Medal of Merit

A Weekly Award for Excellence in Broadcasting

AWARDED TO ANDRE KOSTELANETZ

THE first story we shall tell about Andre Kostelanetz has to do with some of the physical facts of his life. His birth, for example, in the great swampy city of St. Petersburg, Russia. His first public appearance as a pianist at the age of eight. His early tutelage in German, French, Italian, Spanish, Finnish.

As a youth of twenty, he was the assistant conductor of the Imperial Grand Opera House. He struggled through the revolution, rehearsing when bullets were whistling overhead, giving performances when the opera singers were forced to wear fur coats and the orchestra and audience sat wrapped in great bear rugs. That is the familiar story of the background of the gentlemanly conductor who has become one of the great maestros in American broadcasting.

The second and lesser-known story has to do with the Kostelanetz who was at first holding just one of those many jobs broadcasters give to men of musical knowledge and background. Certain programs and certain responsibilities were entrusted to him in the course of the day's work. What began to happen thereafter is at least partial proof of the ancient story of the world beating a pathway to whoever builds a better mousetrap.

For soon the world was at Mr. Kostelanetz' door. Opportunity was knocking not loudly but gently. It was enough for the man who had survived the Russian revolution by living on thin soup from a communal pot in a Russian opera house.

The way of a man's personal achievement is always mysterious and wonderful. It is said of Toscanini that he lives only for perfection in music; that he drives himself to achieve it, that he spares no one who delivers less than perfection. Great artists must all have this inner fire. This is not the place to probe Mr. Kostelanetz' heart or mind while he sat in a humble Columbia Broadcasting job hearing the golden knock of opportunity. Let it only be said that he rose steadily in the esteem and praise of all who worked with him.

When the Chesterfield program was to be placed in new hands several years ago, its direction was entrusted to this newcomer who seemed to do everything so well.

His subsequent record is well known. In 1936 Radio Guide's readers demanded an acknowledgment of a program he had made into a genuine contribution to finer broadcasting. Accordingly, he was awarded his first Radio Guide Medal of Merit.

With this issue, the editors of Radio Guide are acknowledging again the qualities which make the man, and the qualities which make his Chesterfield program the stimulating and satisfying joy it is.

Because of a career which has demonstrated once again that solid merit can triumph above flashy superficialities, and because a world of radio listeners beats a weekly path to his musical mousetrap, we are awarding for the second year in succession to Andre Kostelanetz and his Chesterfield program Radio Guide's Medal of Merit.

HAPPY LISTENING

Nothing Sacred

HAVE you ever taken a long trip—just to get away from it all—and run into your next-door neighbor when you got there? Funny, isn't it, how glad you are to see a familiar face after all! That's what happened to us a couple of nights back. We got to thinking about "King Pop" lying in his bed in Cleveland—remember, James H. Street told his story in last week's Radio Guide? It began to get us. "Jim Street," we determined, "you can't get away with this!" So we went to a movie to forget the whole thing, and saw Fredric March and Carole Lombard in "Nothing Sacred." As soon as we stopped sitting in ladies' laps and spilling all our popcorn, the first thing we saw flashed on the screen was "From an original story by James H. Street!" And were we glad! It was much more fun than meeting your roommate in Somaliland—and better still, Street turned out a comedy this time that laughed our hat right off our lap in every scene. We recommend it for you, whether or not you're unhappy about "King Pop" or anything else. You won't be when you've seen it! He has a swell story in this week's Radio Guide, too, on pages 2 and 3.

Swing Scenes

JUST about the nicest thing we've ever seen Bob Crosby do is refuse to sing. That doesn't mean we don't think Bing's little brother hasn't got a swell voice and a swell band. He can croon in our ear any evening, and George Gershwin's "Summer Time" is never so welcome as when it themes Bob's band into our loud-speaker. But this particular time when Bob didn't sing was when he held a benefit "jam session." He said that his singing wasn't as "hot" as his band's music, so he wouldn't intrude. That kind of Crosby modesty showed up right in our own ranks last week. Gene Lester, Radio Guide's "singing cameraman," who's been appearing on shows to take pictures of the things you'd see if you were broadcasting yourself, went to the Saturday Night Swing Session to bring back alive a set of pictures of the natives and their rites. Paul Douglas, the talking witch-doctor, asked him to sing, but Gene allowed he was a "singing cameraman," not a "swinging cameraman." So, while Gene didn't sing, he did capture some tricky shots for pages 6 and 7 of this week's issue. Swing right over and have a look, won't you?

THE LIGHT MUSTN'T FAIL

BY JAMES H. STREET

THE Montauk lighthouse, lonely as the lonesome pine and almost as old as American independence, is a family institution, and so are the three little battery radio sets that keep its tenders in touch with the world.

Guardian of Long Island Sound, a forlorn shaft of black and white in a wilderness of sand dunes, Montauk stands like those Druids of old, its voice sad and pathetic, flashing and bellowing a warning out to sea.

"Sailor beware! Slow down! Steer clear!" its fog horns seem to say, over and over again, hoarsely—ghastly—like the pounding of surf on the deadly reefs that stretch away from the shore below.

"HERE'S land! Here's land!" seems to be the song of the light, as it turns slowly and faithfully, sending its glare into the mist, or the fog, or the snow, or the rain, or the moonlight—to dance and skip over the billows of the Atlantic Ocean.

The wind always whistles there, an eerie, creepy whine. And the sea always moans a throbbing, resonant boom, boom, boom. The sea-gulls always call, and shriek. The sand shifts and rustles, as silk rustles in a breeze. The gnarled trees bend and scrape and bow. Their trunks are twisted grotesquely, their branches warped, their growth stunted by an unceasing war with the winds.

Here, more than anywhere else in the world, perhaps, can one feel the littleness of man and the might of the Creator. For here is the loneliness of sheer desolation. There are no twinkling lights to cheer you, and it seems that between you and civilization is eternity.

Yet old Montauk, with few of the modern conveniences of a soft civilization, is in the front yard of the world's greatest city!

I STOOD at the lighthouse and watched Captain T. A. Buckridge trim his lamps. The sun seemed to have fallen into the Sound to our west. Streaks of dirty gray hung over the sea to our right. Fog rolled in in waves—sticky, clammy. Old Montauk's horn—it sounds like a river steamboat's whistle—grunted and groaned. The wind caught patches of sand and swirled it in little spirals. The sea tumbled in with a booming sound, and then a swish. The world was blotted out by darkness, and only the steady melancholy blare of old Montauk told me that I was anywhere near the habitation of mankind.

But I knew that back there, beyond those sand dunes, was New York City—only a hundred miles away. I knew the lights of Times Square were sparkling, that multitudes were hurrying home to dinner, that musicians were tuning their instruments, that people were laughing.

It all seemed a million miles away. And then above the booming and the swishing of the sea and the swirling of the sand, the bellow of the fog-horn and the whistling of the wind, came a melody, haunting and tantalizing. "Sweet Leilani," it said. It seemed incredible, "Sweet Leilani" on Montauk! I stared at the Captain, and he laughed.

"That's that Bing Crosby—he's good, ain't he? He's my wife's favorite radio singer."

A radio? I had forgotten there was such a thing in the world. Bing Crosby never sounded so good to me before. The chill seemed to vanish, and the loneliness to go away.

"Do you listen to the radio much, Captain?" I said, just to make a bit of conversation.

"WHEN I ain't polishing and painting, I listen. My wife listens all the time. There ain't much else to listen to out here except the sea and the wind, and you get mighty tired of them all the time. We haven't got anything but a battery set. You see, there's no electricity out here—or running water, or things like that."

And a hundred miles from New York City—from Broadway!

Governments are funny things. There are no famous shafts of granite or marble to lighthouse keepers. There are no ballads to their courage. If a soldier goes to sleep at his post an army may be lost; but the world at least knows his name. But if a lighthouse keeper goes to sleep, a ship may vanish. If the light goes out the ship may be lost. But it simply doesn't happen. The lighthouse keepers do not go to sleep on their watch, and their lights never fail.

There are all kinds of monuments to men who kill, but only a few to men who save. And yet here at Montauk are three families who spend their lives making the sea lanes safe. And they live without electricity or running water. The Government can build hospitals for dogs and cats, and yet not give its servants the simple comforts. There would be something tragic about that if it were not so cock-eyed. The only modern touch at old Montauk are the three little radios.

"They are a heap of comfort, ain't they?" said the Captain. "It's mighty fine to sit around the fire when you are off watch, and the winds are roaring, and listen to that Bing Crosby sing 'Sweet Leilani.' Blast me! I sometimes wish I had me a lighthouse out in those Hawaiian Islands where it don't get cold, where you don't have to fight ice and snow. I wonder what those fellows out there do besides polish and paint. Blast me!"

I WANTED to visit a lighthouse to see if the old salts who tend the lamps were radio fans. I wanted to find one far removed from everything. So I asked a few questions and learned that old Montauk on the tip of hurly-burly Long Island is just as lonely as any of its fellows.

The best way to reach it is to go right out the middle of Long Island, skip by Sag Harbor, the old whaling capital of America, and through the famous Hamptons, past the picturesque house where John Howard Payne lived before he wrote "Home Sweet Home." Then set your course for the very tip of the island. Civilization seems to vanish—houses become few and far apart. A fringe of hills rises suddenly and lopes toward the sea, and when you drop over those hills there stands Montauk.

Its masonry is of fine-hammered Chatham freestone. It is painted black and white and looks like a tarnished barber-pole standing there at the very end of the island. You will have to bend to walk against the wind. Sand will cut your face. There is a three-family barracks in front of the shaft. Two boys were tumbling on the porch when I approached.

"THE Captain," said the pleasant lady who answered the door, "is in the engine-room."

I found Captain Buckridge oiling his machinery, polishing brass and daubing splashes of white paint on the walls of the neat room.

"I want to learn all about light-houses," I said blithely.

"Blast me! I been in this business since I was little as a minnow, and my father was in it before me, and I don't know anything about 'em yet," the Captain mumbled.

"But what makes 'em burn?" I asked.

"Kerosene, you dummy! What do you think does it, fireflies? Come on up, I'll show you something." He raked his brush across the wall and let it plop into the paint bucket. "Can you climb? Hold tight."

Through the engine-room we walked, and then into a tiny but spick and span outer room. The narrow, tortuous stairs began there. 'Round and 'round we went up, like a whirlwind turned inside out.

CAPTAIN BUCKRIDGE has white hair and frosty-blue eyes, but when he reached the top he was not even breathing heavily.

"The tower's only eighty feet," he said. "But we are a hundred and sixty-eight feet from sea level because Montauk sits on a bluff, you see. No! This is not tall—why, out on Cape Mendocino, California, the light is four hundred and twenty-two feet. My candle-power here is a hundred and thirty thousand. Bright? No, that's not bright, blast me! Down at Navesink, New Jersey, the light is nine million candle-power, and they've got a light over in Portugal that is fifty-five million. It's not how bright the light is that makes it important, it's the location. Folks have a funny idea about candle-power—they think my light is as bright as a hundred and thirty thousand candles. Blast me! That's crazy. Candle-power is simply the intensity of light. You see?"

He began to get enthusiastic as I plied him with questions. "The earth curves—it curves about nine inches for the first mile—well, when you build lighthouses you've got to keep that in mind. In other words, you got to build your light high enough and strong enough to get over the curve. My light was built to show for nineteen miles, although it has been seen for forty-six on good nights. At a height of five feet you can see 2.96 land miles, at two hundred feet you can see 18.71, and at five hundred feet, 29.58 miles. That's the average, of course. However, before I show you the light I want you to look at the island from here."

There are scores of tiny little windows on top of the shaft. I looked toward the sea. Long Island comes to a point like a dolphin's fin, and every ship that bears down toward the island, headed for the Sound or turning the point, must pass Montauk. To my back was Long Island, stretching like a long, lazy whale with waves pounding against its sides. I looked at the numerous little windows and whistled.

"How in the world do you keep all of those clean?"

"YOU would ask a silly question like that. Sounds like a tourist. I can't wash windows; in the first place, I can't get out there. And in the second place, that's one break that Nature gives us. The sea blows salt on there, and then comes a rain and the wind washes the windows off. They always stay clean."

"Look-a here and I'll show you something about this light."

He pulled a canvas covering from the head of the light. The light looked like a crystal ball with thousands of prisms—like a huge diamond. "Those things," he pointed to the prisms, "are what give me my light. The more prisms, the more light. See?" He opened his light like a banker opens his huge safe. There was a combination. He twisted it, and pulled. The huge light swung open. It did look like a vault. Inside was a tiny goose-neck jet. It looked like those old fashioned gas-jets in a tenement hall.

"Do you mean to say that your light comes out of that little thing?" I was amazed.

"It's not the size of the flame or the light itself that makes the reflection. It's the prisms. A spray of kerosene comes out of this jet, like gasoline is sprayed into the carburetor of your automobile. We simply light the spray, then these prisms reflect the light, and there you are. The real job is to keep this light burning." He looked at me and smiled. "The light mustn't go out, you know," he said softly, firmly.

