Don't Talk Shop . . .

THE above three-word warning applies to everyone in America in order to combat the present vicious work of the enemy among civilian groups. So DON'T TALK SHOP! The only person that really cares to listen is the enemy. If you happen to be turning out shell casings and your next-door neighbor is a welder, talk about the Chicago Bears or the Green Bay Packers next time you meet him at Joe's place. Mr. Shickelgruber, alias Adolf Hitler, won't be interested in American sports; but he is interested in the number of shell casings you turn out. Der Fuehrer is a hard man to reach by telephone but very easy to contact via grapevine rumor and loose talk relayed by his stool-pigeons. Best way to break Hitler's party line in America is—DON'T TALK SHOP!

—The Editors.

ABBOTT and COSTELLO: The Public's Private Property

IRST at the movie box-offices of the nation and voted among the fifteen best by radio listeners their first season on the airlanes, Lou Costello and Bud Abbott richly deserve their award plums. For they literally turned their lives over to the public during the past year. They made five movies, netted $78,000,000 on a bond tour, did 376 benefit programs, 254 camp shows, a radio stint, plus dozens of Government-sponsored broadcasts. What a record!

TO BOOST war-bond sales, Costello auctioned off rare items one night at his Band Box nitery—a dozen eggs and a pound of butter. Above: Chef Harry Bender threatens hen-fruit snitcher SUCCESS! Next step, Lou, above, ties bright red ribbons on each egg, puts them in a jewel case

"WHAT AM I BID?" yells Lou from the stand of the Band Box, while Veronica Lake, his help-er, without benefit of bang, displays the prize!

WINNER! Mrs. Julia Green of New York receives the coveted jewel case of eggs and butter from Veronica for evening's biggest purchase-$1,000 bond

ONE glance at this gorgeous portrait of Hedy Lamarr, M-G-M star, and readers have the first reason why MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE selected her as the second pin-up girl in its series. But beauty isn't the only reason. In Elizabeth, New Jersey, Hedy was guest of honor at a defense-bond dinner at $1,000 a plate. One of those present got up and stated that if Miss Lamarr would sing a chorus of Jingle, Jangle, Jingle he would buy an additional $1,000 bond. Hedy was game, but she added her own finishing touch by turning to the other guests and saying, "Let's finish with God Bless America." They obliged, and Uncle Sam was $1,000 richer. On a cross-country tour where Hedy found folks with little money, she sold ten-cent war stamps with as much enthusiasm as she had sold bonds. In Hollywood, the M-G-M star is a regular Friday nighter at the Canteen. Servicemen know this, and if she's five minutes late they set up a clamor. Her first chore at the Canteen was dancing with the men; but demand for autographs was so great that Hedy now sits behind the snack bar and just writes!

Men of Science Toil to Preserve Mankind Even While Military Machines Destroy It

By ARNOLD MARQUIS
Writer-Director

America's yearly "March of Dimes" broadcast serves the double purpose of saying "Happy Birthday" to the nation's Chief Executive and combating the scourge of infantile paralysis. "Unlimited Horizons" broadcast the drama enacted by those who fight for victory over it. —The Editors.

NE week it's bugs. The next week it's astronomy. The next week it's hormones, or the electron microscope, or the Neanderthal Man. And for a guy who knows nothing about these things, who was even disgracefully dismissed from his elementary science class in high school, this is a succession of bewildering adventures.

It started in San Francisco. Jennings Pierce, NBC director of public-service programs, thought up the idea. And then one day they said we are starting a new program—on science—and you are going to write it. I? I? You mean me? Here I was, a harmless and defenseless writer of radio trivia who thought a beaker was a hunting-dog and—I? I write a science program?

The first program was on

The Story Behind
"UNLIMITED HORIZONS"

ARNOLD MARQUIS looks on while scientists experiment in effort to determine how polio infection occurs the klystron, a miraculous gadget having to do with electrons and things like that. I went to the secret laboratory where this spectacular bit of modern magic had been spawned. I saw it. I talked with the young scientists who had created it. I watched and listened and asked questions for hours and couldn't make out what it was or what it was for. Ultimately I got a glimmering. That first program of the "Unlimited Horizons" series, I died a thousand leaths. And I've never got over it. I do the same with every one.

The subjects for the programs are lined up weeks and months in advance. Jennings Pierce and I discuss the various possibilities. We try to select subjects that have an appeal to the public. When we have settled upon a given subject, Pierce then arranges for the interview with the scientist, and then I'm off in a cloud to seek him out. I usually find them quiet, unpretentious, thoughtful and very human. While they are working on their projects they are working on their projects they are working about taxes, about stuffy noses, about having their suits cleaned and their shoes tanged—just as you and I are.

tapped—just as you and I are.

When I went to school I was certain that the average professor was a stuffy dope who had lost contact with the corporeal world, who knew his bugs and astronomy and prehistoric man, but who knew nothing about THIS world in which we are living. THIS world, today, with its complexity of problems-social, political, economic. I have learned now, after having in-terviewed scores of the top scientists of the nation, that they have a very keen, a very deep understanding of what this world TODAY is all about. And that is why most of them work as selflessly, as assiduously as they do. For they are not out to make money. They are out to make this world a better place in which to live. Science, I have learned, knows no boundaries. While nation struggles against nation, and though science in each nation is geared to the war effort of that nation, many scientists are still working not specifically for their own nations but in a broad sense to make this world a better place in which to live. I re-member, in passing, that a German gave the world the electro-encephalograph (the brain-wave machine which tells you what's cooking in your noggin), and a Japanese isolated the bug that is responsible for the Black Death, the bubonic plague.

Today hundreds of men of science are fighting poliomyelitis—infantile paralysis. It has been an uphill fight for years. They have met disappointment, discouragement, heartbreak. Many of them have worked for years and, seemingly, have accomplished nothing. But everyone finds out SOMETHING. And all these bits of knowledge, pieced together, are working toward more complete understand-

"This Is the Army," a Government short, will have an army of stars if present plans work out. Definite okays haven't been forthcoming from the Army as yet, but every effort is being made to get Lieutenants Clark Gable and Ronald Reagan for top spots in the show. In addition to many others in the service, stars still in civvies are volunteering their time for free. Latest of these volunteers are Jean Gabin and Ginger Rogers, who are eager to get in there and pitch in any way they can. And that's the case of the majority of folks around Movietown these days . . .

