Thanksgiving Litany—1942

IN THIS momentous year of 1942, we must, as individuals and as a nation, search deep within our souls and the great heart of America to know and truly realize the blessings that are still ours in a world torn by war.

We cannot bring back those brave men who have given their lives in the cause of freedom for all peoples. Nor can we lessen the grief of their loved ones as they gather round their Thanksgiving tables this year and bravely try to carry on in the face of heartbreak.

But on this one truly American holiday—Thanksgiving—we do praise and give thanks for those courageous men who still work for the cessation of war and for world peace. Those men who are thinking of the next generation, and not merely of the next election. Those men, and women too, in whose hearts there is no greed, no lust for power, but only an earnest prayer that their work may make possible a better world tomorrow, a world where the laughter of little children will be heard in the homes of all nations.

Because the following Thanksgiving prayer by Don McNeill of radio's "Breakfast Club" expresses many of the things we, as Americans, can be grateful for this year, we give it to our readers.

For a job to do—a task I love—a chance to talk to parents, relatives, sweethearts and friends of the boys in service—to help America smile in the morning when a smile is needed most—I THANK THEE, GOD!

For the firm belief that America's homes are America's future—a family of my own to work for—so that when victory comes they may reap the harvest of freedom—I THANK THEE, GOD!

For men of vision to lead us—for the butcher boy, the druggist, the lawyer, the clerk, who are now Uncle Sam's soldiers, sailors, marines and pilots—for the production workers, the nurses, the Waves and Waacs—for all who are not carving the turkey this Thanksgiving because they are too busy—and for an opportunity to appear before them so often doing my bit to "keep 'em smiling"—I THANK THEE, GOD!

For the precious right to worship as I please—for a conscience instead of a Gestapo—I THANK THEE, GOD!

For a rationing of commodities, but not of conversation—a curtailing of comforts, but not of Christianity—I THANK THEE, GOD!

For the great gift of radio, which has brought me neighbors from Coast to Coast—for the thrill of being able to know and thus better appreciate the generous heart and determined spirit of America—this year more than ever when we need THEE most—I THANK THEE, GOD!

BEN BERNIE: Good Neighbor

AMBASSADOR of good-will and good music is a title Ben Bernie has well earned. The Ol' Maestro made a flying trip to our Canadian allies last month, boosting the morale of war workers and fighting men. He also gave a strong boost to the Canadian war-bond drive.

Ben and his troupe felt right at home during their visit to Canadian war plants, for their daytime radio show is slanted to assembly-line workers.

Highlights of the trip were a special show for thousands of R. C. A. F. men in Toronto, a presentation of Ben's regular CBS program from a Victory Loan Rally and another broadcast aiding Canada's Air Cadet League. Gale Robbins, Jack Fulton, Yogi Yorgesson and the King's Jesters accompanied Bernie on his tour.

THANXGININ' LETTER TO DADDY

BY BABY SNOOKS

DEAR Daddy,

I guess I should start thankin' everybody for all the swell fun I had this year. And first of all I want to thank you—specially for Rudolph the turkey that we had in our back yard so's you could fatten him up.

Rudolph is all fattened up now, Daddy. After Mummy finished makin' the stuffins this afternoon, I fed it all to Rudolph. Then I gave him the cranberry sauce and a piece of custard pie. You should take a look at him tonite, Daddy. He's so stuffed and fat, he can't take another bite.

I know it 'cause he ran away when I tried to give him the baby's mush. Is that why the baby tries to run away, too, when you feed him that stuff?

Anyway, Daddy, you should see how many thanks I got from some boy scouts who came around this afternoon to pick up scrap. Mummy wasn't in, so I took your golf clubs and typewriter and fancy vest-buttons and gave 'em to 'em. Then they told me they wanted tin. So I gave 'em your old pocket-watch.

How many thanxginin' days are we gonna have this year, Daddy? 'Member last year when we had turkey on the first day, and turkey hash on the next Thanxginin' day. That's when Mummy said you was a tightwad.

I gotta write an essay on the Pilgrims for my teacher day after tomorrow. Whose fathers are the Pilgrims, Daddy? 'Cause teacher said they were the Pilgrim fathers, so's when I asked her how many kids they had she made me stand in the corner for an hour. I didn't like that and I thought I'd take a guess at the question she asked. I told her eleventy-sixty-four. She said, "What?" and I explained that the Pilgrim fathers had that many kids. So I had to stay after school. Well, just how many kids did they have, Daddy?

Red and me had some real fun yesterday. In the back of Mr. Schultzes butcher shop they got a big sign reading "dressed turkeys." Daddy, under the sign there are a trillion million turkeys and they don't have a teenie weenie bit of dress or pants on. I guess Mr. Schultz was too busy. Anyway Red and me dressed them up. I don't think that Robespierre will miss his old baby dresses, do you Daddy?

Is your boss, Mr. Skinfint, comin' to our Thanxginin' dinner again this year, Daddy? 'Cause I saw Mrs. Skinfint on the Avenyou yesterday, and asked her if she was comin' over again. She said she was. Then I asked her if she was bringin' Mr. Skinfint along. She didn't answer, Daddy, but just pulled her furry collar up and walked away. Could she be mad? Why, Daddy?

Daddy, is a turkey a boy turkey or a girl turkey? And why do they yap so much? When Robespierre starts yellin' and you and Mummy aren't around, I put soap in his mouth. But Red and me didn't have no soap, so's we gave Rudolph some castor oil. It's good for him, isn't it, Daddy?

First on your list of glamour aids! SILKIER, SMOOTHER HAIR... EASIER TO ARRANGE!

"My Friend Flicka"

(20th Century-Fox)

Cast: Roddy McDowall, Preston Foster, Rita Johnson, Diana Hale, Arthur Loft, Jeff Corey, James Bell. Producer, Ralph Dietrich. Director, Harold Schuster. Screen adaptation of the Mary O'Hara novel by the same name was written by Francis Edwards Faragoh.

TODAY author Mary O'Hara's novel "My Friend Flicka" is a best-seller. But don't be surprised if tomorrow finds it listed as an American classic—a great love-story. Not the sort of love-story, to be sure, that studios usually buy, but nevertheless a true one in a small boy's devotion to the horse that his father had given him. Laid against a background of a 3,000-acre Wyoming ranch, it combines a depth of love and understanding with a hard and brutal sense of reality that leaves a reader fascinated to the last paragraph. Now 20th Century-Fox has made a great picture from the book, with Roddy McDowall of "How Green Was My Valley" fame in the role of the boy. The filly that takes the title role of Flicka is owned by Owen MacLean of 20th Century, and the money she earned in the picture will go into training her for the Kentucky Derby next year. Scenes in the film where Flicka gets tangled in the barbed-wire fence will tear at your heart-strings, they are so realistic, even though the bars were props made of rubber. And movie-goers will remember the words of Ken's father: "Flicka's caused us a lot of trouble, but she has taught us, too, our need for faith, love and patience when things look the blackest."

