MELISSE GOES TO PARAMOUNT SHOWS

Everything's going to be Dixie this summer. 'Cause "DIXIE" is the most wonderful musical Paramount has ever "mused." Bing looks simply super in Technicolor (his first appearance), Dotty's divine as a glamour girl of the old South, and I loved the romantic story of how that glorious song "Dixie" was born.

PARAMOUNT'S GREAT NEW MUSICAL

Bing sings some of his five solid song hits into the adorable ear of Marjorie Reynolds—you know, the blonde lovely of "Holiday Inn." It's a three-some romance—if you know what I mean. I won't tell you who wins, but gosh what those girls go through. Tsk-tsk!

And those costumes! One of Dotty's was so beautifully billowy, she had to sit on two chairs in the studio commissary.

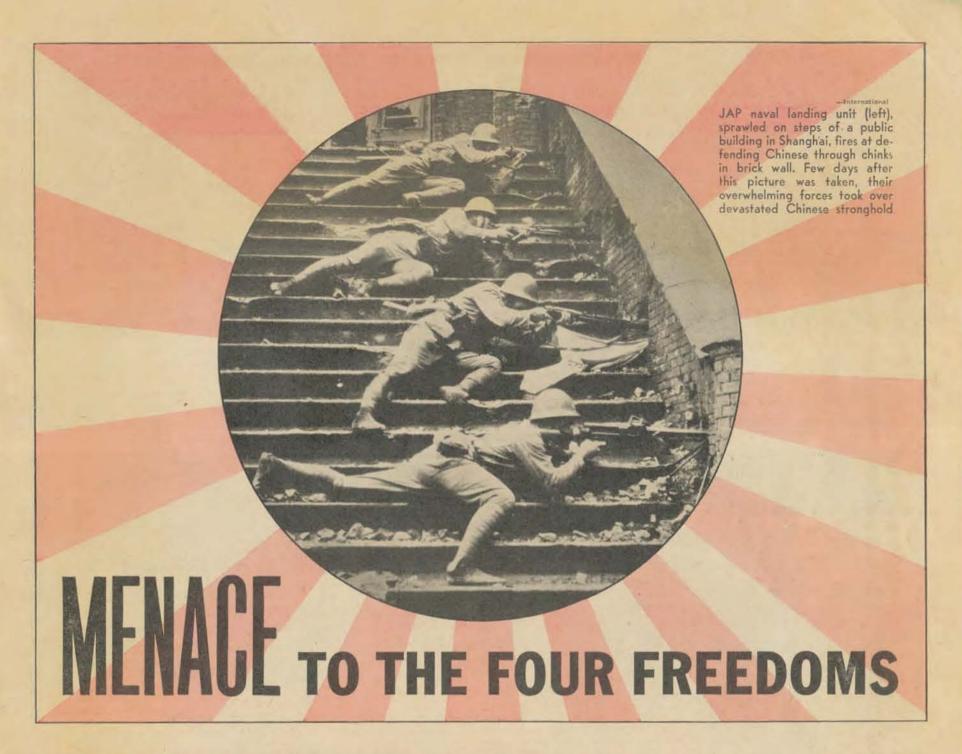

Where there's smoke there's Bing! And the fires he starts with his favorite pipe, and his stunning minstrel shows, are in most beautiful Technicolor!... It's gay down South in "Dixie."

Things you hear around the Paramount Lot... "SO PROUDLY WE HAIL" is nearly finished and it looks grand. "FIVE GRAVES TO CAIRO" and "CHINA" are drawing tremendous crowds all around the country... And I've just dashed off my acceptance of Paramount's precious invitation to the World Premiere of "FOR WHOM THE BELL TOLLS"!

ASSIVE air raids on the cities and villages of Japan are the only answer America can give the Japanese for the recent execution of American pilots and the Jap stab in the back at Pearl Harbor.

Our just vengeance will be incomplete and ineffective if we confine ourselves to only a handful of Jap "militarists" who were directly implicated, because the guilt lies with ninety-nine percent of the Japanese people. They genuinely applauded the coldblooded murder of our airmen. They enthusiastically celebrated the attack on Pearl Harbor. They made gods of the sneaks who fortunately perished while attempting to wipe out our Navy in peacetime.

To American correspondents who spent the greater part of the past decade in the Far Pacific, often under the menacing shadow of Jap terrorism, Pearl Harbor and the execution of a few American airmen in Japan came as no surprise. Especially to those of us who were captives of the Japanese for more than half a year after Pearl Harbor, these dark-age barbarisms were characteristic of the Japanese.

But apparently no two events of the entire war have so shocked our nation as much as Pearl Harbor and the execution of our Tokyo raiders. This can only be because we Americans paid so little attention to what the Japanese were doing from 1931 to

Robert Bellaire Points Up the Nature of Our Enemy, the Nips

Here, very briefly, I give you a few highlights of the Japanese record for that decade. Americans were not always the victims, but the victims al-ways were human beings—Chinese or Indo-Chinese, Malayans, Siamese, East Indians, Filipinos, or Burmese.

In ten years, the Japanese have slaughtered more than 10,000,000 hu-man beings, most of them innocent civilians. Usually these non-combatants were killed in Jap bombing or strafing attacks on civilian areas.

The Japanese in a decade have driven more than 200,000,000 human beings out of their homes or off their farms. Families totaling more than the population of the United States have been scattered far and wide, in terror and destitution. Their homes were destroyed. Their goods confis-

In the same short while, the Japanese have enslaved more than 500,-000,000 human beings-considerably more people than we have in all the Western Hemisphere from Point Barrow in Alaska to Cape Horn near the Antarctic. The Japs have invaded and conquered almost a dozen nations.

And the Japs hope to hold these conquered peoples in eternal slavery by making of each and every one of them an opium or narcotic addict. Japan is flooding the conquered areas of the Pacific with opium, morphine and cocaine—to destroy the will to resist and hope of delivery.

This, of course, is only a glimpse at what has been done by the authors of the infamous "Rape of Nanking." That rapine debauch, unparalleled in seven hundred years, has been repeated on a thousand less-publicized occasions in a thousand Jap-occupied cities and villages from Peiping to Singapore.

Certainly any nation capable of bringing that grief upon the human race would scarcely have enough re-gard for international law to give us warning of the attack on Pearl Harbor. Certainly any nation capable of killing, maiming, rendering homeless or enslaving almost one billion human beings would not hesitate to put to death in cold blood a few, or many, Americans.

To those thousands who have written in appreciation of "The Human Comedy" we send a lion-hearted thank you.

To-day the moves are playing to longer runs than ever. As a result M-G-M has had a chance to plan its production sufficiently far ahead to make some positive assertions.

In the pictures to come from M-G-M, you will find every type of entertainment conveyed by the word. Patriotic pictures, exciting adventure narratives, romantic stories, youthful musicals.

The latter category is enriched by the number of big name bands under exclusive contract to the most important and progressive studio in motion pictures. Need we mention the name?

In "Cabin in The Sky" you have already heard and seen "Duke" Ellington and his Orchestra. In "Presenting Lily Mars" you have had two bands—Bob Crosby's and Tommy Dorsey's.

Tommy Dorsey and his Band will also be featured in the forthcoming "Du Barry Was a Lady" and in "Girl Crazy."

His brother, Jimmy Dorsey, will lead his melodic cohorts in "I Dood It."

Looks like a Dorsey season.

Harry James and Orchestra will hold forth in both "Tale of Two Sisters" and "Best Foot Forward."

Incidentally "Best Foot Forward" (which is in the home stretch stage) is considered the honey of honies. It will be beeg.

Kay Kyser and Band is finishing "Right About Face." Vaughn Monroe—the handsome divvil—and his Band are doing "Meet The People."

We forgot to mention and how could we?—that the Good Neighbor artist, Xavier Cugat, also does his stuff for Uncle Samba in "Tale of Two Sisters."

Last but not least come the ladies headed by a gentleman with a stick to make them behave. Our cryptic way of announcing Phil Spitalny and his All-Girl-Band in "Mr. Co-ed."

So you see, whenever you're thinking of facing the music, go to -an M-G-M picture.

More Records for Our Fighting Men

FROM July 3 to July 31 there will be a nation-wide house-to-house drive for old or unwanted phonograph records that will be sold as scrap at ceiling prices. With the funds obtained, thousands of new records will be purchased for distribution among our armed forces here and abroad.

This drive, which has the authorization of the President's War Relief Control Board, is being handled by Records for Our Fighting Men, Inc., a non-profit organization, with headquarters at 1835 RCA Building, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York City.

Many movie and radio stars have pledged support of this work, among them Kate Smith, Kay Kyser, Harry James and Gene Autry.

According to estimates, there are still some 200,000,000 disks accumulating dust in America's attics. So if any Movie-Radio Guide readers have a part of this collection they can help boost the morale of our armed forces by having them ready for pick-up in July.

in July.

And when they're digging them up, we'd like to have them think of a young doctor in a U. S. Army Medical Corps unit stationed in the New Guinea jungle, who wrote his sister, "We're really getting bush-happy. The boys and myself have planted a garden. The seeds were all mixed up, so we don't know what will come up—maybe Dottie Lamours!" He's just one of thousands in our armed forces whose morale will be bolstered by this contribution to victory.

You want to see this war won—and won quickly. You want to see it carried to the enemy with a vengeance. Okay—so do all of us. But just remember . . .

A second front takes food ... food to feed our allies in addition to our own men.

Which do you want—more meat for you, or enough meat for them? An extra cup of coffee on your breakfast table, or a full tin cup of coffee for a fighting soldier?

Just remember that the meat you don't get—and the coffee and the sugar that you don't get—are up at the front lines—fighting for you.

Would you have it otherwise?

Aprons step out. At least in Hollywood where they have been graduated from kitchen to nightclub via the glamour route. Marjorie Lord wore one recently to a popular nitery—a tricky affair made of black crepe with ruffles of val lace—which brought a wave of ohs and ahs complimentary . . .

Canteen notes: Since the Hollywood Canteen, started by Bette Davis, opened six months ago, it has entertained 600,000 service-men. Number of stars and name bands who helped has been lost track of in the rush, but the commissary department reports that 6,000 pounds of cheese, 9,000 pounds of coffee, 300,000 halfpints of milk, 15,000 pounds of meat-to name just a few items -have been consumed there in that time

LINDA WEDS:

PROS and cons flew thick and fast in Hollywood about the Linda Darnell and Peverell Marley romance. But just when the cons thought they had won because of difference in pair's ages, they eloped to Las Vegas and were married. Pev, former ace Movietown cameraman, is in service, and the question now is: Will Linda go on with her career or become just Mrs. Pev? Above: Cutting wedding cake

HEDY, TOO:

LOVELY Lamarr, who's patched up her differences with M-G-M and is now making "Heavenly Body," spent May 27 before the cameras. When they stopped grinding she put on her best bib and tucker, married John Loder, and was back on the set the next morning. It's the third marriage for both bride and groom. Left: Hedy tosses glamour overboard to help John with dish-washing chores at canteen

MISTY SHOT, above, with John Wayne and Jean Arthur in RKO's "A Lady Takes a Chance," won fourth-place money racing at Bay Meadows, which kept him in best oats for some time. But it was mere chicken-feed compared to what he gets for just being himself in the movies, where he pulls down two hundred dollars a day every day he works. And in good Americana—that ain't hay! Another thing, Misty Shot never has to worry about which side of his face will photograph to advantage!

IT PAYS To Be Dumb

Animal Actors Are Paid Well for Being Natural

F YOU don't think it pays to be dumb, all doubts would be removed if you could drop around to studio pay-roll windows and see the checks animal performers get. They are certainly among Holly-wood's better-paid actors. War films with desert backgrounds have increased the demand for camels. They command $125 a day. Over at RKO, Dynamite, a black leopard, gets a three-figure pay-check for his role in "The Leopard Man," with Margo and Dennis O'Keefe. And Jackie, a six-week-old lion cub, got $100 a day just for whining in "Mr. Lucky," starring Cary Grant and Laraine Day. Imagine what M-G-M's Leo will pay him by the time he's able to roar. He'll probably have his salary tripled. Yep, it really pays to be dumb!