"But what if it does happen to go out?" I asked.

"We have an auxiliary light. We throw that one on until we can repair this one. The only thing that usually makes the big light go out is faulty kerosene. Sometimes we get a bad batch of kerosene and our light doesn't burn right, but recently we've been getting good oil. We light her at dusk and then stand watch."

"Do you stay right here by it?"

"OF COURSE. It's my job to see that this light burns. However, I don't keep my eye on it all the time. I can tell with my back turned whether or not my light is out. It's a sort of instinct, I guess. You see, I've been in the lighthouse service a long time, and my father was in the same work. I've been right here for eight years. My father was in Japan with Admiral Perry, and lost a leg in the United States Navy during the Civil War, and then he settled down tending a light. I guess I took up where he left off."

"There are three of us here—G. A. Warrington, John Miller and myself.

We are all married, and all have children. My youngest daughter is going to be a trained nurse. She was graduated with honors from high school last year. Now Cap'n Miller is a man you want to meet. There's a lighthouse keeper for you. He's been here a long time, and his father was here before him, and his grandfather before that. The first man who ever trimmed a wick on old Montauk was a Miller.

"This light used to be more important than it is now. That was back in the old whaling days when the ships would go out for a year or so and then come back to Sag Harbor loaded with oil—greasy luck, the boys called it. Most folks don't know that Sag Harbor was the whaling capital of the world at one time. They always think of Nantucket, but they brought a lot of whales by this old lighthouse." Then he laughed. "Did you ever hear the story about Captain Rensselaer Conkling? No? Well, he was a whaler—one of the best. He harpooned a whale not so far around that bend, in the bay right back yonder. And he wouldn't turn his harpoon loose. He was on the whale's back and the whale took him out to sea. Well, no one ever heard of him again."

"SURE that story's true, blast me! The Montauk Indians used to live out here. The Montauks were pretty good Indians, as Indians went, and they were smart. They were about the best wampum makers in these parts. They had a real system of money with wampum. Purple or black wampum was worth twice as much as white, and the Indians did a lot of business that way until some smart white man settled out here on the island and started making purple and black wampum by machinery. That was in 1830. It ruined the Montauks."

Then he chuckled. "Along about the turn of the century they had a lot of litigation over those Indians. Many of them married Negroes, and when the land back around the Hamptons got so valuable, folks began lawing each other. So in 1910 an American court held that the Montauks were no more. A vanished tribe." He snapped his finger. "Just like that. A court held that a whole tribe had just simply vanished."

"Talk about the last of the Mohicans, the Mohicans were killed by gunpowder and daggers, but the Montauks were killed by the stroke of a pen. So, legally, there are no more Montauks."

"Camp Wycoff was right over there by the bay. After the Spanish-American War, twenty-five thousand sick soldiers were brought there from Cuba. A hundred and twenty-six of them died."

"Naw! the Point ain't valuable much except for scenery. You can't raise an umbrella on this land. It's too sandy. Those little scrub trees you see out there are bayberries and beach plums. Funny thing about that, though." He covered his light as he talked, after examining the jet very closely. "This Point cost the English one hundred pounds back in 1680. That's more than was paid for Manhattan Island. And look what they got."

"THEN in 1797 the United States Government built this lighthouse. It hasn't changed much since. Of course, we've got kerosene now, and there is a Coast Guard station over there on the bluff. They've got electric lights over at the Coast Guard station, but for some reason they never ran electricity over here."

"How do we spend our time? Painting and polishing and watching our lights and standing our watches, talking to our folks, fishing and playing the radio. Thank God for the radio! Mister, we wouldn't know what went on if we didn't have a radio. I've got a whole attic full of battery sets. You see, lot of people out here on the island know us tenders, and when they get electricity installed they get electric sets and they give us their battery sets. Each family down in the barracks has got one. When one goes on the blink we go over and listen to the other. No need of playing all three of them at the same time. Might as well save the batteries. You got any other questions? If you have, shoot 'em, cause I want to get back and hear that Bing Crosby fellow."

"Do you get in much fishing?" I asked.

"ALL I want. A heap of tuna run out there in the Atlantic. I hooked one the other day that weighed seventy-five pounds. Yeah, he got away. You think that's a big one? Huh, some fellows get three-hundred-pound tuna out there. President Roosevelt was up here fishing a while back. Naw, he didn't catch much. What do I think is the best fish you can look for in these waters? Well, pound to pound, our bluefish is the gamest and best fish that can be caught."

We were descending the stairs as he talked. I clung to the guard rail, but old Captain Buckridge sort of galloped down. The wind almost knocked us from our feet as we hurried toward the barracks. Inside, the kitchen was warm and cozy. And sure enough, Bing Crosby was singing—a recording.

"Sure glad that Crosby fellow makes

"YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONCERTS" BEGIN 8TH SEASON UNDER BATON OF JOHN BARBIROLI SATURDAY

MUSICIANS are commonly held to be impractical. But no one in his right mind would say that of Ernest Schelling, beloved conductor of the Young People's Concerts sponsored each year by the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Society. The society records with gratitude that since Schelling began his work of popularizing the symphony fifteen years ago thousands of children have listened to him and learned, and many have become subscribers and supporters of the regular Philharmonic series.

This year, because Schelling ("Uncle Ernest") is under the care of oculists in Lausanne, Switzerland, suffering from an eye injury, he will be unable to conduct the half-dozen children's concerts marking the fifteenth anniversary of the undertaking so closely associated with his name. Instead, John Barbirolli, brilliant young British-born successor to the great Toscanini as conductor of the Philharmonic, will open the series Saturday morning, and Rudolph Ganz, one of the foremost of living pianists and composers, will wield the baton at the other scheduled performances on January 15 and 29, February 12 and 26, and March 12.

The season about to begin marks not only the fifteenth anniversary of the Young People's Concerts but the eighth anniversary of their broadcast over the Columbia network. From Carnegie Hall in New York City, where an audience of children and studious adults hears the symphonies of the masters, listens to commentary, and sees stereopticon slides of the scenes they portray, the concerts are annually carried by radio to the entire nation.

Although Schelling will be unable to take part in the series this year, it is inextricably identified with his own personality and history. He is a skilled composer and a virtuoso among pianists. Born in Belvidere, New Jersey, he made his debut at four, toured Europe at eight, moved on to enduring fame as he grew older. He was a captain in the American army during the World War, emerged with a Distinguished Service Medal and the French Legion of Honor. His writings include compositions for both the violin and the piano and many songs.

"There is no use," Schelling himself once said, "in having a series of great symphonic concerts all over the country if we are to be forever fighting for audiences. The real lover of symphonic music in most cases will not be the person who has gained his first acquaintance with music in adult years. The time to begin is with children, and the interest must be aroused not by the mere dragging of children to concerts but by more active and direct means. The great possible danger is that a child should ever become bored."

"The desire for song, for melody, harmony and rhythm exists in most of us. It is only a matter of awakening good taste at as early an age as possible. You may be sure that children who are having their interest aroused by concerts especially prepared for them will develop such a genuine love for symphonic music that they will always be patrons of symphony concerts."

"Giving concerts for children is not at all like giving concerts for adults. In the first place, children must be kept at attention every minute, from the beginning to the end of a performance, which lasts about an hour and a quarter. There is no intermission and there are hardly any pauses. The affair must be what the children call 'snappy' or they are likely to grow restless. You must never watch children play. You must get right down on the floor and play with them. It is for this reason that I talk to the children at my concerts and ask them to answer; that we sing themes, and that we look over the different instruments."

LOWELL THOMAS AND GEORGE BYE TEAMS CLASH IN "SPELLING-BEE" OVER NBC SUNDAY

Film Comedienne Zasu Pitts will be on Al Jolson's show Tuesday

"Hollywood in Person" stars Film Youngster Jackie Cooper Monday

Film's Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., is "Silver Theater" star Sunday

Sunday "General Motors" features Austrian Tenor Richard Tauber

PEOPLE who saw the old-fashioned spelling match go into limbo along with McGuffey's readers, Ray's arithmetics, the little red schoolhouse, and the waspish old-maid teacher must be rejoicing greatly at its emergence into new glory.

Within the last eighteen months the hum of the spelling-bee has again become loud in the land. It has recaptured popular fancy, established itself as a radio entertainment feature, become a parlor pastime in the houses of sophisticates, and been written about in periodicals. One enterprising publisher has even brought out a book about it.

It may not replace the cross-word puzzle, because it isn't a solitaire game and you almost have to have the neighbors over when you want to have a whirl at it, but it is at least as firmly entrenched as the question-and-answer craze which swept the nation a few years ago.

In spelling-bees broadcast last season, teams of husbands spelled against teams of wives, the firemen of Chicago tussled with the firemen of New York, the grandmothers of Boston sent a team against the grandmothers of New York, and the postal clerks of Buffalo matched learning with the postal clerks of Philadelphia.

This week brings together two teams of celebrities in a match which will be broadcast over NBC Sunday afternoon—a contest between Lowell Thomas' "Nine Old Men," and George Bye's "Prehistoric Sluggers." (The names are carried over from last summer's softball wars, which saw the same two teams in action.)

THOMAS will pick a ten-man starting line-up from a squad composed of Frank Parker, Frank Cox, Colonel William Donovan, Bill Spence, F. Chase Taylor, Eddie Egan, Paul Webb, Lou Lehr, Homer Croy, Dale Carnegie, Ted Shane, James Melton, Gregory Mason, and Prosper Buranelli.

Bye, as an authors' agent, has an abundance of talent on hand. His men will be chosen from this list: Frank Buck, Gene Tunney, Westbrook Pegler, Jack Pegler, Stanley High, H. T. Webster, Quentin Reynolds, Heywood Brown, Deems Taylor, Frederick S. Tisdale, Harold W. Ross, Hendrik Willem van Loon, and Michael A. Connor.

The umpire will be NBC's impresario of orthography, Paul Wing, who has become official spelling-master for the network. Wing culls newspapers and periodicals for the words he uses in the matches, backstopping himself with real puzzlers taken from dictionaries. He goes into each bout with four lists, graded progressively as to difficulty. If at the end of the first ten minutes of a half-hour broadcast he hasn't eliminated a third of the contestants, he shifts to a harder list of words. Other changes are made at the end of fifteen and twenty minutes, as the situation happens to warrant.

AMERICAN FARM BUREAU CONVENTION TO BE BROADCAST FROM CHICAGO ON TUESDAY

MOST readers of the daily newspapers know what part a Chamber of Commerce plays in the life of the average American community. Few know what a Farm Bureau is, how important it is to American agriculture. Fewer still know how great a factor it is in the social and economic lives of the people it represents, how close it is to them.

Tuesday of this week, with Congress meeting in a special session and the perennial farm problem at the door, the American Farm Bureau Federation, representing some thirty-six agricultural states, holds its nineteenth annual convention in Chicago, entertaining among its guest-speakers Secretary Wallace of the Department of Agriculture, Senators Arthur Capper, George L. Berry, Alben W. Barkley and James P. Pope, Marinier S. Eccles, head of the Federal Reserve System, and Robert H. Jackson, assistant Attorney-General. Part of the proceedings will be aired during the National Farm and Home Hour over NBC to a vast farm audience.

MEMBERSHIP in the American Farm Bureau Federation at the end of November was approximately 400,000 families, which, at the Department of Agriculture average of 4.1 persons per family, means that the federation represents some 1,640,000 farm folk. An auxiliary organization, the Associated Women of the American Farm Bureau Federation, founded in December, 1935, boasts a membership of 425,000, and is said to be the first nation-wide federation of farm women.

The American Farm Bureau Federation roosts comfortably at the apex of a pyramid built on 15,000 community farm-bureau units, 1,800 county units. It maintains national headquarters in Chicago, publishes an ably edited magazine, "The Nation's Agriculture" (formerly "The Bureau Farmer"), and has legislative offices in Washington, where its representatives hopefully sow seeds among the assembled legislators and cultivate their programs.

The federation, at the last regular session of Congress, fought for the proposed Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1937, a rebuilt version of the old A. A. A., which was invalidated by the Supreme Court; it has backed the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, the Commodity Exchange Act of 1936, rural electrification on a cooperative basis, the construction of farm-to-market roads, and scores of other legislative undertakings.

The county agent and his helpers act as advisors. In many counties home bureaus, headed by women schooled in domestic science, assist farm wives. For the sons and daughters of farmers, there are 4-H clubs, the Future Farmers of America, fairs, exhibits and vocational training. In this fashion the farm bureau plays an important part in the daily lives of its member families; a more important part in the history of the times.

"MADRIGAL SINGERS" SUNDAY BRING MUSIC POPULAR IN ENGLAND DURING ELIZABETH'S TIME

ENGLAND in Elizabeth's time was fat and prosperous, and the arts flourished bravely. Home-made music was as common in the great houses of the merchants as contract bridge is in America today. Thomas Morley wrote, in 1597, that in Hengrave Hall, home of Sir Thomas Kytson, wool-merchant, it was the custom to hand song-books to the guests after supper each evening (supper was served at 5:30) with the request that they all join in the singing of madrigals.