4. KEN'S mom had a hard time making her husband and son see eye to eye about Flicka. Picture above is proof of her success

Unsurpassed for removing dandruff!

Are you bothered about removal of ugly, scaly dandruff? You won't be when you shampoo with Special Drene. For Special Drene removes that flaky dandruff the very first time you use it—and besides does something no soap shampoo can do, not even those claiming to be special "dandruff removers". Special Drene reveals up to 33% more lustre than even the finest soaps or soap shampoos!

Be sure to ask for this wonderful improved shampoo by its new name . . . Special Drene with Hair Conditioner added. Or get a professional shampoo with Special Drene at your favorite beauty shop! Trade Mark Reg. U.S. Pat. Off. Procter & Gamble

This film illustrates how all soaps and soap shampoos dull lustre of hair!

All soaps—and liquid soap shampoos—always combine with the minerals in water, to form a sticky scum. (Bath-tub ring.) This scum leaves a film on hair that dulls the natural lustre—and clings stubbornly, no matter how thoroughly you rinse with clear water.

But Special Drene is different! It is made by an exclusive, patented process. Its action in water is different. Special Drene does not combine with minerals to form a scum—so it never leaves any dulling film on hair. Instead, Special Drene reveals up to 33% more lustre than even the finest soaps or soap shampoos!

THE DORSEY FEUD ENDS!

Jimmy and Tommy Get Together Once More in a Business and a Brotherly Way

SEVEN years ago the Dorsey brothers broke up a partnership that had carried them close to the top of the dance-band world. Jimmy gave a down-beat, Tommy protested that the tempo was too fast. Jimmy went ahead, and Tommy walked off the platform in a huff.

Since then the brothers have had little to do with each other. Tommy organized his own band and soon won greater popularity than brother Jimmy. Lately, however, Jimmy's star has risen as public tastes have changed.

But the feud is over now. Hepcats and alligators were thrilled by the reconciliation, brought to light when Jimmy opened at the Palladium in Hollywood recently. With a beaming audience of Dorseys to watch, the boys joined to make the opening a cheery event.

The Dorsey boys started under their father's tutelage in a small Pennsylvania mining town. In the early 1920's they became professionals, soon joining the Whiteman band. Success came swiftly after that and Tommy's trombone and Jimmy's saxophone became famous. Today each has his own radio show for the war effort, and they're partners in a music-publishing firm.

UPTON CLOSE
Looks at the
Fourth Year of War

UPTON CLOSE, expert in oriental affairs, was born Josef Washington Hall

An Oriental Expert's Slant on America's War Problems; Upton Close, Writing Before the Occupation of French North Africa, Urges the Concentration of American Offensive Power in the North Pacific

WE ARE into the fourth year of the war for Europe and the sixth year of war for Asia and approaching the second year of war for America. But the truth is that we are entering upon the twenty-eighth year of war for a world that went into one of history's recurrent periods of violent change in August, 1914. We have had some peace in the diplomat's technical sense since 1914, but no peace in the common man's sense—the sense of stability—the only sense that has any meaning.

We are in the violent historical period that means the end of European empires built since the age of discovery. In this sense it is comparable to the age of violence and chaos that marked the passing of the ancient Roman Empire. The French, Portuguese and Dutch empires, what's left of the Spanish Empire, whatever existed in the nature of an American empire and the non-self-ruling parts of the British Empire are being liquidated through this modern thirty years' war. This is as much in the nature of the case as the supremacy of air force over battleships or the complete regulation of industrial profits once left entirely to competition. Kiss our empires good-by.

The burning question for us and our children who shall survive the slaughter and impoverishment and disease of the war is, What's taking their place? Will it be the new-style, twentieth-century totalitarian empires, which are really a throwback to ancient despotism, or will it be shapeless chaos such as followed the fall of ancient Rome, which might cause even greater suffering than the brutalitarians; or will it be a truly humane global order, a federation in which all men treat others as citizens of a city now treat their fellow citizens of the same city, and in which all states respect other states as much as one member of the British Commonwealth at present respects other members, although some are big and some little, some richer and some poorer?

We are fighting to prevent the rise of the new tyrannies of Germany and Japan. Some minds among us which pride themselves on being hard-boiled and practical think that this alone should be our concern. They would let everything else shape itself up so long as we beat down Hitler and Tojo. But let it be borne in mind that another enemy—chaos—is hovering over the battlefield like a monstrous vulture. It will be a horrible reward, indeed, to our sons who bleed and ourselves who pay and our grandchildren who inherit the debt we cannot pay if we beat down the foe only to leave our sons and our grandsons and ourselves exhausted and disorganized on the field of battle—to have hearts and entrails eaten out by the vulture of chaos. That evil bird is at this moment hovering over the battlefield chiefly on two wings. One of them is the wing of mistrust over the real purposes of this war, which has arisen from the bitter, largely hidden, tussle between the people of India and their rulers, and which is now spreading doubts through millions of minds in Europe and America as well as Asia as to the honesty of application of President Roosevelt's high principles. The other vermin-infested wing of the evil, defeatist bird is the wing of dismay sprouting among our sacrificing people and fighting allies over the interference with American production of the tools to win the war by greed and lust for power. And against the bold exhibitions of such greed and power, the long-suffering American people are grumbling more and more loudly, as I have graphic evidence in thousands of letters they take time to write to me.

It ought to be of great interest and

The Man Who Played With Death

Thrilling Story of a Man Who Plays a Gruesome Game With Death Trying to Cover Up One Crime with Another

An Inner Sanctum Mystery

WARREN HOWARD, a medium-size, intellectual-looking man with sardonic eyebrows, first heard the tune on the night he prepared to murder Mitchell Gilbert, his partner for fifteen years in the book-publishing firm that bore their names. It was a tinkling tune, played by a little toy merry-go-round with gaily colored horses and spangled riders. To Howard it became a death dirge.

On that stormy night, Howard was startled in the basement of Gilbert's home by the woman he loved—Mitchell's wife, Drina, who came to dissuade her lover from the gruesome undertaking he had planned. Before she could say anything, Howard asked her about her small son, David.

"Does he suspect?" Howard asked.

"Of course not, Warren. He's just a child."

"I know, but he's his father's child and children are strange . . ."

"You're frightened, Warren, you are—"

Howard walked toward the woman, put a possessive arm about her narrow shoulders. He attempted to kiss her.

"Why do you turn your head away, Drina?" he asked. "Are you suddenly losing your courage? Is it that? Don't worry, Drina. It'll go all right. The boxes are ready. The pit I dug near the pear tree is filled with lime."

"Don't talk about it," Drina sobbed.

"Warren, for heaven's sake, listen to me! There must be a better way out of this. Let's speak to him. Give him a chance."