WALDO romps through social-butterfly roles. Caviar and champagne are right up his alley. In fact, he gets fifty dollars each day he hobnobs with the elite of Movieland. His latest picture role is in RKO's "The Sky's the Limit," with Joan Leslie and Fred Astaire. Above with Miss Leslie, Waldo does his best to show her that leading a dog's life in the movies is tops in so far as he is concerned. He loves to bark, has no lines to learn, no wardrobe worries. As for genus-homo scene-stealers, he can beat them any old day!

H. V. Kaltenborn, NBC's well-known commentator, likes to walk. Thirty-five years ago he moved to Brooklyn so he could walk to his work at the Brooklyn Eagle. In 1928, after six years before the mike, H. V. left the paper to devote full time to radio, but he continued to live in Brooklyn because he wasn't sure that his airlane work would assure him a steady job. Now, after twenty-one years of broadcasting, he's moving to Manhattan, so he can walk to work in Radio City, figures that he really has a steady job . . .

Morton Downey, who sings lilting songs of Erin over the Blue Network and who's had requests for tunes from great and near-great, says that F. D. R. prefers Danny Boy; Donald Nelson is a Molly Malone fan and likes to sing with him; while big Jim Farley sticks to When Irish Eyes Are Smiling and just listens. Incidentally, Downey prefers old Irish tunes himself, has a collection of over four thousand songs, some of them centuries old . . .

When Ralph Edwards of "Truth or Consequences" asked Maurice Hook, a Kansas farmer, what he raised on his land, Hook retorted: "If it rains, I raise most anything. If it don't, why, I just raise Cain"...

Arturo Toscanini's manuscript of his original arrangement of the Star-Spangled Banner was put up for sale to the highest bidder in war-bond purchases recently. The prize went to William T. Grant of Kansas City, Mo., with his bid of $1,000,000 in bonds . . .

Lucille Manners says that the Axis cabinet has appointed Mussolini as secretary of the inferior . . .

Jascha Heifetz, frequent guest on NBC's "Telephone Hour," kept a twenty-five-year-old promise not so long ago when he played at a warbond concert in Providence, R. I. In 1917, Heifetz promised to play for a Liberty Loan concert there, but was forced to cancel the engagement because of the flu epidemic. A Providence lawyer remembered the incident, contacted the violinist, and the new date was kept.

Lew Lauria is a radio personality which Mr. and Mrs. John Q. Public generally don't hear much about. Yet he is one of the most successful men on the airlanes. Why? Because in 1939, starting with the mere germ of an idea, he established the National Radio Artists Directory. Now ending its fourth successful year of service, the directory displays the pictures, gives qualifications of more than five hundred radio artists available to producers through this agency. Lew began in Hollywood, now has offices in both New York and Chicago

Irene Rich, star of CBS "Dear John" program, has added another five hundred acres to her ranch property, where she plans to raise more livestock. This puts the enterprising Miss Rich in the upper brackets of foodfor-war products...

Ginny Simms says that knighthood still flowers among American Army pilots. The other day when she was leaving NBC, a pilot asked her for the silk scart she was wearing. "I'm not trying to be fresh," he apologized. "It's just that I haven't any girl, and I'd like to wear a lady's scarf for luck over Tokyo." Ginny handed over the silk. "If it brings you luck," she grinned, "let me know, and I'll send you a hundred more!"

A Salute to Capt. Gable

WHEN Clark Gable was inducted into the Air Forces of the United States on August 17, 1942, one of the first things he learned to do was how to make his own bed. Above: V. E. Clark, officer candidate, gives instructions

By Carl A. Schroeder

ET there be no mistake. I am not a bosom buddy of the man now known as Capt. Clark Gable, U. S. Army Air Forces I can, however, tell you more about Gable than his closest friends. They are all troubled with a strange affliction of the tongue. A sort of rigor mortis sets in when his name is mentioned. They respect his privacy not because he has asked them to but because once having known Clark intimately that's the way you feel about him.

There is a reason why none of the damning publicity hokus-pokus so typical of Hollywood has ever touched Gable's reputation or undermined his character. Like most folks born and bred in the Midwest, everything to him is a case of black is black and white is white. A man is honorable and decent, or he isn't. To Clark there is no inbetween avenue of escape for a man who excuses what he does on the basis that it is necessary for him to "work the angles" in order to get along. These are not just words.

Clark never hated anything unless he loathed it completely. Until the war, his hates were minor dislikes, like night-clubs, fawning women and flattery. Came December 7, 1941, and like all other Americans he found a hate worth cultivating. That's why, even though at the age of forty-two he could have safely stayed at the business of picture-making, he insisted against every method of persuasion known to executives on getting into the fighting end of the business.

LAST picture of Gable, right, taken in the U. S. at Broadmoor Hotel in Colorado Springs, Colo., just before he left for England and active combat duty. Now a captain, he's already ridden Flying Fortresses over Antwerp

And right now, as he contemplates the machinery of war at close range in England or wherever his job has taken him, I know he feels as he did when he said to me in retort to a pointblank, cynical question: "A hero? Good Lord, no—I don't want to be one—I had enough of that in Hollywood."

I am not at liberty to quote Captain Gable's comments on his part in the service, as he has made them while in Hollywood on leave, but I can tell you how he feels: He'll be as proud as any Air Forces officer over promotions, such as his recent elevation to captain. At the same time, when he's in a plane,

AS corporal in the Army Air Forces, Clark was not allowed to wear a mustache. But he was quite content to lose hirsute adornment to Uncle Sam, insisted on shaving it off himself for most important role he ever played

PRELIMINARY TRAINING over, Gable was transferred to Tyndall Field, Florida, where he graduated as a first lieutenant, won the right to wear the silver wings of an aerial gunner. Right: Shown operating a .50-caliber machine-gun

JACK BRONSON JENKINS thinks his mom, actress Doris Dudley, is the only girl in the world, and his older brother agrees whole-heartedly with that decision. Known as "Butch" and "Skipper" to their pals, the boys have toured all over America and the West Indies with their mother, but they're still just a couple of fine, unspoiled youngsters CLARENCE BROWN, director of "The Human Comedy," discovered "Butch," insisted that he was made to order for the role of Ulysses Macauley in the picture. "Butch" proved Brown's faith in him by all but stealing the show from the star, Mickey Rooney, his big brother in the piece! AGILE and mischievous, Jackie loves to explore every nook and cranny of Santa Monica Beach, where he makes his home. He learned to ride in Arizona, now takes swimming-lessons from Johnny Weissmuller. Next to roaming the beach, his favorite pastime is listening to radio's "Lone Ranger"

BUTCH JENKINS

Sensational Success at Five He's American as Ham and Eggs

FIRST famous Hollywood Jackie was "Kid" Coogan, now a glider pilot in America's Air Forces. Next came Jackie Cooper, who made movie history with Wallace Beery in "The Champ." And now it's Jackie (Butch) Jenkins, who made star Mickey Rooney of "The Human Comedy" do nipups in the piece. Jackie's work in the role of Ulysses Macauley for the William Saroyan story has won him a long-term contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. First starring film will be "Army Brat," authored by sixteenyear-old Tommy Wadelton, who, at the ripe old age of thirteen, wrote "My Mother Is a Violent Woman," and attracted a great deal of attention. Story theme is that of an Army officer's son left an orphan and brought up by a Chinese cook. In real life Jackie is the son of Captain Jack Jenkins of the U. S. Ferry Command and grandson of the well-known New York playwright and critic, Bide Dudley. Completely unaware of the fact that his role in "Human Comedy" has made him a movie sensation, Jackie has no idea that there is any connection between his appearances before the camera and making of movies. Screen cartoons are all he's ever seen. When "Butch" isn't making pictures, he roams the beach, follows big brother "Skipper" and his pals around, begging to get in on their games. Right now "Butch" is working with Eleanor Powell in "You Can't Fool a Marine." But movie-making is still a game that's lots of fun, almost as much as roaming the beach and eating ice-cream cones!

GEORGIA CARROLL

Kay Kyser Helped Her Jump From Modeling to Airlanes

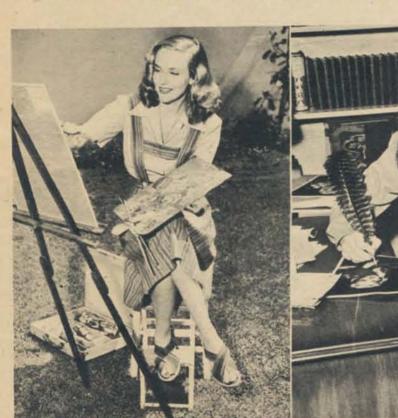

NCE upon a recent time a girl named Georgia Carroll was doing her weekly stint at the Hollywood Canteen when a famous radio artist named Kay Kyser, who had met her as a member of the "Navy Blue Sextet," asked her if she wouldn't like to come along and sing on his Sunday camp tours. As entertaining servicemen was her prime concern, she agreed eagerly. That led to becoming Kay's songstress on his regular Wednesday night program when Trudy Erwin, who had taken over Ginny Simms' spot, went back to the Bing Crosby radio fold. Texas-born, Georgia crashed the Powers studio in New York at seventeen, soon became the bestknown model from Coast to Coast. That led to a Hollywood movie offer, which never materialized into success. Accustomed to the warm frankness of her native Texas, Georgia was puzzled at the way Hollywood movie bigwigs operated, turned to other fields. A fact which film moguls regret today. For they have offered her contracts which she refuses, preferring as she does to develop her singing voice and increase her ability as an entertainer at the same time. With the exception of appearing with Kyser and his band in M-G-M and RKO pictures, Georgia has stuck to radio. Now the little Carroll likes to tell about the time she was in a beauty contest with several other glamour girls, and Kay, as one of the judges. didn't even know she was alive, picked Hedy Lamarr as the winner against the expert judgment of McClelland Barclay, the noted artist.

New Faces and Figures

ACCOMPLISHED painter in oils, Georgia works at this art just for her own amusement. Her favorite spot for this pastime is garden of her lovely Coldwater Canyon home in Movietown, which she shares with her mother. Radio chores and vocal lessons keep her busy

FAN MAIL, which often includes requests for an autographed picture, Georgia takes care of personally and promptly, as she appreciates — and deeply — this demonstration of good-will on the part of listeners who tune in on "Kay Kyser's Program" (Wednesday, NBC)

AS Powers model, Georgia won the title of the mostphotographed girl in America. In new role on the Kyser show, the future looks rosy for the little caroler. She and her mother have an expansive victory garden, take care of it themselves. Great pals, Georgia prefers evenings at home playing backgammon with Mom to night-clubs

DINAH-MITE

From Alaska to New Zealand, Dinah Shore's a Prime Favorite With U. S. Armed Forces!

T'S pretty hard for a girl like Dinah Shore, with her big brown eyes and sunny smile, to glare, but she comes mighty close to it when anyone calls her patriotic because she spends nearly all her time away from radio and movie work entertaining America's soldiers in isolated camps. Dinah's answer to that is: "If you define something that's in my heart that is as natural to me as breathing as patriotism, then I'm patriotic. But the way I see it, we've all got a debt to these boys in service that a hundred generations to come won't succeed in repaying." And when you hear Dinah say just that, you know, by golly, that she means it.

Probably that deep sincerity which she puts into her songs, more than anything else, is what makes Dinah Shore the favorite performer on "Command Performance," "Mail Call" and other short-wave programs broadcast especially for our fighting forces. And how requests for special songs do pile in to headquarters of these programs as well as Dinah's personal mail-bag. They come from Africa, Australia and South Pacific combat zones. And every song that she sings, she tries to put across the immense debt that America owes its fighting men.

No entertainer deserves her title of "Service Men's Sweetheart" more than "Dinah-mite." In fact, the little Shore is rather like a transmitter between the fighting forces and their folks at home. Ask Dinah the why of this, and she says simply: "I guess I don't feel out of their reach. All the stars, particularly movie stars, are so beautiful that the boys—well, they feel a little awed. But with my puss—that is, I'm not what you'd call gorgeous—the boys think I'm just like a girl they may have left back home. And right away a friendly, homey basis is established between us."

