HOW I BUILT "THE INSIDE STORY" By Edwin C. Hill

Yes, She's a REAL COUNTESS

FEUDAL castles with drawbridges and moats are rightfully hers. And so is the family lore so significant in a crest which gives her the title of Countess. Such glamorous romance seems a far cry from today's discordant times. And especially a far, far cry from the microphones which have electrified the world into a unity. But feudal castles with drawbridges and moats are rightfully hers; for she is Olga Albani, a Countess, if you please, and the radio songstress you've heard so many times.

In New York our drawbridges have turned to canopies and our moats to the ever-cautious door-men. Our castles are our rooms on an umpteenth floor—and Countess Albani has adapted herself to such a transition from feudal tradition with all the ease and warmth of her charming smile.

No land of Grimm is this land of ours, and even as you and I did the Count Albani find himself financially distraught in 1929. He and the Countess were living in New York. They were the center of much social activity. He of Italy's nobility and she of Spain's proudest blue-blood fell victim to the wheels of Democracy. And Olga Albani, Countess, sat herself down to think things over.

Charm and beauty and social prestige can be bartered for what? Not for bread and butter, or even a dash of wine. And the Countess gave thought to her voice. It was warm and tender, a mezzo-soprano. Not too technically trained, but a voice which her friends liked, a voice which the Count liked, a voice which had weathered the commencement of a concert career with a promise which comes to few.

And that's how the Countess began singing for NBC, that's how the name of Countess Olga Albani happens to be the center of our attention, that's how NBC found one of its stellar attractions. You see, in the midst of what seems like a great eclat, things happen, simply in the Countess' life. Her tendency toward formality is almost informal because it is so natural. She walks from her apartment to the studio without benefit of footmen and coach. But even as she is forced to the street because of the scuttling of coal across the sidewalk she retains her subconscious regality as instinctively as she retains the torrid Spanish fire which dances from her eyes. And torrid Spanish fire dancing from her eyes is no idle phrase used for pretty purposes. For her's are not the cold staring eyes of an Argentine nor the smouldering mysterious eyes of a Valentino. She is a warm and soft and feminine young lady. In her lives the sun and the brownness of Spain and the still peaceful quiet of the Alhambra at dusk. There is the charm of the siesta in the curve of her smile and the alert grace of a matador in the steely movement of her body.

... In her lives . . . the still peaceful quiet of the Alhambra at dusk . . .

Yes, the Countess is quite a person. And the person that she is is the result of intuition rather than calculation, the product of instinct rather than determination.

The Countess came to this country at the age of five. And to New York. At first she wanted to be a dancer. And then an actress. At an early age she was sent to a con-of her drawing-room couch, a drawing-room with heavy Spanish chests and glowing Spanish brocades; spinet antique piano and a modern baby grand; and a portrait of the Countess looking as regal as she can, with the turrets of old Italy in the background and the crest of the Albani's in the upper left hand corner.

"I like to cook, I think I am a good mother, and I love to shop. Oh, I spend a lot of time shopping. I do not drink anything but wine; I do not smoke at all and I am crazy about going to the theater. What do you think is the best show in town? Now don't tell me 'Alien Corn.' Oh, I thought her performance in that was so grand. And tonight I am going down to the Village where you sit on wooden benches."

And the phone rang. Annoyance was the look which came to her face as she explained how often Mr. Bell's invention disturbed her serenity.

"We figured up the other day that we made seventeen outside calls."

Katy was at the phone. Katy seems to be the Countess' right hand and left hand too. "I couldn't get along without her," smiles the Countess as Katy says, as if she were announcing a call from the Duke of Westminster to the King of England. "NBC calling the Countess."

"Who is it at NBC?" replied the Countess.

"Who is calling the Countess?" asked Katy at the telephone.

"Mr. Durvy of NBC calling the Countess," replied Katy, and she seemed to be enjoying herself immensely. "The Countess will return in a half hour," said the Countess.

"The Countess will return in an hour" said Katy. "Yes, I will tell her, studio tomorrow at 5. Oh, 5:30. All right." And she smiled to the Countess as she went back to the kitchen. And the Countess smiled too. There was a new state secret which was a new state joke.

So I asked the Countess what she thought about her title. Was it a help or a hindrance, a joy or a sorrow? And she said: "I've been thinking about myself. Socially, you see, before I went on the air, it was very nice. It didn't matter much, but it was sort of a nice distinction. Now I've been wondering whether it is good, commercially I mean. What do Americans think of titles?" And I mentioned Mike Romanoff, and Marie of Russia too, and I ventured the thought that Americans like titles; they wonder about them and look up to them and continually prove to themselves that there never was a more fallacious statement that "All men are created equal."

WE decided that family pride was the essence to all reason why there ever was a nobility—and the Countess said she thought she would continue to use her title.

It's an Italian title, springing from the Albanis whose estates are around Minalo. The Countess' son, a six-year-old youngster with a Spanish name sounding mysteriously like Groucho, is heir to the titles of Count, Duke and Prince. But he's all taken with America's wooly wild west, he wants to go to Arizona and see the cowboys. And the Countess says she is going to take him. She speaks Spanish to him, and he replies in English except when he does not want present company to understand. It's another of the household's little tricks.

The Countess says that singing twice a week, and new songs each time, with a popular jazz number thrown in because she believes it is fast becoming the new American folk music, keeps her studying and practicing all the time. Her music library has grown so fast it has become cumbersome. If she were a more temperamental songstress, such things would bother her. But they don't. Now she is planning and hoping that next season she will come to Broadway in an operetta, which she says she would have done already if it had not been for her health or the radio or some other stroke of chance. Somehow I see her as a Spanish Madge Kennedy, and the possessor of the ability to do whatever she pleases. Except, perhaps, be other than instinctively Spanish in her tastes.

In public life she prefers to be known simply as Olga Albani. She feels that too often the title, "Countess" leads people into the realms of fancy, and she does not want her radio listeners to visualize her as a buxom, austere dowager laden with jewels. It is further to her credit that she desires to be an American in spirit, and accordingly she does not think that a title fits into the American scheme of things.

Because of her pleasing blending of modern music with selections from the immortals she has been a success in radio from the beginning. She has been sponsored by some of the biggest advertisers in radio. She played the dramatic lead in "New Moon." And when one talks with her, when one gains a close-up of her versatile artistry, the conclusion is, she could do most anything which she wanted to and be the same success she has been in radio and the theater.

WHO IS This Guy, HUSING?

THAT wasn't so very long ago that some enthusiastic (did you get that Mr. Editor?) radio listener wrote to me about one of the broadcasting jobs which I had been assigned to do, and said, "What I particularly liked about the broadcast was the lack of perpendicular pronouns which you used!" That made me feel quite chesty . . . BUT here it is Monday and I still have to use them . . . So without regard to the letter "I" here goes the tale . . .

I caught hold of this hard-to-locate lad in his office on the nineteenth floor of the Columbia Broadcasting System Building in New York City, and asserted, "Ted, the folks over to Radio Guide want you to tell on yourself, and I'm the fellow they've assigned to write you up!" To his credit let it be said that he paled and fidgeted in his swivel chair. I could see I had him where he didn't want to be. "BUT", he blurted out, "I don't want to be interviewed, for fear that whatever is written about me might be misunderstood." "Have no fear," I replied, "I'll tell them what you say of yourself as if it were you writing about yourself. Then you can say only the nice things and really annoy everyone with a story that will taste of soft soap, you big smoothie." That got him, so here is what I found out about myself . . .

I was brought out in my debut in a little spot in Luna County, New Mexico . . . A town called Deming . . . The laugh is that someone once said you had to be slightly batmy to be a radio announcer, so my birth county was named quite correctly. I won't pull the other gag about having had everyone con-Deming me ever since. At a very early age, I began trekking for the East, thus disregarding that Greeley fellow entirely. The next I knew I was bathing in the Erie Canal in upstate New York, residing with my folks in the towns of Gloversville and Johnstown, the latter not being famous for a flood.

Then fortune flew the family to New York. 'Twas here that I was educated and enjoyed the last days of my youth. . . During the years between the ages of ten and sixteen, I was mascot of the Columbia University baseball, football, soccer, swimming and basketball teams. To this day, Andy Coakley, Ed Kennedy, Reynolds Benson, Harry Fisher and many others of the Columbia coaches remember me as a gawky kid who did nothing but run for towels, keep score, shag balls and perform the thousands of other jobs that qualified me for my sports job of being chief mascot of the blue and white.

These years were the foundation of my sports knowledge, for I lived and learned with the Columbia undergraduates who were striving to make the teams. It was here that I learned to love all sports and here that I indulged in practices with the "big" fellows on the varsity teams . . . School days came and went until the war called out the youth of the Nation. I was then a member of the Stuyvesant High School Training Corps, a military adjunct of the public high school, voluntarily enlisted and not a compulsory unit. It was trained by regular army men assigned by the Government, and when the United States entered the big tiff, the whole corps, as almost one man, attempted to enter the regular army. Most of the boys were rejected for being way under the age limit, the rest either lied or proved their ages, and away they went . . . I never went further than New York, and before I had time to capture Berlin by myself, I was discharged for falsifying my age and name, (I had used another's birth certificate) and returned to my home. Afraid to stand the certain jeers of my fellow schoolmates, I entered Commerce High School in New York, where, playing baseball and football, I met Les Qualey, who is now my chief assistant in all sports broadcasts over the CBS network . . . school held no thrill for me, however, so I just left all thought of it behind and with Les and others of our class, toured around with semi-pro football, baseball and basketball teams, seeing the country and living easy lives as we went along . . . A year or two of this palled on all of us and we split up to go our separate ways.

TRAVEL intrigued me; so I started my wanderings over the surface of these here now United States . . . About the time I wound up after doing a thousand odd jobs from barking in circus carnivals to punching cows with my bare fists (or don't they do it like that?) I decided to settle down in aviation. I was with the New York Police Department's aviation division in Fort Hamilton when I first saw HER. From then on aviation was a defunct issue (at HER command, of course). In no time I was attempting to shake off the carefree background which surrounded me, in the interests of definite work, but it developed into a nice struggle between an easy careless existence and HER.

HER won out. I became a payroll clerk with the New York Steam Corporation in New York, worked in a silk mill, with a life insurance firm, and then became a floor salesman for the Heywood Wakefield Company in their New York showrooms. So we were married . . .

The next day I was fired. The boss thought I had been a married man all along and fired me to teach me a lesson . . . He did. I hated furniture anyway . . . So I went to Florida to clean up in realty. I didn't. I came home broke and bent. Dad was ill, mother was in Europe and Mrs. Husing (Bubs to you) upset about affairs.