"You know what he's like, Drina.

You can't give him a chance. I've been his partner for so many years; I know him even more intimately than you do. You don't reason with a scorpion. You kill it!" Howard pulled a knife from under his coat. Its keen, cold blade glistened under the naked bulb of the basement light. "Look, Drina," he said. "You see? All I have to do is slip it under my coat when he comes home. I'm showing it to you because I want you to know what I'm doing. I want you to know how much I love you!"

Drina shrank back, rubbed her cold hands together nervously. "Warren," she whispered hoarsely, "I've never seen you like this before."

"I've never planned to murder a man before," he replied coldly.

They were interrupted by the pitter-pat of bare feet in the kitchen above them. It was the boy, David, who had come downstairs in his flannel pajamas to seek comfort from his mother. The thunder and lightning of the storm frightened him. He was a strange child, with something of the pixy in his wide, serious eyes.

"Darling," said his mother, "you shouldn't have come downstairs after Mother put you to bed."

Frost in California, natives will tell you, is unusual, but the recent freeze in stars' salaries by government order is nothing short of colossal, especially in the way those top-drawer players are responding to the situation. To date, not one star under contract in this wage-freezing list has left his job, nor is there any indication that he will. Some studio officials felt that there might be an objection to work without pay, and were astonished at the spirit of cooperation and loyalty evinced by players. Which all adds up to another victory for Hollywood...

Now it's Lieutenant Clark Gable. After twelve weeks of intensive training, Clark graduated from training-school in Miami, Florida, and is now wearing the gold bars of a second lieutenant, and feeling mighty lucky to be able to serve in America's armed forces and in the branch of the service he wanted to—the Air Forces. Gable was a favorite among his classmates, and was chosen to respond to the address by the commanding general of the

MOVIE REVIEW "Thunder Birds" (Technicolor)

Cast: Gene Tierney, Preston Foster, John Sutton, Jack Holt, Dame May Whitty, George Barbier, Richard Haydn, Reginald Denny, Ted North, Janis Carter, Archie Got, Lawrence Ung, Montague Shaw, Nana Bryant, Iris Adrian, Viola Moore, Connie Leon, Walter Tetley, Billy McGuire, Richard Woodruff. A 20th Century-Fox film, produced by Lamar Trotti from his screenplay. Original story by Melville Crossman. Director, William A. Wellman.

Type of Picture: A stirring portrayal of the battles men must win on the ground before they win their wings.

This is the Story: Background of film is the Thunderbird Airport in Arizona, where American, Chinese and English boys are training for the armed air forces of the United Nations. There's a thread of love-interest, but the principal idea focuses on the courage shown by these men and the democratic feeling that is being cemented by this intermingling of different races and nationalities in a common cause.

Verdict: Enlightening entertainment that grips the interest.—Adult.

"You're not realistic enough in bawling out your victim," he snapped. The "officer" leaned back and smiled, "That's funny. Three years ago in New York you were so convinced I was realistic enough when I handed you a ticket for driving the wrong way on a one-way street, you didn't even try to talk back." There's a Blue Network studio where for some months men of all nationalities have been telling tales of the horrors of war on the high seas. Each day these men would relate how they survived torpedoing and bombing. George Hicks, announcer, would listen to these stories, and having been a man of the sea in his youth decided he had enough of second-hand information. That was over two months ago. Hicks went to sea. He spent four weeks aboard a convoy vessel, but he accomplished his mission. He saw. He participated. "I know now what I wanted to know," he says. "Next time I talk to one of these men on my program, I'll understand what he's talking about" . . .

Another Irene of note is Irene Beasley, radio's outstanding saleswoman. GUIDE readers once voted her "leading radio songstress," and the fact that she is still in there pitching proves our readers are always right . . . These awards were established in 1933 by Mrs. Davis in memory of her late husband, who was known as "The father of broadcasting." Winners are selected on the basis of personality, diction, adaptability, voice and versatility. The contest is exclusive with NBC-owned, operated and affiliated stations. Any one person who is endowed with the above traits warrants an award and from where we sit Howard Petrie was a good choice.

Hanley Stafford, who as Daddy to Baby Snooks has his hands full, is today in real life a very proud daddy, even if for a while a very worried one. Stafford's son, who is a sergeant pilot in the Royal Canadian Air Force, is coming home a war hero. Son Graham is the sole survivor of a forced landing on the cold, bleak North Sea; it happened when a German fighter silenced one motor of the R. C. A. F. plane and damaged another. Young Stafford and another member of the crew floated five days and five nights on a rubber raft before being rescued. Unfortunately, shortly afterward his companion died from exposure. Twenty-year-old Graham is coming to Hollywood to visit his father and has joined the ranks of other illustrious fighting men interviewed on the air

Now and again the smoke of the studio lobbies gets in your eyes, and you get sick of publicity men and chrome furniture and the sad faces of the old-timers who are on the skids. The control-room tension at broadcast time loses its appeal, and you find yourself snapping at people who want to help you out with news just after you've written a column.

At that stage you go for a walk—a long one. You get out of town and find a hilly stretch of woods. You let the blessed rain and fall sun of the Middle West slap you awake and you let the cold wind kick you around. You find a place where a log fire burns evenings and the wind whines with a threat of winter coming. You pick up some of the calm of cornfields yellow in the November rain and some of the life of the pines glaring green against the background of brown hardwoods.

That wakes you up and knocks the cynicism out of you. You come back to the chrome and glass and the time tension and the lobby chatter—and you feel that it's all new and all wonderful . . .

You find a glow of satisfaction when you find on your desk word that Franklyn MacCormack got that "Hymns of All Churches" emcee job as you had urged. He starts November 23 . . . And you sense the fitness of the choice

STOKOWSKI CONDUCTS NBC SYMPHONY . . .

RODZINSKI DIRECTS PHILHARMONIC

Landowska's Recitals Meccas of Distinguished Musicians; Rodzinski Schedules Shostakovich's "Fifth"; Stokowski Offers Beethoven, Wagner

By ROBERT BAGAR

New York World-Telegram Music Critic and Associate Program Annotator for Philharmonic-Symphony Society of New York

THE utter charm and simplicity of Wanda Landowska's conversation are disarming. The interviewer, discerning as he may be, soon finds himself before a "presence." In her most casual talk Mme. Landowska conveys impressions of great artistic strength, amazing penetration, subtlety and an authority that, to say the least, is challenging.

This little giant of music, about whom legends have grown, whose harpsichord-playing is one of the times' wonders, is most eager to express her ideas. She plays with ideas in fact, but only because she is a true intellectual whose mental sport is the word of musical gospel.

In her apartment facing Central Park she seems to have found a haven for her thoughts, for her music. She communes here with the great of antiquity—Bach, Couperin, Rameau and the others. A grand piano and two harpsichords occupy the prominent places in the large living-room. There is a classical atmosphere about the place. Essentially, one can see, this is a house of music, a shrine, the shrine of a great art.

