads, but it's a good thing there isn't much civilian traffic these days. I rode in an American automobile, with the driving-wheel on the left. This meant someone had to sit on the right side of the front seat and tell the driver when he could pass on the right. Our soldier-boy driver told me that passing is the most difficult thing they have to do in left-side driving. Every now and then they almost forget! I noticed that the most blitzed cities of Britain do not use as blackout traffic signs those miserable crosses employed here in New York. They blacken the upper half of the light and allow the lower half to give a clear signal to the driver.

There is one striking difference between the way we do things in the United States and the way they do them in Britain. We do an enormous amount of talking about what we may or may not do in the way of rationing. The other day, for example, there was a long story from Chicago about meatless days and meat rationing. It was not really news, just gossip about what might happen, given out by a subordinate official. In Britain, subordinate officials would not be allowed to give press interviews about what might happen to the public on rubber, on gasoline or on meat. There would be silence until the authorities decided on a policy. Then the policy would be announced and at once put into effect.

Britain has suffered terribly as the result of bombing and raids. I saw but little of the damage which those raids have caused, but even the little I did see has made me realize what they must mean. The blackout is sinister and depressing. Nevertheless, the thing that surprised me most was the extent to which many of the comforts of life had been retained. I should say, had so far been retained, for there is increasing evidence on hand of a steady tightening up of restrictions that will interfere more and more with the established way of life.

One dominant impression made by war-time Britain is the enormous part which British women are playing in the war effort. My guess is that it would take at least three years of war before our women could or would take over a comparable part of the war burden. Everything I saw and heard emphasizes the importance of woman's role.

I visited a captain in charge of an American military headquarters. Here is what he told me about our boys in Britain. Morale is excellent, they have whatever they need in the way of supplies, the British provide the food, and "while it is quite okay, it's not what we are used to." Air mail is a great help. The captain showed me a letter from Iowa posted only eight days before.

I spent one afternoon at an important British shipyard which employs ten thousand workers, of whom three hundred are women. When I asked the director whether he had tried any of Henry Kaiser's mass-production methods, he replied: "I can't do it. Do you see that crane up there? It's the largest one I have, yet it can lift only ten tons."

When the war began, this yard was full of slogans and pep-talks and posters. Their effect has completely worn off and they are no longer used. By and large, the efficiency of the average worker has gone down. War restrictions, his long hours, and poor transportation facilities share the blame. The most serious bottleneck here is labor. This particular shipyard is employing all the men it can get in this area, and yet it can run no more than a single shift—no more men are available.

As I contrasted this long-established plant with the new shipyards I visited in California, I sensed what an enormous advantage it is to be able to make a fresh start. This particular shipyard is hampered by lack of space and by a conservative tradition that dislikes industrial venture. The so-called day lighting, which most of our important industrial plants have had for years, has been installed on an experimental basis in one of the shops. It has of course proved outstandingly successful and will now be put in all over the plant.

One difficulty with outdoor shipbuilding in the British Isles is the weather. Destroyer building is done under cover, but the men working on the big ships at this yard are out in the open, which means that they do not work under ideal conditions for many weeks of the year. I got the impression of intelligent, discriminating management which would turn out nothing but the finest kind of work. There is no sacrifice of quality even when speed is required.

I watched the workers as they were going off at the five-o'clock shift. It struck me that the war has told on them. They certainly were leaner and less robust physically than our workers at home. It is inevitable that the many strains involved in three years of war should tell on men who work as hard as the British are working today.

I spent another day visiting a still-uncompleted overseas American base. The character and the extent of this and similar undertakings in other parts of the Old World make it evident that neither our Army nor our Navy expects a short war. They are taking every precaution to be ready for a long one. We are undertaking much more than we first contemplated.

Our workers have personal contact with some of the Irishmen who move across the frontier from war to neutrality. They have come to realize that many Irishmen are anti-British, and because they are anti-British they Take It Easy!

JUST a minute! Before you throw yourself into a state of frenzy, rush wildly out of the door, and arrive at your destination breathless and completely worn out, hold everything for just a split second! What's all the hurry? Do you think it is really necessary for you to operate in high gear all the time? Well, probably you've set a pace that keeps you going from morning to night, forgetting that there are times when you could, and should, tone down the tension. But far too many of us are guilty of the jitters, for we are a nation that's going places and doing things. Our lives are built on effort, tension and busyness.