So I read a newspaper and saw an advertisement for a radio announcer. Putting my pride in my pocket (that's a good crack, isn't it, Mr. Editor?) I attempted to get the job. I did. But not until I had battled thru 610 applicants and fourteen days of tests to get it. I really won the job because I ad-libbed the Shenandoah disaster in a test audition the last day and kept it up for over three-quarters of an hour. The chief of staff listened with such satisfaction to this long winded blast of nothing, that his admiration carried him away and me into a job—at $45.00 per week . . . In those days artists usually failed to show up for their broadcasts, and since they weren't paid, no one ever really cared or bothered.

Here then was a chance for me—for when one failed to show up I had to chat their air-time until the next program was ready. With me in those days were Norman Brokenshire, Milton Cross and Lewis Reid and John B. Daniel. I couldn't write further without telling that the last named was my idea of the greatest studio announcer who ever was heard through a loud speaker. When he died, radio lost a swell fellow and a grand announcer. Jack and Broke were my two buddies and they taught me all the tricks of the trade. Milt and Lew always sobered me when I felt like blowing up.

From these early days of studio activities came the break that made me a sports announcer. It was the day before Thanksgiving, 1925, when our studio manager, Keith McLeod, showed me two tickets for the Penn-Cornell game at Philadelphia and explained that he really didn't care whether he went or not, but as long as he had the seats he'd go. As I looked at him rather enviously, he reminded himself of my sports background, and suggested I go to see the station manager, Charles B. Popenoe, and request his permission to send me down instead. I went and "CPB" approved my going.

WHEN I got to Philly, I fainted when I found out I was supposed to help observe the game for Major J. Andrew White, whom I immediately announced as the "pioneer and premier sports announcer of the world" . . . I made good with J. Andy, and 1926 found me his assistant in all the WJZ broadcasts that Fall . . . Then when the NBC was formed in the early days of January, 1927, I resigned and went to Boston, returning in the Fall of that year to broadcast 16 games for Station WHN in New York City.

I was on my own doing these broadcasts, and when they ended in December, Major White, by that time head of the CBS, called me up and I became a member of the personnel. That was in 1927 . . . Christmas Day to be exact . . . Only seven of the staff working in 1927 with Columbia are left. The next year found Columbia in the midst of its sternest fight for existence, and when the political broadcasts had passed by, our success was assured . . . All through those days, I labored in many capacities, mostly from the office side of it, losing much of my identity as a radio announcer, much to my regret . . . During the early Spring days of 1928 however, came the one broadcast that attracted America to Columbia.

The three famed German fliers (one was Irish really) had negotiated the Atlantic, but had foundered their craft in the icy wilds of Labrador. Fearless Floyd Bennett flew out of New York with provisions to help the isolated men. Death overtook him before his task was completed and a nation mourned a man who laid down his life for his friends. I pleaded with Major White and Herb Glover, our news broadcasting director, that this was a time when a nation would appreciate the opportunity to mourn with his relatives. Say a broadcast of the funeral. With some conviction in my pleas, approval was granted.

We had no Washington network station, so that our task of broadcasting the burial from Arlington Cemetery the next morning appeared to be a task. I rushed to Washington. I saw Army, Navy, civil and social organization heads at their homes and offices during the night and early morning. One after another they agreed to the broadcast . . . if it was to enoble the late intrepid airman. Wires were strung from Baltimore (Turn to Page 17)

GKNOW a man who could buy the world for a song.

I know four men, as a matter of fact, who could buy the world for a song. They are America's "A" composers and when they sit down before a piano to sound their "A" on a new tune you can depend on it that that new tune will be careened through cornets, plinked out of pianos, moaned through microphones and burbled through bassoons from Maine to California and from What Cheer, Iowa, to Pinsk, U. S. S. R.—or Russia, to you.

These are America's A-1 minstrels, the makers of its songs and the simon-pure, gold-buttressed Head Men at the business of giving America—and the world—the tunes it whistles in its bath, hums at the cradle and shouts over the midnight bar. They are the Messrs. George M. Cohan, Vincent Youmans, Irving Berlin and George Gershwin.

And you want to know "A" composers of what. And why shouldn't you want to know? And why shouldn't I tell you? Look: at these rates, I will tell you anything even if I don't know.

They are the "A" composers of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, the "A" boys who get a fixed and sizeable sum each year even though they never write another tune. They are the White-Haired Boys of the music business and they earn their place and their right to not less than $6,000 a year for life by whittling out on their agile zithers an unbroken series of hit songs. That's how you—or you or you and even they—become an "A" composer with $6,000 a year for life; you just sit down with a harmonium and a pencil and whittle out an unbroken series of hit songs.

It all really goes back to a little man named DeForest who invented, after a good deal of headache and misery, a silver-lined gadget called a radio tube. Master DeForest hooked his radio tube to this and that wire, put a screen around the business and called it broadcasting. Now broadcasting without music is like cornflakes without cream: it looks good but gets gummy after awhile. The radio stations began broadcasting songs and then theaters began putting songs through their stage loud-speakers and pretty soon hotels on land, ships at sea and dance halls anywhere you looked began putting in receivers. And all, every note of it, without even thank you to the man who wrote the songs.

A silver-haired composer-author-playwright-producer-actor and eminent thinker by the name of Gene Buck, a Detroit boy who turned one edition after another of the late Ziegfeld's "Follies" into hit shows, sat down one night and figured it all out. The radio companies were getting the music free and not even saying thank you. He determined to get thank you, anyhow. He looked out over the hills and fastened his gaze on station WOR in New Jersey. Station WOR had played "Mother Machree." It had. Did it ask permission? It did not. Would it ask permission? It would not, positively.

Master Buck hauled Station WOR into Federal Court and the sound jurist who sat benched that bright sunny morning handed down a decision which brings in the ASCAP about $1,500,000, gives its four "A" writers not less than $6,000 a year each and distributes the rest of it to less famous but equally deserving song-writers. That judge also started something that ended in the irritating but important little phrase: "By special permission of the copyright owners, etc."

It was Buck's claim that not only was it faintly annoying to have songs played for nothing but it was vastly annoying to see a song hit plugged so hard over the radio that within four to six weeks the public was sick to death of hearing it, thus killing a chance for royalties for its composer. And he was so right!

Buck first got the courts to rule that the radio companies must pay for use of songs and then turned his imagination to the other problem: over-playing. He put through a by-law which gave the ASCAP complete control over release of its songs. Now it works this way: a release sheet is made up for each radio chain each day. It tells the stations what songs they can or cannot play that day and night. If a song has been played too often lately, the Society bans it from the air for awhile or reduces its use to a few stations, thus keeping it fresh in the hearts of the nation's listener-inners and keeping it alive for six months instead of six weeks.

THE first radio fee for use of a copyrighted song was $20. From that gentle and inconspicuous double-sawbuck grew the licensing of five hundred or more stations, the largest of which pays $37,500 a year, the smallest $25.

Next Mr. Buck thrust his blunt wardenship at the dance halls. Did they want to play new music without going to jail for violating copyrights? They did. Okay: put the money on the line. And they do, the larger wrestling arenas putting down $350 a year, the smallest, $5. Next hotels and floating cabarets: new music for a fee. The fee about $400 a year each, the ruler being the number of orchestras and room radios in the building.

The movie theaters came up for whacking next: they'd pay ten cents a seat a year or they couldn't play new music. They paid. That tip-over was so easy that Buck went to the studios, just then engaging themselves in the nightmare of sound and, mostly, relying on music to popularize sound films. If they wanted music they could pay for it. Foreign rights so much, local rights so much, to a total of about $3,000 per picture. They paid.

Here and there, by bits and chunks, Buck whipped the thieves into line and they paid off in cash, regularly, steadily—or else. They have been paying for some years now; they have been paying and liking it because the laws that have been passed through Buck's insistence would close them up overnight and silence them forever if they didn't. There have been too many test cases won to make it worthwhile to go to court with the ASCAP.

Who says who is an "A" writer or a "B" or even a "C"? The board of governors. It meets annually and goes over each composer's and publisher's record for the year. Some move up a peg, some move back a peg and you've got to keep writing and publishing hits to remain in the top brackets and collect your share of $1,500,000, half of which goes to the writers and half of which goes to publishers.

THREE are six classes: A, B and C; 1, 2 and 3. Writers and publishers all fall into one of the six. Now and then a Class 3 publisher will put out a song that the whole world sings. Does he move to Class A at once? He does not! He proves his right to promotion and the bigger money by publishing several more hits.

So a crisp $1,500,000 is amassed every year and split among the boys who did the work. And how much does the man who made it all possible receive? He receives $25,000 a year and I think he's worth every dime of it even if he never does another thing for the ASCAP. He made $1,500,000 grow where only theft, heartaches, injustice and ingratitude grew before.

It was Victor Herbert who first began simmering over song thefts. Yep, the same Victor Herbert whose melodies fill the radio waves night after night with golden melody. A restaurant named Shanley's and Herbert's easily aroused anger actually are behind it. Herbert had a show called "Sweethearts". Shanley's had its orchestra play some of the music without permission. Herbert heard about it and decided to do something. That something was the hasty summoning of eight musical friends to a dinner, a dinner at which, after a terse but effective speech by Master Herbert, he and eight song-writing and song publishing pals formed the ASCAP.

The nine founders sued Shanley's. They also sued hotels, notably the Vanderbilt. It too had played a Herbert song. One court said "What of it?" Another court, higher bracketed, said "What of it?" Shanley's and the Vanderbilt grinned and bore down on Herbert tunes. Herbert was fit to be tied. Another State court said "What of it?" Gathering himself for a last stand, Herbert thrust the case into the Supreme Court of the United States.

Mr. Justice Holmes sent down a decision that left Shanley's, the Vanderbilt and others who had borrowed without leave gasping in their tracks. Mr. Justice Holmes ruled that songs, like chairs or padlocks or even patent shoe laces, are property. The man who designs a new type of chair owns that design and patent. So does the man who writes a book, invents a padlock or rubber shoe laces. If these are property, the work of hands, why shouldn't songs, the work of heart and brain, be property? So far as the Supreme Court of the United States was concerned songs became property, personal and definite property.

Master Herbert grinned last and longest and his anger cooled down—and Master Buck took up where Herbert left off and the thing is still spinning.

PATHOS—or WHAT Have You?

THE bane of a comedian's life is that he is always excepted to be funny. He can't lapse into seriousness for a moment, or his friends will think he's bored with them or just plain tired.