Here Mme. Landowska now imparts her lore to many pupils. Here, too, she works everlastingly at those deceptively simple pieces of another era, shaping the phrases that eventually fall into their proper slots with unexcelled fluidity.

"Old music is a misnomer," Mme. Landowska said. "What people call old music is really more modern than so-called modern music. That is not a mot, it is a fact. You have to listen keenly to the old music in order to recognize that.

"Why, as far back as Gregorian music the pieces show the most daring harmonies, venturesome devices that some of our contemporaries would be loath to attempt. In the ancient polyphonies sometimes there are implications of extraordinary compass. Their composers, besides, did not make tours-de-force of their innovations. These came about logically, with the utmost preparation, you might say."

I asked Mme. Landowska if it were true that she possesses a secret of harpsichord-playing that she will not divulge to others. She immediately replied, "No, it is not true. I am flattered, of course, that such legends do crop up about my playing, but that is exactly what they are—legends.

"As in every form of expression, the performer must practise without let-up. He must work and work and work. When he has put a composition completely at his finger-tips it is then that he improvises. Knowing intimately every detail of a work is not enough. That is only the beginning, and the true artist uses his knowledge as a springboard to a tasteful interpretation."

Mme. Landowska's recitals over WABC-CBS are of momentous importance. I know it to be a fact that they are the Meccas of many distinguished musicians. Not only do they offer harpsichord performances such as are not available anywhere else in the world, but the programs themselves carry compositions of uncommon interest.

She has made an exhaustive study of the folk-music of certain countries, particularly France and Poland. And the music-lover would be denying himself surpassing experiences to forego the broadcasts.

(Wanda Landowska's harpsichord recital may be heard Monday, CBS.)

Symphonic Wagner

One notes that the NBC Symphony Orchestra, under Leopold Stokowski's direction, promises a program consisting of the Beethoven Seventh Symphony and the prelude and Liebestod from Wagner's Tristan und Isolde.

The story concerning the composition of this music drama is much too complicated and too long to warrant a complete telling here. At any rate, the idea for such a work came to the composer in 1854, right smack in the middle of his labors on the Ring. Three years later he started on the actual composing and in 1859 it was finished.

The prelude, A minor, 6-8, makes a very gradual and long crescendo to a mighty fortissimo, followed by a briefly decrescendo, which leads to a whispered pianissimo. Free as to form and ever widening in scope of development, it offers two chief themes. A phrase uttered by the cellos is united to another given to the oboes, both forming a subject called the love-potion theme or the theme of longing. Another theme is also announced by the cellos. It is known as Tristan's love-glance and it is of a sensuous nature.

After the Prelude the orchestra enters into the Liebestod, or Love-Death, that passionate flow of phrases taken mostly from the material in the second act love-duet Isolde (in the opera) sings her song of sublimated desire. It was Franz Liszt who used the term Liebestod to describe that portion of the music which Wagner had originally named Verklaerung.

Shostakovich Again

Unquestionably Shostakovich has made the grade in this country. No composer of our time has known greater accolades here and elsewhere than this young and unassuming Russian, whose works, he wishes us to believe, are expressions of a Soviet philosophy in terms of music.

The Fifth Symphony—which is on the program of the Philharmonic-Symphony, Artur Rodzinski guest-conducting—has made much headway here. There are those among us who consider it superior to the much-touted, endless Seventh.

Shostakovich, it so happens, found this composition of his to be the one to restore him to the good graces of the "powers." He had made a little mistake, it appears. His opera, "Lady Macbeth of Mzensk," which at first struck responsive chords in the Soviet hearts, was suddenly condemned for being a "concession to bourgeois taste." A ballet, "The Limpid Stream," based on the subject of communal farming, had to be withdrawn because of the thumbs-down attitude of officialdom. In short, Shostakovich was in a stew—and he knew it. However, he threw out a fourth symphony, for fear that it might not meet with approval, and began work on the Fifth, which he wanted to be the symbol of his "turning toward Soviet reality."

Be all this as it may, the Fifth Symphony is, in my opinion, a first-rate piece of writing. Throwing all the ideology aside, the music has the power to make its appeal immediately, which is no more than one can ask of any creation. When that appeal stays with one, it is a sure sign that a composer has struck it symphonically rich.

(Artur Rodzinski will be guest conductor of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Sunday, CBS.)

POPULAR MUSIC

Gershwin: Might have profited by more schooling?

YOU will be hearing a lot from a wistful-faced, attractive young blonde by the name of Ethel Smith. She is a new acquisition of the "Hit Parade" and she promises to become a fixture there.

Miss Smith plays the Hammond organ. She plays

Latin-American music in the grand manner, with much zest and spirit and feeling. She knows this music because she has learned it at its source—in Latin-American countries.

Not long ago, while she was performing at the Copacabana in Rio de Janeiro, an executive of the "Hit Parade's" tobacco sponsors heard her. He liked her music—and more's the power to him—and he engaged her for a series of appearances.

At the Iridium Room of the Hotel St. Regis in New York, where Miss Smith may be heard of an evening, she told me, between sessions, many interesting things about her education, her career, and the like.

She was born in Pittsburgh. She was educated at Carnegie Tech, specializing in music and languages. Soon she became attracted to the organ and, being a person who goes out and does things, she took up the study of it.

She mastered the Hammond organ and decided to make a career of it. A trip to Cuba was prolonged into an eight-month stay, during which time she studied not only the people but also their music. After that came the long engagement at the Rio night-spot.

"I'm all for serious music," she said, "even though most of my work now calls for me to play the popular type. The one thing I've never regretted is my sound training in music. But, as you can see, my tastes are pretty varied. I go for the better popular tunes and I'm simply wild about Latin-American music.

"Gershwin is a great favorite of mine, but I wonder whether or not he might have profited by more schooling. His was a natural talent, and sometimes natural talents become inhibited by too much concern with form and rules. As a matter of fact, a lot of our modern serious composers are so concerned with that stuff that they don't write music any more; they write equations, mathematical formulas. They have just forgotten how to whistle. That doesn't seem to be progress to me."

It didn't seem to be progress to the writer either, but, after all, he had no idea which "modern serious composers" Miss Smith had in mind.

The Man Who Played With Death

"Daddy says a man can do anything he wants, and he's a big darn fool if he listens to any woman." The child looked thoughtfully at Howard. "Hello, Uncle Warren."

Howard nodded curtly. He disliked this child, feeling that the child had inherited part of Gilbert's disposition. Drina prepared a glass of milk and a cookie for the boy. David looked at the milk distastefully.

"Did you have to drink milk when you were a little boy, Uncle Warren?" he asked.

"Yes, David," Howard replied, as Drina put the glass on the kitchen table. The child looked at Drina.

"If it's good for me," he said, "why don't you take some?"