Most heart-warming event in Holly-wood last week was the testimonial luncheon given that wizard fighter against infantile paralysis, Sister Kenny, who was presented with a medal for distinguished service by the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. Rosalind Russell, who is definitely set to do the role of Sister on the screen, made the presentation. We felt it was an honor indeed to be present at the affair and listen to Sister Kenny's inspiring talk. It left us with a feeling that everyone should know more about the work that can be done to combat this scourge of humanity . . .

Of all things! We never can get used to the idea of Sabu sans his turban and his brief attire in such pictures as "The Jungle Book" and "Elephant Boy," wearing ordinary clothes of civilians. But now, if you please, Sabu has won his corporal chevrons in the cavalry unit of the California State Militia. He's so proud of the fact that he just can't keep it a secret . . .

THE MOVIE FRONT

"I am! Ain't you?" George Tobias has portrayed so many Greek characters on the screen, and done them so well, that many believe he is a Greek. In Florida recently on location with the "Air Forces" company, a spokesman for an admiring group of bystanders began addressing George in a foreign tongue. "Sorry, old man," said George, "but it's Greek to me." "Of cuss," beamed the man, "I am! Ain't you?"...

Shock to Hollywood was the news of the Lana Turner-Stephen Crane marriage annulment petition, because the law said that Mr. Crane was not free from his first wife when he married Lana. In spite of her beauty and the fact that she is really such a pleasant little person, Lana seems to have been unlucky in love. If the annulment is granted it will indicate recognition of her marriage to Crane, and will leave the actress with a few less worries concerning her approaching motherhood. Whether Lana and Steve will remarry when he is free still remains a moot question. For right now Lana is pretty broken up . .

Comedian Joe E. Brown is off on another tour of camps, this time in the south Pacific area to entertain American troops there, and if his plans work out Joe will visit every island possession on which Uncle Sam's men are stationed. Joe did a heap of good with his past tours to Alaska, but on this one he'll give just a little more than his best to our fighting forces in memory of his son, Captain Don Brown, who was killed in a plane crash in October of 1942 . . .

Morale-booster is the local play "Hey, Rookie," which was planned originally so the men at Fort MacArthur, California, could raise enough money for a few recreational needs. To date the piece has grossed $87,531 and is still going strong. Now they have complete athletic equipment and a swimming-pool, with who knows what more to come! . . .

High hopes dashed. Lon Chaney, Jr., is pretty disappointed that he is not going to play the same part his illustrious father made famous in "Phantom of the Opera" when it's refilmed at Universal. Lon, Jr., was up for the role, but Claude Rains got it. The fact that young Chaney may be drafted soon probably was the biggest reason for his failure to land the part . . .

Dishwasher and dance That's the respective roles Bill Lun-digan and Martha O'Driscoll play Monday and Wednesday nights at the Hollywood Canteen. Bill washes dishes in the kitchen and Martha dances with servicemen out front. The pair have been inseparable for some time now and, if gossip can be depended on, Hollywood won't be surprised if they decide to become Mister and Missus soon . . .

Eleanor Powell turns song-writer. Ellie's collaborated with Walter Ruick on a number called Dancing With You. From all reports it's a tune worth listening to, and radio listeners will have a chance to judge for themselves when Jimmy Dorsey and his musicmakers introduce it on the air . . .

In "So Proudly We Hail," the Paramount picture which features Claudette Colbert, Veronica Lake and Paulette Goddard in the roles of Army nurses, movie-goers will be hailing these beauties, who usually exude glamour to the Nth degree, in men's overalls and white cotton stockings. For over half the picture, not even one well-turned ankle is visible. Ho, hum, a change can be as good as a

To dye or not to dye! Question hasn't been settled yet, but Army sweetheart Betty Grable wants to dye her hair red for her next picture, "Rosie O'Grady," in which she will play the Irish title role. Betty's pretty chipper these days, what with her tiff with George Raft all ironed out and sweetness and light reigning between them. But back to the dye job—we dunno, Betty. Remember, gentlemen still prefer blondes! . . .

Uncle Sam pages Ingrid Bergman for a Government short under the auspices of the Office of War Information just as soon as she finishes retakes on "For Whom the Bell Tolls." Subject of the Bergman Government film has not as yet been announced . . .

Last laugh in reverse. Ben Blue, M-G-M comedian, who usually gets the last laugh, found the situation reversed the other day. Blue was seated next to a visitor on a Metro set watching a scene between Kathryn Grayson and Gene Kelly. When the scene was completed the visitor turned to Blue and asked, "What do you do?" "Me? I'm a writer," cracked the comic. "I just tossed off a little number called 'Random Harvest,' starring Greer Garson and Ronald Colman." "That's fine," replied the stranger. "I write a little, myself." "That so?" said Blue. "What's your name?" "Hilton, James Hilton," replied the stranger. (And in ease it plied the stranger. (And in case it might have slipped your mind, Hilton happens to be the real author of "Random Harvest.") . . .

Jottings from Movietown. Susanna Foster and Nelson Eddy will play the romantic leads in Universal's remake (Continued on Page Facing 36)

ON VICTORY-BOND NIGHT at the Hollywood Canteen, lucky soldier, above, not only won a bond but got a kiss from Jane Wyman (Mrs. Ronnie Reagan) to boot. "Double break," smiles Rudy Vallee (left), who brought his Coast Guard band to Canteen that night to entertain servicemen and acted as m.c.

Alice Frost, who has been away from the airlanes too long, is now heard as Mrs. North in "Mr. and Mrs. North" on NBC. Alice is a favorite of long standing and, from the many letters received, her fans sure put down the red carpet to welcome her back. Since leaving the airwaves Miss Frost has been busy doing her bit as a member of the Coordinating Council of French Relief Societies, whose function is to distribute food packages to prisoners of war in German camps . . .

THE RADIO FRONT

Molly of "The Goldbergs," received a letter from the boys in the Army camp where Alfred Ryder is stationed. Ryder, you'll remember, portrayed Sammy, Molly's son, before entering the service. The letter informed Ger-trude that she had been elected their camp mother because of her sincere understanding and warm philosophy. Mrs. Berg responded by adopting all of them as her sons for the duration and is kept busy writing them and sending boxes of good things to eat . . .

