HOW JOLSON WON HIS GREATEST FIGHT!

HOW often you sense that people are looking at you, judging your beauty! Whether they glance at you guardedly, or turn to search your face quite openly, you feel instinctively that you are in a never-ending Beauty Contest.

In the flicker of an eyelid, a man—another woman—will appraise your looks. And your complexion, whether it is clear and softly youthful or tragically dull and drab, plays a vital part in the impression that you make.

Use Camay, the Soap of Beautiful Women. It is the soap that yields profuse, luxuriant, creamy-rich lather and is—at the same time—mild enough for the delicate feminine skin. The very first cake you try can definitely improve your skin.

THE "GOOD TASTE TREND" IS ALL TO CAMAY

In 1933 thousands and thousands of women changed to Camay. You, yourself, have probably noticed how Camay is fast displacing the former favorites among beauty soaps.

Yes—Camay looks, feels, and smells high-priced. And the amazing thing is that it actually costs you less than the soap you have been using! Get your supply of Camay today!

This girl possesses the disarming loveliness of a clear young skin. In the daily Beauty Contest she attracts the admiration of all who know her. A lovely skin can be a woman's greatest charm.

Camay is creamy-white, pure, and as delicate as a fine beauty soap should be. See Camay in its green and yellow wrapper, in Cellophane. An ideal complexion soap—fragrant and quick-lathering in the bath.

WHAT A FOOL SHE IS!

She Buys Grand Clothes . . .
 But her Teeth are Cloudy...her Gums Soft and she has "pink tooth brush"!

OF COURSE, this woman wears the smartest, most flattering clothes she can buy. But she should never forget that sparkling white teeth are far more important to her attractiveness and good-looks!

Today—just before you put on that pretty new fall frock—take a mirror close to the window, and look at your teeth and gums. Do your teeth look clean? Are your gums firm and healthy?

IPANA

For, if your gums are soft and tender, if they often leave a trace of "pink" upon your tooth brush—your teeth will probably look gray and dingy. Moreover, "pink tooth brush" may lead to a serious gum disorder: gingivitis, Vincent's disease, or even pyorrhea. The best teeth you have may be endangered.

Your gums must be kept firm

Because today's soft, creamy foods do not exercise your gums sufficiently, you need to use Ipana Tooth Paste with massage to keep them healthy.

Get a full-size tube of Ipana, and clean your teeth the regulation way, brushing well. Then, with a little extra Ipana on your brush or fingertip, massage your gums.

Do this today—tomorrow—every day—every time you clean your teeth. Ipana has ziratol in it, and this ziratol, with the massage, stimulates circulation through the gums. As your gums become healthier and harder, your teeth brighten. And you can forget all about "pink tooth brush."

The "Ipana Troubadours" are back! Every Wednesday Evening—9:00 p.m., E. S.T. WEA and Associated N.B.C. Stations

Let the spool-end be your guide

It is so easy to see what you expect to see. That is why first glances are so deceptive. You expect to see J. & P. Coats or Clark's O. N. T. on the end of a spool of thread you buy. But—don't trust your first glance. Look twice—and be sure! If that second look shows you the name Clark's or Coats on the spool-end—you know you're getting the thread you have always found dependable, as generations of women have before you. Don't risk a mistake. It pays to use good thread.

HERE is the second coast-to-coast poll of our RADIO STARS Board of Review. Look it over. We think you will be surprised.

Our alert critics all across America give you a cross-section opinion of every big-time program on the air. Lumping their votes together, we find the average, and post the result in our Five Star ratings.

For the month ending September 1st, only two programs won the supreme rank of five shining stars. Rudy Vallee's variety show clicked into first place with the highest average of all. Guy Lombardo with Burns and Allen were just a whisker behind. Between the two (one a CBS and the other an NBC attraction, by the way) they hog all the glory.

Interesting is David Ross. Poet's Gold program, jumping from three stars to four. Evidently, the country likes the syrupy rhythms of Columbia's Ross.

Equally interesting is the lowly position of the Voice of Experience. Two stars is the rating our scouts award his sexy advice-to-the-lovelorn talks. Despite this lowly showing, the Voice is reported to be drawing more mail than anyone else on the air. We know for a fact that he requires thirty people to help him handle it.

As for "one star" programs, to date there just aren't any. While individual critics have awarded single stinging slaps at air shows, in every case others have thought well enough to give a sufficiently higher rating to bring final average up to two stars or three.

- *** CHASE & SANBORN TEA WITH GEORGE OLSEN AND COMEDIAN (NBC).
- *** CHASE & SANBORN HOUR WITH RUBINOFF AND COMEDIAN (NBC).

WHO'S WHO on RADIO ROW

Are you up-to-date on your radio personalities?
Here are short pen sketches of many of your favorites

LORETTA LEE ♦♦♦ the soothing words to George Hall's CBS music are currently supplied by this comely New Orleans lass. Her father is a southern judge. In New York, Loretta lives with an aunt. 18 years old. Weighs 110. Stands five feet and five inches. Eyes are grey—hair, brown.

MILTON BERLE ♦♦♦ a 24-year-old wise guy bartering old gags. When Milt shifted from the bright lights of Broadway, the Old Gold people grabbed him. He's really just as likable as that big smile indicates. Who says youth doesn't have its day?

EDITH CALDWELL ♦♦♦ won a contest down in Birmingham a few weeks ago and got a trip to New York for a prize. Then the fun began. She attended a party where Ernie Holst heard her. Now she's his featured singer. 19 years old. Attended Howard College a couple of years. A Phi Mu.

JULIUS TANNEN ♦♦♦ is better known as "Chatterbox". Talked his way through five editions of Earl Carroll's Vanities. Looks more like a banker than an unruly master-without-ceremonies. Talks about anything whether he knows anything about his subject or not. Why not? He gets paid for it.

PEGGY HEALY AND AL DARY ♦♦♦ are Paul Whiteman's two youthful singers. Peggy's 19, blue-eyed and brunette. Five feet two and a half tall and weighs 101. Single, of course. Al's single, too. Stands five feet eight and a half. Weighs 146. Brown hair. Too bad a couple like this can't remedy that "single" tag.

RUSS COLUMBO ♦♦♦ is of baritone and movie fame. He's NBC'S challenge to Bing Crosby. Of Italian-American descent. Found New York cold when he came from California to try his lot at crashing radio. Twice disappointed in love. Soon to appear in the movie "Broadway Through a Keyhole"—Walter Winchell's yarn.

MIRIAM MILLER ♦♦♦ is "Babe", vocalist, from the Hotel New Yorker. She's 19, a soprano and, as you may judge, pretty. Barney Rapp found her singing in a small New England radio station a year ago, took her with him on his vaudeville tour as singer and now presents her over CBS.

DR. HERMAN N. BUNDESEN ♦♦♦ is a graduate of Northwestern U. Medical School. Served as a lieutenant in the Army medical corps three years. Was the first health commissioner in Chicago to be chosen from the department's ranks. Recalls that he started his career as a newsboy. His program is "Adventures in Health."

JEAN FAY ♦♦♦ hails from Louisville and has her southern drawl. Although from Kentucky, Jean is not a Colonel which, she thinks, is a distinction. Tall, blonde, sweet; and a full share of southern politeness. She's the new soloist heard with Mark Fisher and his orchestra playing from Chicago.

JOHN KELVIN ♦♦♦ has blue eyes Blond hair. An Irishman who's spent most of his life in New York. Is five feet six inches Married. Likes to walk nine or ten miles a day—and is still heavy in spite of it. Charm ing wit so characteristic of his native people He's the tenor, you know.

TAMARA ♦♦♦ is all the name this dark eyed Russian singer has. Sad love songs are her favorites on her NBC programs. Broadway, theatres and night clubs know her as a dancer and a singer who drew the crowds. She's chic, sleek, attractive, tall and slender.

GENE ARNOLD ♦♦♦ the interlocutor of the Sinclair Greater Minstrels has silvery brown hair and always a faint smile. Weighs 175. Is five feet eleven inches tall. Is very much married. Believes the audience should furnish the gags. Then he'll tell 'em.

IT'S WHISPERED THAT . . .

By PETER DIXON

- Kate Smith, when playing in "Honeymoon Lane," used to wave the hair of other girls in the show to make extra money.
- Arthur Tracy would have considered ten dollars a big wage for singing before Ed Wolfe—the manager who named him "The Street Singer"—started his exploitation.

- Morton Downey has a repertoire of songs he wouldn't dare sing on the air because the censors would object.
- Eddie Thorgersen, who is still living down the name of Thundering Thorgersen wants people to think he is blasé and sophisticated. He's just an overgrown kid.

- Graham McNamee can stand most criticism but he doesn't like references to his famous oration on California sunsets.
- George Olsen holds hands in public with Ethel Shutta, who is Mrs. Olsen.

- Phil Cook believes he can out-do the dialect dialogue of Amos 'n' Andy and one of his ambitions is to prove it.
- Jack Denny is not a Canadian as most people think. He merely made his reputation in Montreal.

- Paul Whiteman used to go for beer in a big way which may have accounted for a couple of those chins. But beer isn't on his list of favored beverages today.
- Leopold Stokowski once complained because a newspaper man sitting across from him in a train, was using a portable typewriter. Stokowski didn't know that the man was a newspaper fellow and that he was writing a column in which Stokowski's name was mentioned favorably.

- Jessica Dragonette saves her money and probably lives more simply than the lowest paid musician in the orchestra that plays her accompaniments.
- Phil Lord, who is better known as Seth Parker, has the reputation of being the shrewdest business man on the air.

- B. A. Rolfe defers to Mrs. Rolfe's business judgment. She okays the checks before he signs them.
- Jack Smart, the air actor who is Bert Lahr's stooge won't let Mrs. Smart cook spaghetti. Insists on doing it himself.

- Floyd Gibbons, the newspaper man who made good on the air, is cordially despised by many other newspaper men, who claim he is a good actor but a poor reporter.
- Frank Black is really the Revelers Quartet. Meaning that the fame of the Revelers doesn't depend on the four very good voices in the group so much as on the unusual musical arrangements prepared for them by Black.

- Frank Crumit is really so crazy about Julia Sander-son that he might be called a jealous husband. It's a kind of jealousy that no one resents though.
- Enric Madriguera, before he made a name for himself with his own orchestra, was a staff musician at NBC.

- May Singhi Breen and Peter De Rose telephone friends at three o'clock in the morning just as a gag. Some fun, heh?
- Rubinoff is not a good violinist according to musicians but thousands of people prefer his fiddling to that of Kreisler's.

- Vincent Lopez has very wavy hair, but he doesn't like it so he keeps it plastered down.
- Rudy Vallee, four years ago, predicted his popularity wouldn't last more than three years.

- Billy Hillpot changed his name to Billy Hughes because someone told him the latter name was more romantic.

Some odds and ends of information about sundry folks of radioland

HOW JOLSON CAME BACK

JUST a month ago I wrote a story for RADIO STARS' sister magazine, MODERN SCREEN, called "It's Ruby's Turn Now" and in it I told how the great Al Jolson had fallen from his high place and that the real star of the family was his little ex-chorus girl wife, Ruby Keeler.

When that story was written, it was as true as science. The mighty Jolson had been struck out by a girl with big, beautiful eyes and dancing feet. But in one breathless month Jolson has knocked my story into a cocked hat.

Ruby Keeler remains a great star. That part of the yarn still stands. But Al Jolson has made a come-back—a come-back so terrific, so spectacular and so dramatic that one trembles with the power of this new chapter in the annals of show business.

Let's hear the yarn from the very beginning.

You know what Al once was—the greatest entertainer of them all—the big-shot of Broadway and points west, the favorite son of the theatre-going public. All great show-men eventually find their popularity waning and Al might have made a graceful bow from the spotlight had it not been for the fact that the little chorus girl he married, suddenly, after her picture "Forty-Second Street" shot to stardom. Al, though he loved Ruby tenderly and devotedly, although he wanted to see her succeed more than anyone else, must have swallowed a bitter pill when he discovered that she was the one sought-after, her picture was the picture adorning the pages of newspapers and that he was just the has-been, Jolson.

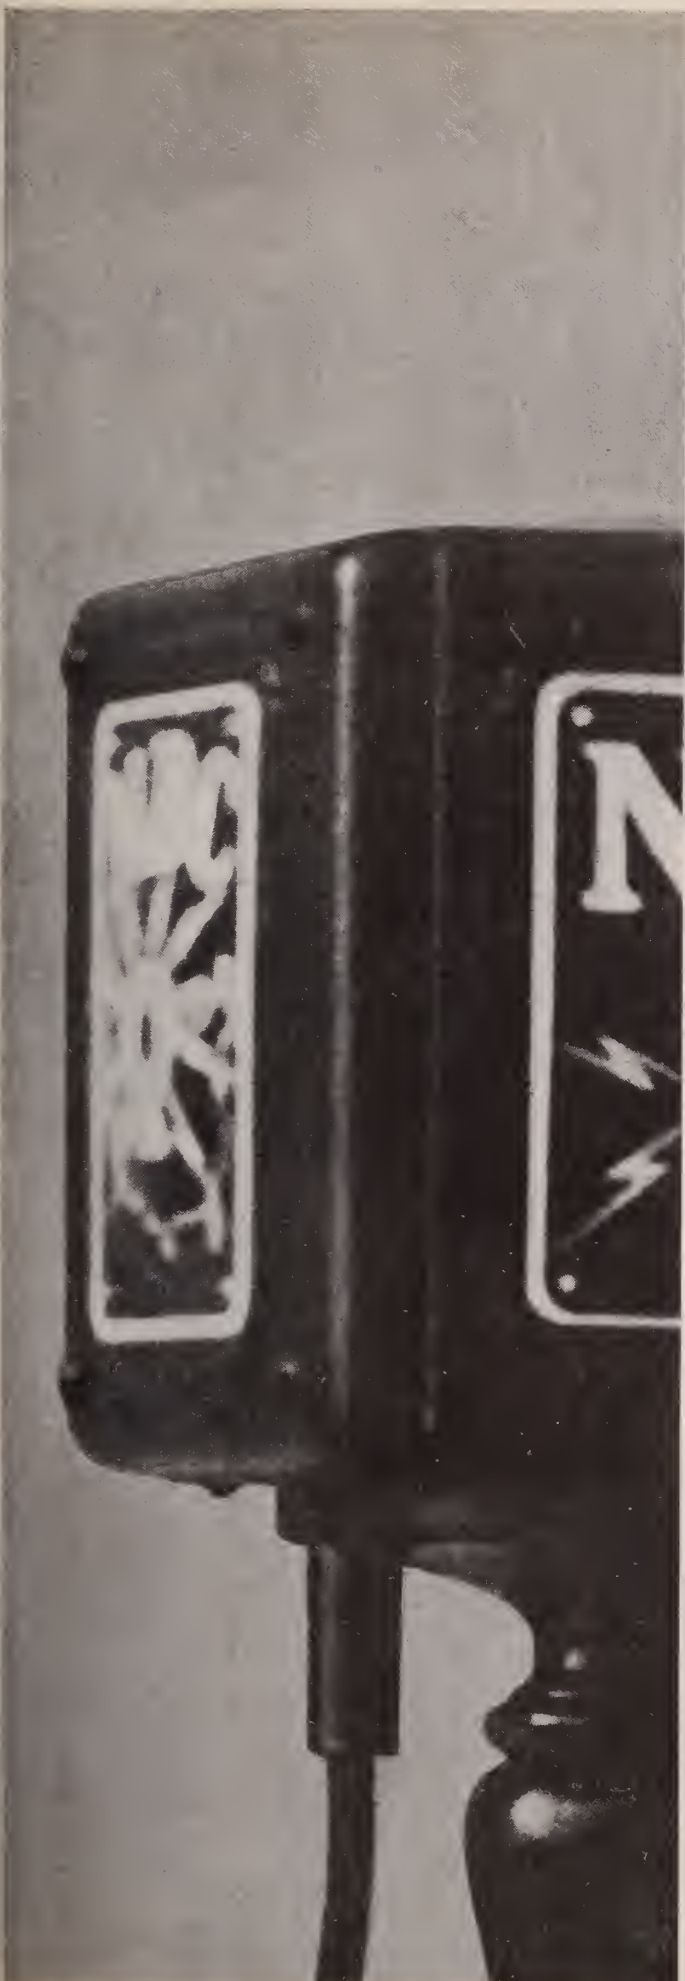

What made it worse was that his final entertainment fling had met with such defeat.

Last winter he signed a big radio contract at a large weekly salary. This was before "Forty-Second Street" had been released.

There was much advance ballyhoo about Jolson's radio broadcasting. The company who secured him thought they had made a real coup.

I remember the first night he broadcast. I heard him with a group of people who had all been Jolson fans. We

His first radio program was a dismal failure. His wife, Ruby Keeler's first picture was a tremendous success. But Al knew why he'd failed. And had the courage to try again were ready to give him a big welcome over the ether. And then, when he came on, our faces, which had been set for smiles, suddenly grew puzzled. We looked at each other and shook our heads.

By CAROLINE

ONE man said what all of us had been thinking, "Well, Jolson's done for. He's lost the old touch. Not so hot any more." And that was that.

Sadly, because we had remembered his once vigorous performances so vividly, we talked of other things.

Jolson, too, I learned later, realized that he had failed at that first broadcast. But instead of admitting defeat within himself, he railed at circumstances.

"My program was too cut and dried," he said. "They wouldn't let me do what I wanted to do. I could show 'em if I had the chance."

But everyone who heard him voice these sentiments thought it was just another fallen actor creating an alibi for himself. And when Al Jolson quit this program, people nodded wisely and said, "Sure, he quit—and just in time, too. He quit before he was asked to."

But Jolson really quit because of an ideal. He knew he had something to give the radio and he knew that this wasn't it, but in his disappointment he cried, "I'll never go on the radio again!"

And then it was that Ruby Keeler skyrocketed to success and Jolson became simply "Ruby Keeler's husband."

But Jolson isn't that kind of a guy. Inside him is an amount of energy so terrific that inactivity is poison to him. Besides, don't forget, he knew he had something to give.

One day he said, "My own life is a doggone dramatic story. Things actually happened to me that were much more exciting than anything a script writer could think up. There are climaxes in my life that would put any author of fiction to shame."

Apparently these words were heard by the right people for Jolson was approached for radio once more.

Acme

At first he said, "No." He was through with radio. The former humiliation had been too great. The program sponsors raised the salary ante.

"I'll do it," Jolson said, "if you'll let me do what I want to do, if I can dramatize my own life on the air."