That's the way I feel about writing about myself and my work in comedy on the stage, in the movies and over the radio. So I decided to solve the problem by mixing a little of the pathos I have known in my life with a little of the humor into this autobiographical cocktail.

So, for the benefit of that large and well-meaning group that wants its humor straight and unfettered by any too faithful adherence to the truth, here goes: I was born in the province of Kansu, China, the son of proud though Pagan Aztecs. My father was a direct lineal descendant of the great Montezuma, and read the original gally proofs of Prescott's "History of Mexico". He excelled in Egyptology, hydraulic engineering, fancy figure skating, and dillydallying. My mother was expert in the Chinese equivalent of tatting, and on the day the great Chinese Derby was run at Hankow, won the shotput for women with a cast of thirty-eight feet.

My father wished me to become a pole vaulter, while mother was just as insistent that I take up the cello. An obedient child, I soon was able to clear the bar at 11 feet, 8 inches, playing the cello en route. Shortly after father had sold the film rights of the stupendous feat to a Canadian trapper, I was kidnapped by brigands. Ransom never arrived, but the ranks of my captors were finally so decimated by carabat offers that I easily managed to elude the guard after six years, and escaped.

After three months at sea, a typhoon raced out of the west. For days we tossed off ballast, and prayed and made merry, but to no avail. We—there were but two survivors—finally ran aground at the foot of Market Street in San Francisco where, for the next five months, I made an honest living selling picture postcards of the yawl which I had snapped with my camera just as the Captain and his Lascar mate had been swept to Heaven. The camera company sent me a check for $100,000 for a testimonial commenting on the waterproof qualities of their product, a sum which I donated to a society seeking funds to outfit an expedition to find a box office in New York, where a seat could be purchased in the third row on the aisle.

Tiring of a sedentary life, I started to read the tabloid newspapers and determined to swim the English Channel. Setting off from Calais at dawn, I was within fifty feet of the wharf at Dover when, to my dismay, I discovered there was no photographer on the dock, whereupon I threshed around and swam back to Calais. I made the return trip in six hours, and would have made it in less had I not collided with a submarine, the Z-14.

While helping the panic-stricken crew repair the breach in the stream, I discovered that the single passenger was none other than Bella Chung, a delightful Mongolian girl, whom I had pitched horseshoes with in old Kansu. Exalted over our unexpected meeting, she slipped over the side and swam to Calais with me.

The next morning we flew to the Riviera in a monoplane that I had fashioned out of tin foil and tennis rackets, and, following a system that had been whispered to me in the streets of Calcutta by a dying Hindoo, I broke the bank three nights in succession.

The Prince of Monaco, as good a guy as you would ever care to meet, told me he thought I was a great guy, too, but after that experience, he would just as soon I left Monte Carlo. So he gave me a letter of introduction to M. H. Aylesworth. And that, my friends, is how I broke into radio.

But, now that you folks are satisfied, let's wax serious for a moment, let's wax serious. I wasn't born in China. I was born in Newton Stewart, County Tyrone, Ireland on June 16, 1885. My parents, who were just plain folks, imported me to America, duty-free, eleven months later, and after shuttling back and forth so many times you would have thought Ireland was the Grand Central and America, Times Square, I finally stuck. I was sent to school in Philadelphia, but since I didn't know whether I was coming or going, I final-one very ordinary quart of synthetic gin, but today, although I'm not out of a grocery store yet, they're paying me more. But there's always a chance that the price of gin may have gone down recently.

But, so that I won't be accused of drawing a veil over my dark past, I'd better go back and begin at the beginning. Born of honest and, of course, poor parents, it was in Philadelphia that I was first attracted by the stories about actors' salaries. After rubbing elbows with the minor Latin poets and some of the blood relatives of the Greeks in the schools of what is very correctly called "The Sleepy City," I launched into the fields of commerce as a clerk for the Acme Tea Company.

In two years I had progressed from errand boy to manager, and if you're unfamiliar with the system of advancement in tea stores, let me say that is equivalent to a page boy upsetting Mr. Aylesworth of the National Broadcasting Company in twenty-four hours.

Then, for some strange reason, I decided to become a monologist, and after listening to a fellow named Cliff Gordon, then one of the leading entertainers in variety shows, I presented myself to the management of a Philadelphia theater, and convinced them that my appearance on the stage was unlikely to cause any sporadic rioting. They agreed to pay me $15 a week, and shipped me off to Minersville, Pa. Everything went all right for a week, when suddenly I discovered that the people that had been giggling at me all week had come in on Annie Oakleys and that there was no bullet in the box office.

To make a short story shorter, I was shortly catapulted into burlesque, where the number of daily performances is regulated solely by the endurance of the actor, the endurance of the audience being limitless. My capers and conversations in these curious, if popular, cantatas, resulted in my establishment as the leading clown in such merry pastorals as "The Teddy Bear Girls," "Knick Knacks," "London Gaiety Girls," "Darlings of Paris" and sundry other musicales built upon the theory that an inflated bladder bounced off the head of a stage clergyman is the acme of humor.

This went on for years and years. I appeared in more disguises than Boris Karloff, and had become convinced I was eventually to be buried under a burlesque backdrop, when one afternoon a gentleman who was later to produce for editions of the "Greenwich Village Follies" had dined badly and came into the theater where I was doing my stuff, to rest. When he had finished resting, I had a contract. I draw no moral, I point no platitude, but I will say I was damned glad to get out of burlesque.

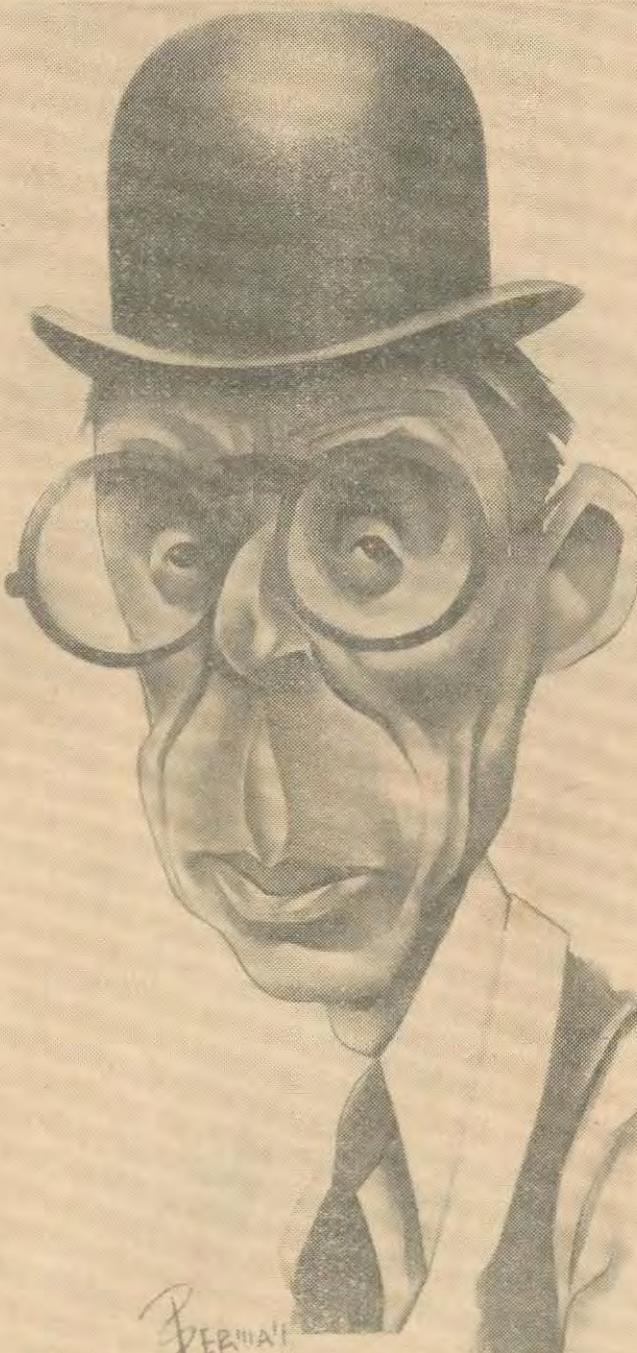

This was really how I got my start, although if people persist in asking me about my career, I tell them it was really due to a friend who gave me a quarter interest in the Boston company of "Desire Under The Elms."

From then on it was a succession of Broadway shows, and, later, making movie shorts in Hollywood, where I wrote, directed and acted more than fifty movie shorts which were best sellers. Burlesque, musical comedies, movies, and now radio . . . all those years of experience have only gone to prove to me that humor is fundamentally the same, regardless of what the medium of expression is. Radio differs from its cousins of the stage and screen only in that it can't present visual entertainment. And that's where I have my greatest difficulty.

Joe Cook said that the reason he took me to Hollywood with him to make the screen version of "Rain or Shine" was that it took a smart man to look "dumb", and my specialty has always been to make audiences wonder how a man can live with apparently so little brains. Now, on the radio, I can't get my "dead pan" expression across, so I have to rely entirely on making my voice convey the boobish personality I have tried to build up all these years.

But, speaking of radio as I was (yes, I was, wasn't I?) it is one branch of the show business which I am still at a loss to figure out. I consider myself an old trouper, but I can't quite accustom myself to radio's ways as yet.

THE AUTHOR

"...I have never yet seen a microphone laugh when I told a joke..."

I decided to relieve my dizziness, and took a job in a grocery store. Oddly enough, my first job was in a grocery store, and now I'm in a grocery store again, only this time over the radio in "Musical Grocery Store." In my first job, I drew a salary that today is the equivalent of

HOW to BECOME a CRITIC

THANKS to the unexpected, and unprecedented, reaction to the Writer's first three articles on The Tributaries of Radio and Their Young . . . this treatise will close the present series. That overworked phrase "By Popular Request" will not be asked to peel off its sweatclothes and rush into this paragraph in a belated effort to square, or explain, matters. Suffice it to say "I came, I saw and I spoke up."

Mark you! I am not a quitter and I am not intimidated by reports of a nation-wide rumor that has lately run awry. This unverified murmur, alleged to have emanated from the haunts of the Great Majority and purporting to bode ill "to that guy . . . if he doesn't dry his pen," leaves me cold. Forgetting to put on my underwear leaves me cold, too, but I can don it and immediately become warm again. You can't put on a rumor and get warm. A rumor has no sleeves and on the other hand your underwear cannot be circulated by word of mouth so the whole thing is silly.