Herb Shriner, of the CBS "Comedy Gertrude Berg, better known as Caravan," and his writer, Joe Twerp

(that's his name, believe it or not), have a strange way of getting material. They just amble around town talking of this and that. When coffee-rationing was news, they walked by a restaurant and got into a discussion about the effect coffee-rationing would have on the restaurant trade. "That'll sure put a hole in the doughnut business," said Twerp. This gag got what Herb and Joe call a "whap," better known as a belly-laugh . . .

Max Marcin, writer of "Crime Doctor," once won a $10,000 prize for the best short story of the year. Marcin's story was voted the finest, and his competitors were Jack London and Rudyard Kipling, That's what's known as COMPETITION . . .

Morton Gould, who is musical direc-tor of "Cresta Blanca Carnival" on Mutual, is the only person who has permission to play Ravel's Bolero any time, any place. He recorded the Bolero and Maurice Ravel was so pleased with the recording he sent Morton a blanket license . . .

Sam "Schlepperman, Hallo, Strang-er" Hearn, who has been heard on the Jack Benny program many times, finds his vaudeville training comes in handy now that he is helping Jack and his radio gang entertain at service camps. The boys love it when Sam and Jack go into their violin duets . . .

The war and these changing times brought about a shuffle in the cast of "Valiant Lady." Bartlett Robinson resumes as Joan Blaine's leading man, replacing Raymond Johnson. Arthur Vinton is the new villain and Bill Mc-Kenna is a helpful friend. Both actors who formerly played these roles are now in service . . .

Carl Eastman, the reporter in "We Love and Learn," has probably had more calls to play newspapermen than any other radio actor. He figures he has covered at least seventy-five assignments . . . John Charles Thomas couldn't decide whether to be a doctor or a singer. Music won out when he was offered a scholarship at Peabody Conservatory in Baltimore, Maryland . . . A mystery is solved: "Information, Please" will be sponsored by Heinz, the fifty-seven variety firm, starting February 15 over NBC.

HOLLYWOOD By AVERY THOMPSON

The modesty of some of our Marine heroes is exceeded only by their bravery, as to wit, an incident we witnessed at the Charlie McCarthy rehearsal. Attending also was a marine who had seen active service in the Solomons and was all bedecked with medals. After going through his paces with the band, Ray Noble sauntered over and engaged the lad in conversation. In the course of their talk he asked what the various medals were for. And the boy calmly tossed off, "Oh, I dunno, but," and pointing to a certain ribbon, "this one is for good conduct!" . . .

Although records made by Kay Kyser and his band outsold the waxed melodies of any other musical group in America during 1942, he is one of the very few bandleaders who does not play any musical instrument . . .

Broadcasters in other cities would do well to copy Al Jarvis of Hollywood's "Make Believe Ballroom" fame. He conducted a contest on the air and charged listeners ten cents for votes for their favorite bandleader. He collected close to $600 and turned it over to a local children's hospital...

Lum and Abner this week passed their sixteen thousand monthly fanletter mark. What with their Pine Ridge folk-lore and their Hollywood screen efforts, the boys are gathering one of the most faithful fan followings of anyone in pictures or radio . . .

Typed! First Rosemary DeCamp was cast as an expectant mother in "Hold Back the Dawn." Then the part became a reality when she gave birth to a baby daughter some six weeks ago. Returning to the air for her first professional appearance following this blessed event, she was again given the part of a girl about to have a baby. P.S. Rosemary didn't need much rehearsing, she felt right at home . . .

Bob Burns is not only feasting on squab as a result of raising pigeons on his San Fernando farm, he actually sold a crop of beans that was grown right on the premises. And Bob's so enthusiastic about the whole thing, he's figuring on "givin' them farm folk down in Arkansas a little competition" . . .

Hodgepodge: That man-huntin' female, Vera Vague, isn't going to miss out on any opportunities with the soldiers. She's already purchased an entire wardrobe to wear in Florida, when the Bob Hope show will visit the Army camps there in early spring . . . February 1 will see Penny Singleton returning to the air in the role of Blondie, which has been so well handled in her absence by Florence Lake . . . The same date will mark Orson Welles' last appearance on the Lockheed-Vega "Ceilings Unlimited" program. Orson will make a full-time chore of his South American relations stint.

HELEN TRAUBEL TO APPEAR AS "TELEPHONE HOUR" GUEST MONDAY, NBC

Bruno Walter Conducts Philharmonic in All-Beethoven Program, Sunday; Traubel to Sing "Isolde" Role in Met Broadcast Feb. 6

By ROBERT BAGAR

New York World-Telegram Music Critic and Associate Program Annotator for Philharmonic-Symphony Society of New York

HEN Helen Traubel, St. Louis-born soprano, sang her first Isolde in Wagner's immortal opera at the Metropolitan on the evening of December 4, 1942, she established a precedent-an important one. For Miss Traubel was the first entirely American-trained soprano to essay that difficult part.

On February 6, Miss Traubel will be heard as the Wagnerian heroine for the first time over the radio. Thus she completes a sort of cycle, the beginning of which helped put her in the Metropolitan.

By 1939, Miss Traubel had accomplished some worth-while things in music. She had been the heroine of Walter Damrosch's opera, "The Man Without a Country," during a Metropolitan spring season, she had sung in concert. All of that, however, had not been enough to make her a member of the winter company, the real Metropolitan, that is.

In that year, through the intervention of a friend, an audition for the Ford hour was arranged. That particular program had been featuring operatic and other stars of established reputation. On the day before that event, however, Miss Traubel, an enthusiastic lover of the outdoors, had gone on one of her frequent picnics. She returned the next day covered over with ivy-poisoning.

When she went to the studio for the audition, the people in charge gave her strange looks but they let her in anyway. Miss Traubel went through the routine, performing an aria from Wagner's "Die Walkuere." The control-room men, who had also given her looks, paid scant attention to her. Suddenly a buzzer rang in the controlroom. From one of the executives came the command: "Listen, boys, shut off that Flagstad record and let's hear this gal from St. Louis and get it over with Imagine his surprise to find that the "Flagstad record" was none other than Helen Traubel's voice. Need it be added that she got the job?