Drina poured herself a glass of milk from the quart bottle and closed the refrigerator. She came back toward the table where the child was seated. He pushed his glass toward his mother.

"Yours looks better," David said. "Let me have yours, Mummy."

"David, you must stop always asking for everything I have. Your milk is the same as mine."

But she let David switch the glasses, and Howard frowned as he saw how easily Drina surrendered to the son her husband had spoiled. Abruptly he became tense. He heard the sound of a car's motor in the drive and saw its lights flash across the wall on the far side of the kitchen. Mitchell Gilbert had come home; they must get David off to bed.

The child went after a little coaxing, and Howard insisted that Drina lock the door leading from the kitchen to the stair hallway. In hurried final instructions, he told Drina to offer Gilbert food in the kitchen.

"Make him sit there," he said, pointing toward the table. "Then I'll come up behind him with the knife."

"No, Warren. You—"

But she was interrupted by the banging of the outside kitchen door. Her husband had been drinking again. Mitchell Gilbert, a tall, overbearing man with an athletic figure and a red face, looked quizzically at Howard and his wife. Drina explained that Howard had come over to fix the furnace. Gilbert nodded curtly and walked across the room and put a parcel on the table.

"What do you have there, Mitchell?" Drina asked.

"A toy for David." He unwrapped the parcel, throwing the paper carelessly on the floor. It was a toy merry-go-round, which he held up and examined before winding it and placing it on the table. The painted tin horses and painted tin men and women went spinning around and around in an endless circle in time to the tinkling melody.

"I think I'll go in and give it to David now," Gilbert said.

"No, Mitchell," said Drina. "He's asleep."

"Then I'll wake him."

"Please don't," Drina begged.

"He's my son, and I'll wake him if I choose. What if I am drunk. He's seen me this way before. If he were only old enough, we could have some roaring times together."

"Have something to eat first," Drina invited.

Gilbert sat down and wound the toy again. Howard walked casually toward the back kitchen door and locked it. Gilbert didn't hear the bolt slide into place, but Drina did. She turned a white, startled face toward her lover.

"What's the matter with you,

Drina?" her husband asked, suddenly noticing her agitation.

"Nothing," she said, trying to cover her nervousness. "I—I just slipped. Here, Mitchell—a sandwich."

Howard walked slowly to a spot behind Gilbert's chair. Drina saw him reach under his coat where she knew the knife was hidden.

"You know, Warren," Gilbert said suddenly, "I checked over the books at the office tonight. I found some curious things—"

Howard drew the knife from under his coat. Gilbert's back was still toward him. He had talked without turning around. Drina's eyes bulged with terror. Howard raised the knife to the level of Gilbert's neck and—

"No!" cried Drina. "Stop!"

"Drina!" Gilbert leaped to his feet and stumbled toward his wife. "What's wrong?" he asked, as Howard slipped the hand holding the knife behind his back.

"Mitchell, listen to me," Drina said. "Warren and I are in love with each other. We have been for years. You've got to give me a divorce."

"So that's it," Gilbert said, laughing coarsely. "I thought I noticed something strange about the way you both acted tonight. As for the divorce, Drina, will you give me David?"

"You can't bring him up," she replied.

"Then I won't do it. And don't think that I don't know about you and Warren. I'm not blind, and I'm not stupid. You're going to stay right here in this house with me until David's twenty-one years old." He spoke quietly and with conviction. "Then I'll tell David about you and Warren. But why wait? I think I'll tell him now."

"No, you can't," wailed Drina. "No, I won't let you."

Gilbert moved toward the hall door, but Drina barred his way. He tried to brush her hands from his shoulders, but she clung tightly. With an abrupt movement he slapped her with the back of his hand, and for a moment there was silence in the small room except for Drina's sobs. Gilbert turned to Howard and grinned drunkenly.

"Well, Warren," he taunted, "she's the woman you love. Why don't you come to her rescue? You've always been a weakling, Warren. That's why you didn't get her when we first met her. You—"

Howard pulled the knife from behind his back and walked toward Gilbert, who, startled at first, retreated toward the hall door. He tried to turn the knob, found it locked. He knew he was trapped.

"You—you really aren't going to do it, are you, Warren?" He was begging for his life now. "I—I know why you're doing this. It's because I found out you've been stealing money from the firm. That's why, isn't it? But I won't report it. I swear I won't. I wasn't going to do a thing about it. Believe me, Warren. . ."

The toy merry-go-round whirled in an endless circle on the kitchen table. Its tinkling tune became the only sound in the room. The murder was over in a minute.

Howard, steeling himself against the horror of his task, packed the body into the boxes he had prepared in the basement. The heavens blasted thunder like cannon all that night. The gray morning crept through the rain as Howard finished burying the boxes in lime under the old pear tree at the south side of the orchard. He was going to give the toy merry-go-round to the child but saw that it was covered with blood, so he buried that, too.

INAUGURATE NEW PLAN OF OPERATION FOR U. S. SHORT-WAVE STATIONS

Why Army Banned Messages From Troops in Australia; New Schedule for Rome Station; "On the Spot" Trend in London Programs Noted

International Broadcasters and Government Agencies Unite

By CHARLES A. MORRISON
President, International DX'ers Alliance

ON NOVEMBER 1, with but little fanfare or publicity, a new phase of international broadcasting was inaugurated in the United States. On that date the war-time union of international broadcasters with government agencies, the Office of War Information and the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, was formally effected.

"We have but one aim," Mr. Cowan of OWI told me. "That is to tell the truth. We intend to tell the truth to the peoples of the world about what is happening from day to day; about America's part in the war effort."

There will be no radical changes in program features now being radiated over United States short-wave stations. Many of the regular features now heard will be continued. Other new ones will be built to fit the united effort. There will naturally be a transition period during which the changing over of schedules will be accomplished. While there will be only four programming sources, namely NBC, CBS, OWI and CIAA, other short-wave broadcasters will contribute in various ways to the common cause. No more commercial programs will be broadcast over short wave for the duration, although it is hoped that provisions can be made for the continuance, in some form, of rebroadcasts of such popular network shows as Bob Hope, Red Skelton and Kate Smith to our troops abroad. In addition, new variety programs, some of them probably similar in style to the popular "Command Performance," are planned for our troops.

Unfortunately all has not been a bed of roses in this unification effort. Take for instance the case of short-wave station WRUL, operated by the World Wide Broadcasting Foundation. The trustees and Mr. Walter Lemmon, president of this organization, feel that their group should definitely be considered as one of the primary programming sources, and they have further asked for some reasonable assurance whereby WRUL can keep alive its own hard-won individualistic style now and in the period of world reconstruction. The World Wide Broadcasting Foundation, a non-profit organization, has been producing fine educational, cultural and public-service features of notable value for many years.