Now, we can't quite agree with Dinah on that description of herself. No, she isn't beautiful, but she is slim and trim, and her eyes are expressively lovely. Too, she is only twenty-five, and her hair is a golden brown. Yet the letters from thousands of men in service that fill her immense mail-bag bear out Dinah's ideas generally. For they all write like doting aunts and uncles, continually warn her not to "go Hollywood," seriously admonish her about the danger of dates with "Movietown wolves."

That same you-belong-to-us attitude and a sense of possessiveness is revealed when Dinah sings for the men in camps. If she puts in an appearance with her hair up, the way she secretly likes to wear it, the audience roars its disapproval by shouting, "Take it down, Dinah!" At which Dinah obligingly pulls out the pins and lets her locks fly loosely.

Another reason for her tremendous popularity is due to the fact that the songs she sings are determined from requests she finds in her daily mail-bag. Come autumn, if Dinah realizes her hope of becoming emcee for her own half-hour variety show on the radio, that same procedure will govern her choice of the songs she sings. It will also give an opportunity to use her gift of humorous ad-lib. For "Dinah-mite" has a terrific sense of fun, which has never been allowed to express itself on a program of straight vocal numbers.

Now that Dinah has added movies to her radio and camp entertaining chores (she's under contract to Warner Bros., and already has completed "Thank Your Lucky Stars" for them), we wondered, naturally, what this busy girl's views on marriage might be. The look in her eyes when the subject was broached aroused expectancy, but hardly prepared for the surprise, when she replied, after a moment of quiet thought: "What I'm about to say may be labeled corny, but I mean it with my whole heart. I can't even think of marriage until this war is over. I believe I was granted this gift of song to do some good with it. And I'm going to devote every minute I have bringing a little happiness to our boys in service. That's the least I can do when they are giving their lives. There is no time for marriage, now, is there?"

RAIG REYNOLDS, shown above with his bride, screen actress Barbara Pepper, was under contract at Warner Bros., with a fine future predicted and mapped for him there, when war rumbles began to break on America's Pacific doorstep. But at the opening of 1940, almost two years before the United States entered the conflict, Craig decided that the country was in danger. So, at the age of thirty-three, this native-born Californian enlisted as a private in the Marine Corps under his real name, H. H. Enfield, and was among the first Marines to arrive in Iceland. Here he did his share in paying the way for comrades that were to follow. When he came home after ten months in the Northland he was a sergeant, recommended for officer training, and finished it with the rank of second lieutenant. Immediately after graduation, Craig was ordered to Tulagi, where he again pioneered with the Marines. (Continued on Page 58)

David and Norma go over papers found in the possession of Sir Harold. A telephone call links them with enemy spies

GERMANY has its Gestapo, Italy its Ovra, Japan its Black Dragon. Matched against these sinister agencies are Uncle Sam's highly trained counter-spies and the man who commands them—David Harding, the ace counter-spy of them all.

Clearly, the case of the train murder was in Harding's province. There was no question but what it had been the work of enemy agents, and extremely clever agents at that.

Harding's lean, angular face became grim as he studied the report that came to his desk in Washington, D. C. After a moment spent in silent cogitation, he raised his six-foot-one-inch frame from the swivel chair and began pacing the floor as he considered the steps necessary to solve the murder of First Lieutenant John O'Brien and to capture his killers. Harding believed in doing first things first. He ordered a complete investigation of the circumstances surrounding O'Brien's departure for San Francisco aboard the transcontinental limited.

The story began in the office of Brigadier General Whitcomb in Washington. Whitcomb, white-haired and serious, said he had gone out of his way to impress O'Brien with the importance of the mission and insisted that he had complete faith in the man entrusted to carry it out.

entrusted to carry it out.
"O'Brien," he said, "was beyond corruption. He had been my official messenger for nine years. Never in that time had he failed me. He was methodical, resourceful and diligent—a good man. I told him the papers I had given him to deliver to the commander of the San Francisco area command had to do with the changing of some of our heavy artillery, and O'Brien was instructed to place them in the hands of the commander personally—to no other living person. He would have obeyed my orders to the letter had he not been killed."

But there had been a leak—there must have been. O'Brien had been instructed to take the transcontinental train rather than a plane so undue attention would not be called to his departure. The train left at 10 p.m. that same night and O'Brien had only a bare two hours to arrange his departure. Who, in that brief period, had time to plan the messenger's death and the theft of the papers?

The murder itself revealed planning of a high order. Questioning of the train crew revealed that O'Brien had struck up no acquaintanceships on the trip—in fact, he had sat by himself, even refusing to take a berth. Harding nodded grimly when he learned this fact, because it was confirmation of the general's opinion regarding the messenger. O'Brien had not even trusted himself to sleep.

The train conductor said the only person who sat in the day coach with the lieutenant was a woman. Shortly after midnight, the lights had gone out during the course of a severe electrical storm. During the excitement, and in the dark, a window was broken and O'Brien disappeared. Obviously, he had been pushed through the window!

The woman was available for questioning. She told a straightforward story. She said she had spoken to O'Brien immediately after the lights went off, asking him what the cause might be. O'Brien, she said, was polite but abrupt. He believed the storm had caused the failure. Then, in the darkness, she had heard a scuffle, the crash of glass, a muffled groan. Trainmen entered the coach almost immediately afterward with flashlights. The wind was howling through the double panes of the broken window—or what was left of them. O'Brien was gone. The only persons in the car were the woman, the conductor, a brakeman and a Negro porter.

Harding's agents concentrated on an investigation of these persons, but all were above suspicion.

Star of Stars Poll IGNIFICANT is the fact that this year's Movie-Radio Guide nationwide poll of star and program favorites should find Bob Hope and his work winners on three counts-star of stars, best comedian and top performer on the program voted the most popular on the airlanes. For it shows that even in the midst of the grim business of war, Americans still hold fast to a priceless gift-Freedom for Laughter. Of course the enemy within our gates and overseas has every right to rise up and say, "No poll can be the indisputable reflection of a whole country's listener reactions." And our answer to that is "True!" But we can still insist that as a regular yearly survey, it is the most authoritative of its kind in the field of radio, and does reveal in generous measure the true temper of America and her people!

"Coney Island"

Cast: Betty Grable, George Montgomery, Cesar Romero, Charles Winninger, Phil Silvers, Matt Briggs, Paul Hurst, Frank Orth, Phyllis Kennedy, Carmen D'Antonio, Hal K. Dawson, Andrew Tombes, Harry Seymour and Byron Foulger. A 20th Century-Fox production in Technicolor. The picture was produced by William Periberg and directed by Walter Lang, from an original screen play by George Seaton.

NEW YORK CITY'S great playground, as it looked at the turn of the century, provides the background for "Coney Island," with elaborate settings for twenty-three production numbers that highlight the attractions-musical and otherwiseof Betty Grable. In fact, the plot of the story serves only as a means of presenting la Grable in the bustles and flounces of that era.

Betty, in the role of Kate Farley, one of Coney Island's brightest luminaries in the gay and gawdy '90's, is the bone of contention between Eddie Johnson (George Montgomery) and Joe Rocco (Cesar Romero), a rival club-owner.

Eddie is determined to get control of Joe's profitable business, and by means of a few high-handed deals, plus some nimble-witted trickery, he succeeds. With his superb showmanship and Kate's singing and dancing, the Ocean Gardens Concession becomes more profitable than ever. Not only does Eddie corral most of Joe's profits but his girl as

There's a tussle of wits when Joe (Romero) makes an attempt to break up the romance be-tween Kate and Eddie by dangling some tempting bait before Kate. How she responds makes a "purty" ending, but one hardly in keeping with present-day career gals.

WHAT MOVIE-GOERS CAN EXPECT: A lavish musical tarring beauteous Besty Grable, America's No. 1 pin-up girl.

"Mister Big"

Cast: Gloria Jean, Donald O'Connor, Peggy Ryan, Robert Paige, Elyse Knox, Samuel S. Hinds, Bobby Scheerer, Florence Bayes, Ray Eberle, the Jivin' Jacks and Jills, Ben Carter Choir, and Eddie Miller and his band. A Universal picture, produced by Ken Goldsmith and directed by Charles Lamont. Composers of music were Buddy Pepper and Inex James. Original story by Virginia Rooks was adapted for the screen by Jack Pollexfen and Dorothy Bennett.

YOU are a boogie-woogie tune fan and old sweet love-songs bore you stiff, "Mister Big" is a movie that you'll like a heap. For boogie is featured in a big way all through the picture. It's good juvenile fun and a made-to-order vehicle for young up-and-coming star Donald O'Connor. He's a past master at "jump" dancing and "hot" song numbers. Songbird Gloria Jean and Peggy Ryan prove excellent foils for Donnie in his jitterbug role.

All three are supposed to be serious students of the drama, but one day they play truant to appear in a jitterbug version of a Greek classic. They're having a grand time singing and hoofing in "Jimmy's Backyard," when they are discovered by their drama teachers. From then on it's a tussle between ancient Greek dramas and modern jive.

Gloria Jean's Aunt Mary (Florence Bayes) is horrified at the idea of jive, reminds her niece that she is training her to be a serious dramatic actress and not a jitterbug. How the kids plot and plan to circumvent Auntie and her old-fashioned notions forms the foundation of the story. Even young love has its moment in this piece when Donald takes Gloria Jean to the corner drug store for a soda. Radio's Ray Eberle makes his debut in this picture and does himself proud in a minor role.

WHAT MOVIE-GOERS CAN EXPECT: Talented juveniles in wholesome entertainment, featuring "hot" songs and "jump" steps.

"Salute to the Marines"

Cast: Wallace Beery, Fay Bainter, William Lundigan, Marilyn Maxwell, Donald Curtis, Reginald Owen, Ray Collins, Keye Luke, James Davis and William Bishop. A Metro-Gold-wyn-Mayer production in Technicolor, produced by John W. Considine, Jr., and directed by A. Sylvan Simon. Screen play by George Bruce was adapted from an original story by Robert

EXACTLY what the title implies, "Salute to the Marines" is a snappy, two-fisted action picture that portrays the courageous fighting spirit of America's toughest soldiers in general and one in particular-Sergeant Bill Bailey (Wallace Beery). This role of a veteran marine, who's seen thirty years of service with the corps but who has, by some trick of fate, never been on the fighting line, is one that fits the acting talents of Mr. Beery to

As Sarge Bill, Wally's great ambition is to get into active service and win a hero's citation. Before "Pearl Harbor" he is sent to the Philippines to train Filipino civilians in the business of warfare, succeeds in turning raw recruits into model fighting men. But that success doesn't cure Old Sarge's itching feet. He longs to go to the Asiatic front for real action. And his heart is heavy when part of his battalion goes and he is left behind. In disgust, Bailey accepts an honorable discharge and retires to a small settlement. Here he trains groups of boys, whips them into fighting squads. The bombing of the village by the Japs gives Bailey his chance for action, and the way he finally realizes his ambition for a hero's citation gives a surprise twist to the climax of the picture. This is Beery's first appearance in a Technicolor production.

"Destroyer"

Cast: Edward G. Robinson, Glenn Ford, Marguerite Chapman, Edgar Buchanan, Leo Gorcey, Regis Toomey, Ed Brophy, Warren Ashe, Craig Woods and Curt Bois. A Columbia picture, produced by Louis F. Edelman and directed by William A. Seiter. The original story was written by Frank Wead and adapted for the screen by Lewis Meltzer and Borden Chase, assisted by Mr. Wead.

WHAT the sea and its moods means to men who make their homes on boats is graphically portrayed in "Destroyer." Steve Boleslavski (Edward G. Robinson) loves to the point of obsession the destroyer he helped to build, reveres it above home

As chief boatswain's mate on the John Paul Jones, Boleslavski, who has been reared in the tradition of old and strict Navy methods, is insistent upon stern discipline. Because of this martinet attitude, he arouses the resentment and an tagonism of his crew, especially Mickey Donohue (Glenn Ford). And to complicate matters further, Mickey falls in love with Boley's daughter, Mary (Marguerite Chapman).