The madrigal is hard to define, and its origin is almost lost in the mists of time, but it reached a peak of popularity in the England of Elizabeth's day, and set patterns both in music and in poesy. Musically, it is a pastoral lyric, a shepherd's song, often amorous, designed for part-singing; poetically, it is a short lyric of from six to thirteen lines built on three rhymes.

It came from sunny Provence, home of the troubadours, but it was not until two centuries after the last of that madcap race of gentleman adventurers had vanished that it appeared as an art form. Adrian Willaert, a Flemish musician, who moved to Italy from the Netherlands early in the sixteenth century is generally credited with developing the madrigal and bringing it to popularity. England at that time was caught in the throes of the Reformation, and the effects of the Italian Renaissance were somewhat slow to be felt, but when the madrigal did reach England it flowered fully, then slowly died.

Last summer Lee Jones of NBC's music library undertook a revival of interest in the madrigal. This Sunday his Madrigal Singers—Elizabeth Fackimer, Eileen Ellsworth, Virginia Walker, Charles Harrison, and Earle Stires—will be heard in the first of a series of three broadcasts. With them will be Yella Pessl, famed harpsichordist, playing music of the sixteenth, seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, the heyday of the harpsichord.

Among the Elizabethan poets whose words were set as madrigals by the expert composers of the age were Edmund Spenser, Philip Sidney, Ben Jonson, Robert Greene, Christopher Marlowe, Michael Drayton, Thomas Campian, John Donne and Sir Walter Raleigh. Curiously, however, there is no record that any of the writings of their great contemporary, Shakespeare, were set to music in madrigal form.

There were no concert halls in England in that day, and music grew best in the homes of the wealthy. In the great houses of the merchants, composers were often retained as resident musicians. Among the most distinguished writers of madrigals in England were William Byrd, John Wilbye, John Dowland, Thomas Morley and Orlando Gibbons. There are extant today, from all sources, more than 1,000 madrigals written by about 100 different composers.

As the madrigal captured popular favor in Merrie England, collections came to be printed and distributed. In 1604, one famous volume, "The Triumphs of Orkana," was published. In the late seventeenth century, however, interest in the composition and singing of madrigals had dwindled, and although part-singing was still a favorite pastime, the songs lacked the characteristics of the madrigals, which passed gradually into the shadows.

The program offered by the Madrigal Singers this Sunday will consist not only of madrigals of the Elizabethan period but of other early vocal music, interspersed with harpsichord music played by Miss Pessl. The harpsichord, one of the predecessors of the modern piano, was a popular musical instrument in the seventeenth century. It has a brilliant tone, but critics say it lacks the power to convey the depth of feeling that can be realized with piano music.

COLUMBIA'S "Saturday Night Swing Club," a weekly session of hot music for rhythm fans, starring Leith Stevens, orchestra leader, and guests from every department of torrid harmony, has become a radio institution.

It ranks as a standard guide for every swing fan. Fat books contain the praises of listeners written from all parts of the United States and a couple of places somewhat beyond the borders.

Since the Swing Club's debut last year, it has uncovered considerable talent, most notably Raymond Scott, whose recordings with his Quintet top most sales in swing disks. Among prominent guests heard on the Swing Club have been Bunny Berigan, Red Norvo, Red Nichols, Tommy Dorsey, Duke Ellington and Fats Waller.

Joining in the Swing Club just for the love of it, as guest soloists or merely to play with the Stevens regulars, fellow artists look forward to a "jam session" because it is a musician's show, respected for its authenticity, admired universally for its conviction that what it is doing is art in a popular medium.

The "session" is on and it's a race between one of radio's "hottest" drummers, Billy Gussak, and Walter Gross, ace pianist, as they swing out in a fast arrangement. Real "jam sessions" often last for hours

WAGNER'S music in concert tells eloquent stories even without the aid of stage sets and costumes. They are absorbing tales, grandiose in theme and treatment. Profound philosophies, some of them applicable to the life and politics of our own time, are to be found, particularly in the four music-dramas comprising the mammoth cycle, "The Ring of the Nibelung."

The two "Lohengrin" Preludes heard today are striking contrasts, one mystical, the other ardent. Listening to the "Tannhaeuser" Overture, one marvels that at its first production in Paris (when the opera had its premiere there in 1861) the work was vociferously hissed and jeered on account of political intrigues against Wagner's sponsor, Napoleon III.

Siegfried's horn-call proclaims its own eloquence as that mighty hero journeys on to doughtier deeds.

CONDUCTORS of symphony concerts assume such importance today and reap such generous honors and moneys that it is difficult to imagine a time when they played a minor role and represented merely a part of the orchestra. Nevertheless, history records just such a picture.

In the earliest symphonic days, the player who sat at the first-violin desk gave the starting signal, and by nods of his head indicated the proper tempos. In a later era, he beat time with his bow. Then came the period of the leader who was not a playing member of the band but stood up facing it and functioned by giving directions with his hands. The baton did not come into use until the early part of the eighteenth century when an obscure German started the custom. However, it became generally popular only after Mendelssohn adopted the innovation and did his conducting with an unusually long wand.

Strange how things move in cycles, forward and backward! Wassili Safonoff came from Russia to lead the New York Philharmonic in 1904, and he astonished the natives by discarding the baton for his hands. Sometimes, in fact, when he interpreted material like the thunderous march from Tchaikowsky's "Pathetic Symphony," Safonoff even beat the air with his balled fists. Leopold Stokowski was the next to cultivate the purely manual method. You have seen him in the films and know how eloquently he pantomimes with his arms, wrists and fingers. Eugene Ormandy is another batonless one. The Titan of them all, however, retains the conventional style, for Toscanini still conjures forth his magic with his characteristic small stick.

When social equality followed the Revolution in Russia, no instrument-player was willing to be commanded, and so conductorless orchestras became the vogue, all the details of a performance being set and agreed upon by the players at the rehearsals. Other countries then tried the experiment, even America having such a symphonic unit without a pilot... for several concerts given at Carnegie Hall in New York. The experiment was everywhere deemed unsatisfactory and soon gave way to the old order of things.

Some persons unversed in matters symphonic still look upon the conductor as merely the man who signals "go" and "stop," "fast" and "slow," "loud" and "soft" to the players who follow his baton. Most of us know, however, that he is the key-note of the performance, the one who fashions the entire interpretation and molds it into a complex expression of his own ideas and feelings in relation to the composer's music. The conductor is to the orchestra what a stage director is to a play.

Sometimes I am glad that radio listeners cannot see conductors but only hear them, for their gestures and bodily movements often engage the eye at the expense of the ear, and detract attention from the music itself. In Berlin I once saw a conductor weave and jump up and down so vio-

"THE Flying Dutchman," not performed as often as Wagner's later operas, nevertheless is an absorbing work, with its ghostly story of the seafarer condemned to endless voyaging, and the maiden who renounces love and life to bring him peace.

In the Overture, the composer paints the might of angry winds and waves. One also hears the longing theme of the Eternal Wanderer, and excerpts from the Ballade in which Senta (the sacrificial maid) chants the story of his tragic trouble.

Richard Strauss' "Don Juan," one of his earlier symphonic scores, is based on dramatic verses by the Austrian poet, Nicholas Lenau, whose hero is a seeker after the one charmer who represents all the allurements of womanhood. Strauss' tone picture reflects the Don's audacity, passion, disillusionment and death.

THIS eminent German artist pair chooses to perform two essentially amiable examples by Beethoven, composed in his younger period before ironic tragedy had entered his soul. Opus 12 dates from 1799 (Beethoven was then twenty-nine) and Opus 24 from 1801. The latter's sunshiny content has led to its being known as the "Spring Sonata." The radiant music smiles infectiously.

Opus 12 is dedicated to Antonio Salieri, and I feel inclined to say that the honor is too good for him. Although he served as the teacher of Beethoven and Schubert, Salieri (director of music at the Vienna Royal Court) was the jealous composer who repeatedly prevented the impoverished young Mozart from obtaining favors.

ELSEWHERE on this page a paragraph tells about Percy Grainger's love for English folk-music. He seems most happy when he is arranging and playing those old airs, whose harmonies he modernizes somewhat, but without disturbing the contours of the tunes.

Handel-in-the-Strand, however, is a twentieth century inspiration by Grainger (adapting the ancient style) descriptive of Handel's reactions if that composer could walk along the famous London thoroughfare today and note the changes since he trod that street on his first visit to the English capital in 1710, where he later became a permanent resident, and finally dying there in 1759.

Handel's popularity in England was sensational, and climaxed with his "Messiah," even though the premiere of that masterpiece took place in Dublin during the last year of his life. To this day, the immortal oratorio is almost as familiar to English people as their "God Save The King."

JOSEF HAYDN (1732-1809), known as "the father of the symphony," was not really the originator of that form, but he did compose an almost incredible number of symphonies, 125 in all. Only about a dozen of them remain in our repertoire. He wrote with amazing facility and speed and his output included 77 string quartets, 51 concertos, 53 sonatas, about the same number of trios, 14 operas, etc.

Haydn had plenty of time to pile up his musical legacy, for he enjoyed many years of employment as conductor at the palace of Prince Esterhazy, who treated the composer with every consideration, for he fully recognized his genius. As a consequence of freedom from financial worry (the unhappy lot of his younger contemporaries, Mozart and Schubert) Haydn was predominantly cheerful in his music, but he had also deeply feeling moods in the slow movements of many of his works, and in his two towering oratorios, "The Creation" and "The Seasons." In the "Military" Symphony, the martial episodes are easily recognizable and carry their own vivid explanation.

The E Minor Symphony is Brahms' last, and might be regarded as a sort of apotheosis of nature, for a verdant fragrance permeates the score, which breathes a deep love of humanity.

Kirsten Flagstad . . . "Sieglinde"

Lauritz Melchior . . . "Siegmund"

lently that he fell from the platform, and I could not help feeling that he had been justly punished. Toscanini sways a bit now and then, but mostly his attitude is quiet and concentrated. The posing, theatrical type of leader might well take a lesson from the Maestro and learn that symphonic interpretation does not emanate from the acting of the conductor but from his mind, heart and imagination.

Deems Taylor, whose radio talks about music on the Sunday Philharmonic and the Wednesday Chesterfield programs are so informal and informative, tells friends that in two years at most he intends to retire from all activities except composing. While he will be missed from the ether, his admirers may look forward to added fine works from his musical pen. His "Peter Ibbetson" is the most successful American opera ever produced at the Metropolitan, and his "Looking Glass Suite" ranks with the best symphonic suites.

Europe has recently acclaimed Rose Bampton, who is to be a Chesterfield artist Wednesday. Now a soprano, Miss Bampton started her career as a contralto but gradually moved her voice into the higher altitudes. The transition is not unique in operatic annals. Olive Fremstad sang both soprano and contralto roles at the Metropolitan Opera. So did Margaret Matzenauer. The celebrated Jean de Reszke was first a baritone, then a tenor. For some strange reason, singers never revise their range downwards, or perhaps the reason is not so strange after all, because higher voices get the higher pay!

Fritz Reiner, in charge of the Banks program Monday, also puts art above athletic display, and confines himself strictly to giving cues to his orchestra and carrying out the interpretations explained at his rehearsals. He shines in opera as well as symphony, and only a few weeks ago led the Los Angeles performance of "Tristan and Isolde" which netted $24,000. That short season, by the way, garnered $100,000 in gross receipts.

The Bamberger concert Friday features Percy Grainger, Australian pianist and composer, known best perhaps for his finely felt arrangements of old English folk-tunes. He had the privilege of knowing intimately Norway's greatest composer, Grieg, and having that master tell him, "You play my piano Concerto better than anyone else in the world."

"DIE WALKUERE"

by Richard Wagner

The Cast:

Siegmund Lauritz Melchior
Hunding Ludwig Hofmann
Wotan Friedrich Schorr
Sieglinde Kirsten Flagstad
Bruennhilde Marjorie Lawrence
Fricka Kerstin Thorborg
Conductor, Artur Bodanzky

Indicating the tremendous popularity of the later Wagner operas, Edward Johnson, artistic director of the Metropolitan, made "Tristan and Isolde" the attraction on his opening night November 29. A record-breaking house and an ovational audience proved the wisdom of his choice.

Veterans like myself well remember when Wagner was boredom and a penance for the fashionable box-holders at the Metropolitan, who succeeded in keeping him out of the repertoire entirely for several seasons.

"Die Walkuere" (The Valkyr) has come into such vogue that four of its numbers frequently figure on the "Pop" programs of symphony orchestras—the "Spring Song," the "Magic Fire Music," "Ride of the Valkyries" and Bruennhilde's ringing cry of challenge, "Yo-Ho-To-Ho."