Some people thought that was a good idea and some people didn't. The opinion was divided fifty-fifty, but they decided to let him have one chance.

When he appeared with Paul Whiteman on the two-hour Miracle Whip Salad Dressing program it was a make or break shot. "If Jolson goes over," everybody said. If Jolson went over indeed—and there was a time when just his name emblazoned in lights outside a theatre was enough to fill the biggest house in the world.

SO they gave Jolson one more chance and told him he could dramatize his own life.

His life! He had spoken truly when he said that no script writer could evolve a better plot than that concerning the poor, ignorant little Jewish boy, son of a strict rabbi. The boy wanted to sing, the father was alternately distressed and infuriated that a son of his would deliberately choose such a future. And between the two, stood the patient, loving mother.

One night, over the radio, one of the incidents in that early background was enacted. (Jolson plays himself and other actors take the various other characters.) The one slice of his life he gave concerned the time when his father learned that he was singing in a saloon. Wild with fury and chagrin, he took away the money the boy had made. Al's mother stepped in and, in her gentle way, poured oil upon the troubled family waters.

The dramatized story brought tears to the eyes. Jolson was right. It was quite as good as a fiction author could do and even more poignant when one remembered that it was the truth. And Jolson's voice, Jolson playing himself dished up the truth and put it before his audience.

But I'm getting ahead of my story.

Jolson went on the air that first night—the make or break night—suffering a hundred mixed emotions. If this didn't go over, he was through! He was being given the chance to do what he wanted to do. If he failed. . . . But somehow he was able to put the possibility of failure out of his mind, somehow he was able to stand before that microphone and again be the great Al Jolson. The power and the energy he had once had come back in a flood of emotion.

And the make or break chance made him.

Beginning over an eight station hook-up as an experiment, the Miracle Whip hour had now gone to forty stations and Jolson's life story goes on.

He is taking it bit by bit—his phenomenal success, his part in the first talking pictures, his discovery of little "Sonny Boy," his meeting with Ruby Keeler.

I WONDER if he will include his failures, too. I wonder if he will dramatize what it was like for a man as great as Jolson had been to see his wife become the real star of the family. I'm afraid he won't. I'm afraid that that is all too close and too personal and would tear his heart too much.

For no matter what Jolson says, his heart must have been torn during those days.

But now there are no longer any humiliations.

The great Jolson is back. He stands on his own two feet again beside his star-wife, Ruby Keeler.

It wasn't that Al begrudged Ruby her success. And Ruby insists that she is Mrs. Al Jolson first — and Ruby Keeler second. It was just that — well, if you had been the world's greatest entertainer, you would understand.

A NEW SLANT ON CROSBY

Meet Bing and Dixie with the newest member of the Crooning Crosby family—little Gary Evans, named for Gary Cooper. With his line-up of friends and relatives, it looks as if the young man couldn't escape fame if he wanted to, doesn't it?

Here's a truly revealing away-from-the-mike snapshot of Croonin' Bing

By HELEN HOVER

IT'S strange about Bing Crosby. It really is. His appeal on the air is to women. No doubt about it. He sings those sleepy love songs to them, and most of his fan mail comes from love-sick girls who look upon him as Heaven's gift to radio.

And by all the laws of nature, men shouldn't like him. Men seldom do like ladies' men. And yet—look! He came to New York from California about two years ago, a comparative stranger, and joined the Friars' Club, an exclusive theatrical organization. The men were sure they weren't going to like this California newcomer. He was a crooner. Stamped and labelled. Wasn't that enough?

Then they met Bing. Two months later, the boys at the club tendered him a testimonial dinner.

Now he's rated one of the most popular men in the organization. A regular fellow with glad hand and a slap on the back for everyone. A wise-cracking, happy-go-lucky chap. A man among men. And that can't be said for every ladies' man.

But there's more than that cheerful, good-natured "Hi ya, boy" attitude that is responsible for Bing's popularity among men.

Here's a story that Bing doesn't want known. But it's such a grand gesture and reveals so much about the man, that I'm going to risk telling it.

Times being what they are, several of the Friars have been unable to pay their dues. That would mean that they would have to leave their club. In some way, Crosby found out about it, and paid up the dues of three of these unfortunate members for two years. But here's the swell side of it. No one, not even the men who were the beneficiaries of this act, knows of it. Only one man was let in on it, the treasurer of the club. And he told me the story in a burst of admiration for Crosby. This would be a "Good Samaritan" act for any one else, but coming from Crosby it's just another act of good fellowship.

And then, in addition to that—and I think this act of Bing's was even more admirable—he posted a $2000 bond guarantee which made it possible for other Friars to pay up their dues in whatever small amounts they could spare. And they may take as long as they need to work off the debt. All arrangements, of course, were secret. The news came to the members simply as a formal announcement from the Club. And if the members cannot complete their payments for one reason or another, the loss—you've guessed it—will be Bing's.

Don't you see, he doesn't believe there's anything heroic in lending a helping hand. He's been broke and hungry himself, and now that he's riding the crest of the wave, it's the most natural thing in the world for him to tide a few fellows over until they get the breaks.

HE'S generous to a fault. He's lent hundreds of dollars to hard-pressed friends, and won't accept a penny in return until he's sure that the man is firmly on his feet again. I know for a fact that he's returned the money that two friends offered to repay him, because he felt that they could ill afford it. (Continued on page 88) swift moving times in which we live than the background of a present-day Presidential broadcast. The average listener doubtlessly pictures the President alone in the cool of his comfortable study, quietly reading into a microphone his message to the nation.

But, if you were with the writer that terrifically humid night he was invited to watch the President broadcast, you most certainly would have been surprised at the tense drama enacted in a hot little room in the basement of the White House, with the nation's Chief the central figure.

WE meet in the executive quarters of the mansion and are escorted to the President's living quarters by the Chief of Staff of White House secret service men. We are taken to the diplomatic reception room. It is oval in shape and about the size of an ordinary living-room. Usually one of the stateliest rooms in the White House, it has been converted into a combination radio and movie studio.

The room is literally divided into four arcs. One contains the radio engineers and announcers. Another is occupied by newsreel apparatus and cameramen. The third arc contains the few visitors present for the broadcast. The fourth, and most important, contains the desk from which the President broadcasts.

Radio wires snake their way into the room from all of the four doors. Five huge kleig lights are centered on the President's desk. It is similar to most desks, except that it has large holes bored in the top to accommodate wires to the microphones. There are five of these mikes, two for the National Broadcasting Company, and two for the Columbia Broadcasting System and one for the sound movies.

It is an unusual setting for a broadcast, for the room is full of relics of another day. There are six heavily framed oil paintings on the wall. The inscriptions beneath them identify them as the likenesses of Mrs. John Tyler, Mrs. James Polk, Presidents Arthur, Garfield, and McKinley and that stern warrior, Zachary Taylor.

In one corner there is a bust of a full-faced gentleman who might have been General Burnside. A wilted panama hat rests on his head, placed (Continued on page 60)

THE ROMANCE OF JANE and DON

By JOHN SKINNER

"Can two people with careers marry, and remain happy without one sacrificing his work to help the other?" Don and Jane didn't know—but they took a chance.

SO full of hate and love, vicissitudes and victories, disenchantment and glamor, have been the lives, loves and careers of Jane Froman and Don Ross, that you might think they were creatures of a romantic writer's imagination.

But this soprano and baritone of radio, whose talents have so recently won the favor of thousands of Columbia listeners, are people as real as you and I.

I wish I could put them back into the novel where the fascination of their lives apart and together seems to belong. It is a story which has no equal in the world of radio. It is the story of what can happen to two young singers who leave the comparative security of their positions in Middle Western radio stations to come to New York on a gamble for greater fame and its golden reward.

It is the answer to that question which puzzles every one of us:

"Can two people with careers marry and remain happy without one sacrificing his work to help the other?"

Don and Jane didn't know, but they took a chance. Their whole glorious battle for stardom has been marked by the advances they made, when, in the face of seemingly certain defeat, they dared to take a chance.

WHAT was there about this tall, husky Ross lad which gave him the courage to try what others had tried and failed? Was it the fact that he was descended from the famous Scottish chieftain, Rob Roy; from Betsy Ross, who made the first American flag? Was it that he'd taken chances on the football fields of Ohio State University, and won? Or was it that, despite the disapproval of his minister father, he held to his determination through lean and adventurous years to be a singer? Perhaps it was something of all of these.

Jane Froman and Don Ross began by detesting each other. Each thought the other was conceited. Well, neither of them is. But they are greatly alike in many ways. And these similarities have made their love stronger and truer as time has passed Jane's popularity has zoomed like a skyrocket. She's on the Linit, Frigidaire and King's programs. She does movie shorts. Don is just about the whole Pontiac program. Both she and Don will be in the Follies this year. (Right) The two of them in Columbia, Missouri.

And Jane, Jane who'd been reared in a comfortable home in the city of Columbia, Missouri, where her father had been mayor, who was she to give up the promise of a life of ease to face the dismaying odds which are against those who choose such a profession? To the local swains who sought her hand, she was a lithe, pretty creature who could swing a brassie or pour tea with the necessary grace—a girl who'd make a perfect wife. They didn't see in her refusals to their proposals a determination to do what not every woman desires—to accomplish great things, to be somebody in this world.

It seems incredible in the light of later circumstances that Jane and Don could have hated each other as they did when they both were entertaining at WLW in Cincinnati.

The mutually uncompromising detestation began the evening Don was lounging in a WLW reception room, listening to the particularly sweet and appealing soprano voice issuing from the loudspeaker. He let his mind ponder on visions of the splendid beauty the owner of such a voice should possess. He was not disappointed when he saw Jane come from the studio at the end of a program.

A studio official introduced them.

"How do you do," she said in a manner which made Don feel as though she'd dashed a glass of ice water in his face.

"I think you have the loveliest (Continued on page 94)

TO be a broadcaster of news as it's made, you need wit as keen as a rapier, nerves as tough as steel and a spirit as gallantly adventuresome as a D'Artagnan's.

By the fast thinking of Ted Husing, and other members of the Columbia Broadcasting System, news of the unfortunate crash of Amy and Jim Mollison was brought to you hours before the newspaper presses roared out the story of their transatlantic flight and its nearly fatal ending. Did you hear it?

And do you remember the broadcast of the Los Angeles earthquake? Then you heard Doug Douglas as he stood in the tower of a crazily rocking building, one eye on the destruction he described, the other on the two-ton clock pendulum which swayed menacingly above him.

Do you recall the broadcast of the riot and holocaust in that Ohio penitentiary? Two heroes of radio dared fire and bullets then.

Were you one of the listeners who thrilled to the announcers as they talked from submarine and diving bell? They never knew what moment the ocean might close them in the fastness of Davy Jones' locker.

Let's speed to the Floyd Bennett Airport just outside New York City, where a restless crowd awaits the arrival of the daring Mollisons. Around a microphone are grouped Elinor Smith, Ted Husing, his observer, Les Quailey, and Columbia's announcer-pilot, Swanee Taylor.

They are waiting tensely for word from New York headquarters to which all the newsgathering agencies available along the New England coast are sending their reports. Rumors whet the world's appetite. It's starving for real news. It wants thrills. Radio provides 'em.

"Plane thought to be Mollison's seen flying low over the airport just a few minutes ago," a network station flashes over its private line to Columbia.

"Can you confirm that?" snaps back headquarters.

"No," flashes the station.

More rumors tumble. A big cabin monoplane carrying Don Ball, announcer and radio equipment, is cruising through the dusk along the New England coast, seeking the transatlantic flyer's plane. If they find it, they'll accompany it back to New York, sending out a description for rebroadcasting as they fly.

The men at Floyd Bennett field receive orders to go on the air in an hour. The Mollisons have been reported over Providence, Rhode Island, and in close to sixty minutes they should be landing in New York. Confidently Husing and the others begin broadcasting. On and on they talk, but no sight of the flyers. Just rumors. The studio's broadcasts are resumed until a definite report of the English plane can be obtained.

The tenseness at the airport increases every minute. At 10:17 in the evening they suddenly learn that there's no studio program for that period and, totally unprepared, they go back on the air. All they have to tell the audience is the conflicting rumors which pile in on them.

Headquarters is in telephonic communication with the manager of the Bridgeport airport. He's telling them that a plane is circling overhead. He thinks it's the Mollisons.

"My God, they've crashed!" He hangs up.

It's confirmed shortly after that it was the Mollisons

So that they may be able to give you the news while it is happening who crashed, and the intelligence is flashed to Floyd Bennett field. Husing gives orders as fast as a city editor at word of a five-alarm fire. He doesn't even go off the air, and the listeners have a chance to hear how the radio people get the news.

"Don Ball," he calls to the announcer cruising through the skies some miles away. "Don Ball, if you can hear me, come back at once to the airport."

He turns to Swanee Taylor. The pilot, anticipating his order, says, "I'll get the Travelair's tanks filled up and we'll take off right away."

Ball's huge plane roars down the runway to a stop. He has to go to Newark for special fuel, so he can't go at once to Bridgeport. In a surprisingly few minutes, Ted has finished giving orders and has concluded the broadcast. With Quailey and Taylor, he climbs into the plane and in less than a minute, they are streaking through the night for Bridgeport.

Meanwhile, Joe Lopez, announcer for Columbia's Bridgeport station, WICC, is bringing to Columbia listeners, an eyewitness' account of the crack-up.

In thirty-six minutes, Husing's plane is circling over the airport. The night is foggy and in the confusion, the landing field is insufficiently lighted. They can't see the windsock. A plane, apparently more familiar with the field, sideslips into a crosswind landing. Swanee follows and sees he can't make it. He zooms up for another try and comes down wind straight into the glare of floodlights. Their hearts skip several beats as they see the general rushing past them. They're down — safe. No time to think of that. They hurry past the mile-long jam of automobiles and find a car which speeds them to the hospital where the injured Mollisons are lying. They have just a few minutes before the eastern network goes off for the night. They manage to put on a brief broadcast by the superintendent of the hospital.

The anxious world learns that the Mollisons are not seriously injured. Through quick thinking and disregard for personal safety, radio newsmen have scored a scoop.

Let's make a fast transcontinental hop to California. We are in the building of KHJ, Los Angeles, on the 11th of last March. Through the studio runs the usual hum of activity. Suddenly the building pitches and shudders like a foundering liner. Knife-like splinters of glass and masses of brick crash down. Trained to emergencies, the staff acts with swift intelligence. Through the roar of destruction, the telegraph instruments chatter steadily on. Columbia headquarters in New York wants information and a network broadcast.

KHJ is going strong. Bracing himself in a dizzily rocking tower of his building, Doug Douglas of the Los Angeles Times reports for the station. Above him gyrates insanely the menacing pendulum. He measures the distance to the door, wondering if he can escape, if it comes hurtling down. He stays beside the microphone nine and one-half hours.

The scene shifts to KFOX, Long Beach. The station's transmitters are flinging far and wide the tale of the shuddering earth which wreaks destruction. Wire lines break. Engineers work in a barrage of stone and glass and repair them. KFOX stays on the air.

Back to KHJ. A dramatic cast is in the studio. It seems like days since the first shock. It has been but a few hours. They are tired, dirty, hungry, thirsty. Some wear bandages. But their hastily prepared dramatization of the earthquake goes on the air even as the temblors shake the city.

Dodging huge chunks of falling walls, the mobile transmitter units of KFI and KHJ move along the streets, their broadcasts being re-transmitted to all parts of the country.

Fear of injury did not stop them. They disregarded the threat of death.

MILTON CROSS' ORDEAL...

By EDWARD R. SAMMIS

The greatest sorrow of his life could not keep this man from the faithful performance of his duty

Milton Cross and his little daughter, Lillian, during one of the many happy moments they shared together. Moments that will never be again—for Lillian died a few months ago. During her long illness, no one at NBC except one good friend knew what Cross was suffering.

OF all the NBC announcers, big Milton J. Cross, a veteran at thirty-six, is the most amiable and easy-going, the shyest and most reticent.

A prince of a fellow, Milt Cross. And a crack announcer.

You may have heard him on the symphonic programs, in winter when grand opera was on the air, or on a Sunday morning announcing the children's hour.

Probably you did not know that during the past few months while his voice was coming to you, smooth and assuring and calm, Milt Cross was undergoing just about the hardest ordeal that anyone can be called upon to face.

He was fighting in vain to save the life of his only child, Lillian, eight years old.

Milt Cross is a man of simple tastes. He loves two things: his job as an announcer and his resulting association with music, and his home.

He could have gone on to a bigger job had he chosen. Others of his contemporaries, less versed in all branches of radio than he, have progressed to become highly paid executives. But he liked music, he liked announcing. And he preferred to stay with them.

Besides, radio executives are slaves to the clock. Theirs is a twenty-four hour job. And Milt Cross loved his home too well to be willing to spend so much time away from it.

He has been married a good many years now. His wife, who is also named Lillian, used to play the organ at a Fifth Avenue church, on Sunday mornings, where he sang in the choir. They were introduced, started going together and before many months they were married.

NOT long after that, Cross and his wife were visiting some friends in New Jersey one night. They were listening to the newly opened station WJZ in Newark and the friends thought it would be fun if they could hear someone they knew on the air. So they suggested that Cross, who was gaining quite a reputation as a singer at that time, go up to the station and offer to sing. Cross, who had already become interested in (Continued on page 82)

BECAUSE there was a heavy snow on July 22, Columbia had to postpone one of its broadcasts. Yes, that's straight. You see the snow was on Mount Hood, 11,000 foot peak in Oregon, and all trails were impassable.

The program postponed was the American Legion Mount Hood climb.

NINO MARTINI, CBS tenor and Vincent Sorey, conductor of Columbia's Gauchos, turned news commentators last July. By a curious chain of circumstances, they found themselves unexpectedly announcing to Europe and parts of Asia the detailed progress of General Balbo's flying armada as it raced from Montreal to Chicago.

Columbia was making tests for a short wave broadcast to Italy. It was several hours before the actual broadcast was to start. But no sooner had the connections been made between Italy and America than Balbo and his companions came roaring out of a clear sky. What was there left to do but broadcast the affair? Roy Wilson, production man, couldn't speak Italian. Both Nino and Sorey could. So the next few minutes found the two musicians turned commentators, telling their native Italy all about Balbo's flight.