But with eighty men aboard the destroyer Boley never lets up in his drive to whip them into shape -make them fighters who can defend the ship when occasion demands. This is the only way he can see to make them worthy of the gallant ship he loves. Mickey tries to get along with Boley, but he's new Navy and Boley is of the old school, which mix about as well as oil does with water. Trouble brews in the smoldering resentment of the men, and boils over when the destroyer goes into action against Japanese subs. Only then does the crew learn what Boley has been driving at.

"The Prodigal's Mother"

Cast: Mabel Paige, John Craven, Dorothy Morris, Charles Dingle, Harry Shannon, Tom Seidel, David Bacon, Richard Crane, Chester Clute, Russell Hicks, Leona Maricle and Madeline Grey. A Republic picture, produced by Robert North and directed by Robert Siodmak. The screen play was written by Frances Hyland, adapted from an original story by Ben Ames

BEN AMES WILLIAMS, author of the story on which this screen play is based, has a knack for writing heart-warming tales about ordinary folk who blossom forth in some extraordinary manner. "The Prodigal's Mother" is no exception. Republic Pictures officials were so impressed by the reactions of sneak-preview audiences to this one that they graduated it from the "B" to the "A" class before it was released.

Credit for that boost goes in great measure to the star, Mabel Paige, who plays the title role. Outside of May Robson, we never saw an actress handle a grandmother part with more distinction.

Basically, the theme is as old as China-that of a mother and her love for an errant son who runs away after a heated quarrel with his dad. But the way Miss Paige as Mrs. Freeman handles her life and affairs after her husband's death, still clinging to the faith that her son, Dan, will return, is delightful and decidedly refreshing. Especially those sequences where she finds her home taken over by the university and turned into a dormitory for boys. She sweetly but stubbornly refuses to move because it's her home, and she wants to be there where her son will expect to find her when he returns. The whole cast turns in good performances, but it's a triumph for Miss Paige.

"Assignment in Brittany"

Cast: Jean-Pierre Aumont, Susan Peters, Signe Hasso, Richard Whorf, Margaret Wycherly, Reginald Owen, Miles Mander, Sara Padden, John Emery, George Colouris, Juanita Quigley. A Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, produced by J. Walter Ruben and directed by Jack Conway. Screen play, written by Anthony Veiller, William H. Wright and Howard Emmett Rogers, was adapted from the movel by Helen MacInnes.

**A SSIGNMENT IN BRITTANY" introduces one of Movietown's newest personalities—Pierre Aumont. Pierre is a former French screen star and a veteran of the French armies. In this film adaptation of the MacInnes novel, he plays the role of Captain Pierre Matard, secret agent, who is given an assignment in Brittany by the British Intelligence Service. It's his job to locate a Nazi sub-marine base along the Brittany coast.

To better carry out this dangerous mission, Captain Matard impersonates a wounded French poilu to whom he bears a striking resemblance. In this disguise he risks being unmasked by the poilu's family on one side, and on the other of being caught by the Nazis in the village.

With the aid of a French peasant girl, Anne Pinot (Susan Peters), Matard goes about his dangerous task and succeeds in exposing an innocentlooking fishing-hamlet as the long-sought-for sub-

In real life, Aumont fought against the Nazis until the fall of France, and won the Croix de Guerre while a member of the French army. Right now, it is reported, he is planning to rejoin the fight as a volunteer of the Fighting French, A capable actor, "Assignment in Brittany" gives Aumont a chance to display his talent to advantage.

HE English section of NBC has installed a special sports news-ticker service to provide Johnny Dough-boy in the British Isles and North Africa with the latest baseball returns. Last-minute scores are now broadcast daily without loss of time to short-wave listeners over station WBOS (15.21) from 4:00 to 4:15 p.m. CWT.

This is only one of three special sports shows presented daily by NBC for American fighting forces overseas. The opening program at 12:15 p.m. is a review of the preceding day's sports results. The second offering at 2:45 p.m. is a brief report on baseball with highlights on other sports.

The addition of a spot for baseball scores at 4:00 p.m. delivers the latest results to England and North Africa not more than a second later than they are heard in this country. According to Frank Nesbitt, head of the English section, "This is important to the listeners over there. It also enables men to read about the games the following morning. We have learned from letters that these scores are written down and then used as the basis for some of the sports columns appearing in camp papers for men in North Africa.'

Post-War Television

According to Dr. W. R. G. Baker, General Electric vice president, when peace comes, radio manufacturers, now devoting all their facilities to war production, will be prepared to build reasonably priced television sets in large volume. These sets will produce pictures in black and white, because color television may be too expensive and still has not been worked out to the engineers' satisfaction. The size of the picture produced by a television set will depend on public demands, but Dr. Baker points out that in his opinion the American people will not want a picture the size of the wall in their living-room. The average person probably will want a picture from twelve to fifteen inches square so that he can sit seven or eight feet away from the set and enjoy the program. There is no technical reason why motion-picture houses cannot receive and project special television pictures on their screens after the war if such a procedure can be made economically sound. Postwar relaying of programs will be done with coaxial cables or television relay stations, or possibly a combination of both. Dr. Baker observed that television would have a tremendous effect on people's lives, quoting the old Chinese proverb that a picture is worth ten thousand words.

Soviet Transmissions

Radio Center, Moscow, transmits several broadcasts to North America each day. Since short-wave reception from the U. S. S. R. is very erratic, each broadcast is made on various frequencies, at least one of which usually furnishes fair signal strength. The present schedule is as follows (CWT): 6:40-7:20 a.m. — English — on 9.545, 10.445, 15.11, 15.23, 15.75

7:20-7:50 a.m. — English — on 15.75 (Sunday to 8:30 a.m.)

All transmitters are located near Moscow with the exception of the frequencies 9.545, 15.11 and 15.23, which are those of an eastern Siberia station at Komsomolsk.

According to a Calcutta broadcast, a flock of Australian merino sheep have been sent from India to China by an old caravan route, traversing a 16,000-foot path. It is the first time the route has been used for a century. The objective is to build up the Chinese wool industry. This flock forms the first consignment of non-military supplies that has been sent to China from India following an agreement on the route with the Tibetan government.

Menace to the Four Freedoms

So we wonder: Have we done the smart thing in not retaliating against the few hundred Japa nese prisoners in our hands? The answer is that retaliation of that type would do more harm than

The Japanese people respect only one language at home or abroad. That is the language of superior force. They are realistic enough to know that we have superior force over the few hundred Jap prisoners now in our hands. Anything we do to these prisoners by way of retaliation will result only in the execution of more Americans in Japan.

The masses of the Japanese people have not felt the armed might of America. Until they do feel it, they will not be impressed by what we do to helpless and defenseless prisoners of war. The Jap people will continue to revel in the barbarisms which their leaders stage for their entertainment -hist as men once enjoyed the spectacle of for eign "heathens" being thrown to the lions.

I will never forget what one high Japanese official, in a spectacular burst of frankness, told me after Pearl Harbor:

"The Japanese people demand that we punish Americans for daring to resist His Imperial Majesty's armed forces. And we intend to punish you American correspondents and radio commentators first.

They did. The press and radio have told you

But this Japanese official was not trying to dodge his share of responsibility for the atrocities committed upon Americans and citizens of the other United Nations. He was simply telling the truth. The water cure, the thousand stabs, rapings, bayonetings and rubber-hose beatings were widely popular among the Japanese people. He was simply saying that anyone who wanted to be a leader in Japan-a militarist-had to answer this popular demand for ruthless persecution of the heathens who refused to accept Hirohito's leadership to "eternal salvation.

The truth is that these so-called militarists of Japan are not freaks within their own country. They are not a self-perpetuating aristocracy. They are the Japanese people. They come from the Japanese people. The most important of them come from simple Japanese bomes in the small towns, fishing-villages and farms of their country. They are brought up like all Japanese. They are behaving exactly as Japanese society and tradition says they shall behave. They are the leaders of Japan only because they are the most proficient manifestation of the common morals and ambitions of the Japanese people as a whole. The complaint most commonly heard against the "militarists" in Japan is that they are too "timid" and too "slow" in carrying out new aggressions. And that feeling has cost many of them their lives to assassins who "played" to the applause of the

Some Americans still try to defend the Japanese people on the idealistic grounds that some Japanese are Christians. Therefore, by some strange twist of logic, these Japanese are supposed to be pro-American, or pro-Western. But there are fewer than 50,000 sincere Christians in all Japan. Fifty thousand out of 85,000,000. There are far fewer real Christians in Japan than there are Shintoists in the United States. And all the 'Christian" churches in Japan have pledged their loyalty and their lives to Hirohito, whom they believe in their hearts to be the real man-god.

The Japanese people have the exact leadership they themselves created, trained and idolized in their own towns and villages. That leadership is popular. It caters to the national clamor for blood-the blood of the heathen unbelievers who deny the divinity of Hirohito. The Japenese people are responsible for having encouraged the socalled militarists to wage this war. And it is upon them, as well as the "militarists," that we must heap our vengeance when our war strategy permits. Then, and only then, will the menace to civilization's four freedoms be erased!

"HE ink has been dry for lo, these many weeks, since the Philharmonic-Symphony Society and the United States Rubber Company signed contracts to give year-round radio music via CBS. The tremendous possibilities of the association, however, have scarcely been exhausted. The event is a signal one in musical annals, particularly since the Philharmonic-Symphony had never had a commercial sponsor before. And it is interesting to note that both organizations are centenarians, the Society being 101 years old, the United States Rubber Company one hundred.

In its century of music-making the Society has undergone many changes. There have been amalgamations with other orchestras, there have been changes in business policy and also, I might add, in musical policy. The Philharmonic-Symphony, however, has ever striven for higher and higher goals in its long career. Sometimes mistakes were made, but these same mistakes proved often the very means to a better end.

In the Sunday afternoon broadcasts over the Columbia Broadcasting System the Philharmonic-Symphony has won an amazing number of listeners during the past thirteen years. These are loyal listeners, most of them, who would no more think of foregoing that symphonic program than doing without Sunday dinner.

The present set-up, involving intermission period presentations by noted figures in literature, the theater and the films-possibly including other sources-is a departure from the familiar offerings of the past. The brilliant and pertinent observations of Deems Taylor, for instance, are being and will continue to be missed by many listeners.

Yet music and the historical feature are not strange mates, nor should they be, particularly at this time. Carl Van Doren, celebrated historian, and his distinguished collaborators of the intermission period seem to have no major problem there, Mr. Van Doren calls the memorable utterances of our famous figures the "American Scriptures." They belong, of course, to the ever mounting credo of Americanism that will help to win this war. Now, more than ever, we must be made aware of these utterances. We must relate them to the period in which they were born, and relate them, in turn, to our own time, to our present problems, with the view, always, of becoming united strongly during the most perilous era of our existence.

Youth Serves

It would be surprising if Raymond Paige, American, were not devoted to American music. He is one conductor who grew up with the classics, as well as the popular-it's about time we began to call it the folk-music of this country.

On Tuesday evenings Raymond
Paige and his "Young Americans" orchestra plays for your supper. They play again for a midnight snack, perhaps, later in the evening. That is in work. "But, on the level," he told the writer at luncheon recently, "this is a real youth orchestra.'

He watched with soaring interest the work of young native musicians throughout the country when he was associated with the American Musical Arts Foundation. Out of that study, which entailed a close scrutiny of many youngsters, he formulated a plan to create an orchestra whose members should be American, young and exceptionally gifted. In all, he auditioned some 3,500 male and female musicians.

Out of them he selected a stellar one hundred, and for his present orchestra drew on these to the tune of fifty or thereabouts. He has trained the young musicians himself. "The draft, naturally, makes heavy inroads on the membership," he remarked, "so I have to make continual replacements. But the raw material is there and you can take my word for it that the material is anything but raw."

Some of them come from famous American schools of music, others from dance bands, thus proving, I suppose, that a musician is a musi-cian no matter where he got his learning.

Mr. Paige, who is just touching forty-three, has had an extensive and profitable career as a conductor. On the radio he has been associated with such programs as "Hollywood Hotel," '99 Men and a Girl" and "California Melodies." His movie ventures include "Hollywood Hotel" and "Hawaii Calls." As batonist he has presided over the Los Angeles Philharmonic, the Hollywood Bowl symphony and others.