Having appeared on the Ford program, she could consider herself moved up a major notch. Two weeks later she appeared as soloist with the Philharmonic-Symphony. Then came a debut in the Town Hall, New York, and it all culminated in her engagement by the Metropolitan.

When people refer to her as an "American Flagstad" she rightly resents it. Holding the Norwegian soprano in great esteem, she is yet in-dividualistic enough to want to achieve success as Helen Traubel, an Ameri-

She thinks of all such phraseology as "another Paganini," "a modern Michelangelo," "the American Bernhardt" as being thoroughly idiotic. The reason those artists were great," she says, "is because they were themselves, each making an original and individual contribution to the world. No one has become a great artist merely because he imitates someone else or patterns his career after another's. I don't see why any person with any confidence in himself should want to be billed as the second anybody else: it is always preferable to be the first of whatever you are."

How true and how reminiscent-at least to this writer-that is to something once said by the famous Spanish cellist, Gaspar Cassado. "People call me a 'second Pablo Casals,' " he ruefully declared. "What I want, however, is to be known as a first Cas-sado."

Miss Traubel considers nationalism in music a dangerous thing. It can be carried too far, she holds. "To dislike the music of Wagner," she maintains, "because its structural form or peculiar harmonies or orchestration does not appeal to one's personal taste is permissible. But to refuse to listen to Wagner because of his nationality or the fact that certain of his literary ideas have been reinterpreted by the Nazis would be an intolerant act. It would be akin to that brand of misguided thinking that would ban the scientific theories of Albert Einstein, the music of Mendelssohn, the writings of Heine.

"It is unfortunate," she observes,

can soprano—for which she can't be "that some people feel a certain an-tagonism toward the German composer's works at this time. But I am happy to find that with the great majority of audiences in the United States and in Canada the might and majesty of Wagner's music itself obscures any other issues. What kind of man the composer was, where he was born are totally unimportant questions. The main thing is; how good is his music?"

Miss Traubel practises regularly six hours a day. When studying a new role she sometimes keeps at it more than twelve hours at a stretch. The new Wagnerian soprano of the Metropolitan is a dependable performer who knows that work, hard unrelenting work is essential to all artistic endeavor. Incidentally, Miss Traubel appears as soloist on the "Telephone Hour" on Februray 1.

(On Monday, February 1, Helen Traubel will be guest of the "Telephone Hour"; and on Saturday, February 6, she may be heard from the stage of the Metropolitan Opera House ever the Blue Network.)

All-Beethoven

Bruno Walter, appearing with the Philharmonic-Symphony, has devised a program completely made of music by Beethoven. There are to be the Egmont Overture, the C Minor Piano Concerto, with Rudolf Serkin to play the solo portion, the Eighth Symphony and the Third Leonore Overture.

It is amazing that Beethoven's music can stand alone in a concert program, more than that of any other composer. It isn't that his pieces are so different one from the other that they make for the variety such a list would of necessity demand. It is more than that, perhaps. It is the fact that his music speaks with tremendous force. It tells us things we have known, but it tells them with such persuasiveness and order that we must listen over and over again.

In the pieces to be conducted by Walter we find the right kind of balance for a symphonic program. While the music is all Beethoven, while the idiom is Beethoven, while the message is still the main Beethoven partyline, it is transmitted through these varied media interestingly and musically and with an intense appeal,

A piano concerto differs in construction, in grammar from an overture, from a symphony. But the validity of the composer's thought is manifest in either case. He knows the avenues of approach to the intellect, the heart, the spirit. He follows them with unerring instinct. Beethoven is Beethoven, and the more one hears him the more one is convinced of his superior attainments, his penetrating under-standing of life, his utterly musical speech.

(Bruno Walter directs the New York Philharmo Symphony Orchestra Sunday, January 31, over CBS.)

CARMEN CAVALLARO is a dark, bushy-haired, rather artistic-looking young man who has legions of followers. With reason, too, for his pianistic style is one of the current joys. Carmen is perfectly capable of launching out on a riff session, if he is so minded. His technique and his understanding of all the jazz idioms is second to no one else's. But he has made a specialty of the legatoed, expressive, melody-featuring style of piano-playing. And there seems to be no one to contest his supremacy in the

As a matter of fact, he can and does interpolate much ornamentation into his playing. He improvises continually. The figures and scales and chordal progressions that he employs are, of course, his own. They are his own idiom, in a sense, his own battery of rather distinguished arabesques.

He was telling me the other day, between sessions of dance music in the Wedgwood Room of the Waldorf-Astoria in New York, that all this business of "hot" music improvisation makes him sick. "A lot of the talk is so full of falsehoods," he said. "Since when is improvisation confined only to the New Orleans type of Jazz," he declared. "Why, I've been improvising in my own style for as long as I can remember. You can't go out on the bandstand and play the same figures all the time. Audiences catch on easily. You've got to be different every time.
And in order to be different you've got to have imagination."

Carmen Cavallaro has had his own band for about three years. Prior to that he was featured pianist with Rudy Vallee and Al Kavelin and Enric Madriguera. His music on the keyboard fascinated dancers. So much so that they stopped their dancing to watch his fleet fingers execute their magical tricks.

Born in New York City, Cavallaro studied music privately for about sixteen years. There was a time when he thought that he might go to college, get a degree in some profession or other and then devote himself to the task of making a career out of it.

Music proved too strong a lure, however. He dropped his college studies at once and went whole-heartedly into piano-playing. Even now he plays classical music for his own or his friends' entertainment.

He has no regrets, only satisfaction at the turn of events that has placed him in the enviable position he now occupies. His four record albums (Decca) are extraordinary best-sellers. He plays the music he wants to play for the type of public he likes best. He is famous, Because he likes his work he never tires of it. Is there any reason why he shouldn't be completely happy?

IN DEFENSE OF THE DAYTIME SERIAL . . NEW BOOK OF OBOLER PLAYS

Gilbert Seldes Takes Issue With Theory That Serials Are Slipping; Oboler's "Plays for Americans" Royalty-Free to Amateur Dramatists

By JAMES G. HANLON

Editor, The Journal of the Association for Education by Radio

R. MA'TTHEW N. CHAPPELL'S theory that daytime serials are out of tune with the times, reported in part on this page last month, contained fighting words. A few readers took exception, particularly to his statement that "the daytime serial is literature for humble folk." These readers and others who experienced the same reaction may be interested in what Gilbert Seldes had to say on the subject in answer to Chappell's claims. Mr. Seldes, noted author, playwright, critic, is now directing a study of daytime programs for CBS; and he objects vigorously to Dr. Chappell's thesis.