John Henry—Black River Giant—is CBS's most exciting show . . . Rich in Negro legend and the rousing acting of a Negro cast, it wins RADIO STAR'S November award "For Distinguished Service"

RADIO has been called an art, a science, and a damned nuisance. Actually, it is all those things; at times more of a nuisance than an art, and at other times more of an art than a nuisance. But this we all know: it is apt to follow trends. Radio producers are inclined to imitate, to follow like sheep the successful example of a reigning radio sensation. Which produces dullness and monotony. To encourage those who give us new entertainment forms, or to reward those whose radio work is of outstanding excellence, RADIO STARS has established a monthly award to be given "For Distinguished Service" to radio entertainment. This month we salute "John Henry—Black River Giant," and Miss Geraldine Garrick, director and co-adapter of the plays; and the all-Negro cast of Juano Hernandez, Jack McDowell, Emmett Lampkin, Rose McClendon, Ralph Ransom, Richard Huey, Maurice Ellis, Service Bell and Georgia Burke. A vital, thrilling and superbly produced program.

IT PAYS TO BE NATURAL

By MAYBELLE AUSTEN

SMILIN' Ed McConnell, one of the air's greatest one-man shows, is the only performer I ever heard of who was actually shanghaied into radio. And thereby hangs a tale.

Back in 1921, a prodigal son mustered out after the Big Scrap, Ed found himself back home in Atlanta Georgia, with time hanging heavy on his hands. So-o-o-o-o he and a friend decided one evening to take a look at what was then a novelty, a broadcasting station.

Accordingly, they wended their way to WSB, the Atlanta Journal station. Upon arriving there, they found the program director pacing the floor, literally tearing his hair.

"Anythin' wrong?" queried the visitors.

"Plenty," groaned the distracted P. D. "I had an act all scheduled for this spot and they've stood me up. An I sunk!"

"What kind of an act was it?" asked Ed's pal.

"Songs!" raved the director. "Songs and a piano."

"Songs! What are you worryin' about? This guy with me is Preacher McConnell's boy, Ed," jerking his thumb in Ed's direction excitedly.

"You've heard him sing. Why don't you put him on. He's a singin' fool. He'll help you out."

Radio fans from Maine to California love him because—like them—Smilin' Ed McConnell is, first of all, "just folks"

"A what?"

"You heard me. A singin' fool. How about it?" he said turning to Ed.

"Yes, Mr. McConnell, how about it?"

"Well," drawled Ed, "it's all right with me. I used to be purty good at that sort o' thing. Where's the piano, and when do I start?"

"In five minutes," snapped the director, mopping his forehead as he led the way into the studio. "I hope this isn't going to be too terrible, but anything's better than nothing."

Ed calmly removed his coat, struck a note on the piano, and when given the signal that he was on the air, took off.

All unconcerned, he played and sang, sang the old songs and familiar hymns which he had learned as a boy and which everybody loves. He was just himself—a rural—and he clicked! The phones began to ring. People were asking who he was. The next morning there were letters. They came from people who remembered him as a boy singing in the church choir, from people who knew his father, from people who had never heard of him.

Their enthusiasm was unbounded. This was what they wanted. Radio hadn't as yet given them this homespun type of entertainment which they craved. When were they going to hear more? And so on. It seemed to the overwhelmed officials of WSB that the entire countryside had armed itself with pen and ink, to voice its approval of this program innovation. It was a stampede.

The director, a trifle bewildered by this unexpected avalanche, sent for Smilin' Ed. He offered him a regular sustaining program, and having nothing to lose, Ed accepted. He worked without salary for three years, supporting himself in various ways. But during that time he built up an audience of many firm friends.

ED MCCONNELL has seen life as it is lived in the quiet simplicity of the little parsonage in Atlanta, which was his birthplace. He has known the stench of the stockyards of Chicago, where he got his first professional job. He has run the gamut from church to cabaret, and from revival meetings to radio, and through it all has run like a golden thread the well-assimilated lessons in honesty and the principles of genuine humanity which he learned from a God-fearing father and mother.

Ed's father, Lincoln McConnell, was one of America's famous preachers. Naturally enough, his parents hoped their son would follow in his (Continued on page 74)

tHE time my radio was out of order, I felt that my best friend had died."

It was Rita N. talking to me. She is a little old lady who sits in a rocking chair all day, patiently knitting dainty sweaters. Rita is blind.

To so many of us, radio is an accepted thing. I don't mean this as a rebuke. A gay song, a fetching dance tune, and we twist the dial again to another favorite. Radio is entertaining. No doubt of that. It's educational. And I've even heard it vaguely referred to as "a necessity."

Well, I'll tell you to whom radio is a necessity. To Rita and Georgia W. and Joe K., known otherwise by a number. And to thousands of others shut in by a dark wall of sickness, or a very real one of gray stones and bars. I cannot mention their full names because they have asked me not to. But I want you to know them, anyway. To them, radio is more than entertainment, more than educational. It's a definite part of life. The link that connects their lives with those of their fellow beings.

I was in the workroom of the Lighthouse, an industrial home for the blind in New York City. There were rows of benches with girls and women of all ages, sitting quietly working—weaving, sewing towels, knitting. Fingers were prodding needles in and out with the same steady monotony. From morning till night, these women who live in a world of shadow sit on their benches and do their tasks. But there is a smile on the face of each. Not of resigned despair. But an eager, animated smile that threatens to break into a laugh any minute. The Funny-boners have just said something funny.

You see, the radio is on all the time, and it is that which makes their work bearable, and their life more natural. I paused besides Georgia W., a sweet-faced young girl.

Those physically and mentally sick. Those behind iron bars. The sightless ones. Radio is their savior

OF THE WOMEN NEEDED!

WHAT does the radio mean to you, Georgia?"
"Oh, it's my life," she answered without thinking twice. "The day seems so short when it's on, and the work is so pleasant. I remember one day the radio was being repaired, and we were all so fidgety and restless time just dragged, and we were way behind with our work."

"And your favorite?"

"My favorite?" A pause. "Well, I can safely say that the favorite of all the girls here is 'The Voice of Experience.' I guess it's because we can identify ourselves so closely with him. There seems to be a bond of sympathy between him and the rest of us."

But Mrs. Partridge, the publicity director of the Light-house, had something even more interesting to tell.

"To the blind, radio is their only contact with the outside world. You see, there is no newspaper printed in Braille. In order to get the news, therefore, someone would have to skim over the paper for them. Besides making them dependent on someone—a thing they don't like—it was never satisfactory. But the radio now is their daily newspaper. It keeps them up on what is happening around them, and they feel a part of the outside world. Edwin C. Hill, Boake Carter, Floyd Gibbons and all the other news commentators are the news reporters for the blind.

"This example may bring home sharply just what radio has done for the blind. This year, when the election campaign was conducted more or less on the air, more blind people voted than ever before. Our script class was crowded with those who wanted to learn how to write their names on the registry. They took an active interest in the world affairs, they became political minded, and that great barrier which kept them from taking part in the affairs of the day, was obliterated by the radio." Then there is Abigail K.

Abigail truly lives in a world of darkness. Besides being blind, she is so ill that she must lie flat on her back all day long. The doctors had tried to breathe some spark of happiness into her. But they had failed to find that something which would make her come out of her brooding, pain-wracked shell. When the nurses tried to move her, she would moan in pain. In fact, more than once, a sedative had to be administered.

But Abigail doesn't moan any more. She's got her radio. She is so enraptured by it, so amazed at this new world it brings to her bedside, that she forgets she is Abigail K., the blind, the sick. Bit by bit, she is gradually taking an interest in life. The prone, ailing, almost inanimate figure is now an eager woman whose enthusiasm has been inspired by the fascinating world her earphones have brought.

"HOW is Milton Cross?" she asked me. "When Milton Cross broke down in the middle of an announcement and told us that his daughter had died, I cried as though it had been my own little girl."

Now let me tell you about Catherine. Catherine had always been regarded as a dull, slow-witted person. Sightless and slow-moving, she seldom spoke to anyone. Last Christmas, a kindly man offered to place a radio in the room of each inmate who wanted one. Everyone responded happily.

Catherine came to the superintendent. "Please, Miss, I want a radio, too."

But Catherine was forgotten. With a slow mind like hers, they reasoned, she probably wouldn't be able to appreciate it. Better save it for some of the others.

A few days later, Catherine knocked on the door again. "Please, Miss, my radio. When will I have it?"

At last they installed one in her room, too. And now a remarkable change has come over Catherine. She isn't the same sluggish person. She is talkative and gay. She joins the other folks and will discuss current topics. The nurses realize now that Catherine wasn't stupid, but her life was barren and her mind had no way of being developed. The radio has done wonders to open up her shallow little world into a fuller, more active one. She is no longer hedged in alone with her thoughts to make her bitter and lonely. As she told me, "My life was a void before radio."

At Manhattan's famous Bellevue Hospital, the staff is fully aware of the blessings of radio. They've installed them in every ward. In some wards, they have what is known as "radio pillows."

MAY S. loves the radio so that she's brought her own into the hospital with her. So far, that radio and she have been there over three years. May is a beautiful young girl. Her skin is clear and almost alabaster, and there is a becoming color on her cheeks. But as you look at her closely, you notice that her skin is too marble white, that flush on her cheeks looks too artificial and every once in a while May's slight form is doubled up in a terrible fit of coughing. Then you learn that too many dates and too many parties have weakened May and made her susceptible to the dread disease she inherited. But her love of parties and good times still lingers.

"You've no idea," she confided, "what that radio means to me. On Saturday nights, in particular. That was the longest night of all for me. I got to thinking of the good times I was missing, and I'd get so blue and feel so forlorn, I'd cry myself to sleep. But now the radio has made it bearable. Enjoyable, I should say. I listen to Guy Lombardo and all the orchestras on Saturday night, and shut my eyes and picture myself dancing to their music the way I used to. I hum the tunes and soon feel like my old self again."

Many doctors are calling on radio to help them. Here is an interesting story one told.

"A woman patient had been taken to the operating room. The surgeon was called away, just before the operation, on an emergency call. Now, the most trying moments for a patient are those just before he or she is to undergo an operation. Nerves are jangling. The seconds drag. The heart flutters. This woman was no exception. Something had to be done to quiet her. The nurse applied some earphones and told her to listen to some music. She closed her eyes and remained at ease. When the surgeon returned he found her in a most satisfactory condition to undergo the operation."

WHICH brings me to Rose's story. Rose is in a public hospital on Ward's Island, for the mentally sick. She is a young, attractive girl with a far-away look in her eyes and a petulant mouth. There is nothing

SHUT-IN

I cannot go into the world
To shore its life as others do.
My little flog of strength is furled,
Earth's pageantry I cannot view,
But as upon my bed I lie
Or sit within my easy chair
A thing of wires and tubes, close by,
Brings beauty to me on the air.

I hear the voices of the great—
Statesmen and potentates and kings—
I cease to fret about my fate
As unto me an artist sings.
Within my little room there come
The tramp of soldiers far away,
The sound of bugle and of drum;
The stirring games our champions play.

I cannot see it, but I know
What's done upon life's bottle line;
Into my room there come and go
The gifts of all the great and fine.
Now by the magic of the air
Come friends I've made I'll never see
Who comfort me in my despair
And they are very real to me.

I've but to turn the dial around
And my small room is filled with song
Or wisdom, tender and profound,
Which shorten, time once bleak and long.
And only one like me, struck low
And shut from all earth's changing scenes
Can ever sense or ever know
How much the thing called "radio" means.

WHAT KIND OF A

Margaret and Paul Whiteman. She was Margaret Livingston, you know, of the movies. For her, Paul lost a hundred pounds. And for him—well, she'd do most anything in the world.

HUSBAND IS PAUL?

Is he sweet and thoughtful? Or temperamental and grouchy?
Is he untidy—or the opposite? What does he like to talk about? What are his faults? Ask Margaret Livingston!

PAUL WHITEMAN'S an extraordinary husband. There's no question that he's in love with his wife, but his marital life is an unceasing flow of startling contradictions. You know yourself that love alone isn't sufficient to make a man a perfect spouse. What kind of a husband is Paul, anyhow?

You're going to have an opportunity to judge for yourself right now. Margaret Livingston has consented to reveal his marital shortcomings and virtues, for RADIO STARS. Margaret ought to know. She's his wife. She's the beautiful actress for the love of whom Paul, at considerable sacrifice, rid himself of some hundred pounds of excess orchestra leader, which was not easy!

You read about it, perhaps, in her book, "Whiteman's Burden." If you didn't, let's take a moment to look back four years when Paul's movie, "The King of Jazz," was making the rounds of the local picture houses. There were 315 pounds of the maestro who met the slender, determined little actress in Hollywood and fell immediately and thoroughly in love with her.

Imagine arising one morning, hopelessly in love, looking in the mirror and seeing some hundred extra pounds of decidedly unromantic weight. Even before Margaret told him so frankly, Paul knew that those rolls of fat stood as the seemingly impassable barrier he'd have to smash to gain the highway to her heart. He was a victim of the appetite to which he'd been such a slave. His own jolly, plump figure suddenly loomed up, a menacing threat to his happiness. It was not a moment for idle romancing, it was a time for acting decisively to assure his own peace of mind.

WHAT do you think happens to a man who deliberately loses one hundred pounds? Does it affect his health, his mental well-being? Does it make him touchy, hard to get along with? Margaret didn't know, but she took a chance. He'd kept his part of the bargain, she'd keep hers. He had failed before in the business of marriage. She knew that. But she was willing to take a chance with the man who adored her so.

Now that they're married, what kind of a life do they lead? Let's see.

Would most husbands, for instance, act grouchy in the morning if they arose day after day after having had but five hours sleep? That's all Paul usually gets, but he's not grouchy—not exactly. You just can't get a word out of him until he's bathed (he doesn't sing in the tub), shaved, dressed and had two cups of coffee.

What a change the moment that second cup is drained! Suddenly he bubbles over with ideas and plans with all the exuberance of a boy who's just been presented with a new Meccano set. He starts talking. . . .

Margaret sits by and asks dumb questions—she says herself they're dumb—and Paul loves it. He says her lack of pretense is refreshing. She can't help him a bit when it comes to his music. He likes that. Too many people give him superfluous advice about conducting, anyhow. The after-coffee conversation might last five minutes, perhaps an hour, and then the debonair conductor disappears for the rest of the day. She is not to see him for twelve or fourteen hours when, like as not, they will renew their companionship over a late supper in a night club.

A radio writer once remarked that he always has the peculiar feeling that Paul even sleeps in his evening clothes. It's not quite as bad as that, but he certainly is a fastidious dresser. His fancy for fine clothes is one of the great tribulations of Mrs. Whiteman's life. The moment he enters a fashionable clothier's establishment, he throws money about with all the abandon you or I might display in a five and ten cent store.

JUST the other day he took his wife into a shop on New York's Fifth Avenue. He wanted another hat to add to his collection. At the counter they met Mrs. Rube Goldberg.

"Oh dear," complained the cartoonist's wife, "I wish I could drag Rube in here to get a new hat."

"New hat!" Margaret sighed. "Paul's just bought six."

If you think Mrs. Whiteman ever has any success in curbing her husband's propensities for buying clothes, you should have a look at his wardrobe. When they returned from Hollywood recently, he brought with him twenty-one trunkfuls of clothes. Imagine it! It's enough of a struggle for the ordinary human being to keep track of just one trunk. Hark back to your own troubles with trunks—jumping on their lids to close them; snapping their locks only to learn the keys are inside; keeping track of the baggage checks—then multiply all that by twenty-one.

This nightmare of responsibility pursued Mrs. Whiteman so relentlessly across the continent that she finally insisted that Paul part with nine of them. It helped just about as much as trying to bale out the bathtub with a teaspoon. What happens when a man with some twenty-five suits, a hundred shirts and a thousand ties and a temperament like Whiteman's, starts dressing? Nicely pressed clothes are flung on the bed, starched shirts lie around like a jumbled deck of cards, ties are draped over chairs and door- (Continued on page 61)

IS LOVE A LAUGHING MATTER?

By HOPE

IS humor a help in marriage? Do you use your comedy in your love life, if any?"

Those are the questions we asked these star clowns of the air. And here are the answers:

"Oh, yes," said Ed Wynn. "Yes, indeed. Humor should have a prenatal influence on every child."

"It has made a perfect husband of Nat," said Gracie Allen, referring to the other half of Burns and Allen.

"The most vital bond between a man and a woman," said the Baron Munchausen without exaggeration, "is a delicate, comprehensive sense of humor."

"It's the only way you could live through love," said Harry Hershfield.

"Humor is courage," said Fannie Brice, "and if you don't need courage to take it, I don't know anything about love."

"Now, children, settle yourselves about Uncle Lemuel's knee," said Colonel Stoopnagle, "and Uncle Lemmy will leave you know a few salient facts about his early love life." The burden of his remarks follow later, if you can call it a burden.

The old tradition has it that love must be taken seriously, even solemnly. That the one sure way to run your marriage to Reno is to let a little comedy creep in. That the wisecrack is more fatal than the mother-in-law, the rolling pin, or the Other Woman.

At last this myth is exploded. And who has a better right to explode it than professional comics? They laugh for their living, and now we know they laugh for their loving, too. And their marriages usually "take."

The funny part of it was the serious way every one of them took the problem.

But, as Jack Pearl says, "This business of being funny is nothing to laugh at." True enough!

(Top) A pair of Pearls—Jack and Winifred. And the Baron doesn't hand his wife any of those famous Munchausen yarns either. (Below) Burns and Allen are as happy off the air as on, because their home life is punctuated with laughs and without the addition of Gracie's brother.

Love may laugh at locksmiths, but can it stand under laughs? Is a wisecracker in the home more fatal than the mother-in-law, the rolling pin or the Other Woman? A group of hand-picked comedians give you some really first-hand information on an intimate subject

The most serious of them all was Ed Wynn. I sat in a modernistic chair made of twenty beaver hats, in his freshly finished pent house office.

"Do I look as you expected me to?" he asked.

"You look more like I expected you to than I expected you to," I replied.

"That shows perspicacity on your part," he said. "Most people are awfully surprised."

I MIGHT have been if I had been looking for a Perfect Fool Fire Chief with his lower lip hooked over his eyebrow. What I found was a most benign gentleman, slightly rounded in front, with a flowing necktie, hair curling down over his collar in back, the famous cigar, and a genial, not to say Wynnsome smile.

From where I sat I could see no marks of the worrying he says he does.

"But I do," he insisted. "I'm a terrible worrier. I don't know what I'd do without a sense of humor in this business. The things that happen!"

"But the things that happen at home," I said sententiously, "are the ones that count, aren't they?"

"Marriage," said Ed Wynn, "is the most sacred thing in the world. It is the most to be treasured. If humor is there, battles won't be.

"Speaking of battles," he went on in the excitement of an idea, "if countries would use humorists for their ambassadors, there would not be any wars, either.