I will admit that there has been an undercurrent of so-called righteous indignation sweeping the country. In several hamlets, where RADIO GUIDE rears its two-tone cover, word is brought that my typewriter has been smashed in effigy. A traveling salesman, in the dust-pan game, hitch-hiking back to his company's headquarters at South Norwalk, Conn., stopped over in New York City long enough to report that small groups were forming in front of General Stores in many of the Western towns. Inquiry revealed that most of these tiny bands were nothing but "Floating Bridge Games." (Editor's note. See Hoyle on Bridge) (Allen's note. I have seen Hoyle on the Manhattan and Brooklyn Bridges. He ignored me both times. I will explain the above term myself.)

Floating Bridge Games consist of three persons of either sex who are chronic Auction and Contract players. Homeless, as a result of recent economic calamities, these groups wander about the country continually looking for a fourth. A word averted their practices may not be amiss. The spokesman for the trio will knock at the entrance to your residence and if you come to the door you're crazy. However, if you are a woman and do come out to see if the knocking is the prank of some woodpecker, the interlocutor will say, "Good morning Madam, we're looking for a fourth for bridge."

Well, sir, before you can slam the door, or grand slam it if you are bridge-minded, he will continue "We're seeking a fourth for that great Indoor Sport but the party must be reliable and also in a position to feed and shelter the three of us until such a time as our Welcome is tattered." Before you can say "What's trumps," the Floating Bridge Game is anchored in your house. The Guest Towels have to come out of your hope chest and ginger ale stains soon cover the center-table Aunt Laura gave you for a wedding present. The family album has to be fireproofed to weather the cigarette-ends and your light bill increased four hundred percent. In other words "You are in a fix." After several months of high-living the Floating Bridge Players will kick your hospitality around until it is lost and only then will they succumb to the call of Spring or the hints dropped by your husband . . . and leave.

These groups and their antics have nothing to do with How To Become A Critic but I thought it best to expose them as long as we both had the time. If your front windows are clean enough to permit you to see as far as the sidewalk, you must be prepared. Should three men suddenly appear on your veranda DON'T ANSWER THE BELL. If it is an itinerant Bridge Game, after they have rung several times, the men will go away. If, on the other hand, the men break down the front door and remove your piano from the parlor, they will be Installment Collectors . . . and the less said about them the better.

Before hailing a truck bound South Norwalkwards, the Dust-pan Salesman mentioned other menacing throngs assembled hither, thither and yon. Mob conversations ran the gamut of topics from The Return of Beer to the Departure of Hitler. Several times, according to the Dust-pan vendor, an angry voice was heard to shriek "Down with Allen" or "Up with Technocracy" but neither slogan caught on and the voice slunk back into the wilderness. I learned later that the salesman was a notorious fabricator and his entire babble nothing but the figment of the type of mind you would expect to find under a Dust-pan salesman's toupee. I should never have listened to him in the first place and if you have read this far, Irate Reader, you, no doubt, have learned your lesson, too. I'm sorry I ever brought up the messy discussion at this time.

HOW TO BECOME A CRITIC is our topic so let us be up and away. According to Messrs. Funk and Wagnalls, a CRITIC is: One who judges anything by some standard or criterion. (Editor's Note. See Funk on Wagnalls). (Allen's Note. See Wagnalls on Funk). (Note from a man who just looked over my shoulder. See Both of the boys on the book-shelf in your favorite Drug Store).

ADDISON once wrote, "It is ridiculous for any man to criticise the works of another . . . if he has not distinguished himself by his own performances."

Since the average man knows more about the works of Funk and Wagnalls than he does of Addison's writings, it is quite obvious that the many should be rushing about judging "anything and everything by standards and criterions" in keeping with their mental equipment and capacities. The few, on the other hand, heeding Addison's advice are about their tasks trying to "distinguish themselves by their respective performances." The deeds of the minority, it would seem, furnish subject matter for the criticism of the majority. Thus, mankind is occupied either "doing" or "undoing" and the system appears to work out perfectly. At least, as far as I am concerned.

Man is a born critic and no teacher, sage, or preacher, be he steeped in venom and blow fire from both nostrils, can teach him the Art of Criticism. The instructor may preach his Gospel of Condemnation to the multitudes with all of the gusto of the pot-bellied Sancho Panza charging the windmills astride the wind-broken Rosinante, yet the pedantic doctrines and teachings will be wasted on the air to deaf ears. Every man at heart is a critic and the leader becomes an object of ridicule when his multitude is dispersed.

A baby crying at the sight of spinach is exhibiting a form of puerile criticism. The boy at school putting his tongue out, when the teacher's back is turned, tastes nothing but the fruits of his juvenile triumph . . . he has expressed his opinion. The old man in the wheelchair throwing his false teeth at the radio set, after the announcer has said "See your dentist even if it is only to pay your bill" . . . he, too, is a critic in what is left of his heart.

BUT these are all amateur critics. I don't know a great deal about the vast army of connoisseurs whose opinions appear daily in our newspapers. They praise and condemn everything from A to Z. From Art to Zoology if you're technical. Still, as the saying goes "A bird in the newspaper is worth two in the bush." There is no upkeep on either and consequently no exemption can be claimed in your income tax . . . which, by the way, should be a mere trifle this year. An actor, who had been roasted almost to the point of cremation after his metropolitan opening, once said, "A critic is a man with a bad stomach and the right of way." I am not familiar with the interiors of any of the prominent commentators' abdomens. Neither have I seen a critic in traffic. For these reasons, and in self-defense, you can expect no comment from me as to the value of the actor's definition. I have never caught a prominent critic stepping on Pansies, either at the Flower Show or at a call for Chorus Boys, and I have never actually seen a critic slipping porcupines into the wood-pile in an attempt to make the colored man uncomfortable. To be frank with you . . . the whole business is getting too involved.

Why should any progressive person want to become a critic? There are hundreds of other professions crying for members. Some of those, already in these professions, are crying for business but as they say, so aptly, in France; "One man's fish is another man's poison." And don't forget . . . Crying helps the handkerchief manufacturer and the laundry man. So-o-o-o-o . . . It's an ill wind that carries the strains of Trovatore through the Opera House exits.

WHY BE A CRITIC . . . WHEN YOU CAN LEARN TO BE A BLACKSMITH THROUGH THE MAIL. The work is pleasant and, with horses on their last legs, the hours are short. If your shop goes into receivership you can always salvage enough horseshoes to play quoits in your old age.

WHY BE A CRITIC . . . WHEN YOU CAN BECOME A CARAWAY SEED SALESMAN . . . Carry your samples in your teeth. Mix Psyllium Seed with the Caraway.

WHY BE A CRITIC . . . WHEN YOU CAN LEARN TO PLAY THE SAXOPHONE . . . Pay while you play! John Simp, of Texas, was arrested for Disturbing the Peace the first day! Mrs. Dank, of Buzzard's Bay, hit her husband over the head with his saxophone and inherited $10,000! You can do the same! Cut out the Coupon . . . and throw it away . . . before some nitwit sends it in!

WHY BE A CRITIC . . . WHEN YOU CAN LOSE A POUND A DAY . . . NON-FAT used by 100,000 people! No Dieting! No Drugs! Send for a tin of Non-Fat! When it arrives, DO NOT OPEN, take it two miles from your house and bury it three feet under the ground. Walk from your house twice a day to make sure that the Non-Fat is still buried. You will lose a pound a day . . . as well as the money you sent to us.

WHY BE A CRITIC . . . WHEN YOU CAN GROW HAIR IN 30 DAYS . . . Save yourself from baldness. A bald head is the first stage of NUDISM. A prominent RADIO COMEDIAN writes: "I tried a bottle of your ANTI-TOUPEE ELIXIR with startling results. I spilled some on the script I was rehearsing for a broadcast. The next day my jokes had WHISKERS ON THEM. YOU TOO CAN HAVE WHISKERS!"

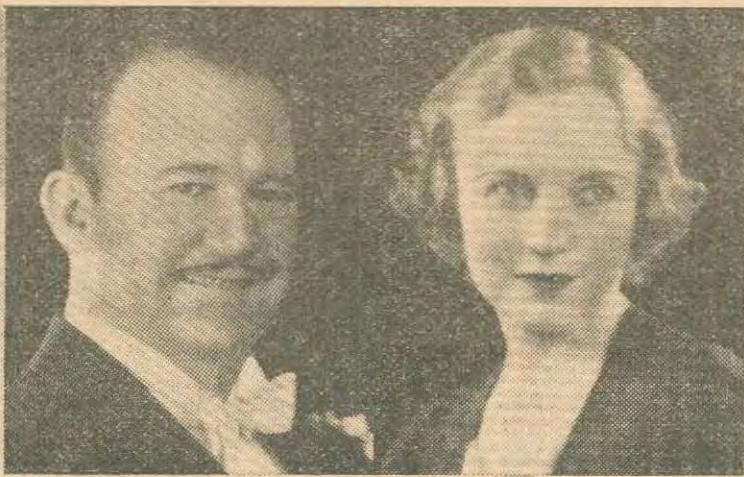

WHY BE A CRITIC . . . WHEN THERE ARE OTHER PROFESSIONS AT YOUR BECK AND CALL . . . After all, critics are born . . . not made. If you feel that you aren't a critic, blame your parents and don't go around making nasty remarks about the author of this document. I have enough troubles for the present.

Are They SUPERSTITIOUS?

HERKIMER the Heckler and his silent, owl-like, stooge, Prying Percival, insinuated themselves into the office and oozed into the two most comfortable chairs with an air of settling down for a long, hard winter. "Here's a wow, boss," boomed Herkimer with his customary exuberance. "It occurred to me in January—Friday the 13 to be exact—when I saw Morton Downey traveling like a streak of greased lightning to head off a black cat, and I've been working on it ever since."

But a pause for identification is in order. Herkimer, may it be explained, is radio's know-all. What the stars eat for breakfast; their favorite colors; whether or not they like broccoli, picnics, cold showers, or flea-circuses; how they spend their spare time; and a thousand and one other bits of miscellaneous information are Herkimer's meat, and his one overpowering obsession is the acquisition of such data, which he manages by buttonholing, wheedling, coaxing, pleading, and all the other known forms of ingenious inquisition: What matter he can't dig up in such wise is in some strange manner provided by Prying Percival, who is all but omniscient.

To get back to the black cat and the tale that hangs thereby, the incident inspired Herkimer to several weeks of creeping around the corridors of Radio Row, intent upon tracking down the superstitions of the stars to add to his ever-increasing records of radio lore. Herkimer and his able stooge did themselves proud, and the information herewith is founded upon their days and nights of vigilant research.