Mr. Paige's programs over the Blue Network will be as much American as the public can take—which should be a great deal. Europe used once to be the important training-ground for musical artists. With Mr. Paige's help we may soon be able to say good-by to all that.

CENTURY-OLD SYMPHONY. The New York Philharmonic-Symphony, old-est in America and third oldest in the world, originally played only three con-certs a year. Now it may be heard every Sunday afternoon over CBS

POPULAR MUSIC

HELEN O'CONNELL is the beautiful young miss who is also a topflight singer. Formerly a vocal soloist with Jimmy Dorsey's orchestra, Miss O'Connell is now a full-fledged star of the Blue Network's "Rhythm Road." You may have heard her sing those zippy, rhythmical choruses for the Dorsey band. Now, if you please, she sings ballads, the slow, dreamy, romantic kind, and therein lies a story.

She declares, quite readily, that she left Jimmy Dorsey not because singing with a band grew tiresome but because she wanted a chance to sing the less hysterical songs. Four years of pounding away metrically gave her an understanding of rhythm which she can ever put to good advantage.

They tell us that Miss O'Connell has developed a new song style. Examining the assertion-and also the situation-one finds that her forte now is understatement, which she makes a feature of in her Blue Network broadcasts. She doesn't shout. She doesn't bubble over with cute vocal mannerisms. She merely sings romantically, soulfully.

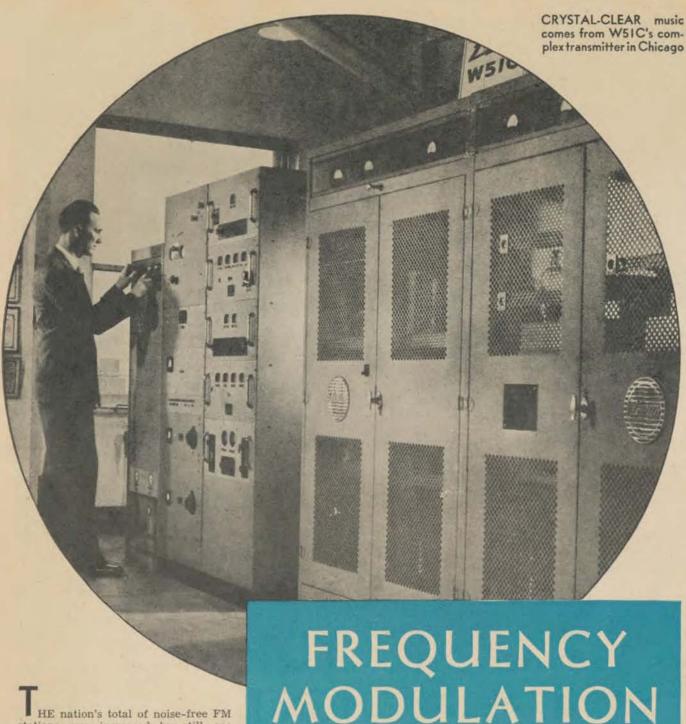

One isn't prepared to say whether or not the Lima (Ohio) born chanteuse will ever make the operatic or concert grade. But she is talented and young enough-just twenty-three-to give that a fling sometime, provided she can put in the practise and study hours before trying it.

After all, it is quite a jump from Six Lessons from Madame La Zonga and Murder, He Says to Puccini's Tosca. From the looks of things, Miss O'Connell will steer clear of the Metropolitan. For all one knows, the Metropolitan may be doing a good job of steering clear on its own account.

But Miss O'Connell is very contented with what she is doing So are numerous radio fans. The Metropolitan can wait-maybe forever.

HE nation's total of noise-free FM stations was increased by still one more in May when W71SB, the FM transmitter of the South Bend (Ind.) Tribune, went on the air. This brings to a total of forty-eight the number of frequency-modulation stations operating on regular schedules throughout the country.

W71SB is Indiana's third FM outlet, although the first to be heard in South Bend. Already on the air for some time are W45V, Evansville, and W49FW in Fort Wayne. The new station, because of war-time equipment shortages, will operate at reduced power for the duration, covering only a central portion of the full 4,300 square miles it is authorized eventual-

Meeting of the Clan

FM boosters gathered in force recently when FM Broadcasters, Inc., the national association whose membership includes the country's leading FM stations, held its fourth annual session at Chicago to discuss progress and plans of noise-free, full-fidelity broadcasting.

Outspoken enthusiasm for the manner in which FM is weathering the war was a keynote of the meeting. None of the station owners and operators present expressed discouragement over war-time curtailments or indicated plans to abandon FM activities. All looked forward optimistically to the return of peace, with a general belief prevailing that frequency modulation will be among the outstanding industries of the post-war period.

During the session twenty new members were accepted into FM Broadcasters, Inc.-an association which operates as a national trade group to protect and promote the interests of frequency-modulation broadcasting. Its membership roster now includes all but four of the commercial FM outlets in the country, as well as a num-ber of experimental and educational stations, and several manufacturers of FM equipment.

Walter J. Damm of W55M, Milwaukee, was re-elected president of the group, with T. C. Streibert of W71NY, New York, continuing as vice presi-

Post-War Insurance for FM

Late last February the Federal Communications Commission, which has authority over all broadcasting in this country, came forth with a pro-nouncement of considerable importance to FM. It's important because it opens the way for swifter expansion of FM broadcasting as a post-war in-

To understand why, we must go back to the time when America was attacked by the enemy. There was then a sizable number of applications pending at Washington from people all over the nation who wanted permission to build new FM stations. Several months after the war started, however, it became evident that vital equipment could no longer be spared for the construction of new civilian radio transmitters, antenna towers, broadcasting studios and similar in-stallations. So, early in 1942, Washington simply dismissed all the applications which were then waiting. It meant that after the war these people would be faced with the lengthy task of making new plans, filling out new application blanks, reapplying for official permission to build-and probably waiting long months until the Federal Communications Commission could get around to acting upon them.

In February of this year, however, the FCC changed its mind and announced that, upon suitable request, it would be glad to reinstate any of the dismissed applications. They would be kept on file for action just as soon as the war ends and things begin to get back to normal.

In other words, for FM it was very much like being pushed out of a long line and then, some time later, being told that its place in line would be

The decision to help FM development in this fashion was made, ac-cording to Chairman James L. Fly of the Federal Communications Commission, "simply because we want to encourage FM . . . as much as we can."

Here's What Happened

The other day Washington reported on the results of its February offer to reinstate pre-war FM applications. Practically everybody who wanted to build an FM station before the war started apparently still feels the same way about it. Over ninety percent of the applicants were quick to ask for reinstatement, attesting to the high degree of enthusiasm which continues to prevail among radio people.

If you live in one of these cities, the chances are good that you may be en-joying local FM reception a lot sooner than you might have otherwise: Lexington, Ky.; New Bedford, Mass.; Ashland, Ky.; Baltimore, Md.; Syracuse, N. Y.; Louisville, Ky.; Washington; St. Louis; Reading, Pa.; Houston, Texas; Indianapolis, Ind.; Grand Rapids, Mich.; Trenton, N. J.; Providence, R. I.; Manchester, N. H.; Winston-Salem, N. C.; Rockford, Ill.; San Bernardino, Calif., and Albany, N. Y.

Increased service is also in immediate post-war prospect for Boston, Los Angeles, New York, Detroit, San Francisco, Chicago and Cleveland.

Another School Station

FM station WBEZ, operated by the Chicago Board of Education, is now on the air Mondays through Fridays, broadcasting programs of fourteen regular weekly series which are pro-duced by the Radio Council of the Chicago Public Schools. WBEZ is a newcomer to the ranks of non-commercial educational stations operating in the FM broadcast band, where five channels were set aside for the broadcasting activities of schools, colleges and similar institutions.

Other cities with educational FM transmitters are Cleveland (WBOE), San Francisco (KALW), New York (WNYE), San Diego (KSDS) and Memphis (WMBE).

WBEZ transmits on 42.5 megacycles (calibrated at "25" on the dials of some FM receivers) and will not, of course, be heard during the summer months when schools are closed. Chicago educators first made use of radio in the fall of 1937, when an epidemic of poliomyelitis made it advisable for school children to stay at home temporarily. All classes were suspended and the help of ordinary AM stations was enlisted so that lessons could be broadcast over the air.

The arrangement proved so successful that the board continued to use the AM stations as a means of supplementing classroom work. The final step has been the construction of FM station WBEZ so that full utilization is possible of broadcasting as an educational medium.

His success as a comedian can be explained by the fact that humor is spontaneous with him. He admits that he tried everything from selling brushes to cow-punching before he decided to become an actor

JOHN CONTE, singing emcee on "Maxwell House Coffee Time," made his radio debut in 1932 as an actor-singer. He has announced, acted and sung on many top-notch broadcasts from Hollywood. John, born in Palmer, Mass., and educated in Los Angeles, is now one of Movietown's best-liked bachelors. Please don't crowd, girls!

HANLEY STAFFORD, born in the town of Hanley in County Stafford, England, liked his birth-place so well that he adopted its name for his own. Fact that he is a veteran of World War I may be one reason why Hanley holds up so well as the father of the unpredictable "Snooks." A-I actor, he's much sought after for radio roles

FRANK TOURS became musical director of the show when Meredith Willson enlisted. His special interest is watching debuts of unknowns. He has watched stars rise and fall on Broadway for past thirty years as orchestra-leader in all important New York theaters, and for practically every successful show since the year 1910!

Old Hand at Gardening

VICTORY GARDENS

FATHER BARBOUR (J. Anthony Smythe) of "One Man's Family" says outside leaves of lettuce are most healthful, contain highest vitamin content, since they are exposed to rays of sun. Housewives who throw away outer leaves, serve only heart, make a mistake. "Potatoes can be tricky, too," Father Barbour tells small taster and onlooker Dawn Bender (Hazel's daughter Margaret on the show), explains that empty spaces in his potato patch are due to haste in planting. Cut-up seed potatoes should not be planted until protective covering has formed on the raw surface

AVOIDING waste is a must with Father Barbour. He personally solves space problems in his own case by vertical gardening. Growing tomato plants (above) on trellises not only saves valuable space through training plants to climb up instead of spreading but also allows them to get more sun and keeps the vegetables free from dirt. To him the results are well worth this extra work

SPRAYING is often necessary to ward off the host of bugs and worms that fatten on the gardener's work, which looks like a square meal to them. Small hand spray that Father Barbour is using above is economical and convenient; also large enough for average victory garden. Here's What Happened to Alan Ladd When He Joined Uncle Sam's Air Forces Boys

EARING khaki wasn't anything new for Alan Ladd when he entered the Air Forces as a private. In "Lucky Jordan' he had worn it for Army scenes of the film. But wearing khaki in the movie role of a rough rookie who broke every Army rule ever made and donning it for real service in the regular Army, where his screen reputation as a tough guy had preceded him, combined to cook up a little surprise for him from Uncle Sam's boys in the Air Forces. The first words that greeted him were, "Hi, Killer!" And they weren't spoken in a pleasant manner. The general attitude, in fact, seemed to be, "So you think you're tough, eh! Well, we'll see if you can live up to the rep you established in "This Gun for Hire.'" Right off the bat, the Army barber overdid his haircut a bit. In the uniform-issue, "the killer" didn't fare much better. If there had been an older, more shapeless outfit around, the boys would have found it. It was "killer" this and "killer" that, with a tough sergeant barking "Okay, Killer, let's see you do it!" in a way that would have raised goose-pimples on a rhinoceros. From the KP private to the staff sergeant, Alan got the works. Playing pranks on "Killer Ladd" seemed to be their favorite diversion. That went on until the fellows woke up to the fact that a man who happened to be an actor didn't necessarily have to be like the roles he played. They found out that he really was a regular guy after all. As for Ladd, he passed his tests with flying colors. Now the worst is over, he's a pretty happy guy. In lean days, before stardom beckoned, Alan missed a good many meals. Now he eats like a boy raiding the ice-box after school. He honestly likes the Army and everything about it. His buddies have almost forgotten that he was ever an actor from Hollywood, and accept him as they do others from Waterloo, Iowa, or Puyallup, Washington.