Mr. Bates, director of NBC international division, and Mr. John Royal, vice president of NBC, both endorse the unified broadcasting set-up and feel it is a much-needed and genuine forward step in international broadcasting right at this time. They feel that with more and better programs, more and higher-power transmitters, the voice of America will be intensified and thus play a greater part than ever before in the war effort.

The nerve-center of the unified set-up is the large but unimposing building of the Office of War Information at 224 West 57th Street, New York City. Here remodeling is proceeding at a rapid pace in order that the needs of the expanding organization may be met. Programs will originate from studios in this building, from NBC and CBS studios and possibly from other points as occasion demands.

MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE believes its readers would like to know more about the new short-wave programs and features that are now being planned, and just as soon as schedules have been rearranged and stabilized we have been promised complete details to pass on to you. Watch for this feature soon.

Why Yank Voices Were Banned

Many of our readers have written in asking why the popular and appreciated feature "American Voices from Australia," heard daily up until recently, was suddenly dropped without explanation from Melbourne's broadcasts to this country. At least part of the story can be told. The feature was banned not by Australian broadcasting authorities, as many thought, but by officials of the United States Army. One of the reasons advanced was the fact that many letters had been received from parents of boys who had not broadcast messages home inquiring why they had not appeared on the program, or inquiring as to whether their boy would be heard and if so when. Obviously it would only be possible for a very small percentage of the Yanks stationed in Australia to actually go on the air. Naturally every mother or father is anxious to hear the actual voice of their own loved one, but since it is not a question of favoritism or singling out of any particular soldiers, parents should be able to appreciate the general feeling of contentment, good health and satisfaction, expressed by most of those who spoke, as also probably applicable to their own son, husband or father stationed there. At any rate, the practical and good-will value of this little feature was enormous, and it is to be hoped that Army authorities may see fit to allow it to again be aired.

More "On the Spot" Broadcasts

The present trend in broadcasts from London seems to be toward more "on the spot" and special features. A new one of this type may be heard Sundays at 6:15 p.m. CWT. It features J. B. McGeaghy as the pivotal personality and direct pick-ups from Moscow, Cairo and Sydney, or any other current "hot spots" . . . Another feature that should be of particular interest to those defense-factory workers on the night shift is "Worker's Playtime" which, rebroadcast by WOR (710 kcs.) Mondays at 3:05 a.m. CWT, is actually originated in England from a war factory and transmitted on short waves Fridays at 6:30 p.m. CWT.

The British Broadcasting Corporation is always glad to get positive suggestions as well as criticism and appreciation from its listeners. Tell them what you want to hear and give them concrete suggestions and you will find them extremely responsive. The aim of British radio is to provide raw material of fact on which free people can form their own opinions. Write to the British Broadcasting Corporation, 630 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

Rome Makes Schedule Changes

The Rome short-wave station has been making a lot of changes in frequencies and program schedules. The first daily transmission to eastern North America now goes on at 6:20 a.m. over 2RO6 (15.30); the second transmission at 12:00 noon CWT over 2RO6 (15.30). The evening broadcast to North America is still heard from 7:30 to 11:00 p.m. CWT, but 2RO22 (11.95) has been dropped in favor of 2RO11 (7.215). Other frequencies in use include 2RO4 (11.81) and 2RO3 (9.63). English news bulletins for England are broadcast over the Rome station as follows: At 9:00 a.m. over 2RO21 (15.047), 2RO22 (11.95), 2RO11 (7.215); at 3:00 p.m. over 2RO6 (15.30), 2RO4 (11.81), 2RO11 (7.215); at 3:40 p.m. over 2RO6 (15.30), 2RO4 (11.81), 2RO3 (9.63), and at 5:00 p.m. CWT over 2RO6 (15.30), 2RO4 (11.81), 2RO3 (9.63), 2RO19 (10.33), 2RO22 (7.215) and 2RO23 (6.29).

Notes About the Stations

Another mystery station is now being heard on 15.22 megs daily from 8:30 to 8:45 a.m. CWT. The identification is "The Hague Calling." Presumably this is the same transmitter—believed to be the old Huizen, Holland, station—which broadcasts on the same frequency starting at 9:00 a.m. using the identification, "The Voice of Free India" . . . The Japanese-controlled station at Parao, in the Caroline Islands, may be heard occasionally on 9.565 megs from 4:00 to 7:30 p.m. CWT broadcasting in Japanese . . . Nazi-operated station "Debunk" (10.35) is still polluting the air with its vicious propaganda, 7:30 to 8:00 p.m. CWT. Don't be fooled by the opening selection, which is the "Star-Spangled Banner."

"SOMEWHERE IN ICELAND" a company of U. S. troops gathers around the radio in the recreation room to enjoy a program of swing music from the States. Soldiers in Iceland like their music "hot," stop card and ping-pong games to listen in. Note heavy fur caps on some of the boys

Wears New Pin

Alma Kitchell, Blue Network women's specialist, who last summer joined the list of Silver Star Mothers having sons in the armed services, is wearing a new pin made for her by a famous jewelry designer. Showing the stars and stripes, the pin is in the form of a diamond star against a background of rubies and sapphires.

The Secret's Out

Ursile Twing, who sneaked into the Chase and Sanborn cast without a billing a few weeks ago, is Pat Patrick, popular Los Angeles night-club entertainer. Be careful, or you'll get him into a snit.

Paris in Lights

Betty Garde, who plays Mrs. Nielson on "The O'Neills," is famous for her collection of unusual jewelry. She prizes most her miniature replica of a street-lamp on the Rue de la Paix in Paris. The lights are pearls.

"Noah Webster Says" in Braille

The immense field of people being educated and instructed by "Noah Webster Says" is being broadened to include the readers of Braille. Haven MacQuarrie, who conducts NBC's word show, has received a request from the Jewish Braille Review to run part of the weekly list of words and definitions in the monthly publication for the blind.

He'll Play Scrooge Next

Young Peter Donald, reader of the submitted jokes on "Can You Top This?," played Tiny Tim in Charles Dickens' "A Christmas Carol" on the air in 1928. It was Peter's first radio assignment. Several years later, when his voice ripened, he portrayed Bob Cratchit, the clerk in old Scrooge's establishment.

Goff Buys Motorcycle

With gasoline-rationing just around the corner, Norris Goff, Abner of "Lum and Abner," has purchased a shining Harley-Davidson motorcycle on which he now rides to and from the Blue's Hollywood studios.

Upton Close Looks at the Fourth Year of War

importance to all concerned that this voluble public today holds the power and money-greedy elements in organized labor to be enemy number one in this damnable interference, and it holds the power-jealous politicians and bureaucrats in our administration to be enemy number two, and it regards one universally damned industrial management as less culpable today than either of the other two.

Now, the American mind has got to be cleared of these hovering doubts if it is going to give its all to win the war; and if it does not put its all into the war during this fourth year, then the war will be lost beyond retrieving to the new empires during this fourth year, or it will be yielded to the talons of chaos through prolongation beyond a fourth year. For I believe the shape of the war will be definitely determined within its fourth year. Hitler and Tojo consider us their only remaining deadly obstacle.