Second of the "Ring of the Nibelung" cycle of four operas, "Die Walkuere" is perhaps most consistently appealing, with its poetical story of the youthfully romantic Siegmund and Sieglinde, the introduction of the vital Bruennhilde, and the despair and forced vengeance of the god, Wotan.

Act I

After a storm prelude tonalizing the fury of the elements, we see the interior of Hunding's forest dwelling. He has abducted Sieglinde and entrapped her in unwilling marriage. Hunding is the avowed enemy of Wotan, father of Siegmund and Sieglinde, who are brother and sister, but were separated in early childhood. They do not recognize each other when the exhausted Siegmund (fleeing the pursuit of Hunding) staggers into that savage warrior's home. They immediately fall under the spell of a strange attraction. Hunding returns, and bowing to the law of hospitality, bids Siegmund tarry overnight, but warns him that he must fight to the death in the morning. Sieglinde puts a sleeping-potion in Hunding's drink. She tells Siegmund of a sword which a mysterious stranger (Wotan) has thrust into the huge ash-tree (whose trunk rises from the center of the chamber) and that he had declared only a true hero's strength could remove the weapon and rescue the unhappy wife of Hunding. Siegmund exerts his power and draws forth the sword. He and Sieglinde elope after singing their marvelous duet of passion. The finest music of the act is in the finale, and in the recurring love measures heard after their first meeting.

Act II

Hunding pursues the fleeing Siegmund and Sieglinde. Fricka (wife of Wotan), goddess of matrimonial sanctity, demands that he avenge the violation of Hunding's hearth. Knowing of Wotan's device of the fabulous sword, Fricka decrees that he shall nevertheless permit Hunding to triumph. Radiant Bruennhilde appears (she is the daughter of Wotan and leader of his band of Valkyries or heroic Amazons who ride flying steeds through the clouds and bear fallen warriors to Valhalla, the heaven of heroes). Her "Yo-Ho-To-Ho" call is soon silenced by Wotan. She tells him that she intends to help the hunted couple but he commands her to leave them to their fate. Siegmund and Hunding duel, and just as the former is winning the victory, Wotan shatters the mighty sword with his magic spear, and Siegmund is killed by Hunding, who in turn dies at the hands of the wrathful god. Bruennhilde disobeys his orders and spirits away the fainting Sieglinde.

Act III

In the final act, preceded by the blazing orchestral "Ride of the Valkyries," we learn that Sieglinde is being sheltered by the Valkyries, soon terrified by the descent of the enraged Wotan, who decrees that the pleading Bruennhilde sleep on a rocky height surrounded by magic fire, until a hero conquers the flames and rescues her. After the touching "Farewell" of Wotan, the opera ends with the beautiful "Fire Music."

Speakers Condemn, Praise Radio at Conference

Radio's development into the field of educational service met with both criticism and verbal back-slapping from speakers who featured the Second Annual Conference on Educational Broadcasting in Chicago recently.

William S. Paley, president of the Columbia Broadcasting System, in stressing his point that radio's purpose should be one of offering information of individual interest, cited the spectacular development of broadcasting in the United States, and the manner in which it has become a "driving force for democracy."

He emphasized the tremendous part that radio has played in producing a more enlightened public consciousness and interest in national and international affairs.

On the other hand, in one of the most challenging addresses before the conference, Merrill Denison, critic and author, told the assembled educators and broadcasters that the blight of cultural anarchy—incompetency, inefficiency, and a lack of better program leadership permeates the entire radio industry.

Prof. T. V. Smith, well-known participant in the University of Chicago "Round Table" broadcasts, argued that the answer to the problem of basic improvement in broadcasting lay in a more stringent governmental control, a viewpoint which was contested by Dr. Harry Woodburn Chase, chancellor of New York University. Dr. Chase asserted that a censor's curb throttles freedom of expression, without which radio's contribution to public enlightenment and education is sterile.

Both educators and broadcasters attending the conference expressed the convictions that even since the first meeting a year previous there had been a closer cooperation between educational and broadcasting interests in the use of the facilities available for public enlightenment. That an even greater development of those facilities and closer cooperation would be existent during the coming year was the general conclusion of the delegates.

Kaltenborn and the brisk Bob Trout—but congratulations to Columbia for the persuasion that brings him back in what should prove a brilliant and stimulating solo!

Keep a Hearty Appetite for Learning— SATISFY IT WITH EDUCATIONAL PROGRAMS

HOW frequently have you watched the uncomfortable embarrassment of men or women in the presence of others whose learning seemed more extensive than their own? How often have you, perhaps, felt the pang of frustration when confronted with the conversational or other brilliance of persons whose knowledge seemed to show up gaps in your own mental background?

These feelings are common in life today. But the intelligent man and woman reckons them as challenges rather than obstacles on the roadway to richer friendships, broadened social opportunities and success. For deep as the immediate sense of one's inferiority may be, these differences in mental equipment and ability are for the most part more apparent than real—small, in fact, and more easily overcome than most of us suspect.

Down through the ages it has been the wise man who has known himself to be a fool, while the ignoramus has strutted his self-conscious learning. And today, it is equally true that the person whose education you may envy, whose seeming knowledge and grasp of information and affairs makes you ill at ease, is simply parading an educational polish, a veneer as thin and as easily exposed as the veneer on a cheap "reproduction" of an antique colonial highboy.

Such intellectual sugar-coatings usually lead their possessor into a satisfied sense of superiority quite as dangerous and quite as unsound as the sense of inferiority that frequently blights the lives of those whose schooling has been limited.

The New Bridge for Educational Gaps

A thousand avenues of learning are open to the man or woman with that desire to learn. The way of books and the classroom is but one. The new way of educational-cultural radio is sound, exciting, interesting. It is today's most potent medium for the effective enlargement of mental horizons, for the dissemination of knowledge—the fundamental tool from which we can all forge a greater success in a world that increasingly demands facts and sound thinking.

Educational radio bridges swiftly and effectively the gaps in mental equipment left by interrupted schooling, and offers a widening opportunity to supplement whatever background we have with new ideas, wider understanding and deeper appreciation of the forces that determine our thoughts and actions.

One of its chief merits is that it is free. You pay tuition with a twist of the dial—and herein lies one of the great challenges to those of us who intend to use it profitably. We are prone to ignore whatever costs nothing, or at best to give it indifferent notice. We must remember that in education there are no bargains! If we are truly to benefit from the wealth of informational programs on the air today we must invest time and patience. We may have occasionally to forego a few minutes' witless pleasure with our favorite comedian for the greater personal profit of quiet stimulation from a great scientist, a thoughtful editor, a great teacher or thinker. But who will question the difference in value? We must combine the desire to learn with the will to listen regularly. In listening to learn we must overcome the simple problem of learning to listen.

Keep a hearty appetite for learning. Start today to make serious listening play the part that it can in your effort to expand your interests and knowledge. For radio brings us now the soundest of schooling in the greatest classroom of all—the classroom of life, portrayed in its infinite phases and with increasing vitality on the networks of the nation.

WILL THE HOME SURVIVE?

Thursday, NBC-Blue, 4:30 to 5 p.m.

The church, the school and the home have publicized the ominous threats to the most universal institution in the world today—the home. Now the General Federation of Women's Clubs takes up the radio cudgel to clarify further the threats and the bulwarks of this ancient and beloved center of individual and social life.

These cudgels will be in powerful and thoughtfully analytical hands when New York's Mayor LaGuardia, a champion of social reform, Mrs. Eugene B. Meyer, wife of the publisher of the Washington Post, and authoress Kathleen Norris speak on the problem-subject "Will the American Home Survive," Thursday.

This broadcast is one in the monthly series on the topic "Education for Living," under the auspices of the General Federation.

Mothers . . .

CHILD GROWS UP . . . problems

Sat., NBC-Blue, 10:30 to 10:45 a.m.

Mothers from Coast to Coast are making profit of that pause between baking time and the regular Saturday morning shopping tour to confer at their loudspeakers with Miss Katherine Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor. Miss Lenroot brings to this new NBC educational feature a long and intensive experience in the field of mental hygiene and social work with children. She offers practical hints and expert advice on problems pertaining to child rearing.

In addition to her own discussions she presents, from time to time, guest speakers who are outstanding authorities in the branches of pediatrics.

Liberal Divine . . .

National Vespers . . . realities

Sundays, NBC-Blue, 4 to 4:30 p.m.

Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick!—that's the true title line for the announcement that brings you "National Vespers" each Sunday afternoon. For the intense personality that throbs behind every word he utters means much more to his radio audience of uncounted thousands than sermon subjects or scripture lessons.

Here is a man of wisdom, of intellectual depth and breadth, and withal a firm grasp on common realities that is found all too infrequently among our inspirational leaders.

Dr. Fosdick's talks are more than sermons, messages or spiritual lessons—they are the stuff of life seen through the eyes and the heart of a man with a mind as true to itself as his faith is true to God.

We pay sincere if inadequate tribute to Dr. Fosdick and his splendid work when we say that National Vespers would be as great and as good as afternoon spice for our busy weekdays as it is the outstanding program of our Sunday afternoons.

Check-Up

A Challenge for Serious Listeners

1. What two South American statesmen and soldiers met for the "World's Most Famous Interview"—and for what purpose?
2. Review in your mind the arguments pro and con for government planning of the national economy discussed on last week's Town Meeting program. Who were the speakers? For what are they noted?
3. What was the reward of the Sun God as told in the legends of the Hopi Indians?
4. Why should every American home with children endeavor to/not to develop an executive in the family?
5. What have improvements in scientific methods of exploration meant to (1) science, (2) our every-day lives?
6. Name to yourself three important questions currently before the House, and/or the Senate of the U. S. Have you formed any definite conviction regarding these questions? How? Why?
7. Where is Siberia? (Check yourself with a map.) What are the principal characteristics of this vast country? Is Manchukuo part of Siberia?
8. What are the foundations of a sustaining philosophy? Your own? Those discussed by Dr. Harry E. Fosdick on the National Vespers program?
9. Is the best general diet the one that is confined to several foods with specific food values or the one that combines a wide variety of good foods?
10. What national institution collected a thousand rare animals and birds alive in Sumatra and shipped them half-way 'round the globe? How was this accomplished? And why?

ALL ANSWERS TO FACTUAL QUESTIONS were given in programs recommended last week.

Here, it is hoped, we shall meet each week for a quick discussion of programs that will most actively help us to understand better the world in which we live, and how in practical ways we can make it spin more successfully and happily for us.

AIRIALTO LOWDOWN

BY MARTIN LEWIS

SOME people seem to believe that radio is dependent on the movies for talent. Well, maybe it is for names, but not entirely for good programs and talent. While sponsors are conducting a search for something new—a search usually ending up with the much-worn variety type of show, slinging “names” at the listeners with disappointing results—many good, popular radio programs are on the air unnoticed by the advertisers but heard and liked by the listeners. The NBC “Breakfast Club” is one of the most popular sustaining shows on the networks, and yet Don McNeill and his gay troupe have never been able to lure a sponsor. The CBS “Saturday Night Swing Club” is tops right now, and has a huge following. Mutual network has a novel musical program called “Jazz Nocturne.” It presents musical numbers in a way that’s unusual and interesting—and its popularity is attested to by the years that it has been on the air. Then there’s Ted Malone’s poetic “Between the Bookends”; the NBC Radio Guild, one of the finest dramatic programs on the air; Harvey Hays’ “Words and Music”; and many others, too numerous to mention. . . . All fine programs that have been ignored because most sponsors believe they must have big names, and therefore seek movie stars. This is a big mistake, in my humble opinion. These programs we have mentioned are not new. . . . they have been on the air for several years. . . . and a radio program has to be good to last. Think it over, Mr. Sponsor.

Our Mr. Fairfax reports that he has had more requests regarding the whereabouts of Joan Blaine, the popular radio actress, than for any other particular star. Your reporter immediately donned his Sherlock Holmes outfit and did some sleuthing, with the result that I can now tell you that Miss Blaine will be back on the air early in 1938 as the star of a new dramatic show. Since leaving radio last spring, she has received many handsome offers, but, I am informed, the one she accepted is the best by far. It will establish her among the higher-paid dramatic artists of radio.

Scores of inquiries have also been received regarding stars who were heard over the air several years ago but who have not been broadcasting recently. I know many readers will be happy to learn that quite a few of them are being brought back via the “Musical Moments” transcription series which is heard over many stations throughout the country. Among those who are being presented as guest artists are Annette Hanshaw, Willie Morris, Stuart Churchill (former Fred Waring tenor), Shirley Howard, Jack Arthur, Arlene Jackson, Virginia Rea, Walter Cassel, Lois Ravel, Irene Beasley and several others. Victor Arden and his orchestra supply the music. I can’t help but remember that it wasn’t so many years ago that Annette Hanshaw used to be one of the biggest names on the air. She has been absent from the studios for almost two years and I am quite sure her host of fans welcome her back.

Another program that will be heard Coast to Coast but on the Mutual network, starting the latter part of this month, will be your old friend, “The Voice of Experience.” He will answer letters from listeners who seek advice.