"KILLER" was inducted day after his radio appearance on CBS "Lux Radio Theater," which he co-starred with Joan Blondell. Above: DeMille and Joan offer good wishes

the Rushes of So Proudly We Hail

PARAMOUNT picture, "So Proudly We Hail" is not made from a story dreamed up by Hollywood script-writers but is one based on facts taken from the records of the War Department. The record of the heroic women of Bataan and Corregidor-American Army nurses who worked, fought and died in those island outposts. Every scene is packed with drama torn from a page of living history made in the spring of 1942. Of the whole group, only eight escaped via Australia and made their way back to America. The drama progresses in flash-backs as Lt. O'Doul (Paulette Goddard) relates the story of the corps of nurses who were on their way to Hawaii when America entered the war but landed on Bataan. There the girls meet with crises daily that few persons encounter in a lifetime, Claudette Colbert heads the cast, but it is literally an all-star production, for everyone, down to the smallest bit player, put everything they had into the making of this magnificent tribute to a corps of U.S. Army nurses that met defeat with courage!

Dehydrated Soups Are Not Rationed

F YOU'VE become a worrywart over the current food shortage and rationing, give some thought to a food product that isn't rationed - dehydrated soup, just removed from the list of rationed foodstuffs. Dehydrated soup keeps almost indefinitely and still maintains its excellent flavor, texture and vitamin content. When you buy dehydrated soup from your grocer, it appears in a variety of shapes and forms, but after easy preparation it looks and tastes like fresh foods.

Once you discover how simple it is to prepare this soup mix, you'll wonder why you ever spent hours making your own. Minute Man Soup Mix, a brand that we've tried and liked, comes in three delicious kinds—chicken noodle, vegetable, and broth with rice. The noodle and vegetable cook in seven minutes, while the broth takes about nine minutes - all packages serve four to six people. Just spill the contents of the package into water, cook for the time specified and-presto!-you have a soup with as much flavor as the soup Grandma used to make-and without all of the fuss and bother that she went through.

Learn to make soup a routine part of your menu-planning and you won't have any trouble serving your family. At noontime, give it to the kiddies with hot biscuits and a tempting dessert. If you are a lunch-box makerupper, fill the thermos with hot soup so your hungry man will have something to give him energy to carry on for the rest of the day.

For warm summer evenings, when you want to fix dinner in a jiffy, serve a bowl of delicious chicken noodle soup with an orange salad (recipe below). Finish with a dessert that everyone likes and your meal will please even the fussiest eater. Try it

Well, I posed for one that said "Heaven forbid." But you don't need bulging muscles to make you look fit. Pepsodent . . . does that by making your teeth and smile look like a million.

4. It's a good iden to exercise. One good way is to grasp your tooth brush firmly, squirt a little Pepsodent on it and brush your teeth vigorously. This develops the "saluting" muscles in your arm in case your draft board makes you class 1-A. It also gives your teeth plenty of class and makes your smile A-1.

5. Above all, don't worry. I once thought I had high blood pressure. But my doctor cured it in two minutes. He sent the nurse out of the room. Of course, I'm luckier with my dentist's nurse. She gave me a couple of dates . . . you know . . . Use Pepsodent twice a day . . . see your dentist

BE KIND TO YOUR CLOTHES

VERY well-groomed woman realizes that to keep up with fashion and to look fashionably dressed at all times, she must take regular inventory of her clothes. She makes a list (with pencil and paper) of every single wearable item in her closet and dresser drawers. She puts those that need alterations and repairs in one column, those that need cleaning and pressing in another, those that can be given to some charitable organization or another in column three, and finally, in the last column, she lists the clothes that are in good condition. This isn't a yearly refurbishing-it's done every two months or so by this well-groomed person. When all the alterations, cleaning and what-nots are complete, then (and then only) is she ready to decide just what new additions are needed for her. Sometimes she doesn't even need anything.

Why don't you use this same system? Honestly, you'll find it comparatively simple to sort out your clothes. In the long run, you'll be saving time. For instance, there isn't much chance that you'll find a button off the dress you plan to wear or a spot on the skirt of your suit-you'll have planned for just such a happening before and your clothes will always be in tip-top condition.

Buy Quality and Fit But if you do need a new dress, set out with the determination that you're going to get the best buy for your money. Don't grab up the first attractive garment your bright eye lights on; shop around a bit. When buying fabrics, always ask to see the label. That's your assurance that what you're buying is a tested fabric. Fabrics you can count on have labels that tell you what the fabric is and how to care for it. Know what you're buying and you won't go wrong.

Unless you definitely plan on altering a too large or too small dress immediately, don't buy it at all. There is nothing more unbecoming to any woman than a dress that looks as if it were meant for someone else.

Helpful Hint for Mending Here's a new item that we've come across that should really help you with your clothes problem. Have you ever tried "Press-On" Mending Tape? If you haven't, you don't know what you're missing-for it mends practically anything that needs mending. Now with clothes conservation uppermost in every patriotic woman's mind, this gadget should be quite a boon to all of us in our mending sprees. You can put your sewing-basket on the back shelf when you use "Press-On," because you do your mending by "pressing on" the tape with your iron. Here's another advantage: You can combine your ironing with your mending and do two jobs at once. Here are some of the things you can do with "Press-On": 1. Use "Press-On" Stocking Mender to reinforce stocking welts, heels and toes. 2. Repair rubbers, galoshes, umbrellas, tents, awnings, canopies, etc. 3. Appliques, initials and other interesting designs to flatter (Continued on Page 59)

CASE OF THE TRAIN MURDER

tampered with. He said he had vanked the emergency cord of the train and men had gone back along the tracks. They'd discovered nothing except a few telltale stains of blood on the ties. O'Brien, or his body, had been removed.

Harding's own men made an investigation of the scene.

"We located the place by the tracks where the body landed," the agents reported. "There was a great deal of blood. We traced footprints from there a hundred vards to the main road. Somebody had a car parked there. There were some tread-marks of the car in the dirt beside the road. Plaster casts were made of both the footprints and the tire-treads. There's nothing further to report."

Harding scratched his chin in puzzlement. Finally he ordered a complete investigation of O'Brien's personal life, learned that the lieutenant had made five personal calls before leaving for San Francisco. There were calls to the Army department, one to his mother, one to a girl . .

Harding discussed the situation with his assistant, blond, horse-faced George Davis, who had been born in Des Moines, Iowa, but since had learned the ropes in all the world's great capitals.

"This job has all the earmarks of a high-class, sophisticated plot," Harding said. "I want somebody to do some special work for me-a person who travels in high Washington circles."

Davis sucked air through one of his big teeth. "Couldn't we get one of our own operators into that circle?"

"We could-" Harding hesitated-"but I want somebody already there. Some prominent person who would not be suspected of working with us. This is going to take finesse. I'm going to talk to Lady Ashton . . ."

Harding, faultless in full dress, cut a fine figure at Lady Ashton's little dinner party. Despite his seeming frank manner, he had an air of the adventurer about him, a trait that women found irresistible. Harding had arranged with Lady Ashton to be seated next to beautiful and popular Norma Brailey, a French refugee who had been invited everywhere during the social season, Lady Ashton had arched her eyebrows and smiled knowingly when Harding first mentioned Miss Brailey's name.

"You're sure this is all business, Mr. Harding?" she asked. Harding chuckled. "Yes," he agreed,

"she is attractive. But if Miss Brailey would be willing to work with meand follow my instructions, she could be of great help."

The introduction went smoothly Miss Brailey showed only the reaction of a well-groomed and sophisticated young woman accustomed to flattery when Harding managed to take her apart from the other dinner guests for a private chat. He came to the point immediately.

"You sound very serious, Mr. Harding," the girl said.

"You are a French refugee, Miss Brailey. You fled Paris just before it fell. Your entire family is still there." Harding's voice was tense.

Miss Brailey showed surprise. "How did you know all that?"

"More people are investigated nowadays than you think. Miss Brailey, would you take some risks if you thought you really could be of helpagainst our mutual enemies?"

Miss Brailey's manner changed. The smile faded from her lips and her face became drawn. "I'd do anything in the world," she said. "Everything is a risk in the world today."

Harding nodded. "I need someone who travels in Washington's best society. I need someone who never has been connected with counter-spying in any way. Someone of courage . . . infinesse . .

Miss Brailey's eyes widened. "You mean me?" she asked. There was no naivete in her manner, only honest Harding replied "We're on a very hard and difficult case right now. I need someone just like you. In fact-you." He held up his hand to stay the protest she seemed about to make. "You won't need any special training, Miss Brailey, if you will do exactly as I tell you-

"And you really think I can help?"
"Very definitely."

"Then I'll do anything you ask. It's the least I can do."

"You will be in danger," Harding said seriously. "The spy ring I refer to has just murdered at least one Army officer.

Miss Brailey took one of Harding's proferred cigarettes and Harding noticed that her hand was steady against his own as he offered her a light.

"I'm not easily frightened, Mr. Harding. I went through a good deal before I escaped to the United States.

Harding snapped his lighter shut, ut it back in his pocket. "That's put it back in his pocket. "That's agreed, then. Now—" his voice became flat, incisive-"I believe something very important is going to break later tonight. Any calls I make to you must be made in such a way that they cannot be traced. Tomorrow morning at ten-thirty, go to the Farnsworth Drug Store on Maple Street. There are three telephone booths there. Go into the middle booth. Make several telephone calls so you can hold the booth, Hang up the receiver at exactly eleventhirty. I have the phone number, I will do the same thing on the other end of town, so my call to you will be from one telephone booth to the other and cannot be traced . . . .'

THE next morning, Harding's voice on the telephone had the same crispness of the night before. Miss Brailey had obeyed his instructions. The call was made at exactly 11:30 a.m. and she was in the booth ready to receive her orders.

Harding carefully explained that a Sir Harold Palmer had arrived late the night before from Ontario, Canada. He said his organization had been watching Palmer for more than three months, and that Palmer actually was not a nobleman but was believed to be traveling with false credentials. This last fact, Harding explained, was not confirmed.

"But," he continued, "this is the first time Sir Harold has left Canada, and it is so close to the event which happened on a train four nights ago that we believe there may be some connection. I have arranged for Lady Ashton to give a ball on this coming Wednesday evening. Somehow it will be arranged so Sir Harold will be there. I want you to meet him at that ball. Lady Ashton will introduce you to him. Flatter him, get to know him."

"I will do my best," Miss Brailey said eagerly.

"Do you have a small automatic?"

Harding asked, "One you can carry in your purse?"

"Keep it with you at all times. That is all for now."

Miss Brailey displayed perfect technique. She not only met Sir Harold, but managed to be invited to his hotel room. Her progress was reported by short-wave radio to Harding. For this reason, Harding did not appear visibly surprised later in the evening when Miss Brailey knocked at his hotel room. She apologized, but explained that she didn't know exactly what to do. His voice had a trace of irritation.

"I know, Norma, but it's two o'clock in the morning. To come to my hotel room is to put those who might be watching me wise to the fact that you're working with us."

"But something terribly important has happened, Mr. Harding."

"What?"

"Well, Sir Harold kept talking and talking about art. It was so late that I asked him to order some food. When he went to the adjoining room to telephone room service, I had a chance to look into several drawers-I found these papers."

SHE opened her bag and pulled out a small bundle of documents fastened together with a rubber binder. She handed the bundle to Harding who spread them on his desk, studying them with a grim-faced expression.

"Hmmm. They're reports. They state very clearly that they concern confidential information between the United States and Canada. Ah . . . this one . . . it even goes so far as to mention certain fortifications-"

"Then it's the information you want?" Miss Brailey's voice was anxious.

Harding pursed his lips. "Well, it's not the exact information, but it shows very definitely that Sir Harold working against the interest of the United States and Canada. But you should not have come here, Norma. In fact, you shouldn't have taken these

"But why? Now you've got proof against Sir Harold,"

'Yes," Harding agreed, "but he'll miss the papers and then he'll know you've tricked him and disappear-'

The telephone rang at that moment and Harding picked up the receiver.

"J-4 reporting," said the voice on the phone. "Sir Harold has checked out of hotel and ordered car from nearest garage. Shall I replace chauffeur?"