Radio folk in general seem to be just about as superstitious as you, and you, and you—no more and no less than the general public, following about the same taboos as anybody else, such as those regarding knocking on wood, walking under ladders, three on a match, and throwing salt over the shoulder. However, many do have special superstitions connected with the business of broadcasting, and others bring traditional taboos of the stage to radio. The one superstition which is both traditional and universal in radio, adhered to by singers, actors, comedians, musicians, and all of the craft is the unwritten law: Never mention an audition or a possible contract until the result is certain and the ink is dry on the contract.

When a radio artist tells about the grand audition he just gave and the contract which is practically cinched, you can be sure he's a newcomer to the air clan. Too many performers have in the past painted rosy pictures of approaching engagements only to see them vanish into thin air through one circumstance or another. This prohibition is as inviolate as the theatrical tradition which rules whistling from dressing rooms.

Another superstition connected with the business of broadcasting concerns a performer's place at the microphone. Regardless of the mike, as it usually is, many feel distinctly leary of one side or the other. Thus Charlotte Harriman, Columbia singer, and Elsie Hiltz, possessor of the glamorous "Magic Voice", feel much safer and happier working at the right of the mike, while newscaster Boake Carter and Matt (Buck Rogers) Crowley favor the left.

Commentator H. V. Kaltenborn does not care which side he works at, but he is distinctly uneasy if anyone stands either directly behind or directly in front of him as he broadcasts. If they sit to the right or left of him he is free, easy, and undisturbed. Announcer Andre Baruch won't sign his name to a master-sheet (the production "log" of a program) until the entire program is ended. Whenever he has done so a mishap has marred the program. Barbara Maurel, Columbia contralto, absolutely refuses to pass anyone on the stairs or to change garments she has donned wrong-side-out before a broadcast.

Why does Graham McNamee wear a rabbit's foot tucked away in his lower left vest pocket? . . . It's not to preserve his well known studio dignity, but to ward off bad luck! . . . Ask Graham, if you don't believe it! . . . Then there is Paul Whiteman who nurses his pet superstition every day, a fear of elevators! . . . Consider the case of the Marx Brothers, Groucho and Chico, "Don't walk under a ladder, climb it!" That's the way they dismiss the superstition problem . . .

Nellie Revell, whose birthday falls on the thirteenth of the month, raises an umbrella in her home on that day, tosses her hat upon the bed and breaks an unpopular mirror with terrible abandon . . . Nellie will even kick the black cat on that day if one crosses her path . . . As for other days, well, that's another story . . .

May Singhi Breen is so superstitious she insists upon lots of noise whenever anyone plays or lights "three on a match." To keep bad luck away May asks her husband, Peter de Rose, the song-smith (who worries when he spills salt) to send her the biggest bunch of flowers he can afford whenever she breaks a mirror, walks under a ladder or crosses a black cat's path. . . .

John Shaw Young, the NBC announcer, who happens to have thirteen letters in his name, dreads to transact business on Friday the thirteenth. On that treacherous day only a veteran barber shaves him.

And incidentally there are thirteen NBC artists whose names have thirteen letters. These are: Martha Attwood, soprano; Graham McNamee, the announcer; Miss Revell and John S. Young; Robert Simmons, tenor; Baby Rose Marie; Will Donaldson, the pianist; Alois Havrilla; Patrick J. Kelly; (Turn to Page 22)

HE INSIDE STORY! What is more fascinating ever? They are the seasoning of life, these elusive, unknown, colorful, often thrilling incidents in the careers of celebrated men and women, the queer twists and quirks of fate that gave them their start, or turned them into the road that led to fame. Little things, many of them, mere "happen-so's," yet the mysterious operations of destiny which make men and women the champions in their field.

That is the thought, the groundwork, so to speak, which is utilized in the every Friday night presentation over the network of the Columbia Broadcasting System of the now famous program of "The Inside Story." When the present sponsor of the program began to look about for a radio idea—for something new in radio entertainment, it went to the advertising firm of Batten, Barton, Durstine and Osborn for suggestions. It had been my good fortune to work with that alert and experienced firm for more than a year in creating entertainment over the air. And so we sat down and talked it over.

Roy S. Durstine, general manager of the firm; Bruce Barton, its internationally celebrated president; Arthur Pryor, son of the famous bandmaster of the same name; Herbert Sanford, one of the principal radio entertainment producers of the firm, and myself sought for a plan, a pattern, which would combine entertainment with attractive information about well known and interesting people, and which could be produced dramatically and always with good taste. And finally, due, I suppose, to my own long newspaper career and experience in interviewing "headliners" and in getting at the "inside story" of their lives, we hit upon the program that is now the Friday night feature of Columbia's presentations.

Almost immediately the careful and arduous labor of preparing the individual programs fell into a natural and ordered groove. We started with the inside story of Babe Ruth—of the incident that made the greatest of home run hitters and the most colorful figure in sport the national character he is today. First of all, it was necessary to make an appointment with the Babe and "turn him inside out," that is to say, to talk to him and get from him every possible fact and incident about his whole life from childhood to the present day. There were three of those interviews with the Babe in his apartment in New York, and after the third interview Mr. Sanford and I had a great mass of information and material, covering Ruth's whole life from the time he was a small boy in St. Mary's School in Baltimore until this year of grace, 1933. Naturally, much of the material was discarded, as already well known, trivial or unsuitable to dramatic presentation. But the residue was priceless and, when put in shape, presented an entirely new Babe Ruth, painted a picture of Ruth that had not been visible to the American public.

The next job was for me to write a personality and character sketch of the great man of baseball—not a biographical sketch crowded with dates and dull facts—but a portrait in words—a mental and physical picture of the man who is the idol of the American boy. The next step was to prepare an interview which would definitely follow the opening talk, the character sketch. This had to be easy and conversational, so arranged that it dealt with only the highlights of the Babe's career, the things which were interesting but which did not lend themselves to dramatization. And the third step in preparing the pattern of the program was to select incidents for dramatization and to create them, with dialogue and sound effects. With such a career as Ruth's this was simple. The climax of the dramatic presentation was the crucial moment of the world's series baseball games in Chicago last year, when the Babe's heavy artillery ruined the hopes of the Chicago Cubs while fifty thousand people went crazy with excitement.

WOVEN through these parts of the program, and as a background, is the music supplied by Nat Shilkret and his orchestra of thirty-five pieces, the music never becoming obtrusive but always finding its appropriate place in illustrating the narration, the dialogue or the dramatization. The method followed with Babe Ruth is the method, generally speaking, that we have followed with Jerome Kern, the noted composer; with John McCormack, Amelia Earhart, Warden Lawes, George Gershwin, Ely Culbertson, Ethel Barrymore and Joe Cook. In every instance the technique has varied because of the utterly different personalities dealt with, but that, as I say, is the general method. The effort first of all is to find the inside story, and to use that as the central theme.

Everyone has an "inside story" that plays an important role in formulating the pageant of his life. I cite my own as an example of what I mean.

I was born in the small town of Aurora, Indiana. My father was a country superintendent of schools and my mother was a teacher. If the laws of inheritance and environment stand for anything, the charts would certainly have shown me as an instructor of some sort. Proceeding along the charted course, I might have aspired to a professorship, if I were sufficiently diligent. Perhaps the fates had decided that I was to be a politician, for upon looking through the family genealogical records, I find that way back in 1424 I had an ancestor named Sir John Russell. He was a fine upstanding gentleman, and held the position of Speaker of the House of Commons.

But things turn out differently, entirely unexpectedly. For a time I was a student at the University of Indiana. My English professor was trying to show his students the value and force of clear, vivid colorful English. In order to show us exactly what he meant, he used copies of the New York Sun for purposes of illustration. We were made to study the technique of the writers who contributed to that great newspaper. Had not the English professor used The Sun in class work, it is hardly likely that my mind would have been turned to newspaper work.

That is my own "inside story"—a little thing which changed the course of my life. I determined that some day I would write for The Sun. I started as a reporter for an Indianapolis newspaper without salary, he in Fort Wayne and Cincinnati. And then I met that I just had to work on the New York Sun, York and by persistent effort finally landed all

In the days to come I was to learn many association with such men as the late Frank and Will Irwin, the ace reporters of their day, rules of the fastest game in the world. I was to approach people, to get close to them, to judge characters to gather narratives of the episodes which brought national fame.

MY duties took me all over this country and tions of North, Central and South America. For the most part I was static York, where most of the world's great turn up or other. Over a period of years it has been my to interview at least one thousand men and women either world figures of national or international It is rather an appalling thing to go back even of names. Among the Presidents of the United States Roosevelt, Woodrow Wilson, William H. Taft, W. Calvin Coolidge, Herbert Hoover and Franklin D. Roosevelt. Among the jurists were Elihu Root, Chief Justice Hughes, Senator Thomas A. Walsh, Samuel M. Max D. Steuer. I have known intimately Bobby Wills, Bill Tilden, Babe Ruth, Jack Dempsey and Captains of industry and noted evangelists have enough to receive me on most friendly terms. I have enjoyed the confidences of men like Alfred E. Smith, Jimmy Walker, James A. Farley, Huey P. Long, Senator Bob Wagner, Jouett Shouse and Louis McHenry Howe. I have interviewed distinguished soldiers and sailors including Admiral William S. Sims, General Pershing, Marshal Foch, Marshal Joffre, General Hugh A. Scott, Lord Kitchener, Marshal Nogi of Japan, Admiral Togo of Japan and Admiral Bob Evans. Among the foreign diplomats and statesmen with whom I have talked are Lloyd George, MacDonald, Viviani, Briand, Laval and Mussolini.

The interesting thing to me in interviewing these celebrated people is not so much what that person says, but what that person is. Very often this is brought out, not by some long and ponderous dissertation on politics, economics or world affairs in general, but by some trivial comment, story or incident which really brings the "interviewee" into focus. Such a thing happened when I talked to the late Ivan Kreuger in the only interview he ever gave a newspaper man in America. An unexpected remark by Kreuger gave the clue to his character. He told me one afternoon as we were looking out of the window over New York's charming production. Here is a program that combines all the best elements of the ordinarily satisfying radio entertainment. What are the components of such a presentation? Drama? Music? Humor? News? Personalities? They are all there, worked out into what should be an exceptionally pleasing pattern.