Readers are constantly requesting information about Frank Parker. Recently I reported that there was a possibility of Parker going on the new cigarette show which will feature Paul Whiteman and his orchestra. However, this deal has gone with the wind; so Frank, who is playing vaudeville dates, is still available for radio work.

I’d like to make a prediction that the tune, “Rosalie,” from the picture of the same name, will be No. 1 in the Hit Parade before many weeks have passed. It’s so easy on the ears. My personal Recording Hit Parade of the Week includes, “I Want to Be In Winchell’s Column” as played by Isham Jones; Horace Heidt’s recordings of “Sweet Someone” and “Mission by the Sea”; and “Rosalie,” quite ably played by Art Kassel’s orchestra.

His face looked familiar and soon I learned it was John Holbrook, who, some of you may remember, was the winner of the diction award some years ago. This award used to be given to the year’s outstanding announcer.

One of my informants passes the word along that two of radio’s popular daytime serials will fold some time in January. “Today’s Children” (which has been on the air for the same spon-program; then he has to run over to NBC and rehearse with Eddy Duchin for the Elizabeth Arden show heard the same night. After his rehearsals, he goes to his hotel and puts on a tuxedo, dashes to the studio for the “Hobby Lobby” program; then back to NBC for the Duchin show. You think he’s through?—by no means! He then goes to the Essex House, where he sings with Dick Himber’s orchestra; back again to CBS for the “Hobby Lobby” repeat show; and once more to the Essex House until 1 p.m. No, Stuart has no trouble at all falling asleep that night!

Pretty Betty Winkler is also kept busy by radio. She is the star of the “Girl Alone” series, which is heard five times a week. Now she is a permanent member of the “Fibber McGee and Molly” programs on Monday nights, and she is also on the Eddie Guest show on Tuesday nights.

Sportscaster Ted Husing wants me to announce for him that despite anything you may have heard or read in various columns and newspapers, he is not getting married; nor is he even thinking about it.

Ork Pilot Abe Lyman spent most of the summer in Hollywood and likes it so much that he planned a return trip for an indefinite stay. However, the lanky maestro and his orchestra will go into the French Casino, in New York, when it reopens around Christmastime, and I hear that he will have a financial interest in the place.

This is the tale of a dog. Warner Brothers Writer George Bricker breeds Great Danes. As a friendly gesture, he gave a female of the species named “Wally” to Phil Harris. Harris, with an overstock of pooches, donated Wally to Ken Murray as a fitting mate perhaps for Ken’s Irish Setter, “Duke.” But Duke and Wally began to make history by overturning the Murray dwelling, so Ken, recalling his long-standing friendship for Edgar Bergen, presented the Great Dane to Charlie McCarthy’s mouthpiece. . . . and now McCarthy wants Bergen to give Wally to Dorothy Lamour for Christmas!

Received a letter from the West Coast advising me that Eddie Cantor will broadcast from New York for eight weeks, starting January 5. Undoubtedly many New Yorkers would like to attend a Cantor program, but next week I will tell you why it is almost impossible for the average person to obtain tickets for a broadcast.

Announcer Dell Sharbutt came to New York several years ago to make his musical way as a concert baritone. Although his father, a Methodist minister, had sent him to Texas Christian University to study law, Dell was more interested in music. He played the organ, saxophone, flute, oboe, clarinet and piano, and wound up receiving a two-year scholarship—for his singing! Shortly after graduating, he won an Atwater-Kent audition and set out for New York. It didn’t take him long to realize that more study was in order and that unknown singers faced an almost impossible task. He turned to announcing in order to pay for singing-lessons and acquire a certain amount of fame. Apparently, he proved to be better than a country hand at announcing, for this current season finds him on nearly a dozen major network shows, including “We, the People,” “Hobby Lobby,” “Song Shop” and the Guy Lombardo program. Now, after all these years of waiting and studying music, Dell has been adjudged ready to make his concert debut. He admits, too, that his biggest problem will be to make his audiences forget that he is an announcer.

Top: Betty Grable of Friday night’s CBS “Song Time” was recently selected by a group of famous Hollywood artists as representing “The Ideal American Girl.” She’s shown here with her new million-dollar husband, Jackie Coogan. Left: Commentator John Nesbitt recently signed a five-year contract with M-G-M to direct short film subjects. He’ll soon be heard in a new show. Right: Rudy Vallee has completed his Hollywood stay. His show is now aired from New York

Richard Himber is supplying the music for a very novel radio program which is sponsored by Lucky Strike called “Melody Puzzles.” It is heard over WOR in New York. Listeners send in short dramatizations which imply the titles of songs, and members of the audience are supposed to guess what the titles are. There are cash awards for the winners. It’s a swell idea and very entertaining. This show will soon be heard on an NBC Coast-to-Coast network.

Mentioning old-timers of the air-lanes calls to mind one of the men I saw on a recent Tommy Dorsey program, whose only job was to say a few lines in the advertising announcement.

Announcer Andre Baruch may have an announcement of his own to make. Andre and Fredda Gibson, who both work on the Saturday night “Hit Parade” show, arm-in-arm it out of the studio after each program.

Stuart Allen is one of the busiest boys in radio, and it really has him hustling around. To give you an idea, here’s all he has to do on Wednesdays: In the early afternoon he must rehearse for his CBS “Hobby Lobby”

HOLLYWOOD SHOWDOWN

BY EVANS PLUMMER

MAE WEST, of the alluring lips and hips, at last has become a radio mercenary—not, please understand, for the money, but for the publicity of the thing. You see, Mae has a new picture, "Every Day's a Holiday," that is due to hit the nation's screens the middle of next month and Charlie McCarthy has promised to bring the celluloid opus to the attention of the Chase and Sanborn audience providing Mae will come up and see him, the sometime being this Sunday, December 12. Of course, the money won't be bad. Claims are that the sum paid will break all records for a one-time broadcast. But don't get Mae wrong. Dollars alone won't buy her talents. She's steadfastly refused several standing offers for her to work regularly on the radio for varying stipends reaching up to $5,000 a week. Mae has appeared on the air commercially once before in 1933 on Rudy Vallee's hour. She played a role from one of her pictures on "Hollywood Hotel" once, but accepted no salary for it. Her other microphonings have been few and non-commercial. They were a local community-fund broadcast, a "Hello" at the Adolph Zukor jubilee banquet and another short greeting at the premiere of her "I'm No Angel" film. Quite frankly, Mae will tell you she doesn't like radio . . . but she does kinda go for Charlie McCarthy.

Mae also may mention the news that she'll go personal-appearance touring soon, and when she does, you'll hear her singing six new tunes especially whipped up for her by Harry Barris, the Oakie College professor. Two you'll be whistling are "North, South, East and West" and "That Drummer Man." Incidentally, Barris has caught the Christmas spirit and composed "Angelus Bells" for the College's December 21 broadcast.

Jack Benny is having more trouble with that old Maxwell than goes on the air. Joke-minded listeners have been sending him spare parts express collect! . . . Last week he received an offer from a fan in Bloomington, N. J., who promised, for $1,000, to drive his 1925 Maxwell (in good shape) to Hollywood and present it to Jack. Or, as an optional proposition, the writer said that if Benny would come and get the heirloom car, he could have it for $100.

Jell-O's head man, by the way, anticipated Christmas by sending Phil Harris a couple of prize goats for the bandman's San Fernando Valley ranch. They've been christened "Buck" and "Daisy" . . . and while out at the Harris ranch, be it known that recipients of its Christmas cards will find them to be bids to a Christmas Eve Tom and Jerry party—with road map to the tucked-away home thoughtfully printed on their backs.

Eddie Cantor, will soon be eastward bound with his entire troupe (except Deanna Durbin) to air from New York for eight weeks beginning January 5. Theater work is the lure, but Eddie will return to Hollywood in March. Deanna, still busy on her latest picture, "Mad About Music," won't be able to join the Texaco Towners until February 9. Deanna's birthday, by the way, brought her a brand-new red convertible roadster with bright-red leather upholstery, but Papa will drive it 'til she can be licensed.

Two years ago Margaret Sullavan missed her appearance on the Lux Radio Theater because of an acute attack of laryngitis. This year, five days before she was to appear in the lead of "Petri-fied Forest" for the same program, she had an acute attack of appendicitis! But she wasn't going to miss again. Surrounded by ice-packs, she rehearsed at home as much as possible, while her theater rehearsals were handled by a vocal "stand-in," Margaret Brayton. Miss Sullavan managed to attend the final dress rehearsal, give a stellar performance for the actual broadcast—and then was put back to bed in ice-packs.

Unsettled at press time was the fate of Oakie College. To be renewed or shaken up was the question, with the odds stronger on renewal. However,

Fred disgustedly piped up, "Well, for Zanuck's sake! My tapeworm will thank I've gone crazy, too!"

Off a Live Mike: Alice Faye, according to friends, would welcome to her home the pitty-pat of baby shoes . . . Joe E. Brown and Patsy Flick were paired in one of three show set-ups auditioned last week for a tobacco advertiser . . . Allan Jones, the heart-throb tenor at M-G-M, fancies he'd 28 was second only to her great staircase scene in the picture "Stage Door" . . . To Stoopnagle and Budd for their good work on the "Hollywood Mardi Gras," a belief shared by the sponsor, who expects to call upon them soon again . . . To former Al Pearce Gangsters Tony Romano and Morey Amsterdam, whose new song, "You're Priceless," introduced by Pinky Tomlin, is worth many rehearsals.

Sid (he loves Hollywood) Skolsky tin-typed Charlie McCarthy on a recent broadcast. Charlie retaliated, next week made Sid air a pinetype of Skolsky as composed by McCarthy.

Los Angeles' latest bid for front pages across the country, the caving-in "mountain," has set the gagmen to work. Al Jolson's contribution to the spirit of the occasion has to do with some enterprising realtors who are selling large tracts of "restless real estate" which "may possibly even wind up at the valuable corner of Hollywood and Vine." Phil Baker, on the other hand, ad-libbed a nifty to his studio audience when the theater's lights suddenly went out just before his program went on the air. "So long, folks," he shouted. "I guess the moving mountain is headed this way!"

Neat Trick Department: If you're walking down a partly dark street and see two chaps stretching a rope across your path, look first to see if they're Lum 'n' Abner, and then, if they are, don't bother to step over or walk around the "rope," which really is only imaginary . . . They have more fun!

Rudy Vallee's last broadcast from Hollywood had its good and bad spots. Rudy himself seemed nervous, stumbled repeatedly. Eddie Green, the colored comic, read off a gag on "making doilies" that was decidedly blue and should never have been permitted. But Marek Windheim, the opera-singing comic, was decidedly a bright and entertaining spot. His novel introductions and his singing of "Mother Marchree" in Russian touched off a mirthquake. Arch Oboler's "Lo, the Poor Indian" was well written, too . . . The show had a happy ending for Rudy, nevertheless. He walked away from the studios, by the back-door exit, hand-in-hand with his beautiful brunet Hollywood flame, Gloria Youngblood . . . Ahhh!

Feg Murray received a most unusual letter the other day signed "Santa Claus" but postmarked Hollywood. The letter went on to eulogize at great length the department of Feg's eleven-year-old son, Johnny, for the past twelve months. Feg suspects collusion.

Some concert tours are flops, but if you'd hear Carmen Guizar's account of Hubby Tito's recent vocal conquest of South and Central America, you'd be convinced Tito really slayed them! To quote the lovely Carmen: "We arrived in Chile and there were about 15,000 people waiting for Boy Friend Tito to arrive. I am telling you this was one thrilling experience. There were really riots to get into the theaters to hear him sing and all the four days we were there he had to be protected by fifty carabinieri (cops to you). Then at Lima, there were people killed or hurt all during our stay there and both Tito and I thought this was too wonderful for words, as we really did not think he was as popular as that" . . . As I said before, Tito slayed 'em! Right now, since finishing a picture for Paramount, Tito and Carmen are resting in Hollywood . . . where the only riots are those which occur in the advertisement-subsidized trade papers when a movie review broadcaster fails to rate a premiering picture as highly as the trade press!

Top: With ink scarcely dry on his divorce decree, Maestro Johnny Green filed intention to wed Film Actress Betty Furness and married her November 26. Green will soon be back on the air. Left: Eddie Cantor is turning author these days. He has a magazine order for a 2,000-word story on his young singing star, Deanna Durbin. Right: Filmdom's Andrea Leeds: She's been seen around Hollywood gay spots with "Hollywood Hotel" Comic Ken Murray the anticipated changes won't take place before the new year dawns, and even then these may simmer down to a mere removal of the College to the NBC network at an earlier hour, plus a shifting of the Goodman swing session to the CBS spot now occupied by the Oakie pocus . . . But—IF Jack Oakie is dropped, Stuart Erwin will take over the comedy show, which would then be changed somewhat.