"For instance, right now every country is choosing its most wooden-faced high hats to represent it. There isn't a laugh in a ship-load. That's asking for trouble.

"Suppose America chose, instead, Ring Lardner, say, and Will Rogers and me. Well, we'd probably spend the whole

(Top) Here is Fanny Brice with little Frances. Fanny has loved a lot and laughed a lot, though not always at the same time. (Below) Ed Wynn's wife has just celebrated her silver wedding anniversary and claims that her husband's humor has simply made time fly for them both.

EVERY business man should have a small radio receiving set in his office these days, says Frank E. Mullen, NBC director of agriculture. And every farmer should have a set in his home, he adds.

Radio is just that important. Look over a week's program. There'll be important talks about government, finance, spot news and market reports. All are vitally important to the business man and to the farmer. And as for women—well, you know practically 90 per cent of the morning programs are designed especially for women.

Don't you think it would be a good way of aiding in the National Industrial Recovery Act to purchase a radio now—that is, if you haven't a good one—and by means of it keep abreast of all that's new, as well as the best entertainment?

Majestic, for one, is hiking production. The picture above shows one of the big rooms in the Majestic factory where hundreds of workers make sure of the accuracy of every detail before a finished set is put on the market.

THE MYSTERY CHEF SPEAKS FOR HIMSELF

Meet the Mystery Chef's two pals—White Rock and Sandy Scotch. Their table manners are excellent—and so is their appreciation of good cooking.

I AM wondering if you would like to know more about the menus I told you about in last month's issue of RADIO STARS. I refer to the family who had only $1.50 per week for food for four adults and how I was able to send them a week's menu showing how really delicious meals with meat or fish every day could be served on that small amount of money.

Nothing makes me so mad as to hear broadcasts about cheap meals with some of the unappetizing menus that are nearly always given. I heard one recently when they boasted about being able to give recipes for meals that would cost as low as seventeen cents per person. but, of course, they said, you could only use the cheap cuts of meat. Then the question was asked by another voice. "What do you mean by cheap cuts of meat?" and the answer was, "tripe and beef hearts."

Well, you don't have to eat just tripe and beef hearts to have a delicious meal that will cost less than seventeen cents per person. You can have many delicious dishes that cost very, very little and if you will send in the coupon for my recipes this month I will send you some recipes for dishes that you can be proud to serve to anyone, and you will be surprised at the very low cost. Not cheap meals, but delicious meals that are exceedingly inexpensive.

I hope that everyone of my readers who sent in for my special fish recipes last month will try my recipe for fish pie. I know that is not a (Continued on page 70)

came to radio
by odd routes

DON AMECHE had to be dragged into radio. Beatrice Churchill fell into it by chance. And that's how these two young people, who are Betty and Bob Drake (over NBC's WJZ-blue network at 3 p. m. [EST] daily except Saturday and Sunday) came to the airwaves.

Beatrice Churchill, or Betty, was born in Lakeport, California, December 21, 1910. Her ambition was to be an actress; so immediately upon graduation from the College of the Pacific in Stockton, she went to the Goodman Theatre in Chicago where she worked for two years.

One day Beatrice's roommate came home with the news that she was to have an audition with NBC. It thrilled Beatrice so much that she asked to go along. The funny part about it all is that, when Beatrice asked if she could test her voice, the officials said yes. And she walked out with a job. The job was acting the part of Betty in the Betty and Bob sketch. She's been on this one program ever since.

Don Ameche, who is Bob to us listeners, was born in Kenosha, Wisconsin. His folks sort of wanted a lawyer in the family so Don decided to try it. After a couple of rather unsuccessful attempts at law, an actor who was in an automobile accident called Don to play his part.

Don became interested in this stage business, and so continued to act for about two years. Then, work got scarce and he looked for new fields. But he wouldn't consider radio. Dramatic programs on the air were still a bit new, and Don had never even heard one. But he was a good actor and soon some friends who were producing radio shows dragged him into a studio.

In summing himself up, Don adds: "I'm fond of spaghetti. Like golf and bathing. Own an Irish setter. Went to school at Columbia College, Marquette, Georgetown and Wisconsin Universities. Thrown out of none. Just quit."

That's Don Ameche who stands five feet eleven, tips the scales at 155, and has brown hair and eyes.

Those Betty and Bob scripts, by the way, which are sponsored by General Mills, come from the fertile mind of Bob Andrews, the same guy who wrote "If I Had a Million" and "My Father Said."

Rosaline Greene might have been a school teacher

---

Ray Lee Jackson

later as Queen of the Radio was launching a career.

It happened this way. Rosaline liked dramatics. In fact she liked the drama so much that she auditioned at WGY for the world's first radio dramatic troupe. She walked out of the studio as leading lady of the WGY players.

That settled the question. From then on Rosaline would be a radio actress. She rose to fame fast, so fast that within a year after her graduation she was crowned Queen of the Radio World's Fair at Madison Square Garden in New York. The honor meant Rosaline was the possessor of radio's most perfect voice.

Now Rosaline has something over a thousand radio roles to her credit, and she has made radio history with some of her portrayals of the past, notably her Josephine in "Napoleon Bonaparte" and as Joan of Arc.

She does her rehearsing, of all places, perched on the roof of a Fifth Avenue bus. Sometimes it's quite embarrassing for she throws herself into roles with such intensity that, when she comes to, she often finds herself the center of fellow bus riders' amusement—she has been doing her part out loud.

Yes, Rosaline turned away from school-marning, but just so the elder Greens would not be wholly disappointed, she is seeing to it that her kid sister, just graduated, will uphold the family name in that field.

Miss Greene is heard on several NBC programs.

ROSALINE GREENE remains one of radio's best actresses. And it is a distinct stroke of luck for her and for the radio audience—because Rosaline Green might have been a school teacher.

She was born and brought up on Long Island, and her parents, viewing with a moderate amount of alarm her mounting tendencies for being a thorough-going tomboy, decided that the best thing for her was to follow the trade of teacher.

So when she had put grade and high schools behind her, with a prowess in tennis, swimming, riding and boxing fully equal to her scholastic attainments, they sent Rosaline to the State College at Albany, N. Y., where in due course of time she collected a degree with honors and the right to teach school.

Right then and there it began to look as if another "marm" would be added to the ranks, and little thought was given to the idea that, instead, a girl to be known

GET up early. Yes, awfully early. Drink a glass of water. Have the windows of your room open, top and bottom. Then turn on your radio.

It's the Tower Health Exercises Program. Up twenty-seven stories in the great Metropolitan Life Insurance Company Tower, looking down on a sleepy New York, is Arthur E. Bagley, the man who conducts the largest gymnasium class in the history of the world.

It's 6:45 o'clock in New York. If you live in Missouri, it's 5:45. And if you're a West Coast radio fan, you better not go to bed the night before. You see, it will be 3:45 in the morning out your way.

That may be early for a lot of us, but 1,250,000 business men, housewives and school children have written in saying they listen regularly. That, we must admit, is about the biggest gym class we could imagine. And there are undoubtedly many more members of this class, for broadcasters tell us that less than one out of every twenty-five listeners take the trouble to write.

That's a record for Mr. Bagley. But he's a man of records. He holds three others. His broadcast is the first on the air every morning—opening things up for the networks and the listeners. Secondly, he has been on the air longer than any other daily broadcaster. And last, he's been more punctual and attentive to his series than any of the radio gang. And all that takes a lot of work, believe you me.

THIS whole business of morning exercises started eight years ago last April 1. And without a single exception, these exercise programs have opened the day for the National Broadcasting Company. That was even before WEAJ, the key station of NBC in New York, was ever a part of a network, which means over 2600 broadcasts — six days a week since 1925. All that time, Bill Mahoney, the pianist who makes it easy to count "one-and-two-and-bend, brothers" while you exercise, has been on the program with Mr. Bagley. Just the two, day after day for over eight years. And at that unreasonable morning hour—ugh!

Mr. Bagley is an old head when it comes to exercises. That's always been his business. For twenty-three years before 1925 he supervised gymnasiums for the Y. M. C. A. He knows what he's talking about when he rattles off his morning schedule. His is a busy life. To bed by midnight. Up at 5:45 a. m. on the dot. A shave and a shower and then a bite of light food. To the Tower. Up the waiting elevator. And into the studio at 6:30 in time for tests, and preparations for going on the air at 6:45. The actual broadcasts last until 8 o'clock. Breakfast is at 9. Then office work—mail, future broadcasts, visitors and other such matters—right up to 5 p. m., taking time in the early afternoon for a lunch of fruit, milk and crackers.

Such a schedule, day after day for eight years, might drive an ordinary person to distraction. But there again Mr. Bagley proves the value of his instructions in health. It keeps him going and feeling fine—yes, better than ever before in his life, he says. He's one fellow who practices what he preaches. He does those exercises himself, what's more. # SETH PARKER

WE'RE going to Jonesport. Come along! Maine! There is a word for you. It paints pictures in your mind. Cool winds drifting through a bounding surf to whisper sea-songs in pine and hemlock roves. Bearded fishermen home from "the Banks," loddging toward tiny white houses that lean into the alty breeze. One of those houses is probably the most amous home in the world.

Seth Parker's!

We're on our way. No boat, no train, no bus takes us to this Jonesport, though. We use an elevator, a wilded metal birdcage that rockets us to the top of NBC's roadcasting building in New York City. A hostess smiles as a welcome on the thirteenth floor.

"Seth Parker," we tell her. "Studio F," she says.

The corridor to it is crammed with musical instruments that are too bulky to be stored. Bull fiddles, xylophones and sympani. We edge past them, leaving the bustle of the reception room behind. That door at the end bears a letter—F. Beyond its sound-proof thickness is Jonesport, Maine.

And Seth Parker.

Everybody wants to see Seth, to talk to him, to absorb some of his strength and wisdom. Every visitor is the same; each feels that Seth is an old friend. So walk on in. Tonight, the place is ours.

THREE rows of chairs strike across one end of an unusually small studio. They are for us visitors and well-wishers. The room is but a little larger than your own front parlor. At the opposite end is a broad, low window through which two men peer like fish in an aquarium. They're engineers and their hands thumb important gadgets, so the voices that speak to those mikes along the wall may go around the world undistorted.

Those other people? They are Seth's Jonesport neighbors. I've told other folk that and they've been disappointed. They'd come here expecting men and women in overalls and gingham, men with salt in their beards and women with their hair done up in buns. These sleek people don't fit that picture. (Continued on page 95) placed there by one of the engineers.

Three minutes before the broadcast starts, the President enters the room. The Roosevelt smile beams on everyone present. The President is wearing a white linen suit, a cream-colored tie and tan shoes. Although the temperature had hovered around a humid 96 all day, and it still was up in the high 80's, and although he had been kept busy with more than 100 appointments from early morning, Mr. Roosevelt looks calm and fresh.

HE looks more like a business man who has spent the past four months playing golf at a vacation resort than the leader who has successfully been coping with the greatest problems to face this nation in time of peace.

He puffs at a cigarette in a long holder and takes his place in front of the microphone. Chatting with Ike Hoover, White House major domo, and General Hugh S. Johnson, keeper of the NRA "Blue Eagle," the President seems less concerned about the important broadcast that is about to start than anyone else in the whole room.

Then you hear the announcers, Carleton Smith for NBC and Robert Traut for Columbia, both in their early thirties. The President loses his smile. His face goes grim. He takes a last puff at his cigarette.

"Ladies and gentlemen, the President of the United States."

Reading from large typed sheets, similar to those used by Floyd Gibbons, the President delivers his message. His voice is clear and firm. He is talking to the largest audience that ever listened to a broadcast. But, he speaks as if he were addressing each individual who is listening to him.

As he continues, he opens his coat. It is uncomfortably hot in the room, in spite of the four fans.

Then he reaches that point in this particular message where he finds it necessary to use the term "economic hell." With a twinkle and a smile he looks up toward General Johnson as though to say, "I got away with that one." The word "hell," you know, has always been a radio outcast, but the President uses it because it most clearly and adequately describes his point.

HE smiles once more during his broadcast. That's when he interrupts himself to ask, "Where's that glass of water? It is a very hot evening in Washington, my friends."

Well, the water is directly in front of him on the desk. The President knew it was there all the time. But, this little interlude is a clever relief. It is an excellent bit of showmanship. It is typical of his informal attitude.

Talking at a rapid but understandable pace, the President drives on to the finish of his message. This time he is eight minutes ahead of the time allotted him by the networks.

Then the President does a very natural thing. Turning to M. H. McIntyre, White House secretary, he asks, "How was it?" He puts the same question to the radio boys. Ike Hoover, who has been listening to the talk on a radio set upstairs, comes in. He reports that it came over great. The President smiles broadly again.

Then the room is transferred into a Hollywood movie lot. The President lights a fresh cigarette. The cameramen get busy. The bright klieg lights are lit, adding to the heat of the room.

"Now comes the worst part of it all," the President jokingly remarks. The cameras, swathed in heavy coverings of thick mats to stifle their hissing sounds, go into motion. And for thirty-five minutes, in an obliging and good-natured spirit, the President goes through his message again for the newsreel men.

At one stage of the movie-taking, a camera man shouted, "cut." The roll of film on one of the machines had been broken. The President looked up surprised and laughingly asked, "Who's dead?"

Then come the newspaper photographers. Another battery of black cameras and flickering flashlight bulbs.

An aid rushes in. Long distance phone call. Mrs. Roosevelt. She was one of those millions of listeners out there on the other end of the mike. The President leaves to get her reaction.

The man in the speakeasy snaps off the radio and returns to the bar for another shot.

The bell hop in a Chicago hotel snaps off the radio and returns to his busy post.

The captain on a Mississippi boat snaps off the radio and goes up or deck to get a bit of evening breeze.

The housewife in that California home snaps off the radio and returns to her kitchen to see how her dinner is getting along.

Millions of radio sets throughout the land are snapped off. And we leave the White House, for the curtain has come down on a great show.

Boake Carter glances over his editorial before broadcasting the news on the Philco program, which rates the air five times a week over the Columbia network. Carter has "a nose for news," having learned about scoops in the City Room of a big daily.

What Kind of a Husband Is Paul?

snobs. Well, Mrs. Whiteman just couldn't be expected to pick up after him. So he has a man do it.

If Margaret Livingston weren't an actress of considerable background, who understands the exacting demands of fame in the profession of entertaining, she probably wouldn't be able to put up with the crazy living schedules with which she has to contend.

How would you like having almost no time for friends and for the entertainment which is dear to the heart of so many married couples? The best they can plan for their guests is an occasional cocktail party in their hotel suite or a round of the night clubs.

You'd think it fun for awhile, but hollow tones in the notes of such gaiety are soon detected by persons of intelligence. But because both of them are full of the joy of living, they manage, somehow, to be content with it. It's really a complete entertainment in itself to sit at a table with Paul and listen to his enthusiastic flow of talk.

But if Margaret Livingston's a radio widow, she's not left at home when he plays golf. He's grand about that. She swears that her shots are as dubby as her questions about music are dumb. But he loves it. She confesses that it gives him a chance to show off.

If you've gotten the impression that Paul's too much of a dandy, you should see him on the fairway or on the tennis court. "That strapping athlete in those old clothes can't be Paul Whiteman," you'd say to yourself.

Yes, Paul is certainly a bundle of contradictions. You watch the sun and wind-tanned sportsman whip off a three-hundred-yard drive, or backhand a hot ball to the far corner of a court, or flail a fast crawl down the swimming pool. Then you knit your brows in wonderment at what Margaret has told about his taste in interior decorating.

He likes to furnish the bedrooms of his Colorado ranch prettily and daintily in the gilt and filigree of the period of Louis Fourteenth.

He's crazy about that place. It's a far cry from the days when he was a taxi driver in Denver, to his present ownership of this handsome hundred and fifty acre ranch near that rough, bluff city of the West.

If you pause to wonder about a husband who is so concerned with the decoration of his home, what do you think of a husband who takes an active and intelligent interest in his wife's clothes? Just let him suspect that she's going shopping for a dress or a hat, and he'll beg her to wait until he has a chance to go with her. When he goes, it's as happily as if he were starting out to buy himself two or three new suits.

You'd think a man who makes all the money he does would be interested in knowing what happened to it. You'd think a man who'll make about $150,000 from his broadcasting in the next year and who has made double and triple that, would like to manage his affairs.

Certainly his past misfortunes should have made him careful to the point of watching each penny. There was one period, you know, when it seemed to him his career had come to an end. His wife, loyal in those most trying days, comforted and encouraged him. Finally, he managed to get an engagement playing in the Biltmore Cascades in New York. It is a smart supper club, but it was something of a come-down for a man who had conducted great symphony orchestras. Encouraged, he embarked on a tour of the South with a sort of super-vaudeville act. They say it was an uncompromising flop. It was only because the makers of Miracle Whip, casting about for new programs, recalled the man whose Sunday evening radio concerts had been the highlight of broadcasting. He was offered a sum reported to be $4,500 a week to return to the air. He accepted.

Yet even now, let his manager approach him with a sheaf of business papers in his hand, and Paul gets jittery and makes determined efforts to change the subject. He can't stand it. What do you think of that for a husband? It's Mrs. Whiteman's own burden.

But there's one matter of money in which he's always interested. Let's find out by going back to a day in New York not so many weeks ago.

Paul entered his hotel suite late that sunny afternoon. His face was glowing with boyish pleasure. He was positively bubbling over.

"Now what have you been up to?" demanded his wife.

He led her to the window and pointed down. Her eyes were caught by the glint of the sun on the polished trimmings of a Duesenberg—a car which cannot be bought unless you can pay into five figures.

"Nice looking car, isn't it?" he asked, trying to appear casual.

"Oh, it's beautiful!" she exclaimed.

"Well, it's yours, my darling," said her adoring husband.

That's the kind of finance Paul's interested in—buying things for his wife. He hasn't forgotten the love and loyalty she gave him when he needed it most. That's the kind of husband he is.

Andrea Marsh used to "one, two, three, kick" in a musical comedy with Ruby Keeler. But now Andrea's eighteen and has a voice, which she uses to great advantage on the NBC network when Ted Weems and his orchestra are turning out their tantalizing tunes.

DAY BY DAY

Maybe you've heard the rumor. Have you?

Someone said last month that our RADIO STARS' program section is practically perfect. Practically without errors.

It's a lie, ladeez and gents. It's a false and baseless accusation. Our program section does have mistakes, lots of them. We promised them to you and we're giving them to you. Anyone who says otherwise is a so-and-so who was probably bopped on the head during infancy by a careless Scandinavian hired girl.