The first requirement to beat them is that America's spirit be thoroughly cleared of cloying obstacles. And when our spiritual front is truly and strategically laid out, then comes the problem of our military front and strategy. The first requirement of strategy is a thoroughly professional over-all war command—as professional in relation to what has gone before as was General U. S. Grant's command compared to what preceded him in the war between the states. Next, such a professional command will have to consider a more forceful—we might even say a more desperate—strategy than that of keeping others fighting on as many fronts as the enemy chooses to open. It will have to consider and concentrate upon foiling the master plan of the enemy, which is to keep our offensive force concentrated on Europe while Japan develops Asiatic resources and industry sufficiently to offset our advantage in production. It will have to foil the second step of the enemy which is making available the captured raw materials of Asia—the Nazi-controlled factories of Europe.

The footholds for these fundamental military jobs are obviously in China and in the Aleutian-Kurile Island bridge, and they can never be accomplished by demonstrations, however satisfactory, in south mid-Pacific islands. And if the Middle East or India is lost, they can only be accomplished by direct action against the brain and spinal-column of Japan. Meanwhile, the Atlantic must be held, in which task the bulge of Brazil and the British Isles and perhaps the bulge of Africa are of prime strategic value. There are still, of course, those Americans who hope that German power can be crushed by direct assault from the western European coast.

That will be proved out as the year wears on. If its slender promise fails to materialize, the job of the fourth year will be to buckle down to professional command and clearer, sounder strategy. But always the first requisite is that the spirit be clear. First, an untroubled fighting heart; then, an untrammelled striking arm.

FRAGRANCE in powder form saves alcohol and is patriotic. Snowy white sachet can be applied to skin for all-day fragrance

TO BE scent-imental make sachet a part of your daily life. Shulton's tablets among your lingerie add right touch to good grooming

Sachet (available in four odors) on top of the mattress. Then add a bit in the pillow case. There is no better way to insure pleasant dreams. In fact, they are practically guaranteed! And then when you awake in the morning, make sure that breeze wafting its way from the window is odoriferous. How is that done? Simply tie an Orloff boule or sachet bag to the handles of the window. Or if you want to go decorative, use the boules as tie-backs for your curtains. It's a pleasant way to start out your day.

But don't stop there. Your chest of drawers should contain the same odor. This is easily accomplished by sprinkling the powder between the tissue-paper lining of your drawer, or using the ready-made flannel drawer-liners which have already been scented. This delicate odor will permeate your lingerie and carry out the fragrance which means you. And for added interest use small boules, or sachet-hangers, in your closet. Shulton's sachet tablets are perfect to tuck into hat-boxes or to place atop one of the shelves.

Yes, sachets are versatile indeed, and they are remarkably inexpensive. You can buy them ready-made for a small sum—or you can go creative and make your own. There are any number of gadgets that will house your sachet powder. Tiny little pillows of lamb's wool can be pinned to your hatband; shoulder-pads for dresses and coats are trick items, handkerchief cases will be feminine and dainty, and even your handbag can be perfumed with a tiny sachet. So take your needle and thread and get busy. Use scraps of cloth. Let your imagination run riot.

Give this scent-imental approach a try. Choose a certain fragrance, make it a definite part of you, use it discreetly and be subtle! It will establish plainer than words your place in his heart.

FEMININE FORUM

By EDITH HAMPTON

Say It With Sachet

IS THERE a woman alive who doesn't want to appeal to some man's heart? Maybe a few, but the vast majority of us have our eye on someone whether he is husband, friend, or fiancé. And believe me, there is a way to win that man's affection and attention. Try the subtle approach, and appeal to his sentiments via the olfactory route! There is nothing more delightful than a pleasant odor which typifies you, a faint aroma to play up your personality, a scent that makes you a truly feminine woman. And never, never doubt the power of an unforgettable fragrance. It is more elusive than the dream of a shadow, more precious than gold, and more poignant than love at first sight!

And here's something worth thinking about. Comprehensive surveys have indicated that sixty-seven percent of all men frankly like a discernable fragrance about a woman. Eleven percent say they like it in moderation. Which all brings us around to the fact that only one man out of five is absolutely immune to the devastating effects of a delightful odor. So there's your technique! Without arousing the merest suspicion, you can subtly leave your personality firmly stamped in the mind of your man.

And you are a personality, you know, for the many facets of your existence definitely mark you as an individual. So what kind of person are you—elfish, sophisticated or vivacious? At any rate, choose the odor which will highlight you. It may be stirring, challenging, sultry or saucy. That is up to you, but do match it to your personality.

So be a wise gal. Select one odor, stick to it and make it a part of your daily life. It is true that priorities have rationed the alcohol for toiletries, but the perfume manufacturers have solved that problem by solidifying colognes, turning them into creamy lotions, and by reviving the sachet, a custom of by-gone days. Actually there is no other toiletry more versatile than this highly scented powder. It can be used in such a variety of ways to dramatize both your waking and sleeping hours. Here are a few suggestions:

The next time you change the sheets on your bed, sprinkle a bit of Luxor's hood ambition of becoming a concert pianist. A well-received musical debut in a great hall would have been considered acclaim after twelve years of piano studying, but for Luise it was the turning-point in her life as she felt that certain flaws in her playing would be with her always. A while later, back in her home town of Philadelphia, she modeled for twelve dollars a week before she could get her first opportunity to join theatricals. Her stage work led to her radio debut in Philadelphia as an actress. Since her audition for a part in a Chicago-aided radio program, Luise has been heard over the airwaves in divers radio roles. She was born May 23, 1912, speaks French fluently, is five feet eight inches tall, weighs about 130, has brown hair and eyes, likes to swim and ride horseback. Right now Luise is free-lancing in New York.

Mrs. Marie Johnson, Oswego, N. Y.—NBC's "The Remarkable Miss Tuttle" is not due to return to the air. The same goes for the "Blue Theater" and "Brent's House."

Mrs. A. Greek, Findlay, Ohio.—You've been hearing LARRY ROSS singing on the "Camel Caravan" on Friday nights at 10 p.m. EWT over CBS. XAVIER CUGAT's orchestra backgrounds the show, and you'll also hear MARGO and HERB SHRINER.

Mrs. F. M. Swift, Benton Harbor, Mich.—You'll be able to hear messages from soldiers read over the Mutual network at 10:30 a.m. Sundays. Another broadcast comes from London on Saturday night at 8 p.m. EWT, though this does not go over the entire network.