Mr. Seldes begins by taking issue with Dr. Chappell's interpretation of the meaning of the survey figures, which, incidentally, were supplied by a prominent radio-audience research firm. He scores this issue on the ground that the figures do not give a "firm basis for comparison." Dr. Chappell, you may remember, pointed out that daytime serials are not keeping pace with the audience gains of other sponsored network daytime programs.

"Of the twenty-nine programs used by Dr. Chappell for purposes of com-parison," Mr. Seldes explains, "five are news and news commentary (in-cluding Ted Collins on the Kate Smith program) and fourteen others are not Monday-to-Friday programs; they are broadcast on Saturday and Sunday only. This leaves only some ten pro-grams which can legitimately be used for comparison with the daytime se-

"The only thing that comes out specifically and beyond question from Dr. Chappell's own figures is that the moment people had to stay at home because they couldn't travel, they turned at once to their radios; during the week-days they turned to daytime serials and over the week-ends, when there are no daytime serials and when more people are at home, they turned even more to the other pro-

"Dr. Chappell's theory," Seldes says, "requires us to believe in a peculiar race, the 'humble folk' who listen to daytime serials. There is no such race.

TO GILBERT SELDES (above), noted author and critic, pioneering in the field of popular entertainment is nothing new. His best-selling book, "The Seven Lively Arts," published in 1924, did much to attract attention to motion pictures, jazz and even the newspaper comic strips (Columbia University) . . . indicate that the people who listen to daytime serials do not in any fundamental way differ from the people who do not . .

Of the claim that the daytime serial "rationalizes the failures and frustra-tions of the humble man," Mr. Seldes says: "The stories themselves are much more varied than one would think. Some of the characters are lethargic and passive, some are not. In some of the serials the atmosphere is tense. In others it is gay. Some of the characters agonize. Some, not so many, to be sure, fight back.

"We are only beginning to find out what it is that women like in the daytime serial. On the surface, it offers two values: First, an escape from the problems of daily life and, second, the reverse, it offers guidance in meeting the problems of daily life .

"There is no question that the daytime serial, like every other living organism, has to change and adapt itself to changing environment. In fact,"

The researches of Dr. Paul Lazarsfeld Seldes claims, "the radio serial has made a prompt and conspicuously successful adaptation of its material to war conditions. As far back as last August," he points out, "two-thirds of the daytime serials were using the themes supplied by the war in more or less serious fashion, and since then they have steadily integrated their basic war themes into the structure of the stories themselves . . .
". . In the daytime serial," he concludes, ". . . we have a unique medium of communication; it can stand correction and reproof-if they are based on understanding; its potentialities are only beginning to be explored; and it is early in the day to announce that its creators are intellectually bankrupt or to excommunicate its millions of listeners as unfaithful to the American tradition.'

There you have, in part, one distinguished scholar's condemnation of another's diagnosis of the so-called ailings of the soap operas. Side by side, these two papers are just another disturbing addition to the columns of criticism, pro and con, which have been directed at the daytime serials.

Only one fact remains irrefutable. And this is that the radio industry still does not have an accurate idea of what listeners want or what they like. By various research devices, it can be determined with some degree of accuracy that (1) a certain percentage of listeners have their sets tuned to a certain program at a given hour; or that (2) a certain percentage of listeners have at one time or another heard a certain program; or that (3) a certain percentage of listeners have certain tuning-habits throughout the day. What these devices do not show -and, to me, this is the important thing—is whether these listeners are listening intently or abstractedly to the radio, whether the listener likes what is heard or, instead, would enjoy something else if given a reasonable choice.

When we have a reliable answer to these questions, then perhaps we can make some sense of what we say about programs and their listeners.

Plays for Americans

Arch Oboler is probably most close-ly associated with the "Lights Out" (CBS, Tues.) chillers. But on innumerable occasions Mr. Oboler has gone above and beyond this type of radio writing; and one instance was the scripts he wrote for a series titled "Plays for Americans." These halfhour plays were his contribution to the defense effort in the distressing days immediately preceding and following Pearl Harbor.

Some of the best plays he wrote for this series have been pubished in a volume carrying the title of the series. Plays for Americans (Farrar and Rinehart). They represent, in my opinion, some of Mr. Oboler's best writing to date. Surprisingly, the scripts, though written primarily for radio presenta-tion, make exceedingly pleasant reading as well. They are specially edited and annotated for the use of amateur dramatic groups, who have the privilege of presenting them royalty-free for the duration. Considering the circumstances under which these plays were written, I doubt seriously whether you'll ever again find radio scripts quite like them.

duties are over for the day.

The only time Autry's service rou-tine is interrupted is when he is sent by Uncle Sam to various Army induction centers or near-by fields to sell war bonds or lead patriotic rallies. For the most part, though, Gene reports to Luke Field, where his daily assignments are those of any other sergeant in the armed forces.

Probably Autry's toughest chore, when he first went into service, was learning to walk in low-heeled shoes. He had worn high-heeled cowboy boots for so many years that he felt he was falling over backward in the regulation G-I's.

Yep, the idol of a million American boys has changed since he joined the Army. But depend on this, youth of America: When Autry comes back to the movies after victory for the United Nations, you can be sure of seeing a more vital and interesting personality because of his experience in the armed forces. The change common to all men who have tasted Army discipline will mark him. And cowboy Autry will be the first to admit-a mark of change for the better!

Dispatches Reveal How Weather Handicaps Fighters; Melbourne Changes Time of North American Broadcast; New French-Africa Station Heard

Weather, a Military Enemy

By CHARLES A. MORRISON

President, International DX'ers Alliance

S WE sit in our comfortable living-room in front of a cheery, crackling open fire, listening to the latest radio dispatches from the fighting fronts, it is sometimes very hard to realize that out there in the frontier battle areas our men are fighting not only highly trained and brutal enemy troops, thundering tanks and flaming guns but weather conditions that are almost unbelievable. Weather and the conditions caused by weather sometimes become a more formidable enemy than the most powerful military opponents.