Fred Allen keeps the 20th Century-Fox lot in laughing mood. The other day he had to go through the same action seven times—the scene being his drinking of a strongly sugared cup of coffee and eating a sandwich. But when the eighth retake was ordered, not mind being regular master of ceremonies for the Maxwell House "Good News" airing, but his movie producers feel otherwise; don't want him tied up with weekly rehearsals . . . Kenny Baker has been renewed, with salary increase, for 26 weeks with Jack Benny effective Jan. 2.

Ken Murray will probably check out of "Hollywood Hotel" after December 25 and may turn the keys to his room over to a master of ceremonies of name caliber. Ken wants to go east in order to do show work.

Plums: To Andrea Leeds, whose realistic characterization in "Dark Victory" on the coffee show of November

SO YOU LIKE CONTESTS?

THIS department is trying something new this week. In the adjoining columns, where previously "Your Opportunity Guide" has listed all the prominent current contests, this week you'll find two listings under "This Week's Prize Special." There's a reason for this change. We call the new system "fixed focus" contesting.

The object of it all is simple. One of the first things we suggested to those who intrusted their contest careers to us was that they overcome the temptation to enter every contest that came along. "One at a time!" we urged.

Letters addressed to us lead us to believe that our readers are reducing their chances of winning by entering all the contests we announce. So each week we're concentrating our own attention on just two or three contests—and hoping our readers will follow our lead and select just one of them to enter each week.

The fact that we're not repeating announcements week after week allows us to add some things to this department. Under the "Contests of the Week" you'll find some tips on how to win these particular ones. And there's more space for us to give you the news of contesting, too.

We're not going to force anyone to follow our "fixed focus" system. Once each month we will list all the important contests—just as we have before. We'll do that in the first issue for each month. And more than that—if you can't wait for the first issue of the following month—we'll send you an advance copy of the listings if and when you ask for it. Just send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to "So You Like Contests," Dept. CL1, c/o RADIO GUIDE, 731 Plymouth Court, Chicago, Ill. We'll send it to you right away. Let us know what you think of this system, will you?

Facsimile Facts

Play the Hard Way!

Many contestants must have entered the recent Old Gold contest more than once! That's the only way we can explain the sudden increase in inquiries about facsimiles. We're unhappy to have to report it, but there is no definite answer to such questions.

The statement that facsimiles qualify entrants in contests is included in the rules because of federal law. In this way sponsors disclaim any intention to force the purchase of their product. In a strict interpretation, which the sponsor is free to make if he wants to, a facsimile must be an exact reproduction of the original. In most rules, "reasonably exact" facsimiles are admitted—but how reasonable?

The point at which facsimiles become "unreasonable" depends on the individual sponsor. For all sponsors, it's wise to make printing the same width and height as the original letters, to use color, and to outline them. If it can be done, put it on the same weight cardboard or paper as the original. And then don't expect too much!

There are many, many cases on record in which entries sent in with facsimiles have won. However, statistics seem to reveal very few large prizes going to "fac" contestants. More often the smallest awards go to such entrants. Despite the federal law, that seems all right to us. If you don't want to play along with the sponsors, you don't have to enter their contests. That may be a harsh attitude, but our viewpoint is that you're playing another fellow's game, and if you want to stay on the field, you have to follow his rules. Isn't that fair enough?

Contest Association

Want to Join?

There is a movement afoot that is going to be powerful because it has its roots firmly buried in the rich soil of contesting. As yet its influence has been little felt, but the venture seems destined to make itself prominent in the minds of many a contest sponsor and contestant. It is the new National Contesters' Association, brain-child of Everett Lane, of Mine Run, Virginia.

The ideals of this organization are high, and the help it offers contesting is much needed. The association urges its members to use products advertised

But there are legitimate complaints—constructive suggestions which will help contesting. Here are a couple we've received:

"As a contestant who gets a lot of pleasure out of contests—win or lose—I am against one large first prize, all out of proportion to the remaining ones. . . . For a weekly contest like the Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co. 'Ann Page' contest, I think the prize allotthey had a contest on! When Pontiac had a contest, I went to their dealer for a blank, and he told me he had just thrown them all out!

"Then, too, the dealers seem to treat you with suspicion unless you want to buy something. They don't seem to realize that these contests start people talking about their products and have a cumulative effect from which they may reap profits for years to come. . . ."—ORLAND DEANE, Kankakee, Ill.

THIS WEEK'S PRIZE SPECIAL

These are this week's best contest bets! This is the last week you can enter! RADIO GUIDE has singled out these contests for special attention to increase your chance to win. Read the exclusive winning tips below—then read in column 1 the new "fixed focus" contest victory system!

Three $200 Silver Fox Furs

PRIZES: (Weekly) Three $200 silver fox furs and 500 pairs of $2 hose.

TO ENTER: Add fifty words or less to "I like Admiracion Shampoo because . . ." Mail your entry, with a box-top, to Tim and Irene, Mutual Broadcasting System, 1440 Broadway, N.Y.C., or to your station. Contest closes December 15.

TO WIN: If you've entered this contest before, do it again this last week—whether you won or lost! There have been dozens of "repeaters." Several facsimile box-tops have won prizes—which makes this an unusual contest indeed (see column 1)! The judge has shown a tendency to favor entries which are well under the word limit. She seems to have no objection to puns. Particularly does she like unusual entries—those with remarkable settings or approaches to the rather standard statement. Here's a product tip: Admiracion likes the angle that the shampoo conditions and cleanses at the same time. If you use this, be careful, though, because others who read this may duplicate your entry! Note that "Admiracion" is spelled with a "c." Last week we printed four winning Admiracion entries, offered readers who sent stamped, self-addressed envelopes Miss King's critical analyses, telling why they won. This offer remains open until December 15.

For more facts, listen to "Tim and Irene," MBS, Sun., 6:30 p.m. EST (5:30 CST, 4:30 MST, 3:30 PST).

$1,000 Cash

PRIZES: (Grand) $1,000 in cash (or $500—see below) and letters from favorite radio stars.

TO ENTER: Write a letter of any length to Eaton's Fine Papers, Pittsfield, Mass., naming your favorite radio star and explaining your choice. Letters written on Eaton water-marked stationery eligible for $1,000 prize; others eligible for half that amount. Participating radio stars will personally answer ten best letters from their supporters. Contest closes December 15.

TO WIN: Don't be afraid that the radio star you choose to write about may not be eligible in this contest. If your radio favorite is on a Coast-to-Coast network program, chances are all with you that he is participating in this competition. Do not worry over details of form in your letter. Whispers seem to indicate that you can be as fervent as you like in your praise, too. It stands to reason that a letter on Eaton paper has a better chance to win the one big prize, although the sponsor has not admitted this possibility. Decide for yourself—but we'd buy his paper and use it! Emphasize the personal relationship you have with your favorite radio star—even if it is no more than that you are always blue on Monday because of washing all day, and he happens to be on the air Monday nights to cheer you up!

For more facts, see Eaton's advertisements in current magazines.

by contests; to pledge themselves never to write a crank letter to a sponsor; to organize mutual-aid chapters in their own neighborhoods.

This last is the most important object of the association as far as most of us are personally concerned. Meetings of local chapters can bring fine advice and criticism. Mrs. Zella Boteler, secretary of the new association, has asked whether the readers of this department are interested in forming local chapters. We'd like to know, too, so that if you are, we can print more news of the meetings and activities of the association. Will you let us know?

On Complaints

These Are Constructive!

Too many contestants spend their time complaining. A negative attitude doesn't win in contests, and whining is a habit that grows when it gets started.

If you have a contest question, send it, with stamped, self-addressed envelope, to "So You Like Contests," Dept. GC, c/o Radio Guide, 731 Plymouth Court, Chicago, Ill. Send your stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dept. CL1 if you would like the complete list of current contests from which those above are selected.

Meet the Winners!

$1,550 for Their Skill!

If you won in these contests, you know about it already, but if you entered and didn't win, you'd probably like to know who did. In the ninth "Phyl Coe" mystery contest, Miss Blanche Evans, Big Bend Hotel, Spokane, Wash., won the first prize of $500. Miss Nell Smith, 920 East Lincoln Street, Kansas City, Mo., was second, winning $250. Third prize of $125 was won by Peter Hinrichs, 318 Gibbson Street, Eau Claire, Wis., and fourth prize of $75 went to Mrs. Maud Hart, 530 Chetwood, Oakland, Calif. In addition, there are 122 winners of small cash awards each week—and weekly winners are eligible for grand prizes which total $10,000 in cash.

Incidentally, because the mysteries have become more difficult each week, it is now necessary to submit only two clues instead of three, which makes it easier to stay within the 50-word limit. Entry blanks are available at Philco stores. Note: Next week this contest closes. Get in it now if you're going to!

The November 28 Admiracion Shampoo winners are Mrs. T. W. Van De Sande, Locust Terrace, Toms River, N. J.; George Harrington, 532 Howard Street S. E., Grand Rapids, Mich., and Louisa Haskin, 51 University Avenue West, St. Paul, Minn. They all win $200 silver fox furs. This is the last week you can enter this one!

Winning Entries

Make Yours Like These!

We've promised readers examples of winning entries every week. Here's our batch of "this is how you should have done it" information this week.

Hal R. Doolittle, writing in Contest World, reports that he won twice in the recent RCA-Victor weekly contests with these entries:

"Press the button. Zip! Your 1938 RCA-Victor does the rest. Accurately, silently, instantaneously, RCA Electric Tuning thinks—then acts. A new thrill in radio!"

"First, Magic Eye. Next, Magic Brain. Then, Magic Voice. Today—engineered by pioneers—RCA-Victor presents the Magic Wand of radio—Easy, Accurate, Electric Tuning."

It's not often we can't find a way to agree with the judges in their selections. We think our good pal Helen King slipped when she awarded a $200 fur to this entry, however:

"I like Admiracion Shampoo better because in our house it covers a wide range of requirements like a thoroughbred . . . from softening dandruff and making my husband's fine-textured blond hair grow like sunshine to giving my heavy midnight tresses healthful cleanliness and a velvety sheen."

That may have what Miss King wants—but to us it sounds manufactured, is too flowery to be sincere, and doesn't give us a single original or unusual impression of the product. We know that most of the winners in this contest aren't this kind—and we suggest that you follow the analyses written by Miss King which we offered last week. Don't pattern your entry after this one if you agree with us!

VOICE OF THE LISTENER

The "Voice of the Listener" letter-forum is a regular feature in Radio Guide each week, offered to the readers as a means for expressing and exchanging opinions about radio.

Each week Radio Guide will publish letters deserving our readers' attention.

THEY LIKE THE IDEA

Dear VOL: Prizes or no prizes, I do enjoy the Voice of the Listener and will be glad to see it back. I like to write about my likes and dislikes and also enjoy reading the views of others.—Jeanne Husebur, Berkeley, Cal.

VOL: Concerning letters to this column, this reader harbors the opinion that while lack of monetary return may discourage the volume of letters submitted, it will tend to increase their sincerity, rather than have them be a presentation of phrasings which writers feel the powers-that-be would have them voice. Thus VOL becomes less of an echo and more of a true consensus of opinion, tinged with constructive criticism and providing stepping-stones along the pathway toward a desired perfection.—Mary E. Lauber, Germantown, Pa.

MORE CHRISTMAS MUSIC

Voice of the Listener: Now that the holiday season is approaching and Christmas only a few weeks off, I am looking forward to the Christmas music. I do so hope that radio will do its share to enlighten the homes for those who are confined and cannot hear music and songs by any other means. Last year it seemed as if the singers were afraid to sing the carols. To me there really isn't any music as nice and sweet as the Christmas music and songs. Because we have to wait a whole year for it, let's play and sing Christmas music until it hurts. I am sure that none tire of it.—Mrs. Gilbert J. Parik, Nutley, N. J.

PROTEST

VOL: Here's to agree with the lady from Des Moines who writes protesting about the yelling when announcers read their commercials. I am also one of the many who turn down the volume when the "shouters" come on. Am a steady listener to "The Goldbergs." The announcer on that program tops them all by using the word "Oxydol" so many times. I counted them this morning and to my horror found that he actually named the sponsor's article twenty times in the five minutes allotted before the sketch.—Mrs. R. Dawe, New York, N. Y.

BIASED COMMENTATORS

Voice of the Listener: I have often wondered how other listeners react to the product that the biased commentators are trying to put over. Personally, I have not only turned the dial on them, but have refused to purchase the product because I felt confident that no matter how much the announcer continues to say, "His remarks are uncensored," I am positive that his sponsor is in agreement. With so many dictators flourishing, we in America have something to be proud of, but I wonder if we have reason to be proud of our free speech when it is so wantonly abused. On the radio we hear such vitriolic utterances, the commentators not stating that they are merely giving their own personal opinions but giving them as if they were facts. We believe in free speech and endorse all debates which give both sides of the question a chance to be heard, but the biased commentator makes untrue statements with no one following to refute or explain the wild statements. In our family we have taken a vow never to buy anything that is sold by the sponsor of a biased commentator.—Mrs. Flo Garon, Katonah, N. Y.

Solution to Puzzle Given Last Week

records," the Captain said. "He just makes me feel warm inside."