We all know how to work hard because we have to. But not many of you really know how to relax. And if you don't start learning, m'gal, the time will come when Ol' Mother Nature will start kicking up her heels—and go out to show you a thing or three. Suddenly you'll discover a few strands of prematurely gray hair, then deepening crow's-feet. And when taut, overdrawn nerves start expressing themselves in the form of chronic indigestion or twitching eyelids—beware, you're on the skids!

So it's high time to start taking it easy! And we all can learn a lesson from an old Negro mammy in Hollywood who reached the ripe old age of 101, still hale and hearty. Wondering just how this amazing woman had managed to tap the fountain of youth, the baffled press set out to get her story. When asked the secret of her accumulated years and bouncing good health, she said, "Well, suhs, when ah wo'ks, ah wo'ks ha'd, but when ah sits, ah just sits loosee."

Now this particular mammy was no physical-culture expert, doctor, scientist, or psychiatrist—but she had discovered the golden key to a happy life, and a long one. So you don't have to take a cruise or go to the country to lessen the pressure—simply learn to relax!

There are innumerable times during the day when you can completely break your chain of habits. If it is your job to sit at a typewriter eight or more hours a day, banging out letter after letter, call a short halt in the middle of the morning and afternoon. Shake out your hands a few times, then leisurely walk over to the window. Gaze down at the people on the street, take some deep breaths—and laugh! In a few seconds you will be completely refreshed and ready to take up where you left off—a new and invigorated person!

But if your job requires standing the greatest share of the day, snatch moments on the bus or street-car to relax. Allow yourself to indulge in the luxury of a few deep sighs, then pretend that your bones are simply floating down to your toes. And when you get home, throw off weariness and fatigue by stirring up lazy circulation. Take to the floor—and s-t-r-e-t-c-h! Place your feet on a small chair and

Human Nervous System Like An Army

The brain is the general. It orders all voluntary actions. It receives reports of all voluntary actions.

Nerve centers may be compared to subordinate army officers. Each organ and function of the body is under control of the nerve centers. The nerves, themselves, are like the telephone wires that furnish communication to and from the outposts, which are the different organs of the body.

When the nervous system is normal, no false messages are carried. Worry, Overwork, Sleeplessness, are like Fifth Columnists. Sometimes they crowd the wires (nerves) with more messages than can be handled by the nerve centers. Sometimes they give false messages. Then the commands of the subordinate officers (nerve centers) to the outposts (body organs) are held up or falsely given because the wires (nerves) are overcrowded or crossed.

False reports of trouble here, there, or the other place in the body, are reported to General Brain.

Feminine Forum

let your imagination go skylarking through delightful dream castles. After ten or fifteen minutes of this visionary excursion, go in for action! Put your feet in the air—and vigorously pedal an imaginary bicycle. Then you'll be alive, alert and—do I dare say it?—yes, even ready to dance the whole night through!

However, you might be one of the gals who is simply worn out from a gey whirlwind of excitement. You're just too tired to think—even too tired to sleep. You're rolled up in knots and just can't unwind. If that happens to be your case, you're due for some exercises to loosen up! So lie down on the floor, pull your knees up to your chest, clasp your hands around them and rock back and forth. Keep this up until your legs will plop down on the floor like a ton of bricks. Then you are ready for a hot, soothing bath. Fill the tub to the brim and add Bathasweet Bubbles for a billowy blanket of froth and fun. Ease away those tightened nerves by s-o-a-k-i-n-g as long as time will permit. Finish with a cloud of Mimosa Bouquet Dusting Powder, and you're ready for bed—as relaxed as a kitten!

So when the work stacks to the ceiling or too many things crowd into a day—go in for a mental and physical change! Break the routine pattern of your life with something new—something startling—rest, relax, play and laugh. Leave your worries at the office—and be a happy, well-balanced person, seldom tired and ready for "come what may!"

Question Service

Mrs. L. Willis, Great Neck, L. I.—Former actor PAT MURPHY is in no wise being overlooked, as he has a very important role to play in the defense of his country. Pat is going to the Enid Army Flying School at Enid, Oklahoma, and won't be heard on the air till he's completed the run of his present contract.