We have cold weather, of course, but not the marrow-freezing sub-zero cold of the great treeless plains of Russia. Even the indomitable Russians are finding it hard to retain the power of their offensive drive under conditions of extreme cold. Enemy airports must be occupied ahead of advancing infantry troops. According to radio reports all planes must be equipped with skis. To permit the use of these skis, landing-fields must be rolled smooth and hard with heavy rollers. Planes must be kept warm, for the oil must not be allowed to freeze.

Mechanics must work in sub-zero temperatures with terrible, icy winds penetrating their clothing with metal parts so cold that frost-bite will be the immediate penalty of any contact by bare flesh. Lorries bringing up troops and supplies slide and slither on the icy, rough roads. Branches must often be strewn along the trails to permit any kind of progress.

In Libya, General Montgomery's Eighth Army is advancing under different but almost as bad weather conditions. Geoffrey Talbott, BBC correspondent, recently stated that even as he broadcast the wind was almost blowing his head off. Soldiers must lean forward at a forty-five-degree angle to keep going. Often the bitter, biting wind is accompanied by torrential downpours of rain; more often by driving mists of sand. Sometimes this veil of sand becomes so thick, so plack you can't see the vehicle at your de. You always have sand in your e 'es, in your tea, in your coffee.

Down in Papua, New Guinea, lofty impassable mountains, slimy impene-trable jungles and daily rains of "cloudburst proportions" have all conspired to create a type of warfare in which only the strong survive, in which men must become savage, lurking shadows of the jungle, conquering their opponents by stealth, by trickery, by dogged tenacity. Damien Parer, ace cameraman of the Australian Infantry Forces, has been describing this type of warfare over the Melbourne shortwave station. His own brother was killed in the evacuation of civilians from the Bulolo gold-fields. His accounts are stark, nakedly realistic. They grip the imagination, sear the soul. I had the good fortune to see the other night a reel of pictures that he had taken in the New Guinea jungles. I shall never forget the blinding rains, the miserable grass huts, the mudcovered Australian and American boys who, in swampy slime to their knees-sometimes to their waists-kept doggedly stumbling ahead, while from the jungles a green-painted face would suddenly appear for an instant, fire a shot, and vanish like a wraith. Bearded, unkempt but with undaunted spirit these men of ours are carrying on and winning the fight against the evil forces that have threatened to engulf humanity.

We may not have our houses quite as warm as usual, we may not have quite as much gas in our cars, we may have to hesitate on that second cup of coffee, but we are not freezing, unkempt, our clothes in tatters, hungry, weary or wounded. Let us remember these things as we listen to radio dispatches coming from areas of dying and suffering to our homes of warmth and good health.

A Texan in the Solomons

One escape story which will live after the war is that of twenty-eightyear-old Fighter Pilot Lieut. Dinn of Corpus Christi, Texas, who bailed out over Isabel Island in the Solomons, then canoed down the coast for six days fighting twenty-foot crocodiles and capturing and recapturing a Japanese pilot, whom he took to Gaudalcanal. Dinn related his extraordinary adventures to a Sydney newsman, who retold them over the Melbourne shortwave station as follows:

"The lieutenant was flying a pursuit plane accompanying bombers in an attack on — Bay. He got an excellent shot at a gasoline dump. Returning for a shot at another, he was struck by a Japanese 20-mm. ack-ack gun and had to bail out five miles from the enemy position. Slashing through the jungle, Dinn at last met a party of natives who supplied him with directions. At the first village he got a canoe and started on a 140-mile trip down the coast, which included threading his way through mangrove swamps infested with crocodiles, which he had to scare off with pistol shots. Two weeks previously a Japanese bomber crew had crashed in one of these swamps, and half of them were eaten by the crocodiles. The remainder had been rescued by the natives, who have been recompensed with money. Dinn found that the only reward the natives wanted from him was a letter to the British administrator commending them for the help given.
"Dinn found a Japanese refugee pilot on an island five miles away. The Japanese had been wounded by a shot. Dinn captured and carried this man to his canoe. The Japanese managed to upset it but Dinn recaptured him and put him back into the canoe. A few days later Dinn was told at the village that the government launch was searching for him. He finally ar-rived at his base eight days after bailing out."

"The Ham Club"

With amateur activities suspended for the duration, not much is being heard about the radiomen whose activities have frequently proved so vital in civil emergencies; whose experimenting has been an important factor in bringing about the presentday perfection of radio. To act as an unofficial clearing-house for ham (amateur) activities and chatter, WCKY (1530 kcs.), Cincinnati, Ohio, is putting its 50,000-watt transmitter on the air each morning from 5:00 to 5:30 a.m. EWT to present a program by hams, and for hams, and those interested in them. #### FREQUENCIES

Jean Dickenson, operatic soprano of the "American Album of Familiar Music," has hit upon an alarming cure for her habit of being late for appointments. Jean carries a tiny alarm clock in her handbag. Sometimes it goes off in a subway train or on a bus, startling fellow travelers. But Jean is more often on time now.

Beware the Darkened Room

It's advisable for anyone entering any room in Gracie Fields' Santa Monica home always to be sure the light is on before setting foot across the threshold. Even those familiar with the floor plan and the furnishings are apt to knock their shins unless this precaution is taken. The reason: The famed British singer comedienne admitted this week in Hollywood that she is one of those women who delight in moving the furniture around in every room -but daily!

Dick Powell has joined the ranks of radio and filmsters who depend on motorcycles to do most of their traveling these days of gasrationing. The NBC serenader loudly speeds to his Saturday night broadcasts on a gay red two-wheeled demon, as do Ed Bergen, Lum and Abner, Bob Taylor, Bob Young and many others. out for a sidecar before she tackles the thing.

At a "Radio Reader's Digest" rehearsal, producer Bob Nolan was working with the soundeffects men, perfecting the illusion of a switchboard in a busy office. Actress Ann Thomas joined in the discussion, and in an authoritative manner described the correct sequence of sounds. "That sounds like it, all right," agreed Nolan. "Well, it ought to," declared Miss Thomas, "I used to run one of those things over in Brooklyn!"

Loyal Fan

Agnes Moorehead, who played Aunt Harriet in "The Aldrich Family" before she went to Hollywood, where she now appears in the Lionel Barrymore program, always reserves Thursday night for her "alma mater" radio show. She still loyally follows the Clifford Goldsmith comedy series.