Not that we're proud of our mistakes—but, since we've got 'em, why not admit them? You see, this magazine is printed several weeks ahead of the time you can buy it. And the moguls who build radio programs are men of uncertain minds. So, we give you all the programs fit to print when we go to press. What happens between that date and the day you pick up RADIO STARS is in the laps of the gods. What happens, invariably, is plenty.

As a guide, each program is tagged thus: (1/4), (1/2) or (1) to indicate whether it runs a quarter, half or full hour. When you're planning your week's listening schedule, we suggest that you run through the programs, check off the ones you want to hear and underline one or two stations that your set brings in. It simplifies tuning.

Singin' Sam is so used to singin' by ear that when someone handed him a song book he couldn't understand.

Stop a COLD the First Day!

Put This 4-Way Remedy to Work at Once!

A COLD is nothing to fool around with! It may end seriously. Treat a cold promptly and treat it for what it is—an internal infection! The thing to take upon catching cold is Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine. It knocks a cold quickly because it is expressly a cold remedy and because it does the four things necessary.

The 4 Things Necessary

First, Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine opens the bowels, gently, but effectively, the first step in expelling a cold. Second, it combats the cold germs in the system and reduces the fever. Third, it relieves the headache and that grippy feeling. Fourth, it tones the entire system and helps fortify against further attack.

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is utterly harmless and may be taken freely with perfect safety. It is, and has been for years, the world's leading cold and grippe tablet.

Now—20% More for Your Money

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine now comes in two sizes—30c and 50c. Buy the 50c size as it gives you 20% more for your money. Always ask for it by the full name and look for the letters L B Q stamped on every tablet. Refuse a substitute as an attempt to impose on you.

Radio—Best Friend

way. An unfortunate incident that occurred years ago has made her mentally unbalanced. But she is going to get well soon, the doctor said.

"We always quiet her," the nurse told me, "by seating her near the radio. It does something to her. She forgets where she is, that she has a doctor and nurse watching over her, and she is mentally transferred from the hospital to her past life, when she was a healthy, normal girl. She calms down, becomes more rational, she begins to relax, and in a few minutes is sitting there as restful and cool as though there had been no mental outburst a short time earlier. Then when she is in this state, the doctors can reason with her and set her on the road to recovery."

Picture, if you can, a long row of white beds in an immaculate hospital. In them are men, the majority in their thirties and forties—really in the prime of their life. Most have been here for years, and most will spend the rest of their days here. They are World War veterans—the young men who went away with a jaunty step and returned to spend the rest of their days in a hospital bed. Look—there's an earphone at the head of every bed. What, then, does the radio mean to them as they lie there watching their lives waste away?

"Half our cure," grinned Carl L.

A CHEERFUL face at the far corner of the room pops up. "I haven't been outside of this hospital for over thirteen years, but I've been to more baseball and football games than most men walking around. The vivid broadcasts of these sporting events are just about the nearest thing to seeing one. I listened to a broadcast of a swimming meet the other day. I could hear the people yelling, even hear the lapping of the water! The whole event was brought to my bedside, and I felt that I was actually there."

While I was there, I witnessed a remarkable occurrence. I noticed a man walking in the hall. His body was stooped and quivering, his hand twitched and he was mumbling.

"Shell shock," the nurse whispered.

Then he walked into the room where the radio was playing. Immediately his moaning ceased. His body straightened a bit, and an interested light took the place of the glassy stare that had been on his face. That was a mute tribute to the blessings of radio.

And what about the Forgotten Men—those men who are up in the Big House? I'll never forget the first time I visited Sing Sing with a party of friends. We were shown around, and when the guard took us to the long row of cell blocks, we found that there was an earphone in every cell.

"Oh, isn't that coddling the prisoners?" one of the party remarked.

"The radio has done more to keep up the prisoners' morale and preserve order than you'll ever know," he said. "It is on every evening, after the men are 'locked in' for the night. Instead of twiddling their thumbs from 5 to 9, getting restless and developing an antagonistic, resentful, chip-on-the-shoulder attitude, their minds are swayed toward normal thoughts and outlets by the radio. They listen to it avidly. Sporting events, news commentators and jazz music are their favorites. And the men are cheerful and appreciative. Coddling them? Can't you see how it's part of their training toward a normal, useful life?"

Later, Warden Lewis E. Lawes, the humane, farsighted warden at Sing Sing, said, "The privilege of 'listening in' is esteemed by the men as greater than others they have, with the exception of mail and visits from relatives."

THIS is an excerpt from a letter that passed through their correspondence department some time ago. It was from a man of former social standing to his wife.

"I listened in on the radio last night," the prisoner had written, "and was surprised to find myself in the midst of old friends. A dinner was being broadcast, and the speakers were (he mentioned several prominent men) and let me tell you my heart beat fast. It sounded so familiar and close to home."

Joe K. is a "natural lifer." The sameness of the prison routine is becoming monotonous, and he is chafing. Such an attitude is dangerous. What Joe needs is something that will make his life more interesting; some string of events that contain all those human emotions of joy, fear and unhappiness that are thwarted by the rigidity of prison life. He's found it in the radio. You may remember when "Easy Aces" was on the air last winter. Jane was kidnapped (in the play, of course). That was the main interest in Joe's life. From day to day he anxiously waited to hear what had happened to Jane; cursed the kidnapers for their dastardly plot, and under his breath he egged Ace to "go on after her and get her, big boy." And when Jane was finally returned, he breathed a sigh of relief and felt that some great trouble was off his chest. That interest, from day to day, kept his mind from settling into a dull, bitter groove.

A very touching letter was sent out by one of the prisoners to his wife.

"I would like you and the children to listen in on that radio program," the inmate wrote. "I'll be in my cell hearing that service and praying at the same moment. We shall be together, even though far apart."

LET'S look in at the Condemned Cells. The Condemned Cell prisoners (CCs they're called) are those who are waiting for the appointed time when they will walk the "last mile" to oblivion. Outside of two ten-minute recreation periods, they are locked in all day. Nerves are on edge here. There must be some great mental stim-

BABY

If you want a baby's smooth clear skin, use the baby's own pure soap

Just because you're grown-up, there's no reason for forgetting the first beauty lesson you ever had.

When you were a baby, your sensitive baby skin was tenderly cared for. Your doctor chose your soap then. He insisted on a pure soap—and your complexion was lovely!

Think for a moment why doctors say: "No perfumed or medicated or colored soaps for a baby's skin. Use Pure Ivory Soap."

It's because a baby's skin is so sensitive. But isn't your skin sensitive too? Why then should you be satisfied with a soap less pure than Ivory?

Don't waste another day . . . Cleanse your face gently with pure Ivory tonight. And slip into an Ivory bath . . . And when you come out—notice how baby-smooth your skin feels. That's because Ivory is so pure. No color in Ivory. No strong perfume. Nothing to irritate your skin or dry out delicate skin lubricants.

So take a hint for beauty from a baby—use Ivory to keep your skin young and fine and smooth.

ulation to keep them from breaking. So they have their own radio. It's on all day. Just this little incident alone will show you how the radio has given the CCs a brief respite from their oppressive, steel cages.

The guard, making his usual rounds, finally came to the death house. Just before he put his key in the heavy, iron door he heard a riot of song and laughter. Quickly, he opened the door to find out what it meant. There, he saw, were the condemned men, singing and laughing lustily to the radio which was going full force. They were as happy and carefree at that moment as a group of college men at a fraternity meeting. The song? It was "Happy Days Are Here Again."

And, oh, there are loads of others to whom radio has been a super Marco Polo in opening up new worlds. For instance, Nat, a lifer who has never seen his little girl because his wife doesn't want her to know her father is in jail. A proud smile lights up his face every time he hears the Children's Hour. And Charlie, blind from birth, who has actually learned French by radio. And Stella, who is tied to her wheelchair and must miss parties. These people who can really understand what Rita N. meant when she said, "The time my radio was out of order I felt my best friend had died."

I served it recently in my home at a luncheon given to some very prominent guests. Everyone raved about it and said, "It's perfectly delicious. What is it?"

Your guests will be enthusiastic about it too. Its cost is unbelievably small. You can serve eight people with a liberal serving and the whole thing will cost around twenty-five cents for the eight servings.

AND now let me remind you that my season of broadcasting has started again, and for the benefit of those who live in the territory where my broadcasts can be heard I give you a list of stations through which you may honor me by tuning me into your home.

This year I am broadcasting four days a week—Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. Tuesdays and Thursdays my broadcast goes out over the Columbia Broadcasting System and on Wednesdays and Fridays over the National Broadcasting Company network. Here is a list of the stations and the hours of the broadcast:

Every Tuesday and Thursday, 9:45 to 10 A. M. (EST) over the Columbia Broadcasting System:

WADC—Akron, Ohio; WCAO, Baltimore, Md.; WNAC—Boston, Mass.; WGR—Buffalo, N. Y.; WABC—New York City; WCAU—Philadelphia, Pa.; WJAS—Pittsburgh, Pa.; WEAN—Providence, R. I.; WFBL—Syracuse, N. Y.; WSPD—Toledo, Ohio.

Every Wednesday and Friday, 10 to 10:15 A. M. (EST) over the National Broadcasting Company network:

WFBR—Baltimore, Md.; WEEI—Boston, Mass.; WBEN—Buffalo, N. Y.; WLW—Cincinnati, Ohio; WTAM—Cleveland, Ohio; WWJ—Detroit, Mich.; WTIC—Hartford, Conn.; WEAJ—New York City; WFI—Philadelphia, Pa.; WCAE—Pittsburgh, Pa.; WCSH—Portland, Me.; WJAR—Providence, R. I.; WGY—Schenectady, N. Y.; WRC—Washington, D. C.; WTAG—Worcester, Mass.

I am looking forward to the opportunity of talking to you in your home and I hope that you will honor me by inviting me in by tuning me on your radio.

Again, I am most fortunate in being sponsored on the air by the Davis Baking Powder Company whose broad-minded vision and desire to be of service to every home makes it possible for me to talk on all phases of cooking whether baking powder enters into it or not. My talks will cover the entire field of cooking—hors d'oeuvres, soups, fish, entrées, meats, vegetables, sauces, gravies, salads, salad dressings, breads, biscuits, pies, pastries, puddings, cakes, coffee rings, cinnamon rolls, shortcakes, frozen desserts, etc., etc. I will also give the most famous recipes of foreign nations.

Not only am I allowed a perfectly free hand to talk about the great art of excellent cooking, but my program will be one of the few programs on the air without a commercial announcement either at the beginning or end of the program. Is it any wonder I say that I am more than fortunate in having such a sponsor as the Davis Baking Powder Company to work for?

Thrill Makers of Radio

Now let's swing back across the country to Columbus, Ohio.

It was a night in 1930. Suddenly a glow lighted the sky. It brightened rapidly. Sirens shrieked and moaned all over the city. The penitentiary was afire and the convicts rioting.

A news flash reached Columbia headquarters in New York. Headquarters immediately communicated with WAIU, then of the CBS network. The Columbus station reported that the outbreak was serious.

A reporter, Bill Orr, was sent to the prison. He knew that there was a microphone in the prison chapel and he was determined to get to it.

He reached the police lines. The crack of guns pierced the surging roar of the hungry flames. The reporter started to force his way through the lines. Guards flung him back.

"You can't go in there. It's sure death."

"But I've got to get the broadcasting equipment out."

As he gained the inner walls, agonized cries of convicts trapped in burning cell blocks reached him. Other convicts were running amok. Bullets were flying. Ducking, dodging, dashing from shelter to shelter, he gained the comparative safety of the chapel. There he collared the prison preacher, Convict X46812, a negro lifer. Not knowing what moment crazed prisoners might burst into their weird studio, he made contact with the station and put the Negro on the air as announcer.

Now we'll speed on out over the waters of the Atlantic off New London, Conn. We are aboard the U. S. Navy salvage ship, "Falcon." Far below the surface lies the submarine "S-4." Once it was rammed and sunk off Providence, R. I. Half a hundred men were trapped and died in her. Now she is an experimental submarine. In her are Announcer Ezra MacIntosh and Lieut. Norman S. Ives. We are to see broadcast the test of a rescue chamber designed to prevent any such tragedy as once befell the submarine.

A heavy boom swings the eight-ton rescue unit over the side. We see James Wallington and naval men enter. All is made secure. The command to lower away is given. The bell slips below the surface. John S. Young from the "Falcon" tells the world what is happening.

Then we hear the voices of MacIntosh and Wallington. They, too, have microphones. And as they describe their sensations, they wonder to themselves if the device will work. The chamber settles down. Will they ever make contact? Can they really bring MacIntosh and Ives back with them?

A gentle bump. At last. The bell is on the submarine. Time is short. There is a series of metallic blows as he divers on the outside work hastily to make the chamber fast to the submarine. Then a signal. The submarine hatchway is open, and MacIntosh and Ives worm up into the rescue bell. The hatch is closed and the bell released. It begins its slow journey upward.

It's a long way from New London to the volcano of Mt. Kilauea, Island of Hawaii. But these daring radio men have broadcast even from there. Up the side of the mountain, they struggled with their equipment, to the very edge of the crater. From the seething lava in the cauldron a thousand feet below, acrid fumes rose on the scorching waves of heat. To protect their instruments, they built a wall at the edge of the great pit.

Above the words of the announcer and Dr. T. A. Jagger, hardy volcanologist, was heard the hiss and the roar of the mammoth smelter of rocks. Towering above their heads were clouds of ash dust as 25,000 cubic feet of red hot lava was blown from the crater every minute.

Then, leaning over the edge, choking and dizzy from the gases, they lowered a microphone toward the devil's brew hissing and bubbling far below.

I remember two cold gray days spent aboard U. S. Navy Submarines off New London, Conn. I had the good fortune to accompany a group of announcers and engineers, who, under the guidance of NBC's energetic director, William Burke Miller, were to present the first broadcast from a submarine running beneath the surface.

The "O-3" and "O-8" ran a parallel course through the choppy December sea. Between them stretched a slender telephone cable. A siren, the diving signal, rose and fell. Hatches clanged shut on the "O-3" and she nosed under. The broadcast was on.

Tenseness was in the voice of James Wallington at the microphone on the surface craft. Tenseness was in the voice of George Hicks talking from the submerging vessel. Both knew well that if these vessels veered toward one another, a fouled propellor was the least they could expect, an underwater crash quite possible.

Even as the audience listened to the description of the dive, the run under water and the rise to the surface, these men remembered what could happen to submarines cruising so close together.

Then, where but the feathery wake of the "O-3's" periscope had been, came a surge of water. A conning tower thrust into view, then a hull. The submarines slowed and lay heaving in the icy seas.

The program was over. The radio men were relieved, relieved because the broadcast had been a success.

I had occasion to ask Ted Husing recently about the announcers who run such risks. He was surprised. He had apparently never thought of it in that light. But it did remind him of one of his broadcasts.

He was aboard the U. S. S. "General Schofield," seventy-five miles off the Virginia Capes. The sea was heavy and the little ship pitched and rolled dangerously. At a distance, towed by a long line, moved the S. S. "Mt. Shasta," doomed to the bombing by planes, which Husing was to describe. The planes roared overhead, swooped down. Heavy bombs whined through the air and burst like great thunder-claps. Clinging to the Schofield's rail, Husing described the action until it was over. But his personal danger had not finished.

The little vessel put about for port. In the middle of the night its boilers failed. Many on the crowded boat became ill. Accommodations and food were inadequate. Lights out and awaiting help, they were rammed by a Coast Guard vessel. Finally they were taken in tow.

Day found them nearing Fortress Monroe. Suddenly Ted noticed a great burst of water nearby. A heavy report reached his ears. Another geyser and another report. It was all too apparent what was happening. They were being mistaken by the fort for a towed target.

The tow vessel churned and thrashed. At a snail's pace they drew out of range. But the radio men were content. They had done their part. The show had gone on.

They do not regard themselves as brave or adventurous, these fellows. Yet the indisputable facts remain; they have dared flame and gunfire and ocean depths. But if the listeners have heard, these men of radio are satisfied.

father's footsteps. When, as a mere child, he evinced signs of musical talent, they encouraged him in every way, feeling that a knowledge of music would be of great value to him in church work.

Whether he liked it or not, young Ed had to go to church three times a day. And he didn't like it. As he grew older, his entire education followed along religious lines.

He was sent to one theological school after another, never graduating from any. His irresistible love of fun and strong rebellion at any and every kind of restriction, made these formative years a painful recollection for all concerned.

His lack of application was tolerated by his professors, for the sake of his father, but never analyzed.

"I remember the last Commandment I broke. It was the Third," chuckled Ed reminiscently. "And that put an end to my budding ministerial career, and that of about a dozen of my fellow students. I'd always loved baseball, and I was a good pitcher, too. Only lost two games in seven years. How's that for a record?" he bragged.

"Go on, what happened?"
"Well, y'see it was a Sunday, and a bunch of us sneaked off to have a quiet little game unbeknownst to anybody.

But just like murder, baseball will out—and so were we. After being called on the carpet by the school authorities, whew-w-w-w—we wasn't students any longer. But no doubt, in my case, anyhow, theirs was the greater grief."

"WHAT did you do then?" I asked. "go home?"

"Not me," he chortled. "I made tracks in the other direction. I didn't crave to see my folks till they had time to cool off some. I bummed my way to Chicago and got a job in a honky-tonk nickelodeon in the stockyards district. It paid me all of six dollars a week, and I guess I got it because I was handier with my dukes than I was with my voice. I recall one night I was up on one of them high, narrow stages tryin' to sing an ulcerated song. A big bum directly under me, possibly fifteen feet from the piano, kept givin' me the razz-berry.

"It seems they figured this was part o' the show in that district and they enjoyed the song, only because it gave them an opportunity to malign and mistreat the singer. I stood about all I could of it, an' then I jumped square across the piano, landin' in this fellow's lap. Inasmuch as one of my shoes came in contact with his head somewhere, the gentleman immediately passed out. I picked him up by his collar, dragged him up the aisle and threw him smack out in the gutter. Then I came back and sang my song without any further interruption. From that night on," Ed continued, "the management thought I was a great singer, and I played a sensational run of six months in that place."

Afterward he sang in other movie houses, and then became in turn, an evangelistic song director and a vaudeville "single," playing the small time from the Middle West to the Pacific Coast. The net results of this latter experience were, to quote him literally, that he "damn near starved to death!"