"INSIDE STORY"

Originator of Popular CBS Celebrity Program Tells Us All About It

Before the inauguration of the "Inside Story" series, the broadcasting of entertainment was divided into three categories: the purely dramatic sketch, the musical program with or without masters-of-ceremonies or comedians, and the news program which was either a statement or interpretation of facts or dramatizations of them. The new series combines all the essentials of the three types, discards the unimportant elements and sets a new style of

AT the beginning of the program it is customary for me to introduce our visiting celebrity to the audience. For a minute or two we talk casually as you or I would on meeting any acquaintance. At this stage, as we do throughout, we try to keep away from anything that resembles in the slightest degree the formal or the stilted. The reason we do this is so that you can judge for yourself exactly what manner of man or woman we have before us. Then I try to paint an accurate word picture of the guest. Having heard what he sounds like, you may then visualize him as if he were sitting in your own parlor chatting easily, informally, without restraint.

As we get along with his story a particularly interesting or amusing incident comes along. In order that you may see exactly how it happened, we dramatize it. This is for the purpose of re-casting it and getting you into the feel of the story yourself. For by witnessing a well-produced re-enactment of an event, you are bound to get the sensation of seeing it through your own eyes and therefore getting closer to the individual on whom we are centering the spotlight for the evening. Once again we switch to more informal conversation or to narrative, and then back to dramatization. All the time, we have one interest in mind—to bring you as complete a picture of the human, personal side of the visiting celebrity and to make you feel that you yourself are witnessing the drama, the pathos, the humor, the trials and tribulations, the successes and failures of the person we have with us. And toward the deadline of the program, we get him to reveal the "Inside Story" of the event which has made his name a familiar one to you.

The generalissimo of this program is a young man whose name you probably don't know and seldom, if ever, have heard. He is Herbert Sanford, a fine musician and a born show-radio entertainment.

How is this done? Our first problem was effectively to get the various "inside stories" into the microphone. Well, we could do it this way. Babe Ruth could be invited to appear on the program and be told to prepare in advance a fifteen-minute paper concerning himself. The orchestra could be instructed to get up a few selections reminiscent of the ball park which could be played between paragraphs while the Babe caught his breath. I could introduce him, and when he had finished his little piece, I could thank him very much for coming up for the broadcast. That would be pretty cut and dried, wouldn't it?

Instead we have chosen another method. The program directors decided that the best method to get our "inside story" across would be by a well-balanced combination of narration, dramatization and informal conversation. And that is the way it has been working out. Of course, the variety of people from whom we have to choose makes it impossible to outline any fixed routine. All of the celebrities we have invited to the microphone and who will appear in the future are so vastly different that the program structure must of necessity have a great deal of elasticity.