Writes from Experience

"Front Page Farrell" program received a warm fan letter from a large group of hospitalized soldiers in Camp Wolters, Texas, expressing appreciation for the two-fisted daytime serial. The writers were particularly appreciative of the treatment soldiers receive in the script. "They really talk like soldiers, and sound like soldiers," said the letter, signed by eighty soldiers. There's a reason. Bob Shaw, who writes the serial, was in the Army himself until discharged because of an injury.

WAIR-Eyes & Ears of the Army Air Force WFLA an Force Presents

Now It's Colonel Godwin

Earl Godwin, genial newscaster of "Watch the World Go By" series, is eying with favor the crinkly, new colonel's commission presented him by Governor John J. (Jack) Dempsey of New Mexico. The governor made the veteran White House correspondent a colonel aide-de-camp on his staff as one of his first official acts of office. New Mexico is famous for its trout fishing, and both Dempsey and Godwin are ardent fishermen. Godwin probably will spend his vacation there this summer.

ET'S take inventory! Hair? Smooth and shining. Complexion? Peaches and cream. Make-up-just right. You're wearing your best bib-andtucker, and your stocking seams are behaving perfectly. Yes, you get 1-A in appearance! When you walk into a room, you'll rate an approving glance from every male. But before you open your mouth to speak, be careful! True, you've passed the eye test, but what about the ear test? Is there charm in your voice, or will you break the spell when you talk?

You see, my 1-A beauty, voices tell all! They project our personality-they tell the world what we're really like. And no amount of grooming can disguise an ugly voice. So don't forget to include this all-important item in your beauty inventory. Check it like this: Voice? Is it expressive, or do you drone like Johnny-One-Note? Is it calm and quiet or shrill as a whistle? How about your speed-do you shoot ahead like a locomotive or crawl like molasses in January? And most important-is the tone fresh and clear or as grating as a buzz saw? If there's anything a man hates, it's those hoarse, rough tones. Our men prefer a sweet, smiling voice any day!

The first step in your vocal grooming is tone! Unfortunately, American women have gotten a reputation for ugly voice quality, so see if you can't be an exception. Your tones should be clear and melody-making, and that means correct breathing. Practise these exercises and notice the difference: Inhale deeply through your nose, letting your ribs expand. Hold it for a moment, then exhale quickly through the mouth. Repeat this one four times. When your breathing is deep and strong, take a big breath and as you exhale, say "ooh," drawing it out as long as possible. Do the same with "ah," "oh" and "ee." Make each sound clear and distinct, then carry them over into your speech. Here's another tone-improver: Say the word "bring"—and linger on the sound "ing." Then repeat "ing-inging" over and over, until you can feel the tones humming through your head. Now repeat with the words "long," "sang" and "gong." During all of these, be sure that you breathe as deeply as you can, letting the breaths go slowly and steadily. This gives you the "feel" of melodious tones. It's up to you to transplant them into your every-day chatter!

Now check on your vocal expression. Remember, there's nothing so boring as a droning, monotonous voice! Try to put life and character into it. Think of your vocal cords as the strings of a musical instrumentand use them all! On the other hand, if you're the excitable type, your voice is probably high and squeaky. Now, calm down! Don't get yourself the reputation of a shrill-voiced woman. Rather, keep your speaking voice in the middle of that musical scale. Raise it, of course, to emphasize a word, but don't go to extremes. lovely voice is one that says what it wants to-without shrieking!

Of course, no one has to tell you not to shout! Other people hate to be yelled at, just as much as you do. So if you find that your normal voice can be heard across the street, stop-hush -and start again in softer tones. Don't be afraid that you won't be heard. It's the calm, quiet voices that make the biggest impression. Then, too, there's the question of speed. Normal speech averages about 375 words every three minutes, but don't bother to clock yourself. Just be sure that you don't race along at top speed—mumble your nouns and verbs. On the other hand, if you're a draggy drawler, remember your audience, male or female, will lose interest. And if no one listens to you, what's the use of talking?

So put a smile in your voice! All it takes is a little thought, and those allimportant breathing exercises. And next time you take inventory—next time you want to make your best impression-you'll be sure your voice is on your side! Then you'll check: Hair? Smooth and silky. Complexion? Peaches and cream. Voice? Sweet as a

The Story
Behind the Songs We Love By THE KING'S JESTERS

zanies who dish out humor as well as harmony on the "Ben Bernie Show." They are The King's Jesters, shown above going to town on novelty number. L. to r.: John Ravencroft, George Howard, Fritz Bastow

No. 3-"I'm Nobody's Sweetheart Now"

The King's Jesters, John Ravencroft, Fritz Bastow and George Howard, heard daily on the Wrigley show and other CBS programs, have been delving into the success stories of hit tunes for many years. At John's home they have a huge ledger filled with notes about songs old and new, how they came to be written, and what happened to them. They've been collecting these notes for their own edification, as a hobby, but now they have decided to release some of the stories for publication. Here is the third.

UST after the first World War there was a piano-player at the Friers Inn in Chicago's Loop named Elmer Schwobel, who had a new sort of rhythm in his fingers. This new rhythm later came to be called swing, and Schwobel was one of the first musicians to put it to the test of popular approval.

Elmer wrote a little tune called I'm Nobody's Sweetheart Now, and the six-piece band at the Inn played it every night for the patrons. It had a catchy melody, and people went home humming it, but no publisher wanted to put it out because it wasn't set in the melodic style of popular songs of those days.

As the months went by, and more and more people went home from the Friers Inn whistling, singing and humming the tune, other bandleaders and vaudeville performers dropped in to see Elmer and have him play his song over for them. Soon it was being played and sung in every night-club and from every stage in the country, but still it was not published and there was no way of getting a copy of it. People who liked the song would sit through an extra performance at a vaudeville house or night-club and copy the words on a piece of paper as they were being sung.

In 1922 radio came along and I'm Nobody's Sweetheart Now hit a new high in popularity. Everyone, including musicians and orchestra-leaders, copied the words and music as they came out of the loudspeakers of those days and played and sang it on their own programs, in vaudeville shows and on the street. It was the first swing song and it was a big hit, but Elmer Schwobel got no credit for having written it and didn't make a dime out of its popularity. When he took it to a music-publisher, he was told, 'Nobody will publish your song now. Everybody knows it, every band in the country is playing it. Who'll buy the sheet-music?"