Rita Bitler, Wapakoneta, Ohio.—Since appearing as soloist on the CBS "Songs of the Centuries" show, EILEEN FARRELL's stock has continued to rise. Miss Farrell's first teacher was her mother, a church organist. As she grew older, Eileen continued her piano and voice studies and played leading roles in her school dramatic productions. You can hear her on Saturday evenings over CBS with the concert orchestra. Strangely enough, her ambition is to sing popular music in public, though at present she is confined to amusing herself and her friends with "jive."

Barbara Downtain, Indianapolis, Ind.—The Ranch Boys trio is now split up, and you can still hear two of the boys on the radio. JACK ROSS is out in California; CURLEY BRADLEY can be heard on Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays on "Club Matinee," which comes in over the Blue Network; SHORTY CARSON is being heard on Mutual's WGN.

Mrs. O. H. Harb, Madison, Wis.—It is BOBBY DEANE MAXWELL who plays Davy in "The Story of Mary Marlin." In the serial "Painted Dreams," Mother Moynihan is portrayed by CONSTANCE CROWDER. The wife of HARVEY HAYES is not in radio. "Lum" and "Abner" handle all the roles in their show.

WHAT'S COOKING!

By GEORGIA SCOTT

Serve a Buffet Supper

SO YOU'VE been gadding from one friend's home to another for lunch, tea, and dinner—and now you can no longer accept an invitation without a pang of conscience. Well, M'Lady, it's time for you to return the favors! Undoubtedly your list of prospective guests is a long one, and you are faced with the problem of entertaining a large group. As one solution, you may have considered a series of small parties. However, for a gay evening of good fun, you'll want to gather that congenial crowd together—en masse! But how can you accommodate so many? It's simple and it's fun—give a buffet supper!

There's something about buffet suppers that gives everyone a "free soul" spirit. Formality takes a quick exit—and sociability rides high! With a buffet table set up in either dining-room or living-room, you can turn inventive with table decorations. Of course, you will want to bring out your best china, silver and table linen. Choose a gay linen cloth with matching napkins—or, for a startling effect, go in for contrast! Pick up your colors in the floral decoration or center-piece, arrange the silver in clever geometric patterns, and make sure your table has a well-balanced appearance.

But what are you going to serve your friends? It's a wise hostess who selects foods which require only a fork, for nothing is more disconcerting to a guest than an attempt to juggle miscellaneous silver. But let's start with an appetizing menu.

- Chicken Pot Pie
- Individual Vegetable Salads Hot Buttered Rolls
- Olives Celery
- Steamed Chocolate Pudding
- Coffee

- Steamed Chocolate Pudding
- 2 cups sifted cake flour
- 2 teaspoons double-acting baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon soda
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/3 cup butter or other shortening
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1 egg, well beaten
- 3 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted
- 1 cup milk

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, soda and salt, and sift together three times. Cream butter, add sugar gradually, and cream together thoroughly. Add egg and chocolate, beating until smooth. Add flour, alternately with milk, a small amount at a time, beating well after each addition. Turn into greased mold, filling two-thirds full, cover tightly and steam two hours. Serve hot with sauce. Garnish with whipped cream, if desired. Serves ten.

Once the food problem is settled,

"I Talked with God"

(Yes, I Did—Actually and Literally)

and as a result of that little talk with God a strange Power came into my life. After 42 years of horrible, dismal, sickening failure, everything took on a brighter hue. It's fascinating to talk with God, and it can be done very easily once you learn the secret. And when you do—well—there will come into your life the same dynamic Power which came into mine. The shackles of defeat which bound me for years went a-shimmering—and now—?—well, I own control of the largest daily newspaper in our County, I own the largest office building in our City, I drive a beautiful Cadillac limousine. I own my own home which has a lovely pipe-organ in it, and my family are abundantly provided for after I'm gone. And all this has been made possible because one day, ten years ago, I actually and literally talked with God.