The sheer, human loveliness of the man is one of the first qualities that registers with you when you hear Ed McConnell at the listening end of a radio. It's in his voice . . . warm, vibrant with genuine friendliness, the kind of voice that makes you know its owner has the sympathetic understanding of his fellowmen that can only be born of experience. Then when you see him, you understand why Ed is only his middle name and why the world has tagged him Smilin' Ed McConnell.

Ed has a record of accomplishment, which no other single performer on the air can duplicate, and receives as much remuneration for a single station broadcast as some of the ether's biggest stars receive for a hook-up performance. He has never failed to get phenomenal results for his sponsors and has never given an audition nor sought a sponsor. Ed claims that the only way he ever takes on a new product, is to investigate not only the product, but the company thoroughly. "Then, if they can sell me, I can sell the world!"

Ed McConnell looks upon his audience as his personal friends, he is conscientious to the nth degree, and wouldn't dream of recommending anything he wouldn't want to purchase.

"The buyin' public is just plain folks like me," says he, "and I wouldn't want a man talkin' down to me or misleadin' me either, no sircree!"

They tell a story at WLW of one night back in 1931 when Ed gave them quite a scare. The time for his broadcast was drawing close and McConnell was nowhere in sight. As he is a stickler for promptness, they immediately came to the conclusion that something had happened to him.

He rushed in at the last moment, haggard, pale, and obviously in a frenzy. There was no time to explain, but they didn't have long to wait. No sooner was Ed on the air, than he made a dramatic appeal for the prayers of his listeners. Mary Jane, his little girl was desperately ill, and it was evident to those listening in, that the big man was shaken to his very depths.

The baby passed her crisis while he was still broadcasting, but during the days following, his listeners conclusively proved their loyalty and love for him. Over one hundred thousand letters poured in.

McConnell's tastes are simple. He would rather be a country gentleman than anything in the world. He loves his home, which is in the outskirts of Cincinnati, and is devoted to his wife and little Mary Jane, who is now three.

ONE of the most vivid impressions he retains, is that of the restriction and poverty against which his parents were constantly struggling. As a boy, he vowed that he would never go through such penury and self-denial when he grew up. Nevertheless there were times when things were mighty tough. For instance, during his early days in radio. One of the most acute growing pains suffered by poor Ed was caused by the fact that so many requests came in for his photographs. As he put it, "I not only didn't have the money for pictures, I couldn't even buy stamps."

Finally he got his break, a commercial program at $75 a broadcast.

"At that minute," reminisced the big fellow, "even Rockefeller didn't have a thing on me. As far as I was concerned, it was a fortune."

Now of course, things are entirely different. He makes plenty of money, but he does not do it at the expense of anybody else.

McConnell is something of a Lincoln, of the people and for them. He is a kindly, and surprisingly un-egotistical man. He uses few words, but he packs a verbal wallop of pith and wisdom which no amount of verbosity could match.

Unlike many successful professionals, Smilin' Ed McConnell isn't averse to admitting that he has made, and still makes, mistakes. "It's only human nature," he asserts philosophically. "Why, take f'instance, my brand o' English. Y'know, I can break English where no one else could even bend it. But darn it, they know what I mean and so do I, so I guess we'll keep on bein' good friends just the same."

in the owner's automobile, for one year from date of installation. This insurance is issued by the Phoenix Insurance Company of Hartford, Conn. Now if that company protected the owner from static and overloaded commercialism, I'd call it perfect.

Tedious "fishings" for weak, distant stations are eliminated in the new Z-13 Round-the-World Receiver, says the Silver-Marshall Manufacturing Company, the manufacturers.

Instant location of even the weakest stations is claimed for this set by means of an electron-coupled heterodyne oscillator stage. This supplies a "beat-note," allowing the receiver to be tuned to the zero position, which is the exact point for best reception. A push button control facilitates use of this note for the tuning operation. Releasing the button stops the heterodyne signal.

PHILCO is now bragging about its great 16-X. It has a range of the air waves from 13 to 575 meters, inclined sounding board, balanced power "Class A" Audio System giving up to 15 watts output, a dual ratio tuning system which provides a tuning ratio of 60 to 1 which makes exact tuning of short wave stations simple and easy.

Here's a swell Zenith set I saw the other day—the Challenger Model 706. It's a 6-tube advance type AC super-heterodyne circuit. The entire cabinet is of solid walnut construction with a beautifully figured butt walnut panel. The size is 8½ inches high, 15¼ inches wide and 7½ inches deep.

Another small set that looks good to me is Model J-72 of the General Electric. With seven tubes, full size dynamic speaker, it makes a fine set.

If you want to go into big money, then look at General Electric's Model J-109. This is an automatic phonograph, combined with a 10-tube superheterodyne. It plays standard or long-playing records. And there's a studio type microphone for home recording. The cabinet is early English and stands 46 inches high. $269.50.

Atwater Kent presents Model 627 Compact. Here is a 7-tube compact set that is remarkable in tonal quality. It has many big set features, such as 4-gang condenser—range switch—full-toned electro-dynamic speaker and 3-point tone control. $53.90, complete with tubes, is the price asked.

RCA Victor has on demonstration its Radio-Fonograf, a 5-tube superheterodyne with the all electric fonograf unit playing standard or long-playing records. If you want to see this set, call for Model RE-40 and expect to pay about $49.95.

So you see the radio people are doing their best to make it possible for you to get air entertainment in its fullest form. Now that both the networks are strutting around with the biggest array of talent in years, the importance of a good receiving set cannot be over-estimated.

LOVE IS not BLIND

COULD You STAND THIS SEARCHING GAZE?

OR WOULD you be conscious of an ugly shiny nose? Now, at last, you can banish that Half-Hour Nose so destructive to beauty and romance. No longer need you powder every other minute, and worry the rest of the time about your looks. Now you can be sure of your loveliness always . . . for Pompeian has developed a powder that goes on evenly and clings for hours.

Soft and fine, it gives your skin a smooth and natural perfection. Its ingredients are as skillfully blended and as high in quality as any powder sold. The shades are especially designed to flatter every tone of skin. The subtle perfume is imported from France. The purity of the ingredients assures you a powder free from grit and starch, one that will not enlarge the pores nor irritate the skin in any way. Pompeian creams and rouges are equally dependable aids to beauty. Regular sizes are available at all drug and department stores, and convenient 10c sizes at the better 5-and-10-cent stores.

Modern Hands Cannot Escape the Spotlight

Today, women's hands work for a living. They're busy, active, capable and strong. But Romance still demands that they look alluring and feminine.

Always use Pacquin's Hand Cream to keep your hands white and smooth, and soft to the touch. It's the cream doctors and nurses use—to counteract the effect of so much soap and water. Pacquin's supplies the beneficial oils which prevent dryness and redness. Yet it never leaves your hands feeling greasy or sticky. Your skin will absorb it quickly and completely.

Pacquin's not only corrects ugly skin conditions, but it whitens and bleaches...it "clears up" your hands' complexion.

Bend Down, Sister!

THROUGH all these busy years, he seldom has missed a broadcast. Once he was operated upon for appendicitis. Of course that kept him away for a while. Then there was a death in his family which interrupted his schedule for a few days. Otherwise, he is there bright and early, never has been late.

In the studio during a broadcast are usually just three people—Mr. Bagley, the pianist, and the announcer who also acts as an engineer. But it takes from eight to sixteen people to handle the clerical work which these broadcasts demand. That clerical work includes answering mail and sending out thousands of pamphlets.

Once each year, he breakfasts with all the announcers and engineers who get up and handle his broadcasts through the various stations. In May, in eight different cities, eight different staffs of men sit down in eight different hotel dining-rooms for a Bagley breakfast. It follows his sunrise broadcast and all the men who have worked with him are present. And Mr. Bagley, who eats with the New York City group, pays the eight food checks.

Only twice have his broadcasts ever been interrupted. Once was when Gov. Ely of Massachusetts fired a gun in his state to broadcast the sound around the world. But that only took a minute. The other occasion was when Charles Lindbergh landed in Paris after his heroic flight. Bagley's exercises were interrupted by the bulletin that brought the news to American listeners.

Here's something that you may think a bit odd. In 1926 a New York daily newspaper conducted a radio popularity contest. Who do you think won? Rudy Vallee? Russ Columbo? Harry Horlick? Harry Reser? Or some of the others of the older broadcasters on the air? Well, Dr. Bagley was third.

Art, as he is known by his intimates, is the whole show on his broadcast. He does the talking, goes through the exercises, does most of his own announcing and is his own sound effects engineer. All kinds of little toys are on his table. It looks like a child's nursery. But every one of those common-place toys produces some noise essential to the broadcast—everything from roosters crowing to the song of the Goofus bird.

Now that bird is a whopper. It's Bagley's own creation. Here is the way he described the bird to me: "It has the head of an elephant, the body of a camel and the tail of an ostrich. It also flies backwards to keep the dust out of its eyes." Depend upon Bagley to create something of that sort to liven up his sleepy listeners.

When the hour ends, four chimes in the studio strike simultaneously with the big clock in the Tower overlooking New York's midtown section and announce to the network that Mr. Bagley has added another day to his record.

Milton Cross' Ordeal

set-building, obliged them, and he was asked to stay and become a regular member of the staff.

In those early hit-or-miss years of broadcasting, Milt Cross worked his head off. He announced, he sang, he wrote continuity, he took acting parts. Later, when radio became more departmentalized he was able to settle down to his work as announcer.

The Crosses took a plain, unpretentious house in the residential section of Brooklyn, far from the hectic whirl of Manhattan. They acquired a country place on Long Island, where they spent their summers.

Eight years ago Lillian was born. She had her father's blue eyes, and, it developed later, her father's talent for singing.

Milt Cross had two children's programs which he enjoyed immensely. One was a nursery rhyme broadcast on Tuesday afternoons, and the other was the Sunday morning children's hour on which he acted as master of ceremonies.

Lillian liked to listen to this hour, and at last her father brought her to the studio one Sunday to sing over the air. Both her voice and her personality impressed those who heard her. The people around the studio became interested in her. Up to that time only a few of them knew that Milt Cross had a daughter, so reticent was he about his personal life.

She sang several times after that. In her, Milt Cross renewed his own interest in singing. As you know, if you have heard him sing over the air, Cross has a fine tenor voice. At the time he went over to Newark to sing over WJZ, he was well on his way to becoming an outstanding artist. But as he went on in radio, he became especially noted as an announcer for musical programs. His musical education and training stood him in good stead here. But gradually his work as an announcer began to overshadow the other phases of his radio activity.

BUT there seemed to be good reason for hoping that in Lillian he might yet see his own early promise as a singer fulfilled.

It was no mere parental pride which formed the basis for this belief. Others who heard her voice were struck at once by its quality.

Then one night last spring, Lillian was suddenly stricken with appendicitis. She was rushed to a hospital and an emergency operation was performed. But blood poisoning set in. Then the long ordeal began.

For weeks she wavered between life and death. Her father only left her bedside long enough to go to the studio and then hurried right back again.

Blood transfusions became necessary. Fortunately, Milt Cross is a big, full-bodied man, well over six feet tall and weighing better than two hundred pounds.

During those hard weeks he gave no less than seven transfusions of his own blood in an effort to save her.

All this time, scarcely any of the people at the studio suspected what he was going through. They noticed that the big, smiling announcer, usually so jolly and full of fun, seemed saddened and subdued. That was all.

Pat Kelly, chief of the announcing staff, knew. He had to be told so that he could arrange for a standby announcer to take over Milt Cross's programs when Cross had to be at the hospital. Perhaps you wondered why you did not hear his familiar voice announcing his musical programs. You never once, even in the darkest moments, did he miss his Sunday morning children's hour, nor his Tuesday nursery rhyme broadcast.

No one knew what he was going through, for he refused to burden any one with his troubles. He still had a smile and a cheery word for everyone. He never complained, never murmured although there were times, especially on the children's hour, when it was all he could do to keep the necessary tranquil assurance in his voice during the broadcast. It must have taken a very special kind of quiet heroism to be able to do it at all.

Then in the end, the little girl died.

BUT the next Sunday morning, Milt Cross was there on the children's hour, introducing the youthful artists as usual.

Friends, knowing how hard it was for him, urged him to give up his children's broadcasts. But he replied that he could not do it, that to give up these hours that he loved so much would only make it all the harder for him.

That Sunday morning program was as hard as anything he had gone through. Once or twice his voice broke and he thought he couldn't finish. But now he is glad he did.

He said that he and Mrs. Cross would never have been able to get through those dark hours at all had it not been for the wonderful sympathy and consolation of Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, with whom Cross had been associated on one of the broadcasts.

Every morning, a long, helpful letter from Dr. Cadman was delivered to them at the house. He put aside everything else in order to be with them during their last rites. It was his spiritual counsel that brought them through.

Milt Cross still carries on, the same old Milt—pleasant, smiling, affable though more subdued, just as he did through those even harder weeks of soul trying uncertainty. He feels that life should be a pleasant thing, and he is doing what he can to make it more pleasant for others who have known sorrow, too.

Genial, easy-going, yes. But there's got to be strong stuff in a man for him to be able to do what he has done.

CORNS HURT?

INSTANT RELIEF FROM PAIN

- Why tolerate unnecessary pain? Remove painful, unsightly corns this safe, scientific way. Blue-Jay stops the ache instantly—removes the corn in 3 days, only occasionally requiring a second application.
- The old days (dangerous days!) of cutting corns are gone forever. Don't risk infection by cutting—and don't risk harsh remedies.
- Blue-Jay is a truly scientific product—safe—and tried. It has removed millions of corns, given supreme satisfaction for 35 years. Invented by a scientist—made for you by Bauer & Black, famous surgical dressing house.
- Be kind to your feet. When a corn appears, remove it at once with Blue-Jay. 25c at all druggists. Special sizes for bunions and calluses.

1. Soak foot 10 minutes in hot water; wipe dry.
2. Apply Blue-Jay, centering strip holds pad in place, pad over corn. How it works: A—Mild medication gently undermines corn. B—Felt pad relieves pressure, stops pain at once. C—Adhesive strip holds pad in place, prevents slipping. . . . .
3. After 3 days remove plaster, soak foot, lift out corn.

BLUE-JAY BAUER & BLACK'S SCIENTIFIC CORN REMOVER

• Free Booklet—Contains helpful information for foot sufferers. Also valuable exercises for foot health and beauty. Address Bauer & Black, 2500 S. Dearborn St., Chicago.

Is Love a Laughing Matter?

voyage in the bar. Then on the other side suppose, instead of a bunch of thick-headed stuffed shirts meeting us, there would be P. G. Wodehouse, Bernard Shaw, and G. K. Chesterton. Well, I ask you, would the issue be more muddled at the end of the conference than at the beginning, with more hard feelings? Not on your life.

HUMOR is really truth, you know, and right away we'd start peeling off the layers of diplomatic hooey and showing the situation to the people as it is. Sharply, the way you can with humor. It wouldn't be long before the public would know how things really stood, would see the fallacies and absurdities of political greed.

"And business, too, but it sometimes takes me a long time to see a joke there. It took me three days recently.

"A company signed me up last fall for three pictures. Then about a month ago I got a wire from the Coast. They'd decided I couldn't carry a picture alone. And why did they decide that? You'll die when I tell you. It seems some smart fellow said that, because a certain lady radio singer had flopped in her picture, I would, too. Do you know who I mean?" He made appropriate gestures, more expressive than proper, indicating feminine luxuriance of form.

"Well, I was furious. I went around for three days boiling. Why, it was like saying that Mussolini would fail at being a dictator because my uncle failed in his tailor shop.

"Just about that time I began to laugh. It suddenly hit me. Why, it was just plain funny. So I took the contract back to them and tore it in two—with a smile.

"Maybe they were right, anyway. I'm not so hot in the movies. I know it. But after all, you can't expect to succeed in everything. I've had the stage and radio. Isn't that enough for one man? Why, it's lovely."

So-o-o-o-oh, that was Score Number One for the Ayes.

THE next port of call was Columbia, for Burns and Allen. They are very important to this question.

So I asked Gracie Allen whether she gets as good hands for her gags at home as she does on the stage and over the air.

"But Nat is the funny one offstage," she said. "I'm the straight one. Isn't that funny?" Came exactly the same giggle that has become famous in every home where there is a radio. Her voice is the same flat little voice. She doesn't do a thing to her natural voice when she broadcasts.

"Nat's the life of every party, and at home I just sit and laugh at him. When we get together with Jack Benny and his wife, the four of us have hysterics

DON'T BE SKINNY
HERE'S MY SECRET—

NEW WAY ADDS 5 to 15 POUNDS in a few weeks!

Thousands who were once skinny praise quick way to get lovely curves and vital health!

I WISH I HAD YOUR FIGURE AND PEP!

STOP being ashamed of your figure—having people call you “skinny”, and losing your chances of making friends on that account. Here's a new, quick, easy treatment that is giving thousands solid, healthy flesh and attractive curves—in just a few weeks!

As you know, doctors for years have prescribed yeast to build up health for rundown men and women. But now with this new discovery you can get far greater tonic results than with ordinary yeast—regain health, and in addition put on pounds of solid flesh—and in a far shorter time.

Not only are thousands quickly gaining beauty-bringing pounds, but also clear, radiant skin, freedom from indigestion and constipation, strong nerves, new pep.

Concentrated 7 times

This amazing new product, Ironized Yeast, is made from specially cultured brewers' ale yeast imported from Europe—the richest yeast known—which by a new process is concentrated 7 times—made 7 times more powerful.

But that is not all! This marvelous, health-building yeast is then ironized with 3 special kinds of iron which strengthen the blood, add abounding pep.

Day after day, as you take Ironized Yeast, watch ugly, gawky angles fill out, flat chest develop and skinny limbs round out attractively. And with this will come a radiantly clear skin, new health—you're an entirely new person.

Skininess dangerous

Authorities warn that skinny, anemic, nervous people are far more liable to serious infections and fatal wasting diseases than the strong, well-built person. So begin at once to get back the healthy flesh you need. Do it before it is too late.

Posed by professional models

Results guaranteed

No matter how skinny and weak you may be, this marvelous new Ironized Yeast should build you up in a few short weeks as it has thousands of others. So successful has it been in even hopeless cases that it is positively guaranteed. If you are not delighted with the results of the very first package, your money instantly refunded.

Only be sure you get genuine Ironized Yeast, not some imitation that cannot give the same results. Insist on the genuine with “IY” stamped on each tablet.

Special FREE offer!