Mrs. J. H. Brand, Elmira, N. Y.—"Command Performance" is produced by the War Department solely for short-wave broadcasting to our boys abroad, and thus far no top-notch star has ever refused to play, nor has any of them ever received any remuneration. Because the show is strictly short-wave, it is difficult for many to hear it, but on Sunday at 11:30 a.m. EWT it is beamed toward Europe via WCBX and WCDA. At 9:15 p.m. EWT Sundays the show is beamed toward the Canal Zone, the West Indies and points south. At 10:00 a.m. EWT Sundays the program can be heard over short-wave stations WRCA, WNBI and WBOS.

Miss Mary Rosproy, Abilene, Kans.—In the five-a-week "Young Widder Brown" serial, FLORENCE FREEMAN has the role of Ellen; the role of Joan in "When a Girl Marries" is handled by MARY JANE HIGBY; in the story of "Young Doctor Malone," the role of Ann is taken by ELIZABETH RELLER; LUCILLE WALL is Portia in "Portia Faces Life" and also plays Belle in "Lorenzo Jones" . . . Due to the war it has become a problem to stars as to how to handle the picture situation, but you might try writing to the studio of your favorite to secure a picture. You're welcome.

of Ben Bernie as eulogist for George M. Cohan at the grand trouper's memorial in Chicago. Cohan was first abbot of the Friars Club. Bernie reigns in that post today . . .

Ben's gal singer, Gale Robbins, leaves us for Hollywood picture work. Her sweetheart will drive her west, then return to Chicago to enter active service with the Air Forces at Chanute Field. The often-postponed wedding seems definitely off for the duration. Elisse Cooper, a southern gal, replaces Gale on the gum opera . . .

Art Kohl, busy actor of these parts, has been vacationing, too. On his return to his studio chores he auditioned with a new production director, Martin Wagner, Vienna-born refugee from Germany. The men met in the control room. The director clicked his heels, bowed and announced, "Wagner is the name." Kohl, used to the give-and-take of Chicago studios, thought it was a gag and replied, "Kohl is my name. I'm ready now, jah." All, of course, to the accompaniment of heel-clicking and exaggerated bowing. As the audition proceeded, Art woke up to the fact that Wagner's accent was genuine. The actor dropped his script and silently stole away.

The Man Who Played With Death

When he returned to the house, the kitchen had been cleaned—spotlessly. David was asleep. He looked at Drina, but she did not embrace him as he expected. She didn't look at his face. She never looked directly at him again. . . .

In the weeks that followed, Howard began drinking—a thing he never had done before. Drina was hysterical and frightened when the police bade her make frequent visits to the morgue to look at unidentified bodies. The police suspected nothing. Then came the evening when Drina asked Howard if he had been stealing money from the firm and he had to tell her the truth.

"If that's what's been troubling you, the answer is yes," he said. "I took several thousand dollars. I took it when we decided to go off together and you backed out because you were afraid that, if we were ever found, David would be taken away from you. But what difference does it make now? That's all been cleared up."

"Yes," said Drina in a toneless voice. "It's all cleared up. You insisted on murdering him so that he wouldn't turn you over to the police. You didn't kill him because you loved me! You lied and robbed and murdered. Do

I love you? You wanted me to answer that question. Well, I will. You're a vile beast and I loathe you!"

He struck her and she fled weeping from the room. It was then he heard the tune, the tinkling melody of the toy he had buried with the body of his murdered partner. There could be no mistaking it. At first he believed he had gone insane. He leaped from his chair and ran to the kitchen door.

The child, David, was carrying the grime-smeared toy!

David told Howard he had found the merry-go-round while digging for buried treasure, and Howard, cold with fear, asked the child if he had told anyone else where the "buried treasure" was hidden.

"No," David replied. "Do you want to keep it a secret?"

Howard knew the child must be prevented from ever telling anyone what he knew. His mother's life and his own depended on that. There was poison—rat poison—on the shelf above the refrigerator. It was easy to slip it into a glass of milk Howard poured for David as the child played with his new-found toy.

"Here's your milk, David," he said, handing the child the poisoned glass.

"You have some, too."

David poured himself a glass and sat down with the child.

"Yours looks better than mine," David said. A doorbell rang. "Oh," David cried, "maybe that's Daddy."

"You sit there," Howard ordered, "and I'll answer the door."

It was Drina. She had forgotten her key. She and Howard came back into the kitchen, and Drina almost screamed when she saw the toy on the table and heard its tinkling melody. The story of the buried treasure was repeated.

"Did you find anything else?" Drina almost shouted. The child began to sob and Drina looked at Howard. Then, intuitively, her eyes glanced to the refrigerator shelf. The poison was gone.

"Warren," she cried. "The shelf! That arsenic! You've—I've got to call a doctor."

She ran toward the other room and managed to lock the door behind her. Howard beat on the panel. If a doctor were called, the whole truth would come out. But Drina made the call, and when she came back, Howard looked at her with madness in his eyes. She looked at him suspiciously.

"What're you going to do, Warren?"

"It will be very simple," he said coolly. "The police will say that you went out of your mind when your husband disappeared and that you killed your child and yourself. You will be found hanging, the child will be found poisoned—"

His voice suddenly broke into an anguished scream of pain. He slumped to the floor clutching his stomach. Drina knew he was dying. With eyes wide with wonder, she looked at her son.

"David, tell me something," she said. "Did you drink the glass of milk Uncle Warren gave you?"

"Why, no, Mummy," the child replied innocently. "I changed mine for his like I always do with you. I drank his and he drank mine. I changed it when he went to the door!"

Drina broke into mad laughter. She knew the doctor would come and learn the truth. She was beyond inventing a lie to explain the situation. Besides, there on the table was that telltale, bloodstained toy whirling around and around and playing its gay little tune that might well be the last music she'd hear on earth.

Thanxgivin' Letter to Daddy

because I gotta write a composition on 'em for my teacher. I'm writin' that turkeys is overstuffed chickens that are too lazy to lay eggs, an' they argue with other turkeys all day long like you an' Mummy. Only they can't throw dishes around.

But they do scratch each other, don't they, Daddy? Does Mummy scratch you that much? An' you once told her to go lay an egg. Can she, Daddy?

Anyway, I hope you're not mad at me now. Red and me was wishin' the other day that we could have Thanxgivin' and Christmas every day in the year. So's Red said that if you wished on a turkey's wishin' bone, it'd all come true. So we pulled all of Rudolph's feathers out lookin' for the wishin' bone and couldn't find nothin'. If you want to put the feathers back, Daddy, they're in the baby's crib. You should see him sneeze and make noises just like Rudolph. Gee, it was fun, Daddy.

So please, Daddy, don't be sore at me now. I'm here stayin' late at school as I write this letter 'cause the teacher says I'm a bad girl an' I have to be punished. Six times is enough, Daddy. She spanked me five times tonight. Now her hand is sore. I had my spellin'-book under my dress the last one.

An' you don't want to hit me, too. You always say it hurts you more than it does me. That's what the teacher said after she spanked me, too. I guess you're write.

Very truly yours,