You, too, may experience that strange mystical Power which comes from talking with God, and when you do, if there is poverty, unrest, unhappiness, or ill-health in your life, well—this same God-Power is able to do for you what it did for me. No matter how useless or helpless your life seems to be—all this can be changed. For this is not a human Power I'm talking about—it's a God-Power. And there can be no limitations to the God-Power, can there? Of course not. You probably would like to know how you, too, may talk with God, so that this same Power which brought me these good things might come into your life, too. Well—just write a letter or a postcard to Dr. Frank B. Robinson, Dept. 110, Moscow, Idaho, and full particulars of this strange Teaching will be sent to you free of charge. But write now—while you are in the mood. It only costs one cent to find out, and this might easily be the most profitable one cent you have ever spent. It may sound unbelievable—but it's true, or I wouldn't tell you it was.—Advt. Copyright, 1939, Frank B. Robinson.

choose the type of service most appropriate for your party. There are three ways you can carry out your buffet supper. You may use the informal style, semi-formal, or the strictly formal.

The informal service is, of course, the favorite of many, for it requires no waitresses or maid service. Your guests simply help themselves to all the food. If you use this service, set your table for one course at a time. Arrange the food in its proper sequence so your guests will not become confused as they pass around the table. Make sure the silver, beverage and napkins are the last thing your guest must pick up. When second helpings are desired, you, as the hostess, may pass the serving-dishes or let the guests once again help themselves.

But for a wee touch of dignity, use the semi-formal service. You may choose two of your nicest friends to sit at each end of the table and serve the main course, as well as dessert and beverage. In this type of service, your guests help themselves only to the relishes, breads, napkins and silver.

However, if these two methods seem inconvenient for your large group of guests, go in for the strictly formal service. The main dishes will still be served by your friends at each end of the table, but maids should be brought in to carry the plates to your guests. This speeds up the service, for there is no confusion. Rolls, relishes, coffee, etc., are also passed to your guests by maids, and dishes are removed in the same manner.

So you see, it's really no trouble at all! Buffet suppers can be the perfect way to entertain your neglected friends. Don't postpone your party any longer. Make up your list—and go to the telephone! It's a sure way to establish your reputation as a popular hostess.

suspect some of them of being pro-German. The suspicion may be unfair but it is natural. There are all kinds of stories current in North Ireland about spies and German agents. Most of them are probably not true, but there must be enough truth to give the British authorities serious concern.

Several things I observed in Britain make me wonder whether the war has really brought a social revolution in the British Isles. Things are changing, of course. The dislocations of a great war are apt to accentuate social change and this war will accentuate such changes, but fundamentally the British are conservative. They change very slowly.

FOR a long time, the British themselves have laughed at some aspects of their class distinctions. In spite of what every good Britisher knows, that a man is a man for all that, the British still respect a title. It is a tradition and an instinct. The big industrialist does not feel that he has reached the climax of his career until he becomes Sir Arthur or Sir George. I wish we had something besides military medals and honorary college degrees with which to link big businessmen to national service.

Government and business get on better under Churchill than under Roosevelt. I am not assessing blame or credit. I am stating a fact that is important to our war effort. But if business and government get on better in Britain than in America, workers and managers get on better in America than in Britain. The British workers seem much more class conscious than the American. Not once did the British managers and directors who showed me through their war plants exchange a friendly personal greeting with one of their workers. The men, scarcely looked up as we passed. I was told afterwards that a man who is friendly with the boss becomes a suspect in his union. This would explain the absence of those familiar first-name greetings between manager and worker which are so commonplace in our own factories.

In a free country like Britain, it is not difficult to sense currents of opinion, even in war-time. The British speak their minds more freely to Americans than they did in time of peace. This is a good sign. It means that we have become better friends, who can afford to be more frank with one another. What pleases me most, as an American, is that the conservative Britisher, who liked us well enough but who was perhaps a little more conscious of our faults than of our virtues, takes us much more seriously now.

America's proposals and ideas about the war get much more serious consideration in Britain than was the case in the last war. The close personal relationship between Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt has made an enormous difference. There was never anything like that in the last war. President Wilson had no direct contact with the leaders of Britain, and as the war continued he even lost confidence in his own ambassador in London. This time there have been repeated personal contacts between our chiefs of state. There are frequent telephone conversations between them; personal envoys move back and forth across the Atlantic as quickly as they crossed the Channel during the last war.