To start you building up your health right away, we make this absolutely FREE offer. Purchase a package of Ironized Yeast at once, cut out the seal on the box and mail it to us with a clipping of this paragraph. We will send you a fascinating new book on health, “New Facts About Your Body”, by a well-known authority. Remember, results are guaranteed with the very first package—or money refunded. nothing more than just the way Nat happens to pronounce a word. It couldn't sound funny to tell it, but that's the kind of amusement we have. “You know, once a friend invited me to a party for college kids. I went. I was shocked, honestly. The drinking and things that went on—well, I'd never seen anything like it in my life. I just sat in a corner with my mouth open. And by, one of the boys came up to me and said, ‘I suppose this seems pretty tame to you, you being on the stage.’ “I can't imagine what he thinks we do at parties if that seemed tame. Why, I almost never drink. Never more than one highball, if any. I've never been caught in my life. Neither has Nat. “Once I was feeling pretty low, which doesn't happen often with him around. So I said to Nat, ‘Make me laugh.’ Just like that, ‘Make me laugh’. You can imagine how hard it would be with that opening. Well, Nat turned to me and made some motions and said, ‘Googie, googie, googie.’ I nearly died. I asked him to do it again just about every minute after that. Until it got so everybody started calling me ‘Googie.’” “When you strike a snag in this idyllic married life of yours,” I asked, “does laugh ever get you by?” “There aren't any snags,” Gracie said.

“HERE, I thought, is the secret of humor in marriage. Instead of curing troubles, it prevents them. “Unless you call this one,” Gracie went on, in deep thought. “One time when we were feeling particularly broke, the cook asked me to stop at a department store and buy a rolling pin. Now Nat had just clamped down on all expenditures for a while, but I thought a rolling pin wouldn't kill us. “Well, I got into the store. So far, so good. I was about to buy the rolling pin when the saleswoman recognized me. The first thing I knew there was a whole flock of salespeople and customers around me. Was I proud. “But I couldn't buy a simple little thing like a rolling pin with all those people watching. I bought a dining-room table. We didn't need a dining-room table. When I got home I had to tell Nat. I was petrified. And this is what he said: “‘Nice work, Gracie. But you'll find it's a hard job rolling dough with a dining-room table.’ We both laughed, and that was that.”

If the husband hunters of America would take this hint for their own future happiness, they might begin to look for different qualities in their prey. Jack Pearl says the same thing. He's married to Winifred Desborough, who works at it, too.

“THE Baron uses his humor in everything. He keeps the press happy. He never gets a summons from a traffic cop. Even the landlord is his friend. He's the greatest guy in the world to his two nephews, on whom he heaps all the grand gadgets he'd have liked to own himself away back in the days when he was earning his living running errands in a razor factory. He can make the most hard-headed business executive laugh, which does not do his income any harm. Once he telephoned one of his sponsors and imitated a business rival and for ten minutes worked up his own stock by out-bidding his sponsor for his own services. They don't know yet why they suddenly began to appreciate him.

His wife is the toughest nut to crack for a laugh. She knows every joke in the Joe Miller book, and all the answers. In fact, it has developed into a game. It goes like this. Occasionally, Jack is missing when he should be at home and gets caught short without an explanation. He attempts to save the situation with a laugh. He tries out one of his next week's radio gags. If he gets a laugh from the little woman, he knows it will panic the customers.

Fannie Brice, who reached the pinnacle of being the funniest woman in show business, was never madder in her life than when an up-de-la-da social registerite calling on them asked her husband, "How do you like having a funny wife?" Her husband, in one of his loyal moments, put on a dead pan and answered, "Funny wife? I don't quite know what you mean."

But Fannie is the quickest to admit that it is her sense of humor that has saved her in a life of storm and stress.

ONCE the same ex-husband came home from a drinking bout. "I had a bad cold," Fannie says, "and had been in for three days. On the other hand, he had been out for three days. He was pretty drunky. I was desperate. He slumped down in a chair looking frightfully the worse for wear. I had to do something. Should I leave him? Should I appeal to his better nature? I'd tried both those things before, and they had never worked. Suddenly I had a bright idea.

"The doctor had given me some horrible dark-colored stuff for my cold. I took that into the bath room and came out and told him I couldn't live in this world any longer, that I gave up, etc. I love to dramatize myself anyway, and I put on a good show. I wept and carried on. Then I went into the bathroom and left the door open so that he could see me, picked up the bottle of medicine and put it to my mouth.

"I thought he'd leap up and wrest it from my shaking hand. Not at all. He just gave me a glassy stare and lifted his hand and dropped it saying, 'DIE DIE die die die,' his voice trailing off as his hand hit the floor.

"I didn't give up then. I took another mouthful. The faint spark came into his eyes again and he lifted his hand again and said, 'DIE DIE die die die die die.'"

"Well, that went on until I had finished the bottle. Then I just stood there crying, and I wasn't acting now. Suddenly, after he had sat in his drunken stupor and said, 'DIE DIE die die die die die' at intervals for about an hour, I began to laugh through my tears. It was terribly, terribly funny. When I laughed I came out of it. I was all right again. I could go on for a while."

She didn't go on indefinitely, however. For the sake of her two children, a daughter now fourteen and a son twelve, to whom she is devoted. she got her divorce.

But she would not be snugly married now to Billy Rose if her sense of humor had not done the trick.

He had been asking her to marry him one evening.

"No," she said rather flippantly. "I don't think I care to." She turned on her heel and started to do a regal stately exit from the room. Imagine her surprise when she felt a sudden swift kick. She turned around at a loss for words. "Why—why—don't you ever do that to me again."

"Well, I will," Billy muttered belligerently, "if you say such a dumb thing again. Now will you marry me?"

Fannie looked at him standing there in dead earnest and it was too much for her. "Why, yes," she said, and did. It looks like a happy-ever-after. too. You could almost say the way to a lady's heart was through her—sense of humor.

SINCE Stoopnagle and Budd have been on the air they have not only brought fun to millions, they have actually saved lives. With their insanity they have saved the sanity of thousands. I've seen letters in their office telling of suicides averted in these desperate days. Another letter was from a man and wife who hadn't spoken for three weeks, were headed straight for the divorce court. They were sitting silent and glum one evening when the voices of Stoopnagle and Budd came into the room. Without realizing it they found themselves laughing together. When two have laughed together they find they have no quarrel any more. These two swore they're happy again and profoundly grateful to the salvagers of their future. That's just one case.

As to the colonel himself, let him tell how he saved his early life from destruction.

"Once upon a time, when I was but a lad of twelve, I was riding my velocipede helter-skelter along a country road, when I espied a lonely buttercup, raising its yellow head high above the other flowers.

"Well, this single buttercup, raising its haughty head above its fellows, gave me my first 'love' idea. I thought to myself: 'Lemmy, who of your female companions has a heart and soul big enough to be able to lift her head above the rabble?"

"I gathered up my cap and cape and sped to a long, low rangy sort of house twelve miles away. Lippity, lip, up the steps I went looking neither to right nor to left. I sneaked a sly glance at the doorbell, though, before I pushed the button. Suddenly the great iron-clad door swung open and a butler in knee pants appeared.

"Is Lottie in?" I inquired, pulling myself up to my full four-feet-ten.

"No," said the butler.

"It was all for naught."

There was not a single dissenting voice among all these radio stars. They were unanimous. The course of true love can run smooth, they say, if you oil it with a little comedy.

A New Slant on Crosby

No smugness, no patronizing air. Just one fellow trying to help another. That's all.

In fact, his manager must keep a hawk-like eye on him, because it's well-known in radio circles that Bing can't say "no" to any request, whether it's for money or some outlandish favor.

Most of the boys who plug songs, have a hard time convincing the radio stars to sing their numbers. But Bing is the song plugger's delight. He falls for their line like a chorine falls for jewelry. One young song plugger told me earnestly, "He has the biggest heart in radio. I told Crosby that my job depended on his singing several of my publisher's numbers. Well, he's actually put himself out to sing them, and what's more, he's even gone so far as to phone the publisher and tell him he was singing these songs because of me."

But that doesn't make Bing an angel by any means. He leaps before he looks. His impulses are generous, but alas, sometimes mis-directed. If you've heard this story before, please don't stop me.

Before he reached the fame and popularity he now enjoys, Bing was singing on a local station in California. He was singer and announcer for a Hollywood furniture house. His friend was vice-president of a rival concern. So one bright and eventful day, what did the Bing do but plug his friend and the rival concern. "That was a helluva trick to play," he said in recalling the incident. I don't know whether he meant the trick was on his sponsor or on himself, because the next day there was another crooner looking for a job.

H E'S the sort of fellow you'd expect to meet at any country club. You know, clean-cut, an easy mixer, and always in line for fun. Average. Refreshingly average. He indulges in almost every type of sport and excels in a few. Swimming, for instance. Several friends out on the Coast urged him to enter the Catalina channel swim, so good did they think his chances were. But Bing couldn't see it at all. He plays handball daily at the club. Dick Savage, the trainer, says, "He's the most natural handball player I've ever seen." He golfs in the 80's, and belongs to a dozen golf clubs from New York to California, not forgetting Florida. As he says, "I'm just a natural born 'joiner'."

He likes to bet. On hockey games. On prize fights. On horses. There's even a horse named after him.

He's the most rabid fan I know. He once travelled to Pittsburgh to watch a football game, and flew back to New York just in time to edge through the studio door and go into his theme song. Almost any night will find him in the first row of the Madison Square Garden or some local boxing arena yelling his head off for some cauliflower-eared pug.

JUST recently I was in his party at one of these fights, when a very interesting incident occurred. It was a very exciting bout between two coming lightweights, Al Roth and Frank Cavelli. At the end of the final round, the crowd was tense with excitement, as the referee stood in the center of the ring about to announce the decision. Just then, Bing got up and started to walk out because he was sure the decision would be a draw. While the crowd was quiet with hushed anticipation, all eyes on the lighted ring, Cavelli yelled out in that tense atmosphere, "Hey Crosby, c'mere!" then climbed over the ropes and ran down the aisle after him.

Bing stopped dead in his tracks, not knowing what to think of the sudden turn of events that had focused all eyes from the ring to him. The referee called for the excited fighter to come back, but he wouldn't stop until he finally reached Bing, and then he said, "Say, listen buddy, I want your autograph. Don't leave 'til you give it to me." I must confess if I hadn't seen it I would hardly have believed it. I've seen gushing schoolgirls rush after their favorites for an autographed picture, but this is the first time I've ever seen a hard-boiled fighter beg for one. There must be something to that Crosby fellow.

Bing was so amazed and thrilled at this episode that he could think of nothing else for hours. Any big star is accustomed to attention and fuss, and although Bing should be used to it by this time, he's so genuinely unassuming he can't take his popularity for granted. He's afraid it's all a dream and he'll wake up any day. The bigger he gets the more he worries.

I'll never forget the time I visited him when he was playing at the New York Paramount. I saw a very nervous Bing with beads of perspiration standing on his forehead. He didn't think he'd go over. He didn't think he'd last the week. They were crazy to pay him such a tremendous salary. When he played there ten weeks and broke all records for the theatre, he was the most amazed crooner in the world.

When he talks about the Bing Crosby club in Malden, Massachusetts, his eyes light up and his grin spreads from ear to ear. This club consists of young men ranging from twenty to twenty-five years of age who play baseball and basketball against visiting teams. Can you imagine a fan club consisting of grown men? I thought only girls, or young boys, formed them, but this is a new one on me.

"Just imagine," he said wildly, "they beat the Boston Braves. And out of over twenty games, they lost only one. Only one, mind you!" And so on and on. He's prouder of that than he would be if he were to get a command to sing before the King and Queen of England.

There isn't a thread of conceit in his make-up, and this has naturally made him all the more liked. Lennie Hayton,

Try KONJOLA for "Nervousness" America's Wonder Medicine

In every corner of the country, you hear wonder stories about America's famous medicine, KONJOLA. No doubt, some of your neighbors use it. It is so widely relied on that it is often shipped into single communities in carload lots.

In cases of "nervousness", as well as stomach troubles, rheumatism and allied ailments, many thousands of users claim virtual miracles for Konjola. If you suffer from a "nervous" on-edge condition, you owe it to yourself at least to TRY this wonder medicine.

Konjola is a special mixture of 32 different ingredients, 22 of which are Nature's own roots and herbs. Not one is a habit-forming drug. Its function is simply to mix with the foods in your stomach and help your own system throw off health-destroying poisons... If you are nervous, irritable... If you perhaps suffer from some disorder of the liver, stomach, or bowel... it seems plain common sense to try this amazingly popular medicine at once. You can get it under the name KONJOLA at any drug store.

the orchestra leader, has helped Bing iron out those bub-bub-a-bubs and deep gulps, and made a finished singer of one who was too inclined to ad lib through his choruses. But he did that last summer, after Crosby had already achieved fame.

On the other hand, Bing brought Lennie to New York and got him on that important Chesterfield program. Now Hayton is in the spotlight where his talents can be heard and appreciated. But Crosby doesn't boast, "Meet my protégé," and take credit for discovering him. Instead he says, "I owe a lot of my success to Lennie. He made a new Crosby of me." A great sport, don't you think?

HE thinks of more nutty things to say than Gracie Allen. When he returned to the air this winter, the Columbia press department gave him a beautiful publicity build-up. All about how beautiful he thought the California sunrise was, how glad he was to be back in New York, etc. Then the newspaper reporters cornered him in his apartment and flung questions at him. Seeing a chance to have some fun, Bing said innocently, "All I left was a string of aspirin tablets and bad debts from California to New York." And it was published, too.

I must mention a word about his clothes, because they're as much a part of him as a ten-gallon hat on Tom Mix. He's a sartorial nightmare. Light blue jacket, ice-cream pants, black and white shoes, green shirt, orange tie and a checked cap perched somewhere on his head. Flaming golf knickers in the middle of February. It hits you smack in the face. But as he cheerfully explains, "It doesn't bother me, only other people."

Yet in spite of his flippancies, and his apparent refusal to take his work seriously, it's unusual to note that he's at his office every morning at nine. I've seen many people blink in surprise when Bing drawled in that husky voice of his, "Come on up around nine and we'll talk it over." And that, incidentally, I think is the best answer to those who insist that Bing is following the primrose path of entirely too much wine, parties and song.

Now Bing is a papa. A proud one, of course. Master Gary Evans Crosby rules the Crosby roost. I have a hunch Bing will be a swell father. For all his nutty antics and wild clothes and flippancies. Bing's faults, you see, are all minor ones. And they are all on the surface. The important qualities like honesty and loyalty, unselfishness and honor and the capacity for hard work are all very present in Bing. And I know he will bring up young Gary to respect them, too.

If you didn't know Bing, you might think that all the nice things written about him were just so much press agent hooey. But that fun-loving trait in him, which must be his Irish heritage (his mother is a Harrigan), and the genuine humanness of his actions, rate him ac-high in the opinion of all who know him. He's a regular guy. A ladies' man, but what's more, a man's man, too.

If "Food Goes to Fat"

Know This Simple Method!

HOW often have you said to yourself "Everything I eat seems to go to fat"? How often have you wished for a way to retain your own normal weight—without having to deny yourself simple pleasures that others enjoy?

The systems of some people (doctors call them the "low metabolism type") turn too much food into fat, not enough into energy. It was for exactly this type of person that Marmola was designed, many years ago. In 1907 people first heard of it. Then, increasing multitudes turned to it—until today actually more than 20 million boxes have been sold.

The story of Marmola has gone 'round the world. People ask for it in California, in England—in Florida, in New Zealand. It is demanded by thousands in style centers like New York, Miami, Hollywood. Marmola has stood the test of generations, while useless fat remedies have come and gone. Prepared by one of the world's largest chemical laboratories, it supplies missing nutritional elements—the lack of which cause abnormal, excess fat.

Discover Marmola for yourself. When you use it, remember it is designed to work gently, naturally. It is not intended to take off large numbers of excess pounds the first week—but to be used as a sane, sensible treatment until you have approached your own normal weight. Directions and formula in each package. At good drug stores, only $1.

DEAFNESS IS MISERY

Many people with defective hearing and Head Noises enjoy conversation, go to Theatre and Church because they use Leonard Invisible Ear Drums which resemble Tiny Megaphones fitting in the Ear entirely out of sight. No wires, batteries or head piece. They are inexpensive. Write for booklet and sworn statement of the inventor who was himself deaf.

Mercolized Wax Keeps Skin Young

It peels off aged skin in fine particles until all defects such as tan, freckles, oiliness and liver spots disappear. Skin is then soft, clear, velvety and face looks years younger. Mercolized Wax brings out your hidden beauty. To remove wrinkles quickly dissolve one ounce Powdered Saxolite in one-half pint witch hazel and use daily. At all drug stores.

A BEAUTIFUL COMPLEXION Without Rouge

Do you want a beautiful complexion? Without the use of rouge? And color that is all your own? If you suffer from constipation give your system just a tiny calcium wafer! Don't take that customary pill on Saturday night—just let Stuart's Calcium Wafers, the gentle internal cleansers, help Nature do its magic work for you! Stuart's Calcium wafers frequently clear away all impurities resulting from constipation and which keep the skin sallow or dull. They help to keep pores purged and the cuticle clean. Often you feel and see the difference from the first day you take Stuart's Calcium Wafers.

A five-day test is sufficient to prove to you very conclusively the system's need for Stuart's Calcium wafers, and the decided benefit from the use of these little sugar-coated wafers.

voice on the air," he remarked presently, when the shock had passed. To himself. "She's certainly conceited."

"Thank you," she replied. To herself as she turned to the group of admiring young men who were surrounding her, "Is that cocky fellow trying to be sarcastic?"

AND at that very moment, the battle of hate started.

Let's find out what there was in the background of these two accomplished, good-looking radio singers which could make them detest each other so? Let's turn to their earlier days for a moment.

Don was a fellow who'd sought and found adventure on the road to fame. He'd climbed to the tender of the locomotive of a New York express, penniless but determined to find stage work in Manhattan, only to be ordered off at the point of a revolver by several South Chicago railroad detectives. He was a man who could laugh at the memory of awaking the next morning after having slept in someone's backyard, with the ache of hunger in his stomach, and the determination to pawn his valise with the one suit of clothes it contained—only to discover it was a Jewish holiday and that no pawnshops were open.

Don had another time climbed atop a New York bound train only to have a low hanging structure strike him and leave his leg torn and broken. But the agonizing hours in the hospital served to strengthen his resolution. And that sturdy purpose carried him through foodless days in New York to a part in the "Greenwich Village Follies," and later to engagements in the smart cafés and cabarets of Europe.

The man who is now a vice-president of the National Broadcasting Company, John Royal, had been made program manager of WTAM in Cleveland. He remembered Don and gave him his first break in radio.