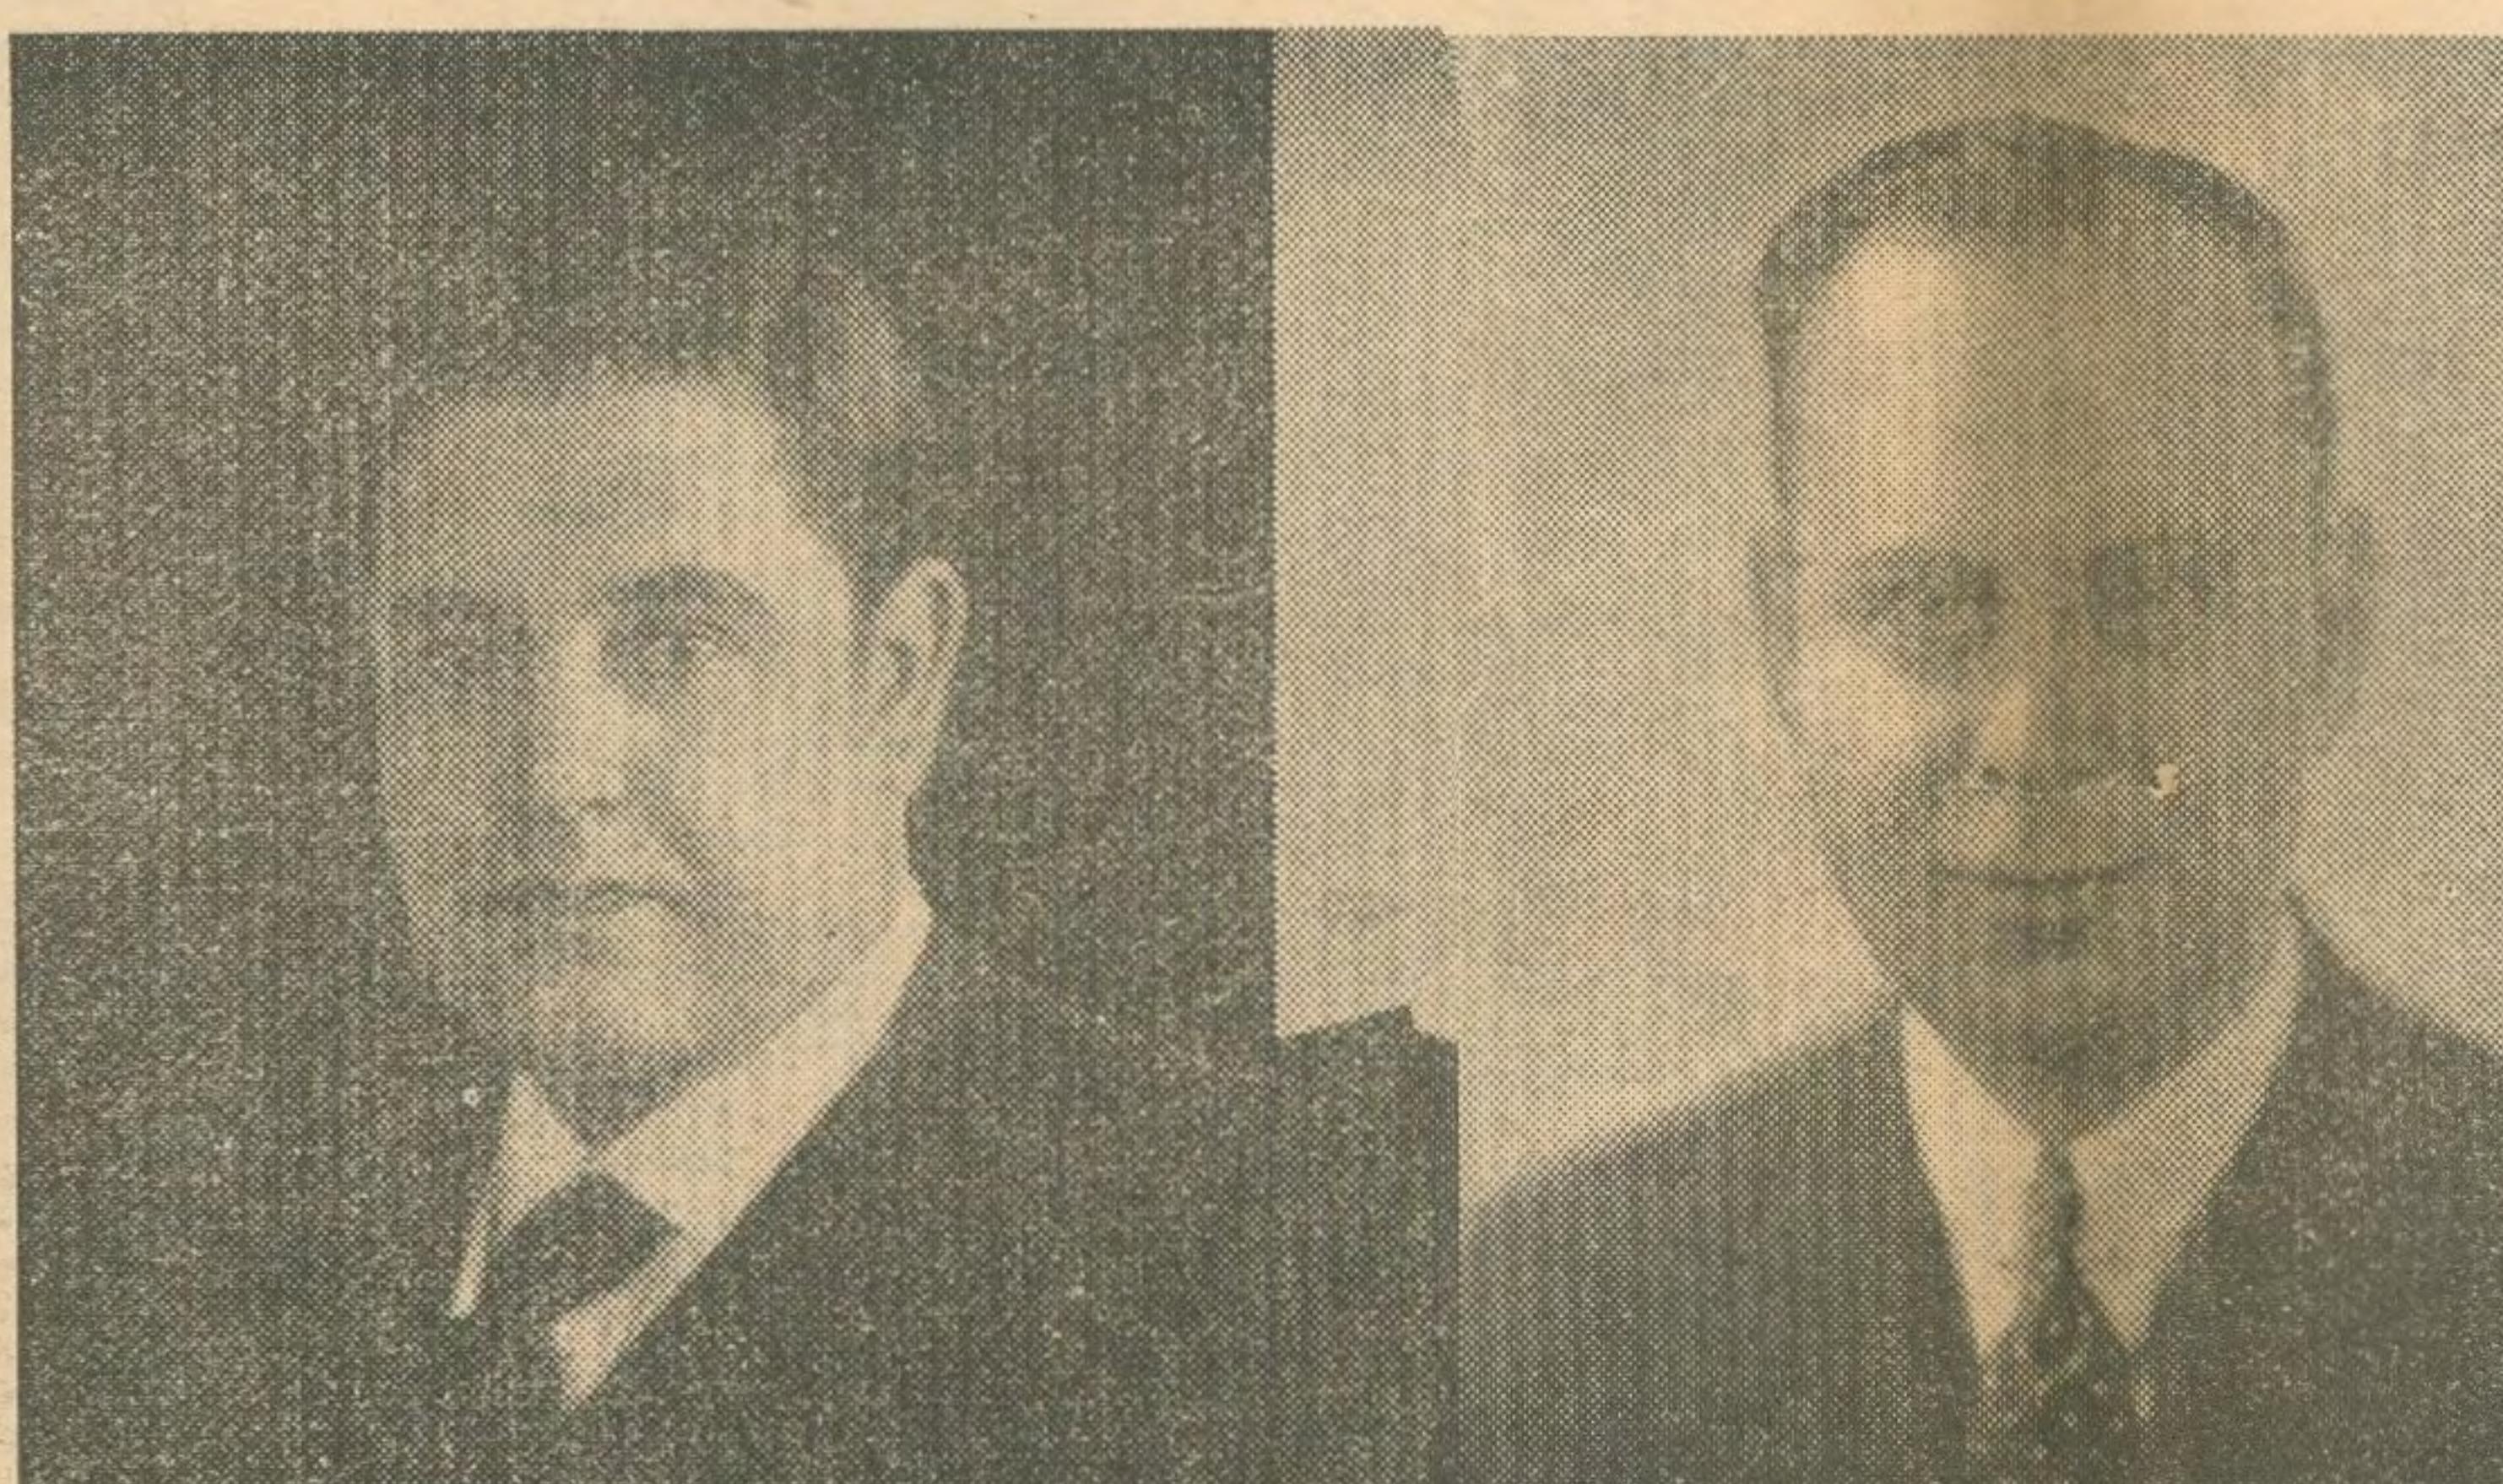

Nat was never one, though, to be satisfied with a secondary position. He wanted to be in a position where he could direct and create. And that he has done and is doing every day. Some of the favorite popular tunes of the day have come from his facile pen. I cite just one, "Jeannine, I Dream of Lilac Time." It was a best-seller for many months. But he has written other things, classics and semi-classics, ranging from selections for full orchestra to compositions for an intimate and small instrumental group or even for a single instrument. He has written scores for sound pictures and has even tried his hand at opera. In addition as an arranger and conductor, he has few peers. A versatile gentleman is Nathaniel Shilkret—a "musician's musician."

But when Nat was invited to take charge of the music on the "Inside Story" programs, he knew it would be a hard job. His resourcefulness would be put to a test, and he accepted, eager to get started. This is what he had to say after he had heard the preliminary audition in September, "I felt that a new trend in radio had been started. The 'Inside Story' will call for expert scoring; the music must be important without being obtrusive."