"And me, too," said Mrs. Buckridge. "He always sings such soothing songs. Out here where the wind howls and almost freezes the marrow in your bones you like those comfy songs."

"Well, what else do you listen to on the radio?" I inquired.

"Everything. I turn it on in the morning and it stays on until I go to sleep. We like the funny stuff, too—Jack Benny and Eddie Cantor."

Crosby had switched to "The Moon Got in My Eyes," but there was no moon visible at Montauk. The clouds were black and ominous, and the sea was surly. And suddenly from out of the night came a long, low rumbling.

"What's that?" I demanded.

"Them's the fog-horns," said Captain Buckridge, smiling. "Did you notice those two trumpet-looking things out by the engine house? Well, those are the fog-horns. When the weather gets soupy they sound off every minute. You can hear 'em for thirty miles out to sea. And yet you can't hear 'em right down there under that bluff. They are what we call vibrating horns. The vibrations are hurled out over the water, but if you get down there at the sea's edge you can't hear 'em at all. In weather like this you can't see my light very far, but you can hear my fog-horns. So the minute the lookouts on the ships hear 'em they start peering around—they know they are getting close to old Montauk.

"Do all sailors stay on the lookout for lighthouses?"

"Only the lookouts and the men on the bridge. When the weather gets soupy you will see 'em clasp a megaphone to their ears and listen. Then when they hear the fog-horn they start peering for a light."

"But suppose your big light and your emergency light and your fog-horn all went out? And there was nothing but darkness here?"

The captain squared his shoulders and looked at me.

"Supposing the world came to an end," he said a bit sarcastically. "The lights mustn't fail."

WORLD'S LARGEST MAKER OF SMALL RADIOS

LET LA HAYE DO IT!

BY FREDERIC THOMS

ASK FIVE persons in Bridgeport who Judson LaHaye is and you'll probably receive five different answers, none of which will be his official title, but each will be correct.

"Judson LaHaye, program director, Radio Station WICC," is the listing in the city directory, but this is really only one of his positions. He could qualify in any of the following categories: Pianist, announcer, tenor, composer, dramatist, artist, publicity man, and Jack of all trades.

LaHaye didn't aim for a radio career. In fact, he didn't give a hoot about this new wonder of the electrical world when he entered Fordham University. He was interested in music and Latin and intended to become a teacher in these subjects upon his graduation in 1931.

Whatever his ideas may have been then, they have changed since, and it is now impossible to blast him away from the radio world. He has been one of the mainstays at WICC for six years, carrying on in any capacity in which he was needed during those hectic days when the Bridgeport station found sailing on the airwaves rather rough.

His first connection with radio came in school, when, as a member of the Fordham Glee Club, he sang over WMCA and WLWL. When summer vacation came in his junior year, he wanted temporary work, but a radio station was the last place he looked. However, when nothing else was available, he applied at WICC for any type of a position. After an audition he was given a job as fill-in announcer while regulars vacationed. Because he succeeded in his job, he was again offered the position the following summer and in the meantime became very much interested in all phases of radio work.

The more he thought about radio, in his senior year, the more he liked it, and finally he decided that if nothing better came along after graduation, he would take a job—if WICC offered him one. He graduated in 1931, when the depression was at its lowest, and finding a chance at the radio station, accepted it.

Today he's still at the station, and he's one of the best-known men in the radio business in Connecticut. Judd isn't the type of young man to sit idle. He's always thinking and planning and has created more ideas for programs at the Bridgeport station than any other individual. They're always interesting ideas, too—for with his creative mind which is also promotional in nature, he doesn't forget his work when he leaves the studios—ideas come to him no matter where he is or what he is doing.

WHEN the station was "up against it," LaHaye always volunteered to help out, and many a day labored from 7 a. m. until 10 or 11 at night. When a dramatic program found one of its characters missing, at the last minute, he was always called upon to fill the part. When a soloist became nearly frantic because an accompanist failed to appear, he was called upon to play the piano. When an announcer was ailing, Judd would rush between his office and the announcer's booth to do double duty. And when there was a sudden and usually unexpected vacant fifteen-minute local spot, Judson LaHaye, tenor soloist, was pinch-hitter.

It seemed to make no difference what was necessary—LaHaye would leap into the breach and fill it to the best of his ability, which turned out to be good in every instance. There seems to be no explanation for his amazing versatility, and he soon had a reputation for being able to do almost anything that was required.

One would think his station duties were quite enough to keep him occupied, but he found time to be a member of the Calvert Club, Musical Research Club, Silvermine Artist Guild, Bridgeport Symphony Orchestra, and the Little Theatre League.

ONE of his outstanding ideas he created with Alma Dettinger of Greenwich. They originated WICC Original Musical Comedies, many of which have been fed to the Yankee Network. The idea came suddenly upon Judson and Alma, one day in 1933, and since then they have produced one original musical show a year, so that listeners now look forward to it as the yearly highspot of the local programs. Alma Dettinger writes the script and LaHaye handles the songs. While none of the songs have attained nation-wide prominence and popularity they should have, they have been featured by Connecticut artists, and on several occasions sustaining artists on the networks have sung his songs.

Judson LaHaye of WICC: He's Jack of all trades—and master of many!

Now that Station WICC has found smooth sailing, LaHaye might be able to take things a little easier, but he has become so used to being occupied that he's still the same Jack of all trades. When anybody wants anything done, he's there to do it. He has written theme songs for practically every local artist on the station and annually is called upon to compose words and lyrics for the Junior Guild revue and the nationally known Silvermine Sillies of Norwalk. Then, for relaxation, he sketches posters for entertainments and charity affairs. Of course, he's called upon several times a month to do charity appearances in all parts of Connecticut. It's really too bad there are not forty-eight hours in a day, for if he can do so much now, think of what he could do if he had more time! When a person meet this thin, brown-haired, five-foot-eleven young man, he wonders where this LaHaye can possibly store all the energy that keeps him so active.

JUDSON isn't the only one in the LaHaye family who is carving himself a niche in WICC's hall of fame. A younger brother, Louis, started in as relief announcer four years ago and is now chief announcer at the station. Both seem destined for bigger things in radio, but in the meantime are loyally laboring for WICC, and when the history of the Bridgeport radio station is handed down to posterity, the name LaHaye will stand out as one of the main pillars in its success.

ELSIE HITZ—RADIO'S GIFT TO ROMANCE

OF THE scant half-dozen actresses who owe their claim to fame solely to radio, Elsie Hitz unquestionably stands first. Others have brought stage and screen reputations to radio, but few have earned them by air performances. Yet that's how Elsie Hitz gained recognition. Attempting an acting career in radio when it was scarcely beyond the novelty stage, she grew up with the new medium. Now a veteran of ten years' experience, she is distinguished for having made good on what in the beginning seemed a foolhardy venture—and is today an unparalleled accomplishment. To thousands of listeners, the name "Elsie Hitz" is synonymous with "romance."

Eddie Guest lives like the average businessman—with one exception. His home and family are in Detroit, and he has to take the train to Chicago every week for his broadcast. Above: Eddie in his room at the Drake Hotel in Chicago, getting dressed for an appearance before the microphone

It's only human to love a dog—and Betty Winkler (above, center) finds "Penny" a real pal. She lives in Chicago's Ambassador Hotel

Donna Dae (above) doesn't find life very exciting. She sings and tap-dances on the show—and spends her spare time exercising

CONFESSION

(Written Especially for RADIO GUIDE)

*This is the way of a man and a woman
Eternally hiding the fact we are human.
Posing and shamming where strangers can see:
On dress parade always, pretending that we Are more than the Good Lord has meant us to be.*

*We all wear a make-up whenever we roam.
But we are ourselves in the shelter of home.
What matters the fame or the fortune we win?
We know in our hearts the veneering is thin.
We are brothers and sisters just under the skin.*

—EDGAR A. GUEST.

JUST FOLKS

IF VARIETY is the spice of life, stability is the salt of the earth. And stability, more than anything else, explains the continued success of the people's poet, Edgar Guest. Today, a star whose name is a household word throughout the nation, he remains as simple and unaffected as he was when he was an unknown reporter on the Detroit Free Press. Lincoln said, "God must have loved common people; he made so many of them"—and Guest has the same conviction. Today, the same sincere note that dominated "Just Folks" in 1917 is evident in his homely, down-to-earth poems.

Guest is real—and so are the members of his cast. In "It Can Be Done," they act the parts of ordinary men and women. At home, they live up to their portrayals. They're stars—but "just folks," too!

Ruth Doering (left), the low-voiced leader of the "Doring Sisters," heard on the program, isn't conceited about the success of the trio she organized. She still leads a rather simple life in simple surroundings. Judith Lowry (above), who plays the mother parts on the program, spends much of her spare time knitting

Orchestra leaders are known for their extravagance—but Frankie Masters (above) is an exception. Success hasn't gone to his head

Actress Joan Winters, Mrs. Frank Bering in private life, spends most of her time with her children, Frank and Nancy (above). Right: Announcer Vincent Pelletier, like most men, has tie trouble!

1 Three song-pluggers surround George Griffin (second from left) after a rehearsal and endeavor to interest him in their new numbers

2 Nick Campbell (standing) has a song which interests Griffin. In Campbell's office he follows a score as the number, "I Know Now," is played from a record

3 Above: Campbell stands by hopefully while Bee Walker, one of the few feminine song-pluggers, runs over the melody as Griffin tries the melody and style

A NEW SONG GOES TO MARKET

GEORGE GRIFFIN REVEALS HOW SUCCESSFUL SONGS GET THEIR INTRODUCTION

BEHIND the scenes of your favorite air programs move many unseen, unheard, and unheralded figures. In the industry they are known as "song-pluggers." Representing music-publishing houses, it is their business to contact radio artists and persuade them to use their new songs, thereby popularizing them—and increasing sales. The artists in turn must determine whether the numbers have possibilities, if they are suited to their styles.

In the accompanying pictures, George Griffin, popular NBC lyric baritone, illustrates the many steps a new song goes through before it reaches the air.

George Griffin is a 25-year-old Texan who has been active in radio for eleven years. Until recently he was featured on NBC's "Castles of Romance." Now he is heard Thursdays on NBC. He is typical of the popular artists whom song-pluggers contact to introduce their numbers.

Photos by Gene Lester

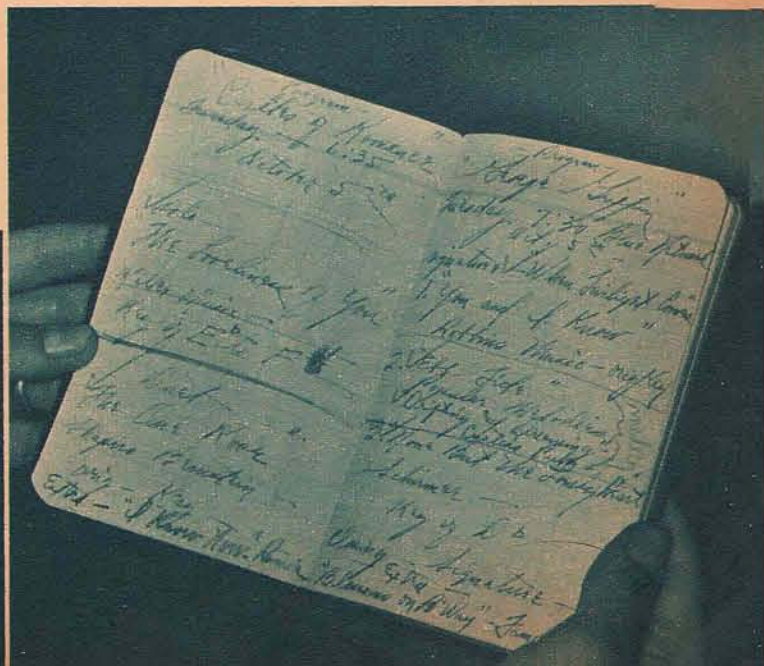

5 Left: Griffin checks with Richard Vannier (seated) of NBC copyright department to see that "I Know Now" is released, licensed for radio

6 Right: Griffin's schedule book, in which he records every song he has and will sing, avoiding constant repetition and for filing purposes

4 Music publishers, as advertising, provide thousands of free copies annually to artists and bandleaders. Above: Orchestrations are shown racked, awaiting distribution

7 With Contralto Alice Remsen, George visits the NBC library to pick other tunes for his program

8 Griffin gets together with his arranger, Walter Fleisher, to ready the new song for broadcast

9 The arrangement made, it is rehearsed in the baritone's apartment. Fleisher, at the piano, is also a song-plugger, for another publishing house, but that makes no difference

10 Lower left: While Griffin goes through his dress rehearsal, John Holmes makes a recording in order to check errors before the broadcast

11 Allen Ducovny, a staff member of the George B. Evans office, publicists employed by Griffin, phones Radio Guide and other publications about Griffin's program

12 That evening Lyric Baritone George Griffin sings the new song hit "I Know Now," and another song-plugger's persistence is rewarded

IT'S A DATE WITH JANE RHODES

GOING places is still a novelty to Jane Rhodes. Singing starlet of Tuesday night's NBC "Hollywood Mardi Gras" and RKO player, she has little time for "dates." Then, too, Jane is only sixteen. Born in Rockford, Illinois, April 21, 1921, Jane took her first audition at a broadcasting studio there at the age of seven, and became widely known as a child prodigy. Her charming natural voice and sparkling personality caught the eyes of Hollywood talent scouts, and as a girl who had scarcely entered her teens, she was brought to the film capital for a movie role. Last summer when Johnny Green took over the Packard Hour for the vacation interlude, she was chosen as its feminine singing star. Reaction from listeners was so favorable that a contract for the fall Packard series followed. Jane, whose full—and real—name is Betty Jane Rhodes, is fair, with blue eyes and light-brown hair, weighs 112 pounds and is five feet four and one-half. She lives with her folks on a ranch adjoining Bing Crosby's—never goes out without her parents' consent.