BUT I felt that this cooperation was only beginning. As I watched and talked with our officers, they still seemed a bit lost, a little disoriented. Most of them after all have never had an overseas trip. So many feel, so many Britishers feel, that we are a little too eager to go ahead on our own. They after all have been in the war for three years. We have been in it for only eight months. It is possible that on some things we should take their advice more than we do.

I find frequent reference in British papers and magazines to the speeches of Vice President Wallace, Secretary of State Hull and Assistant Secretary of State Welles, in all of which the intervening period between war and peace was discussed. I remember a round-table discussion in London with half a dozen leading British public men, in which I participated, just two days before this war began. At that time, their chief, almost their only concern was the immediate formulation not so much of a war program as of a peace program. But what they are writing now has ostensibly to do with this war and not with the peace. We in America must continue to talk and write about the terms of the peace and the conditions under which the peace is to be brought about, but we cannot expect the much-bombed British, whose every hillside speaks of imminent invasion, to be as keenly interested in the issues of tomorrow. The immediate menace which they face and of which I was so conscious over there calls for all they have and all they are.

Altogether, Britain is still Britain, strong, confident and absolutely sure of victory. Let us be eternally grateful that she is our ally.

The Radio Front

perched atop the double-deck stadium, just over the fifty-yard line. In front was the "well," in which was crowded a work-shelf and three chairs. Bill Stern, microphone before him, sat in the center chair. On each side was a "spotter," a student from one of the colleges who knew the players by sight. Each spotter had a folio that contained charts of the first and second teams from his school. When the first team was in, its chart was behind

Bill, and when the second team replaced it, its chart was placed in the key position.

When a play got under way the spotters pointed out the players concerned on their charts.

Back of the well and a good three feet above it was the upper level of the booth. A table and two chairs took up most of that space. On the table stood a sound-control board manned by a hard-working engineer. Dials controlled the mike in front of Stern and scattered mikes on the field which picked up cheering and music. Whenever a dramatic play brought the crowd up roaring, Bill called the play quickly and then called for more volume. The signal was relayed to the engineer, who turned off Bill's mike and threw heavy volume into the field mikes.

The production man was the real boss of the booth but his work was largely routine. He has full authority to cut a program off the air if anything goes wrong, but with a veteran like Bill Stern there was little chance that anything out of line would be said. So the production man merely acted as liaison officer, relaying Bill's signals to the engineer, passing scores of other games to the announcer, and reminding him when it was time to pause for station identification.

Bill Stern seemed a different person during the broadcast than he is off the air. He watched every detail in the booth, battling to assure a dramatic broadcast. His voice was the main source of drama but he knew that the engineer must be on his toes to heighten the effect. Bill seemed to grow as he sat there watching the game. He was rather like the captain of a ship standing a long watch on the bridge, knowing that every slip, every mistake was uncorrectable.

Uncle Billy Cools His Heels

"For the last time," cried the owner beside himself with anger, "are you gettin' off the place, or ain't you?"

"I ain't," said Uncle Billy succinctly. He pulled his feet out of the water and began pickin' his toes. "Not till I'm good an' ready," he added.

"All right, then," roared the owner, "I'll get the sheriff!"

"Go ahead," said Uncle Billy. "An' watch for that barbed wire now as you go out. Don't tear yourself again."

The owner went back to his car and Uncle Billy began hummin' in absolute contentment. About an hour later, the property owner came back with the sheriff. Uncle Billy sat calmly beside his fire, leaning back on a new post he'd stuck into the ground. He looked up appraisingly at the sheriff and saw that the officer knew his way around. The sheriff, too, had been a desert rat.

"Well," said Uncle Billy without getting to his feet, "I'm glad to meet you. Come in, won't you?"

"The gall o' him," muttered the new owner.

The owner spread the wires for the sheriff and the two men walked over to Uncle Billy's fire. "Excuse me for not gettin' up," said Uncle Billy, "but I been walkin' all day an'—"

"You look mighty comfortable," said the sheriff.

The outraged owner spread his hands. "I told you," he said to the sheriff, "that this tramp was makin' himself right at home."