But this story behind one of the most popular songs of the present time has a happy ending after all. In 1923 I'm Nobody's Sweetheart Now was finally published, though no one expected it to make any money either for the publisher or the composer. But just about that time the phonograph came into its own via the radiophonograph combination, and people began buying records of the songs they liked. And the record they bought more than any other was I'm Nobody's Sweetheart Now, by a pianoplayer named Elmer Schwobel.

The King's Jesters are heard on the "Ben Bernie Show" over CBS Monday through Friday at 5:45 p.m. EWT, 4:45 CWT, 3:45 MWT, 2:45 PWT, under the sponsorship of the William Wrigley, Jr., Company in behalf of Wrigley's Spearmint Gum.

long time — what will delight the salt. Dip slices of bread in mixture, palate and satisfy the nutritional demands of a growing family?

It's always a good idea to start out with fresh fruit or fruit juice. Jillions of energy-giving vitamins are packed into every sip, and a whopping big glass of juice stimulates the appetite for more, more food and lots of it! You might follow with cereal. It will fill up many an empty corner and give added vim and vigor. Then bring on the pancakes—golden brown and crispy—or appetizing French toast. Serve spicy grape jelly or apricot jam to dress them up and add an extra tang. But for a touch of the unusual, and a dish that will bring shouts of joy from the family, try Sausage Suzettes. Roll tiny sausages in buckwheat pancakes. Serve them piping hot-and you have a dish fit for a king! Here's how:

Buckwheat Pancakes

- 1 cup buckwheat flour
- 1 teaspoon Calumet Baking Powder
- 1/4 teaspoon soda

The Story Behind "Unlimited Horizons"

ing of this dread disease and possibly (may God grant it) some day a method of prevention against it and a positive cure for it.

One of this band of determined scientists fighting polio is Dr. Harold K. Faber of the Stanford University Medical School in San Francisco. Dr. Faber has been working on polio for years, and now he has made some important contributions.

We talked informally about his work for an hour or two. Just talked. A year ago I had done a program on the research of Dr. Fred Schultz of Stanford on polio, so I had some idea of what Dr. Faber's problem was. Then we went out into his laboratory. There his assistant, Dr. Rosalie J. Silverberg (a whiz of an investigator with a great understanding of the deadliness of polio and a determination to do something about it), was busy with forceps and scalpel probing the brain of a cynomologous monkey that had died of the disease.

There, in the laboratory, I saw the infecting chamber, a sort of metal box in which animals, martyrs to mankind, inhale the deadly virus of polio. I saw the microtome, the machine, something like a meat-market sausage-slicer, which shaves off thin slices of infected tissues set in paraffin. I saw test-tubes, Erlenmeyer flasks, swabs for painting the virus on the throats of animals, atomizers for spraying it, and so on. I saw the equipment, and learned of the technique of carrying on this noble battle against

Scientific research is not spectacular. It is drudgery. It is keeping meticulous records. Of watching every factor so that none passes unnoticed to nullify the results of painstaking, arduous work.

When monkeys are studied, for example, a case history is kept on each, a chart more exact than that kept on any human being in a hospital. Every minute change of temperature of the animal is recorded; every minute change in its behavior; in its energy; its playfulness; its eating; its bodily functions. Multiply this by thousands and you get some notion of the immensity of the task.

In the long fight against polio there have been a number of theories of what is called "the portal of entry." This simply means the route, or the way in which the virus gets into the body to infect it. For a long time it was thought that the virus got into the body through the nose, that it attacked the olfactory nerve-ends (the nerves with which you smell). It was pretty well established that this was ONE way at least. Then a Swedish investigator, experimenting with a different kind of monkey, discovered that you could also infect an animal by way of the alimentary tract. That is, through the lower intestines. This meant that a person could also be infected by eating or drinking something that happened to have the virus in it. Incidentally, this virus has never been seen by any man.

Then Dr. Faber of Stanford Medical School, who had long believed that the nose was the portal of entry, developed a new theory. He reasoned that if animals could be infected through the alimentary tract, as the Swedish scientist had discovered, it might be that the infection did not necessarily enter the lower intestine (just because it was found there), but that it might have got into the system in the mouth when the food or drink was taken in. So Dr. Faber set about seeing if he could prove that an animal can be infected through the nerves in the mouth and throat.

First, Dr. Faber and Dr. Silverberg enclosed some of the deadly virus in capsules. They made sure that the capsules were absolutely sterile on the outside. Then they etherized monkeys and put the capsules down into the esophagus of the monkeys. Down into the stomachs the capsules went. The capsules melted, the virus was released to attack the intestines. But did it attack? No. Not one of the monkeys came down with the disease.

Then Dr. Faber "varnished" the olfactory nerve-ends with zinc sulfate. This prevents the virus from getting in there for quite a long time. Then they swabbed the mouths of the animals with the virus. In due time, the animals came down. For all practical purposes, this proved that the virus can be taken into the system through the nerve-ends in the mouth. But Dr. Faber wished to be sure. So he went a step further.

Again he varnished the olfactory nerve-ends (to keep the virus from entering THERE) and now he sprayed the virus into the mouth and throat. Again the monkeys were observed day by day, their temperatures taken at regular intervals, their behavior watched. And in due time the animals developed tremors, which was followed by paralysis and death.

This corroborated his first findings. And now still another step. He put the heads of monkeys into the infection chamber, while their bodies were outside, and caused them to inhale air in which dried virus was floating around. These monkeys, too, came down with the disease.

Thus, Dr. Faber has made an important contribution to the fight against infantile paralysis. He has shown that the mouth is a "portal of entry" of the disease, and the infection can occur either by breathing in the virus or by taking it into the mouth through food or drink. This means that greater measures of hygiene, of sanitation, of public health must be developed in order to fight the dread poliomyelitis, and this, indeed, is the revelation of another Unlimited Horizon for the benefit of all mankind.

"Unlimited Horizons" is a publicservice feature of NBC, broadcast Sundays at 11:30 p.m. EWT, 10:30 p.m. CWT, 11:30 p.m. MWT, 10:30 p.m.

A strange excitement shone in Jenny's eyes whenever she saw pain inflicted—a passion which drove her to do strange things under its impulse.