Left: "It's a date," says Jane, as she accepts a rare invitation to dine and dance at Hollywood's Coconut Grove. Above: First step in glamorizing for the event is a hair-do, and Jane has one—for $2.00!

Above, right: Like any other girl, Jane wants to look her best, and choosing the perfect gown is important. She selects one that's becoming, in good taste. She pays $50 for formals, $40 for street and sports wear

Left: Bathing is a daily ritual with Jane, and a regular procedure before going out. She knows the necessity of scrupulous cleanliness to the well-groomed woman. Is usually escorted by her elder brother

Above: Jane needs little make-up for her youthful skin, seldom uses any. Confident, with every detail in her appearance pleasing, she gains an added poise and self-assurance as (right) she awaits her "date"

NIGHT

OLD BOOKS WANTED

We pay big cash prices for thousands of different titles. We bought over 7,500 books in past twenty-one months, paying as high as $500 for a single book. For example, we will pay you cash for the following books as described in our price list:

Pilgrim's Progress	$4,000.00
Adventures of Tom Sawyer	200.00
Old Swimmer's Hole	75.00
Black Beauty	100.00
Treasure Island	50.00
Scarlet Letter	35.00
Venus and Adonis	5,000.00
Leaves of Grass	250.00
Snow-Bound	45.00
Uncle Tom's Cabin	100.00
Ben Hur	50.00
Last of the Mohicans	50.00
Moby Dick	100.00
Little Women	25.00
McGuffey Primer	100.00
Tamerlane & Other Poems	5,000.00

These are but a few of the many thousands of books we want. DON'T SEND BOOKS until you have checked our latest list giving full information. Don't delay—a single old school book, story book, bible, poetry, history, travel, almanacs, newspapers, letters, etc., may bring you $25, $50, $100, $500 or even $5,000 cash for certain books. Better investigate NOW. Send 10c to the American Book Mart, 140 S. Dearborn St., Dept. 5101, Chicago, and we will send you latest list of old books we want to buy and cash prices we will pay.

"Studio Apartment" is a thriller concerning the fantastic things which take place in the studio apartment of an internationally known sculptor who, inadvertently, brings to life a thing beyond all understanding; no trite version of the "Gaiata" story is this, but a chill-packed tale of horrible revenge.

DON'T BE A WALL-FLOWER!

WE TEACH YOU TO DANCE IN 5 DAYS—or you don't pay a penny!

You can quickly become the life of the party . . . even though you can't dance a step now. A short time each day in the privacy of your own home is sufficient. You don't even need a partner or a teacher—this MODERN way.

AMAZE YOUR FRIENDS

Don't say you can't dance until you have given yourself this chance. Get your copy of "How to Dance" and "Tip Top Tapping" and say good-bye to "stay-at-home" nights. This quick, easy, sensible method often succeeds where others fail. Simple as A.B.C. Everything fully explained and illustrated.

COMPLETE INSTRUCTIONS ON OVER 48 DANCE STEPS INCLUDING

Swing Waltz—Ritz—Carlton—Harvard Hesitation—Savoy—Picturesque Turn—Valencia Turn—Waltz Canter—Double Hesitation—Pivot—Walk and Pivot Hesitation—Chassez Pivot—Regal Turn—La Bomba—Suzi-Q—Shim-Sham—Shimmy—Trucking—Rhumba—Lindy Hop—Tango—Virginia Reel—Quadrilles—etc.

Both books only $1.39 postpaid if remittance is sent with order. If you prefer, order C. O. D. and on arrival pay postman $1.39 plus few cents postage. Nothing more to pay. If not delighted, your money promptly refunded. Get over the blues. Get into the swing. Rush your order now.

If you want only one book instead of both, specify which you want, and it will be sent to you for only 79c.

Free for Asthma During Winter

If you suffer with those terrible attacks of Asthma when it is cold and damp; if raw, Wintry winds make you choke as if each gasp for breath was the very last; if restful sleep is impossible because of the struggle to breathe; if you feel the disease is slowly wearing your life away, don't fail to send at once to the Frontier Asthma Co. for a free trial of a remarkable method. No matter where you live or whether you have any faith in any remedy under the Sun, send for this free trial. If you have suffered for a lifetime and tried everything you could learn of without relief; even if you are utterly discouraged, do not abandon hope but send today for this free trial. It will cost you nothing. Address
Frontier Asthma Co. 59-C Frontier Bldg. 462 Niagara St., Buffalo, N. Y.

BRONCHITIS

After suffering more than 30 years from chronic Bronchitis I discovered a preparation which quickly relieved my tormenting bronchial spasms. It goes right to the seat of the trouble. Checks constant coughing, difficult breathing. Write for FREE PARTICULARS AND TRIAL offer today.

SHORT WAVES

BY CHAS. A. MORRISON, president, INTERNATIONAL DX-ER'S ALLIANCE

Broadcasts mentioned below are Eastern Standard Time. For CST subtract 1 hour; for MST, 2 hours; for PST, 3 hours.

A SERIES of three unique broadcasts, the first ever to originate in icy and mysterious Labrador, have been arranged by the International DX'ers Alliance.

The first of these transmissions, which are to broadcast over short-wave station VO6D (14.28), located at the Grenfell Mission Hospital at Northwest River, will be heard on Sunday, December 12, at 4:30 p.m. EST.

Fur trappers will relate their thrilling experiences in running traps in the frozen North, genuine Eskimos will sing and speak before the microphone, and attendants from the hospital will tell tales of the North and of their work in this bleak outpost, where six feet of snow has already fallen. A broadcast of the famed twilight Vespers Service will be a feature of one of the broadcasts. Tommy Cunningham, radio operator of VO6D, will act as m.c. for the shows, and will be glad to hear from all listeners who have enjoyed the broadcasts. Inasmuch as mail is received only twice a year, Mr. Cunningham requests that all reports be sent to W2IXY, Mrs. Dorothy L. Hall, 186-18 Williamson Avenue, Springfield, Long Island, N. Y., who will read the letters to Mr. Cunningham in the course of their amateur phone contacts. Later in the year, when Mr. Cunningham visits his home in Toronto, Canada, he will send souvenir QSL cards to all who have correctly reported the Labrador programs.

The best in Brazilian music is now being radiated over Short-Wave Station PSH (10.22), daily from 7 to 9 p.m. EST. These programs, which originate in the studios of broadcast station PRF4 in Rio de Janeiro, will be continued as a regular feature, if favorable reports are received from a sufficient number of international listeners. Since all announcements are made in English and Portuguese, high-class talent is featured and signal strength is excellent. It is a real pleasure to sit back and enjoy these programs from Rio.

VP3THE, the base-camp station of the Terry-Holden Expedition, at Isherton, British Guiana, now using either one of two frequencies, namely 13.74 or 14.3 mcs, is still providing many thrilling moments of reception, during the irregular evening contacts with civilization. Thus far, contacts between VP3THE at the base-camp and VP3THE number two, at Kuyuwini, temporary camp of the advance party, have only been partially successful. As soon as the party again takes to boats for the long journey into the Amazonian interior, a higher frequency will be employed. It is expected that reception of the explorers group will be more satisfactory than the broadcasts from the base-camp. Reports on reception of VP3THE may be sent to Mr. Orrin Hungerford, National Broadcasting Company, Radio City, New York City, N. Y.

On Sunday, December 12, at 6 p.m. EST, Schenectady Short-Wave Stations W2XAF (9.53) and W2XAD (15.33) will feature a program to the Latin-American countries by the students of the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute in Troy, New York. Twenty-eight students, whose homes are in Central or South America, will speak for one minute each to their families and native countrymen. Appropriate Latin music will be included on the program . . . On December 14, at 7:55 a.m. EST, listeners to Daventry, England, will hear a salute of sixty-two guns at the Tower of London, fired in honor of the birthday of King George VI.

St. Kitts, British West Indies, an island so tiny that it can not be found in the ordinary Atlas, is soon to have a 500-watt short-wave station, according to Clive Peterson of Philipsburg, St. Martin, Dutch West Indies. The new broadcaster whose experimental call will be VP2LO, will employ the frequencies of 6.383 and 12.765 mcs respectively and will radiate programs daily to approximately 10 p.m. EST. is expected on the air in the very near future. Listeners who will certainly want a souvenir card from this interesting station, can address reports to ICA Radio Sales & Service, P. O. Box 88, Basseterre, St. Kitts, British West Indies.

W. E. Caulfield, former British Consul to the Canary Islands, writes that the broadcasts of "Radio Nacional," Salamanca, Spain, heard nightly from 9 to 9:45 p.m. EST, on frequencies in the vicinity of 10.37 mcs, are actually being transmitted over EAJ43 at El Tablero, in the Canaries . . . EA8AD, the original station of the Radio Club Tenerife, Tenerife, Canaries, which has been silent for quite some time, will soon return to the air, using alternate frequencies of 7.45 or 7.5 mcs.

Louis Ambrosius of Louisville, Ky., is the first to report reception of the new Cuban station COCA, which was heard on Sunday, November 21, at 4 a.m. EST, testing on a frequency of 9.62 mcs . . . Several of the Cuban stations are changing in frequency so rapidly that one can only guess where they will be heard next. COCQ has been testing on various frequencies between 9.02 and 9.78 mcs, and at the time of going to press, is being heard near 9.68 mcs. COBC is jumping about in the vicinity of 9.024 mcs, while COKG, after an experimental sally down to 8.89, is once more back on 8.93 mcs. It would seem that Cuban authorities, who have just been hosts to an International Radio Convention, would first seek to clean up their own radio situation by seeking to stabilize the frequencies of their stations.

Many complaints have been received from short-wave listeners decrying the fact that reports sent to PZH (6.8), have not been answered. The American Consulate in Paramaribo, Dutch Guiana, has informed Guy Bigbee of Fort Benning, Ga., that letters up to this time have been incorrectly addressed and that any reports sent to AVROS, c/o Mr. S. M. Levie of Paramaribo, Dutch Guiana, will gladly be answered.

Harold Schrock of Bloomington, Ill., has just received a letter from J. Estrela, chief of Radio Station CQN, Macao, Macao, in which he states that the station has closed down . . . N. F. Kriebel of Ambler, Penn., notifies me that KZRM, Manila, Philippines, which broadcasts daily from 4:30 to 9 a.m. EST, will soon change to a winter frequency of 11.84 mcs . . . R. C. Messer of South Portland, Me., writes that HAT4 (9.125) of Budapest, Hungary, has been testing a new directional aerial which produces greatly improved signals from that station.

According to August Balbi of Los Angeles, Calif., XEWW, powerful short-wave station of Mexico City, is now being heard nightly from 8 p.m. to 12 mid. EST, on a frequency of 15.16 mcs.

Short-wave programs of American stations are shown along with the regular listings beginning on page 27. These are indicated, for example, by (sw-11.87) in parentheses following a program listing. This means that on 11.87 megacycles the same program may also be heard over an American short-wave station. Please note that foreign stations do not always adhere precisely to their announced program schedules.

ONE SICK HEADACHE AFTER ANOTHER

BUT THAT IS ALL OVER NOW

I FEEL grand since I began taking the ALL-VEGETABLE Laxative, Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets). One NR Tablet convinced me... so mild, thorough, refreshing, invigorating. Dependable relief from sick headaches, bilious spells and that tired-out feeling, when caused by or associated with constipation. Without Risk get a 25c box of NRs from any druggist. Use for a week. If not more than pleased, return the box and we will refund purchase price. That's fair. Try it—NR Tonight—Tomorrow Alright.

Best Support for Rupture
Is the Human Hand

Why worry and suffer with that rupture any longer? Learn about my perfected invention. It has brought ease, comfort and happiness to thousands who suffered from reducible rupture. It has an Automatic Air Cushion which softly yet securely holds the rupture in any position.

The Brooks Appliance most closely resembles the human hand as a rupture support.

No steel springs or pads. No salves or plasters. Durable, cheap. Sent on trial to prove it. Beware of imitations. Never sold in stores nor by agents. Write today for full information sent free in plain, sealed envelope.