Harding replied. "It's too dangerous at this point. Drop his trail and tell Operator J-7 to pick it up."

Harding slipped the receiver back in the cradle and turned again to Miss Brailey. Her voice was crestfallen. "I never felt so bad in my life," she said. "I feel that I've bungled the whole thing."

Harding's manner was soothing. "Don't feel that way, Norma. You've just accomplished so much more than I expected, I wasn't ready for it . Now, of course, the artillery plans which were stolen from O'Brien have already been changed. A new set of plans is being sent to California Saturday by plane. We'll wait to see if the Gestapo makes an attempt to get those new plans then. Now here's what you can do: Tomorrow night, dress very simply, take the bus-the Maryland bus to the end of the line. Get off there and wait for me. Things have

Craig was at Guadalcanal for six months. At the height of the Japanese attack, he was severely wounded when a bomb exploded, burying him in a foxhole. When his men dug him out, Craig discovered that his left leg was useless. But he was the only officer at the battle-station and there was no time to seek medical aid. So for eighteen days he continued to direct his men in combat. As a result, his leg is partially paralyzed.

Now at the Corona Naval Hospital in San Diego, Craig faces a long siege of treatments in the hope that he can again get back into active service. The only time he has been away from the hospital, since he entered it four months ago, was the day he and his were quietly married in a small Hollywood church.

A deserving tribute from the U.S. government came to Craig the week of his wedding. He was promoted to the rank of captain. His record as a fighting marine merited it-made him a hero. But we can't help wondering a bit how some Hollywood actors, who ran temperatures looking for a nice soft spot in this global scrap, feel when they view Craig's part in it.

CASE OF THE TRAIN MURDER

taken a pretty serious turn. Tomorrow Lieutenant O'Brien. This short-wave night should tell us a lot .

Again Miss Brailey followed orders. She met Harding and together they drove through the Maryland countryside south of Washington. Harding explained they meant to listen to a short-wave bootleg station broadcasting to Germany—a station operated by Gestapo agents which had been overheard by the counter-spy organization for several weeks.

Harding stopped the car before an apparently deserted farmhouse. He helped Miss Brailey from the car, took her inside. She seemed surprised at the lights which had been hidden from the outside and was impressed greatly with the amount of electrical equipment. Harding found her a chair, invited her to put on a dual set of headphones.

"I'm calling another short-wave station of our own," he explained. "One of my men is operating it."

There was a long buzz and Harding turned a switch, then spoke into the microphone. "42B . . . 42B . . . come in on 24,500 megacycles. Come in . . .

A click, and the voice of George Davis, Harding's horse-faced undercover man, came over the air. "Your signal is weak, but I can get it. Come in."

"Proceed according to schedule," Harding instructed. "That will be three minutes and twenty seconds. Then meet me at appointment. Do you

"Exactly three minutes . . . ten seconds . . . and will contact."
"That is all." Harding clicked off the switch and turned to Miss Brailey. He explained the signals had been weak because the portable sending and receiving set had been in a car. Then he asked her if she understood German.

"No-no, I don't."

"Then I'll interpret to you," he said. "The broadcast we should be picking up should be coming in about now.

He turned another switch and there was a series of buzzing dots and dashes. Then the guttural tones of a man speaking in German. As the broadcast developed, Harding translated to Miss Brailey in an undertone.

"He's just saying he's got some real news tonight . . . he's talking about the West Coast fortification papers which were stolen from us . . . he's telling Berlin that the Gestapo have the papers but the question is how to get them out of the country . . . now he's saying more fortification plans are to be sent to the West Coast this coming Saturday night . . . he's saving they're to be sent by plane and they'll try to get them-listen!"

Harding's voice broke off abruptly and he held up his hand. Over the air came the sound of another voice-an American voice, the voice of George Davis. Miss Brailey's eyes widened as she heard Davis say:

"If you make a move, I'll shoot, Get those hands up quick! We're United States counter-spies. Keep your hands up and move away from that broadcasting outfit."

Miss Brailey turned to Harding. Her lips parted in astonishment. "They're being captured," she said hoarsely. Harding put his finger over his mouth, made a motion toward the receiving set. Davis' voice came in again.

"Put the cuffs on him, Frank. We've already got the cuffs on your three pals-the two downstairs and one in the other room . . . Oh, no, you don't . . . Take him out, boys. Remember these four are the ones who murdered sending set won't be used any more tonight-or any other night-'

Harding turned a switch and the voice went off the air, Miss Brailey snatched off the headphones and looked wide-eyed at Harding. He had removed his phones and had lighted a cigarette.

"But how," she asked, "did it happen just right then?"

He smiled. "That was the message I sent out the first thing I came into the room here. We had everything set. Come on-I want to drive back and face them.'

Miss Brailey cuddled herself against the folds of Harding's thick overcoat, He drove with his eyes ahead on the road, disdaining to notice the inherent flattery of her apparent adoration. Her voice was small when she asked where they were going and surprised when he told her that it was to a "sort of prison.

"It's not what most people consider a prison," he said, "but it's got steel bars and escape-proof devices even though it looks like an ordinary farmhouse. The people there have vanished from every-day life. They no longer When they leave, it's by way of the firing-squad. They're all spies-all agents of the Gestapo, the Ovra, the Japanese Black Dragon."

MISS BRAILEY'S face faded to the color of parchment as they walked past the cells in the secret prison. Harding invited her into one of the unoccupied compartments, motioned to her to take a seat.

"It's horrible," she said. "These prisoners just look at us. You can see in their eyes that they know they're going to be shot!"

Harding turned to the guard who had escorted them down the corridor. "See if a Sir Harold Palmer has been brought in yet," he said. "If he has, bring him to this cell-"

The guard left without saying a word. Harding and Miss Brailey sat in silence waiting. A voice called out from somewhere outside the cell. was Davis' voice saying that Sir Harold would be brought in momentarily. Harding turned to Miss Brailey.

"I know you'll be wanting to know how we arrested him so quickly. Well, you know we checked up on O'Brien very carefully. We traced every call he made after he left General Whitcomb's office-including the one he made to a girl. We could do that because it was made to her hotel and we immediately started an investigation of that girl. The report showed that her background wasn't quite what she claimed it to be. In other words, she had found out that O'Brien was a trusted Government messenger and she became acquainted with him, had started seeing a good deal of him. When he telephoned her on this certain night and said he was going to San Francisco, she knew it must be on important business and, as he was a confidential messenger, she knew he'd probably have the papers with him. She passed the word on-gave orders for the two men to board the train and, after a little while, to cut the electric lights in that car, murder O'Brien and throw his body off at a certain prearranged time. She was not aboard the train herself, only giving orders. Two other men in an automobile were waiting and carried the body away because they were afraid he might have important papers on his

Miss Brailey was seated on the edge of her chair, leaning forward. "Were those men who were running the short-wave station the ones who mur-dered Lieutenant O'Brien?"

"Yes," Harding said curtly. "But they received their instructions from the woman to do it. The woman was the real murderer—" Harding looked up-"ah, Sir Harold, you came sooner than I anticipated-

Miss Brailey looked up and her face became more pale than before if such a thing was possible. The man who stood in the doorway was Sir Harold Palmer indeed, but he was not dressed as he had been before, nor was his voice and manner the same. He hardly glanced at her. He addressed his remarks to Harding until the girl interrupted.

"Sir Harold Palmer!" she cried.

Harding smiled grimly. "That's right. Sir Harold to you, Miss Brailey, but a counter-spy to me — counter-spy George Davis."

"He's a counter-spy! Why, he's the Canadian you sent me to watch. He's the one I stole the papers from.

"And a very good job of stealing you did, too, Miss Brailey." Davis winked at Harding, who then turned

"This has gone far enough," he said. "You are under arrest, Miss Brailey, by the United States Government. While you were stealing the papers from Sir Harold, you also were adding more proof to my original suspicions. I wasn't absolutely positive you were the woman until we heard that broadcast tonight and your spies passed on word that other artillery papers were being sent to the Coast Saturday night by plane. Then I KNEW you were the one we wanted because that was just a made-up story and you and I were the only two in the whole world who knew it. Now, Miss Brailey, you're very observing. You should have noticed that this is the women's section of our little prison . . . a half-hour before we arrived, this very cell was reserved for you."

Miss Brailey leaped to her feet. Her voice became a high-pitched scream. You can't do this to me. I'm a French refugee-I'm a French ref-

"A French refugee right from Berlin," Harding said grimly. "You never saw France in your life. We checked your family-they live on Kuchten Street, Hamburg.'

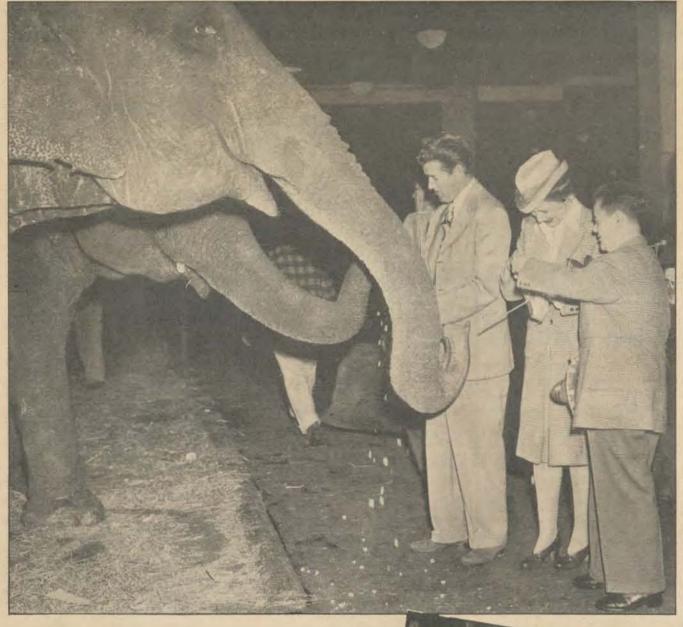

Harding walked from the cell with Davis. The door was slammed behind As the two men walked down the silent corridor, Harding turned to

"I have a feeling," he said, "that she's responsible for a lot of important information leaking out. But one thing's certain-she won't get out now -at least not until our job's done.

The Parker Family Goes to the Circus

They Arrived Early and Stayed Late!

ROM the bearded lady to the human skeleton, the "Parker Family" of the airlanes didn't miss a sideshow when they attended the circus recently. For like every other American family, they get a tremendous thrill out of their day under the big top. They went early, spent an hour watching the animals, feeding monkeys and elephants peanuts. One wise old pachyderm deciding that Nancy wasn't giving him his share, nuzzled her with his trunk, blowing gently when she turned her head for a moment. Maybe you think elephants can't smile, but he did when she jumped and then put a half-dozen nuts instead of the traditional one into his out-stretched hopper. The whole family bought trinkets as souvenirs of their day with "the greatest show on earth," even went backstage to chat with performers, and tell them how much they enjoyed their day at the circus:

Care for Stockings

To make precious stockings last longer, give them plenty of attention. For instance, remove all your rings, junk jewelry and so forth before you don stockings or launder them. Always buy the stockings that fit properly. Never fasten them below the heavy welt at top—and never use garters that have lost their elasticity. Always attach garters while you are seated to insure proper adjustment for knee action without undue strain. Always wash your stockings in Lux after each wearing and they'll give better service. Carefully squeeze suds through the stockings. Rinse well in lukewarm water. Don't twist or wring, but squeeze out the water. Hang on smooth rod to dry; avoid the use of clothespins. Keep away from excessive direct heat and sunlight. Never, never wear rayon stockings until they are thoroughly dry. Rayons washed at night will not be completely dry and ready to wear the next morning. Allow at least thirty-six hours' drying time after each washing. Alternate wearing your rayon hose if you want them to last longer.