"Set down, won't you?" Uncle Billy invited hospitably. "An' take your shoes off, if you're a mind to."

"Say," cried the owner, pointing his finger, "what is that you're leanin' against anyhow?"

"Oh, this?" said Uncle Billy carelessly. "Oh, that's the notice o' my claim."

"What claim?" the owner roared.

"This claim." Uncle Billy was unruffled. "The claim you're standin' on right now!"

"This ain't no claim."

"Sure it is," Uncle Billy said as though talking to a child. "I just posted it—not half an hour ago. Accordin' to law I'm entitled to twenty acres, but a couple o' acres was all I wanted. The color is only in the ground around the spring."

"How," the owner asked in an irate tone, "can you post a claim on my property?"

"Why, easy," Uncle Billy blandly replied. "Jest take an' fill out a minin' location blank—the kind all prospectors carry—an' tack it to a stake an' drive the stake into the ground. The sheriff knows how, don't you, Sheriff?" The officer nodded and Uncle Billy noted the twinkle in his eye. The owner didn't.

"You'll be coolin' your heels in jail before tonight's over, my friend," he said. Then he turned to the sheriff. "That's right, ain't it, Sheriff?"

"I'm afraid not," the officer replied slowly. "You see I ain't got the right.

He's posted a mineral claim, an' I'm afraid if you want to get him off you'll have to get a writ of ouster."

"A what?"

"A writ of ouster. You get that at Sacramento. You write to Sacramento, explainin' the circumstances, an' apply for a writ o' ouster an' they'll send it to you."

"But that'll take days . . . weeks!"

"Mebbe," the sheriff agreed, shrugging his shoulders.

"An' meanwhile this feller sits here—"

"I always stay several weeks," said Uncle Billy cheerfully.

The owner, of course, was furious, but there was nothing he could do about it. He went to a lawyer and the lawyer's advice was the same as the sheriff's: Get a writ of ouster. The owner was stubborn. He applied for the writ and it was returned in about a month. He again drove to the spring where Uncle Billy was camping. Uncle Billy took a look at the writ and calmly packed his belongings and went on his way.

"So long, mister," he said, leading the burros under the fence.

"Good-by," the owner replied emphatically as though at last he'd completed a tough job.

"Oh," said Uncle Billy easily, "not good-by. I'll be seein' you next fall—'round late September on the way back from the Mojave . . ."

Uncle Billy concluded his yarn with a little chuckle. "Is that the end o' the story?" I asked.

"Not quite," Uncle Billy replied.

"You see," he said, "I went back the next fall. I felt it my duty to. The owner was just as mad as ever. He threatened to drive me off an' I posted another mineral claim. He applied for another writ o' ouster and by the time he got it, I was ready to leave. I finally told him I'd come back every year. I said I'd go out of my way to come back because he needed a lesson in brotherly love. I had to teach him somethin' about the principles o' human kindness an' hospitality. That's all . . . except I'm keepin' up my missionary work . . . goin' back there every year an' spendin' a couple o' weeks at the old reprobate's place."

"An'," I asked grinning, "is he reconciled?"

"Well," said Uncle Billy, wiping his mouth with the back o' his hand, "he don't serve writs on me anymore."

The Economical, Systematic Way to Build a Library of Good Books

Dollar Book Club selections are from the best modern books—the outstanding fiction and non-fiction by famous authors. The Club has offered books by Sinclair Lewis, Edna Ferber, W. Somerset Maugham, Vincent Sheean, Emil Ludwig, Marquis James, Van Wyck Mason, and many other noted writers. And the cost to members was never more than $1.00.

Here is how we obtain these outstanding books at an exceptional bargain for subscribers: About three months after the new books of fiction and non-fiction are published we can see what books are becoming the most popular throughout the country. From this list we choose the books which we consider worthy and most likely to continue in demand. These books are then contracted for in special editions exclusively for our subscribers. We print from the publisher's plates and save money by manufacturing one large edition. That is why our subscribers pay only $1.00 for these important successes while the public is paying from $2.50 to $4.00 at retail for the publisher's edition.

130,000 discriminating readers are enthusiastic supporters of the Dollar Book Club. This huge membership enables the Club to offer book values unequaled by any other method of book buying.