But it was a fateful error of an agent who booked that station's talent for theatres for miles around, that brought him to WLW and Jane. At the last minute, it was discovered that the theatre in which he was supposed to sing, had filled its bill, so he was rushed off to Cincinnati to sing there. There he encountered an old friend who invited him to a party at the home of Powell Crosley, Jr., wealthy owner of WLW. And Crosley, liking his work, put him on the air.

Jane had always had her way pretty much. But at no time would she strike you as a spoiled person. No, she's too regular for that. But she'd had too advantages of good breeding, beauty and a fine voice. Men had always paid her a lot of attention. She had turned down opportunities to be a society matron of Columbia to study at the famous Cincinnati Conservatory of Music.

It was while there that her life was given one of its curious twists. She, too, was invited to a party at the Crosley home, though not the same one to which Ross went.

In the midst of the gayety, someone asked her to sing. When Crosley heard, she was engaged to sing over WLW.

THERE we have them, two proud and self-reliant people who'd always done pretty much as they'd pleased. And though beneath the surface each felt attracted to the other, they thought they hated each other. It happens that way sometimes.

Their emotional incompatibility came to a head on an evening after they'd sung at an entertainment in Cincinnati's Hotel Sinton. As Jane picked up her evening wrap, she caught Don grinning at her. She looked all around her, then swung on her cloak impatiently. She knew what he was amused at. It was the first time since he'd been at the station that she hadn't had someone to accompany her home. Not even her ardent admirers, the wealthy Taft boys, were there.

Don saw his chance. "I'll take this gal down," said the gay adventurer of song to himself. "Mind if I go home with you?" he demanded.

Jane looked up at him quizzically for a moment. Then softly, "I'd be very glad to have you."

One day the truth came out. The gossip columnists of the newspapers revealed that they'd quietly married. Jane and Don paid hardly any attention to the reports, so absorbed were they in their dream of love and hope of fame.

With these thoughts in his heart Don left her at Cincinnati to come to Chicago to seek a more significant radio outlet for their talents. He found a place with the Columbia Broadcasting System for himself, but none for Jane. So Jane had to stay at WLW.

But two who love as they loved could not remain long separated. She came to Chicago to give an audition for the Columbia Broadcasting System.

The Columbia program director looked at her sternly as she stepped from the studio. "No," he said, "I'm afraid you won't do. You haven't the makings of a network singer."

"Never mind, bunnynose," comforted Don. "He'll eat those words. 'It's all right, Don. Don't worry.'"

THERE came the exultant day, however, when Jane returned to Chicago. She had a chance to give an audition for a real sponsor.

As the two left the hotel to go to the studio for the audition she tripped on the steps and fell. Don helped her to her feet. Her face became contorted with agony. It was an ironic commentary that the audition she was about to give was for the manufacture of Florsheim shoes, of all things.

She essayed a step, then blanched as her weight rested on her right foot. "You're in bad shape, Jane," Don said. "Better not try to make it."

"I'm all right," she said gamely. As she sat before the microphone, injured leg stretched out before her, tears of anger and pain filled her eyes.

In another room, listening to her through a loudspeaker, sat a group of gray-haired business men. They knew nothing of the hot streaks of pain which shot up and down the singer's leg, knew nothing of how much Jane and Don needed success in this audition. They merely sought a girl with the kind of voice they thought would appeal to their listeners. When it was over, they scribbled something on a slip of paper and handed it to a page.

The messenger entered the studio and handed the paper to Don. In the moment it took him to open it she was sick with the pain of her ankle and the agony of the certainty she'd failed. Then Don sprang to her side.

"You've done it," he cried. Once more they were together again. Yet though love and determination had carried them through thus far, their goal was still distant. Don was working long hours for comparatively little recompense. He sought a more desirable connection at the National Broadcasting Company in Chicago, but he could do no better there. The problem harried him night and day. Should he give up a position which was secure to come to New York?

With the courage of their love, he took the chance. Yet it wasn't for himself, but for Jane that he came once more to the towers of Manhattan. For months he sought everywhere a place for her in New York's Rialto of Radio. He haunted program departments, followed every possible lead. Each time he uncovered a possibility for her, Jane would come to New York by plane.

There were a great many of these hurried trips between her Chicago broadcasts—so many, in fact, that it began to seem as though all his self-sacrificing efforts had been in vain. But the day came that a program was found.

BUT what happened to Don all this while? You know how quickly people can forget a radio singer.

Don knew this, and it made him more determined than ever. Jane knew as well as he, that it would have been simple enough for her to get any number of people to give him a job. But he would have permitted it no more than she would have suggested it.

His persistence at last brought its own reward. The Pontiac automobile people indicated their desire to listen to him. At the end of the audition, they accepted him instantly.

Now Jane and Don stand once more together in a spotlight—a much more brilliant one. Now he's on the air for Pontiac over the Columbia network and through electrical transcriptions. Jane sings for Frigidaire, Linit and King's Brewery and is making movie shorts. And by the time this story reaches you, they'll be starring together in Ziegfeld Follies.

Backstage at Seth Parker's

But wait, you critics, you skeptics. We're about to go on the air. When we do, you'll forget that these studio walls are bare and Jonesport, Maine, is a fishing village far away where Seth Parker himself is a stranger. You'll forget that New York's roaring streets are thirteen floors below and that these folk wear the double-breasted and be-ruffled habiliments of Broadway.

There is Seth. He is sturdy, like his forbears who sailed the main. He is amazingly dressed. Tonight he wears gray trousers, a blue shirt open two buttons down from the collar, black suspenders. His tie swings from a chair back in a corner. His smile is warm and hearty. Phil Lord, which is Seth's real name, is young in years but old in wisdom, else how could he write these Seth Parker sketches? As we wonder, we glance at the clock. The hands seem locked at 10:45.

"Quiet, please." That's from the white-flannelled man in the corner.

"Sunday evening could not draw to a perfect close without a trip up the coast of Maine to the little fishing village of Jonesport. Here every Sunday evening, at the home of Seth and Mother Parker, the good neighbors of the little community gather to sing the old-fashioned hymns."

All eyes are on Seth. He stands at the nearest mike, alone, his right hand holding a sheaf of papers. Beyond, at a second mike, the others cluster in tense formation, Captain, Lizzy, Mr., Mrs. Hooper, Cefus. . . .

They begin to laugh, soft chuckles at first and then big, throaty guffaws. Seth laughs, too, looking at the engineer all the while. His arm stabs out toward the second mike. The captain leans out of the formation and speaks, chuckling. . . . Then Lizzy. . . . Then Ma.

Seth answers. You've heard it all before, but that makes the marvel of their talk none the less amazing. Here is a clipped, staccato Down-East dialect that Lord made famous, the whiskery-white-haired voice of Seth coming from the lips of a clean-shaven fellow in Fifth Avenue tailoring.

And as you listen, the spell of it gets you. Tonight, Seth is in a fine humor, in a mood for story-telling. He is talking about a man they all know, Snooze Bugby. . . .

"Snooze, he married a lady from Skenton and she turned out ter be a terror. Snooze didn't have much wish-bone—I mean backbone—and he was setting in the house whittling without filling the woodbox. Nell, when she come in, she let fly the milk bottle and then picked up the flatiron and lit out after him. Snooze, he got out the back door and she must have chased him a dozen times around the house and then he spied the chicken coop door open and made a bee-line for it and got in and hooked it on the inside. She stood out in front about an hour throwing the flatiron agin' the door and shoutin' to him if he was a man ter come out. But he didn't. He stayed there the whole afternoon and evening. The next day when Snooze was telling about it, he says, "She stood in front heaving that flatiron up agin' the door and hollerin' at me ter come out, but do yer think I come out? No, sir! I'm the boss in my house and I weren't taking none of her orders."

NOW hear them laugh, Cefus, Lizzy, Ma, Leith, but especially Cefus. A minute ago Cefus was a middle-aged dignified man named Bennett Kilpack, now he is a cackling Yankee bumpkin. Lizzy steps forward. Lizzy is slender and chic and charming (privately, she is Phil Lord's wife) but her voice is something out of a museum.

"Cefus—Cefus—you've laughed plenty fer one story."

There is more talk . . . sweet and honest talk, bred of sea and soil and a man's love for his neighbors. And then they prepared to sing those hymns that have thrilled you and me many a summer Sunday night. Seth says, just as you've heard him in your own parlor. "And now while we're kind of sitting and a-thinking things over, let's have the boys sing 'O Love That Will Not Let Me Go.' Ma, would yer sound the commencing chord?"

The organ starts. It is really a tiny melodeon set in the center of the studio between the two main mikes. The song begins . . . but notice this. Ma Parker didn't sound that "commencing chord." Ma Parker still stands with the others. The woman at the melodeon is Polly Robertson, a professional musician. Playing that instrument on this program is her job. No one else touches it, except Seth himself who likes to finger through a number now and then.

After the hymns, good-nights are said. Presently, Seth and Ma are left together. Seth speaking. "Say, you've got ter git up early in the morning ter start work on preserves, ain't yer?"

"Oh, I can do them pretty fast. That was an awful sweet story yer told ter night, Seth."

"Ma, what yer want ter sing?"

"Want ter do Rock of Ages?"

"All right . . . what's the commencing chord?"

Presently, they are singing together. But here is something you'll never learn by listening to this program on the air. Ma Parker is really three people, three separate women who make her seem one real personality to you. When she sounds that "commencing chord," she is Polly Robertson. When she talks with Seth, she is a charming girl named Effie Palmer. And when she sings . . . well, it has happened before your eyes.

Just now Effie Palmer stepped back and Gertrude Forster, a stirring contralto, took her place. She and Seth blend soft sweet words and music to make "Rock of Ages" a poignant memory.

Close your eyes for a minute. Down the row of visitors I see some others doing the same thing. More likely than not, they're closing them to keep back the tears. Why is it, what is in this Seth Parker program that tugs at the heart, that makes us ashamed for the mean and petty things we've done or the hurt we've caused others. Every man and woman must have his own answer. I know I've got mine.

HERE it is. Those hymns take me back to a day when I was six years old, a kid lying on the parlor floor playing with toys, to the nights when my mother and father sang those same hymns together in the quiet of the Sabbath night. I was too young then to understand such things as love and devotion, but here in Ma and Seth I see again my own loved ones who have gone on to a heavenly parlor. I hear their voices, just ordinary dollar-a-dozen voices like Seth's, ringing down the years. And my heart aches at the memory of the disappointments I caused them, at the impassable gulf that now separates us.

What do I care if Ma Parker is three people? Or if Seth is a young business man with hardly a gray hair in his head? His message does something to me, to millions like me.

But here . . . Seth remembers those preserves again. His kindly corn-row voice turns gentle and soft. Look. The words slide through his twisting lips and his forehead turns to deep wrinkles as he goes into the Seth Parker character.

"Speaking about preserves," he says, "did yer ever hear that recipe how ter preserve young 'uns?"

Seth chuckles into his imaginary whiskers. In a corner, Howard Petrie rises to his announcer mike. The clock hand is near the quarter hour.

"Yer take one big grassy field, one half dozen young ones, two or three small dogs, a pinch of brook and some pebbles. Mix the young ones and the dogs well tergether and put them in the field, stirring constantly. Pour the brook over the pebbles, sprinkle the field with flowers, spread over all a deep blue sky and bake in the hot sun. When brown, remove and set ter cool in the bath-tub."

The program's almost over. Just one more hymn. Together, they sing again.

*Lead, Kindly Light,
Amid th' encircling gloom . . .*

In the control room, engineers are turning knobs, fading their voices out of a million loudspeakers. Petrie speaks swiftly. We snap back to reality, back to this studio from the magic Jonesport that Phil Lord and his company create in Studio F.

And then the broadcast is over, signaled by the tiny red light turning white on the announcer's board. We file through the door, part of us, while the other visitors cluster about the young man who was Seth Parker a moment ago and is now Phil Lord. From him they want just a word.

to send the newer orchestra abroad for a round of engagements and put Cab back in his old hangout.

● What's your favorite tune? Of course, favorites of one month may not be favorites the next month—you know how fancies change. But a few weeks ago, "In the Valley of the Moon" came first in sales, and that's a good way to judge them. Next came "Sweetheart Darlin'," followed by "Stormy Weather." Close behind were "Isn't It Heavenly?," "Hiawatha's Lullaby" and "Lazy Bones."

● Red-headed, blue-eyed Peggy Healy, the tiny Irish lass from Paterson, New Jersey, who is the sweetheart of Paul Whiteman's NBC show, celebrated her first anniversary with the orchestra last August. She was only eighteen years old when she began her career one year ago, but old enough to win a place with Whiteman in an audition where she competed with one hundred and seventy-eight others.

● Did you know that Wayne King, "The Waltz King," was a certified public accountant, banker, automobile repair man and insurance salesman before he became an orchestra director? And when he did discover himself he first played a clarinet in a three-piece orchestra. Then he tooted a sax in several Chicago orchestras, finally organizing his own in 1926.

● Edwin Franko Goldman, the famous band leader whose music has been coming to you from Central Park in New York City via NBC, now holds the rank of Cavaliere of the Order of the Crown of Italy. The honor comes from King Victor Emanuel II of Italy in recognition of Goldman's efforts in the cause of Italian art. Antonio Grossardi, Italian Consul General in New York, conferred the honor at the direction of the King.

● One of the outstanding hit tunes of the day is "Blue Prelude" composed by Joe Bishop, saxophonist with Isham Jones' orchestra. When Joe wrote the song, he decided to pass it through the hands of a third party, rather than present it himself to Isham for approval. He wanted his leader to play the number for its merits, without the knowledge that Joe had written it.

Jones had the manuscript copies passed around to the members of the band. While the boys ran through it together, Bishop, anxious to learn the verdict, neglected to play a certain passage.

Isham stopped the music and, turning to his saxophonist, said: "Say, Joe, you'd better take home a copy of this song, and after you think you've learned it, we'll try it over again."

It's Fun

Earning Big Money

in BROADCASTING

Let FLOYD GIBBONS, famous Radio Star, train you for a Broadcasting career. $3,000 to $15,000 a year and more paid to trained talent.

WOULD you like to get into Radio Broadcasting? Would you like to entertain thousands of people and hear your name mentioned among the great stars of the air? Would you like to earn big money doing work that's fun . . . far more money than you ever thought was possible? If you would, then send for this free book, "How to Find Your Place in Broadcasting," which tells how anyone with talent can train for a big-pay Broadcasting job.

Last year alone, more than $35,000,000 was expended for talent before the microphone to entertain and educate the American people. The estimated number of announcers, speakers, musicians, actors, etc., who perform yearly at the 600 or more American Broadcasting Stations is well over 300,000 persons.

The Fastest Growing Medium in the World

The biggest advertisers in the country recognize the business strength of Broadcasting. They rely on it more and more for publicity, promotion and sales work. They are seeking new ideas, new talent every day.

If you are good at thinking up ideas; if your voice shows promise for announcing or singing; if you can play an instrument; if you can sell or write; if you possess hidden talents that could be turned to profitable broadcasting purposes, you may qualify for a job inside or outside of the Studio. Let Floyd Gibbons show you how to capitalize your hidden talents!

No matter how much latent ability you possess—it is useless in Radio unless you know the technique of Broadcasting. Unless you know how to get a try-out. How to confront the microphone. How to lend color, personality, sincerity and clearness to your voice.

Merely the ability to sing is not sufficient. It must be coupled with the art of knowing how to get the most out of your voice for broadcasting purposes. Merely the knack of knowing how to write will not bring success as a radio dramatist. You must be familiar with the limitations of the microphone, and know how to adapt your stories for effective radio presentation. It is not enough to have a good voice, to be able to describe things, to know how to sell. Broadcasting presents very definite problems, and any talent, no matter how great, must be adapted to fit the special requirements for successful broadcasting.

FLOYD GIBBONS
Famous Radio Broadcaster

Positions like these, often paying from $3,000 to $15,000 a year, are open to talented men and women who have mastered the technique of radio presentation:

The Floyd Gibbons School of Broadcasting shows you how to solve every radio problem from the standpoint of the broadcaster. Floyd Gibbons, one of America's foremost broadcasters, has developed a unique method for training men and women at home for this fascinating work. This home-study course offers you a complete training in every phase of actual broadcasting. Now you can profit by Floyd Gibbons' years of experience in Radio. You can develop your talents right at home in your spare time and acquire the technique that makes Radio stars. Out of obscure places are coming the future Amos and Andys, Graham MacNamees, Rudy Valleys, Kate Smiths and Floyd Gibbonses whose yearly earnings will be enormous.

Unlimited Opportunities for Men and Women

Men are needed to do special broadcasting of all kinds: Descriptive broadcasting of political events, banquets, football games, boxing, wrestling, baseball and hundreds of other occasions of a similar nature.

Women, too, have found Broadcasting a profitable new field of endeavor. Broadcasting Stations are always interested in a woman who can present a well-prepared program devoted to domestic science, interior decorating, etiquette, child welfare, styles, beauty and home making.

A Complete Course in Radio Broadcasting by Floyd Gibbons

A few of the subjects covered are: Microphone Technique, How to Control the Voice and Make It Expressive, How to Train a Singing Voice for Broadcasting, the Knack of Describing, How to Build Correct Speech Habits, How to Write Radio Plays, Radio Dialogue, Dramatic Broadcasts, Making the Audience Laugh, How to Arrange Daily Programs, Money Making Opportunities, and dozens of other subjects.

IN A LOVELY  SETTING OF MAYBELLINE

eye beauty aids

EYES without proper make-up are like gems set in putty. The clever woman enhances the color and sparkle of her eyes by darkening pale, scanty lashes into dark luxuriant fringe with Maybelline Eyelash Darkener. Quickly and easily applied, it is absolutely harmless, non-smarting and tear-proof. Maybelline makes the lashes instantly appear naturally long and dark, keeping them soft and silky. These are the reasons why five million women acclaim Maybelline Eyelash Darkener "the perfect mascara." It comes in Black and Brown. A fascinating effect is obtained by applying a faint, colorful shadow to the eyelids with Maybelline Eye Shadow. This lends just the right touch of depth and expression to the eyes, giving them a most alluring loveliness. Pure, smooth, and creamy, Maybelline Eye Shadow may be had in five exquisite shades: Blue, Brown, Blue Gray, Violet and a Green especially for wear when lights are low.

Graceful, expressive eyebrows are easily formed with the smooth marking Maybelline Eyebrow Pencil. The favorite eyebrow pencil of women everywhere. Black or Brown.

Be sure to apply a bit of Maybelline Eyelash Grower to your lashes before retiring. It will nourish their natural growth and you will love its pure, stimulating qualities.