Care for Your Shoes

Now that we can get only one pair of shoes every few months (unless our husband is eager to part with his coupon) we'd better take good care of what we have. Here are the rules for good shoe care: When you're not wearing them, keep your shoes on shoe-trees or stuff the toes with balls of newspaper. Keep them on a shoerack-not on the floor where they can gather all kinds of dust and dirt. Keep shoes away from heat. If they get wet, let them dry at normal room temperature, never near a radiator or fire. Keep your shoes well polished and always clean. Before storing shoes away for the next season, polish them well and wrap in tissue paper. And do buy the proper polish—and make sure you use it often. Paste, cream and liquid wax are for smooth leathers, such as kid, calf and alligator. Suede and gabardine dressing are for nappy leathers such as suede and buckskin fabric. To get further benefit from your old shoes, try dressing them up with pretty clips and dainty bows, as Elizabeth Reller does in the pictures at the beginning of this article-you'll be surprised how smart they can look and will look if you have just a little time and patience to pamper them a little.

Maybe all this is a little more trouble than you're used to, but it certainly is worth it when the compliments start flying.

of agreement, even as the thought popped up and argued that it might bring a glare from screen actor George Montgomery, now in service. For he squires Dinah around Hollywood exclusively when on leave, and never, if he can help it, misses a show that she puts on. But Carey Wilson's heart-warming letter to Dinah, which fol-lows, quelled that intruding thought and left us with the firm conviction that the little singer, was right. We believe readers will think so too. Here's what Mr. Wilson wrote. Judge for yourselves:

Dear Dinah Shore:

Dear Dinah Shore:

He was such a little soldier. And it was half past midnight of the wettest night I'd ever seen. At that, I'd not have seen him if I hadn't been straining my eyes through the torrents of water pouring down until I actually feared the deluge would engulf me, sturdy motorcar and all.

But I did see him, and how he stood up against the downpour I'll never figure out. He looked awful never figure out. He looked awful small, beating against the elements.

I'd watched him for an hour, earlier, in the canteen. He didn't seem very happy. He had his coffee, and a couple of sandwiches, and a few cigarettes, listlessly. I guess he was eighteen, maybe, but his eyes looked about twelve. He seemed to be waiting for some-thing—something that didn't hap-pen. Several times I saw one or another cute girl offer to dance or talk. No soap. I wanted to talk to him But there was an aura about him. But there was an aura about him—an unmistakable aura—that hinted he just naturally kind of wanted to be left alone.

And now here he was, again at half past midnight, thrusting his slim little body against that terrifying downpour of water, the only human being in sight, afoot or awheel, in the bridle-path section of Powerly.

tion of Beverly.

I pulled over to the curb and opened the door. Now, Dinah, I was drenched to the waist merely walking from the canteen to the parking place. You can imagine how wet he was having walked from the canteen to Beverly Hills, Yes, he'd walked. He hadn't hitch-hilled because wall only a complete the canteen to be walked. hiked because—well, only a couple of cars had passed him and he didn't want to get anybody wet. He didn't want to get me wet, either. But finally he climbed in and sat down with a squash that spattered water in every direc-tion. It seems he wanted to get to Sepulveda Boulevard. No, he didn't need a place to sleep. No, it would need a place to sleep. No, it would not be necessary for me to drive him to where he was going to go. He'd like to be let off at Sepul-veda. Yes, he had cigarettes. No, he didn't feel like smoking. Yes, he'd enjoyed the canteen. No, he didn't really care to stop for a cup of coffee thank you sir.

I guess it just wasn't his night.

Away from home, soaking wet, probably missed his girl—or maybe his mother. I think it was his

I tried to be good company. I exhausted my repertory of cinema anecdotes. I even told him the story of the new Andy Hardy picture I'm going to make—and, Dinah, when I do that, I'm shoot-ing the works! No soap.

And then, inadvertently through

And then, inadvertently through those boyish lips there came a name. It was your name, Dinah Shore. And then the whole heart-breaking little tragedy came out. It appears that some overenthusiastic soldier boy had said that positively Dinah Shore was at the Hollywood Canteen every night from 7:00 to midnight, positively, without exception and no foolin'!

So this man-child had braved the most horrible night in years, and come to the canteen, and waited for Dinah to come and sing, and no soap. Now, this is a very seri-ous situation! I wasn't much younger than he when my life was blackened for a year because of a lesser tragedy. So I told him, carefully, that it wasn't Dinah Shore's night to be at the canteen. I said I knew Dinah Shore very well—which was a lie, because I don't know you at all—except that I get goose nimples when your I get goose-pimples when your voice comes into my living-room over two radios, you being with me a two-radio program. That's pretty nearly the tops with me, on account of there's only one three-radio program in my house—and radio program in my house-and that's when a man down in Washington talks over the radio, and then I get goose-pimples too. But anyway, my little soldier wanted to see Dinah Shore and hear her sing, and after I managed to convince him that you were the grandest girl in the world—which people tell me you are—and that you wouldn't knowingly not be at the canteen when he expected you to be at the canteen, I managed to kind of make a deal. By now we were sitting parked at the corner of Sepulveda and Sunset, with the threatening to wash us away bodily.

And because I knew you so well, I was supposed to ask you if maybe over the radio you might sing a song for the fella that wanted to go to Sepulveda Boulevard. We thought—he and I—that maybe if you sang Can't Get Out of This Mood, it might get him out of his mood. Because he was still in that mood when he climbed out of the car and started trudging south on Sepulveda. No, I'd rather walk, sir. Yes, I got everything I need, thank you, sir.

So there you are, Dinah! Just one small, unhappy moment in the one small, unhappy moment in the life of one small soldier in this vast and horrifying fabric of hon-est duty that we call war.

So, if you're as smart as they say you are swell, Dinah, you could figure out how to get yourself promoted from a two-radio program to a three-radio program in my house.

Dinah, he was such a little

Care Cestron

What happened when Dinah received the above letter? This: It came at noon on the day that she was to broadcast, and Dinah was so impressed with the contents that she called Mr. Wilson and talked him into coming to the radio studio and reading it as part of her program. Of course she sang Can't Get Out of This Mood for the "little soldier." How the "little soldier." felt about it, we leave to imagination. Every boy who's ever wanted something terribly—and is there one who hasn't?—will know, Every mother and father, sister or sweetheart who ever helped a boy fulfill a desire will understand. And we believe they'll all join with American boys of the armed forces in cheers for their "Dinah-mite"—and ours!

doing a job, he wants to be a part of a team and to lose his identity completely in the work of the men who are with him. If Gable were to shoot down two Axis planes in a dog-fight it would be his desire that he not be mentioned in the action, since he is explicit on the fact that no man in a bomber can be singled out as the one responsible. The man who squeezes the trigger owes his score to the man who pilots the bomber, he in turn would be lost without the navigator, and so on down the line.

Clark once told a young actor: "Look, son, don't try to do anything the way I do it, or like anybody else does it. Don't be a celebrity wor-shiper." In that comment is the key to what Gable always avoided in Hollywood, which is a place where celebrities worship celebrities.

A psychiatrist probably would reach back into the man's childhood to show that his character in this regard developed when his mother died while Clark was still an infant. The first five years of his life were spent on a farm with his grandparents. His only playmate was a dog and there wasn't another kid within five miles of the place. Like many another man, Clark doubtless grew up with that inner feeling someone vividly described by saying, "The more I see of most people the more I like dogs."

There have been stories to the effect that Gable graduated to acting after a career as a laborer in oil fields and lumber camps. The reverse is true. Clark trod the boards for the first time when going to night school at the University of Akron, where he met a cou-ple of actors at a lunch-counter and talked the manager of the local stock company into letting him play a "super" for no pay.

After Clark's stepmother died, Bill
Gable (Clark's father) got lonesome, sold the farm and asked Clark to go with him to Oklahoma to see if they could strike it rich in the oil fields. They didn't, and Clark joined a traveling stock company, the trail of which lead him to Oregon, near starvation and the lumber business. The story of his rise to screen fame and of the two women who shared his life as wives before he met Carole Lombard is too familiar for retelling. It is sufficient to say that he never did anything in his life that took advantage of others for the sake of his own advancement.

I first met Clark several years ago when assigned to do a newspaper feature story on him. "To hell with talk-Gable said after the introduction. "If it hadn't been for you I'd be out shooting this afternoon. Why not come along with me, and you can write what you please tonight." So we climbed into Clark's car and headed out for the clay-pigeon range. We discovered that had a friend in common—the late "Captain Billy" Fawcett, a rugged vet-eran of the first World War who was a champion skeet-shooter. Gable talked about the fun he'd had that summer at the captain's place in northern Minnesota, and in between rounds of shooting kept his conversation strictly on the matter of guns and men who loved them.

Here was a man who earned $5,000 week, who spent his working hours with glamorous women like Jean Harlow, Joan Crawford and all the rest of the exciting stars of the day, interested only in people unknown to the public.

It struck me as odd that he seldom mentioned his wife, Carole Lombard, either in general conversations or in interviews. Later I learned that he believed that career wives were more likely to be happy wives than those who staved at home waiting for their husbands, and that there should be no connection between his career hers. In this way, Carole and Clark had the nearest approach to a normal life as any couple in Hollywood.

That this was true I found out in a simple observation when I visited them at their Encino ranch home in late November, the year before Carole's tragic plane crash. It was around ten in the morning. Gable showed up in his usual maroon dressing-gown and Carole appeared a few moments later in a paleblue housecoat. They had finished the decorating of their Christmas tree the night before, and packages were stacked knee-deep around the room. They explained that they liked Christmas and they darned well were going to prolong the event as long as pos-

I told Carole that I was planning to buy a dog. She laughed as she said, "Don't ask Clark's advice—he'll talk you into a nice, sensible hunting-dog. Get a silly one like Commissioner, to make your wife happy." Commissioner was the dachshund, a splendid red sausage animal with more phony dignity than a small-town justice of the peace. He was Carole's and gave the impression that he tolerated Clark around the place only for her sake.

On this particular morning California was enjoying one of its famous drizzles. We all went out to the barn, getting soaking wet on the way, where Clark showed off a brand-new calf and we spent the morning talking about farms a fellow would like to have some day when he could get out of the movie racket. At the time, Gable did not know that he was soon to be out of the movies or that his home was to be broken by the accident that cut short Carole's life as she was finishing her war-bond tour.

"There's only twenty acres here," he explained. "It's nice and as comfortable as you could want it and still be close to work, but what I want is a ranch so large that when hunting season comes all I have to do is pick up my gun, whistle for the dog and get going! It's the old routine—you're born on a farm. You get ambitious. You work hard, go to the big city and become a 'success.' Then you're really ambitious. You work like hell trying to get enough money so you can go back to the farm."

I know how much of the public feels about movie actors who turn soldier. They are naturally distrustful that such a man, devoting his life to playacting, can be competent when he's doing something grim and real. On the other hand, knowing him from an impartial point of view, I can say that Gable, who is not the typical actor, gives me a comfortable feeling. In my mind's eye I like to picture most of our fighting men as being men like Clark Gable. Calm men with their feet on the ground. Men who are slow to anger but efficient and quick to act when events demand it. Men who know that what they are fighting for has to do with the importance of hunting seasons to come, with a man's right to go out with his dog and bring back the limit. Men who want to get back to the simple diplomacy of live and let live.

As Bill Gable (Clark's dad) puts it, the happy day will be when the whole nasty show is over, the door swings wide and Clark calls, "Hey, Pa, what's for supper?"

The Swiss Windmill Weather Forecaster tells you the temperature—tells you if it's going to rain or snow or shine—predicts any weather change that's on the way—up to 24 hours in advance! The thermometer is guaranteed to be 100% accurate from 120° to 30° below zero. The amazing storm glass uses the same principle found in most expensive forecasters. This lovely "Swiss Windmill" Weather Forecaster is fashioned of handsome carved style Burrwood—a masterplece of craftsmanship—representing the colorful, rustic windmills of the Swiss landscape, with their weather-antiqued brown shingles, brightly gleaming red roof and latticed windmill blades... even the Swiss Alpine snow and the fir trees of the Alps are reproduced... with the quaint peasant clothes of the boy and girl shown in pleasing contrast to the flowers of the mountainside growing around the windmill steps. The "Swiss Windmill" adds a glowing, colorful, decorative note to any room in the bouse. As a weather prophet, you'll use it constantly! BE PREPARED FOR WEATHER CHANGES WITH YOUR "Home Weather Bureau." BE YOUR OWN WEATHER MAN!