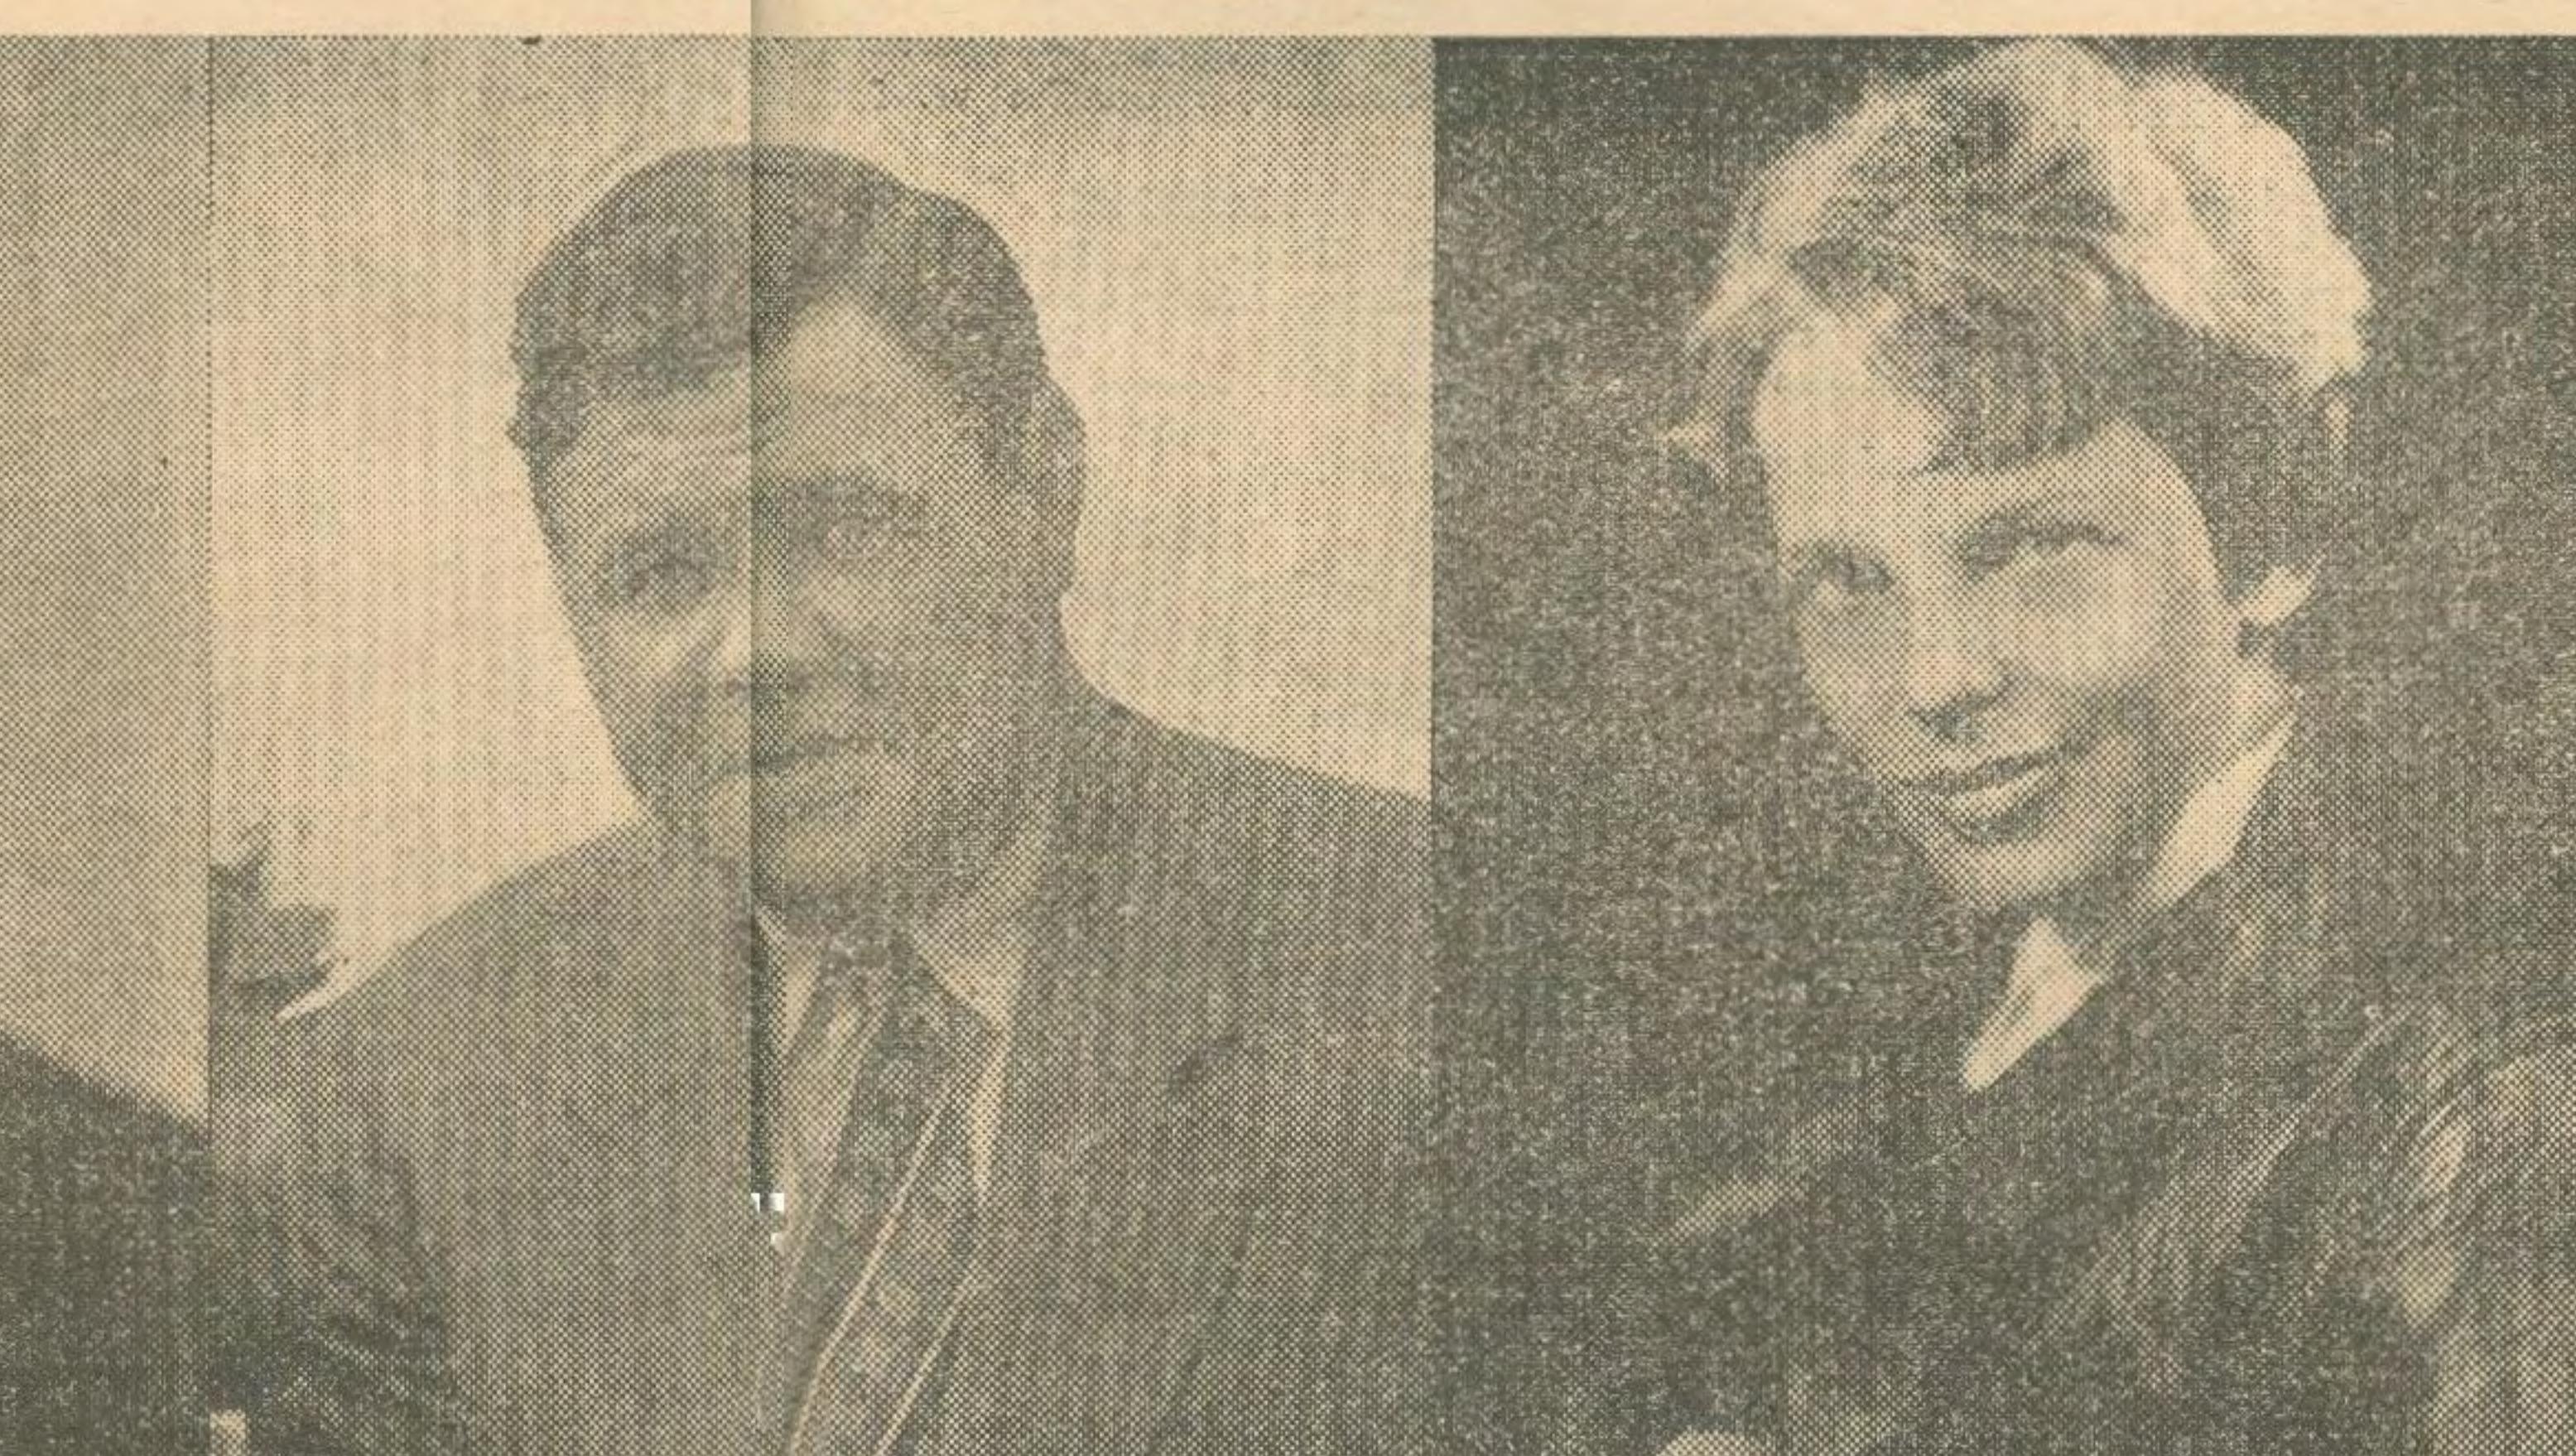

And this is what he meant. He would have to call forth his full powers of composition, arrangement and instrumentation. Each week he has before him the task of writing and orchestrating a new score for the thirty-five piece ensemble, together with the group of singers, under his direction. It is fortunate that his great hobby is reading, for his task in the "Inside Story" programs is to fit the mood of his music to widely varying dramatic situations. Without the imagination fired by a genuine liking for history and literature, any conductor would be at a loss in this role. His problem is to fashion a smooth pattern by knitting together the narrative, the dramatizations and the informal conversations into a fast-paced, harmonious entity. The scores must furnish more than is ordinarily understood in radio production by "musical background." He has to scheme subtle dramatic transitions in terms of music. In order to do this, Nat must have as thorough a knowledge of our guest personality as the rest of us.

SO that is a brief picture of the mechanical processes that go into making our "Inside Story" programs the vehicle for carrying the news message of the Socony-Vacuum Corporation. To date we have unearthed, I believe, some interesting "inside stories." There is the incident that changed Babe Ruth's career. Years ago the Babe was running wild. He was throwing his money away, breaking the rules. A group of his friends got together and told him what a fool he was making of himself. And Ruth is the first to admit that the episode was the turning point in his career and made him the outstanding figure of baseball—a national institution. Then there is the incident which brought George Gershwin into the limelight. He was sitting at home one day when his eye, by chance, fell on a two-line notice in the music section of a newspaper. The result was the "Rhapsody in Blue" and an important contribution to the development of modern music. We heard recently how Lady Luck played an important role in the life of Ely Culbertson. He was in a casino in Paris, playing his last few francs. A boor trod on his toe and offered insult instead of apology. They stepped outside to settle the argument which followed and when he returned Culbertson had won a fortune, just because unknowingly he had left 20 francs of money on the red, which had come up thirteen straight times. We have heard other amazing "inside stories"—the one about Amelia Earhart's epoch-making flights, the "inside story" of Ethel Barrymore's eminence in the theater and of Jerome Kern's creation of "Show Boat" after Edna Ferber had told him he was "crazy".

Our future broadcasts promise to bring you many more exciting, interesting, human "inside stories" of the names that make news. If we are able to make you feel that you have a ringside seat in the arena of life, if we are helping you to understand the sometimes hidden facts about the personalities who are accomplishing worthy acts, if we are successful in bringing to you the fascinating backgrounds of the persons who are our leaders today in various activities and thus help you better to appreciate them and the things that they are doing, then all of us connected with the "Inside Story" programs will feel that we will have done a good job.

PLUMS AND PRUNES By Evans Plummer

WHEN a mixed quartet sells its services for $18 on a coast-to-coast network, several things are wrong with radio. When a pianist-tenor combination is offered (and sold) for $15 a quarter hour three times a week on a network, it becomes obvious that the aforementioned price tag on the mixed quartet wasn't a mistake but a definite and odious trend!

That is the state of radio in Chicago today.

Artists are offering themselves at asinine prices to meet competition, and they are doing nothing but cutting their own throats.

I could, if I wanted to embarrass them, give the names of both the quartet and pianist-tenor duo that are working at these fire sale rates. Inasmuch as I know the prices being paid, the performers should be wise enough to realize that their cut rates are not a closed book. All the advertising agencies and their clients will have these two acts "tabbed" from now on at $18 and $15 respectively . . . and let either of them TRY to get more when better days return! The way back up will be VERY difficult.

What about the listeners? What is this trend—this slide down the scale to inferior talent (for real artists wouldn't work so cheaply) going to do to their loud speaker ratings? I can predict that it means a new low in quality of broadcasts for the coming Summer. You might as well turn off your switch—or if you like radio, begin writing complaint letters to the sponsors and chains who try to pass off $18 acts. You'll know who they are. They're the kind you'd tune out anyway!

ILOMAY BAILEY

She and hubby Lee Sims help Vallee to carload of plums.

the Miss Agatha Folsom with the screwy, "Isn't it delightful?" A fan has even composed a song with Lectaire's catch-line as the title . . . Al and Pete, singing comedians who left N'Yawk recently, are back auditioning in Cleveland where they first saw heavy money.

Richard T. Patterson, Jr., executive vice-president and general manager of NBC, came west last weekend to see the Merchandise Mart, Chicago, studios for his first time . . . which reminds me the birdies tweet that NBC won't be moving from 711 Fifth Avenue to Radio City for some time, if then, with the removal cost figuring around three million ($3,000,000.00) dollars.

Radio uplift societies needn't make faces at Dr. Fu Manchu, for he and his chasers will quit the air after April 24 ostensibly for the summer, but with the fall return still in debate . . . That General Tire show, set to premier March 15 and which was to have starred General Pershing, was set back to the confab stage by old General Moratorium. (Note to NBC: take it out of your program listings) . . . Another summer vacationer will be the juvenile Sekatary Hawkins . . . But here's a ray of sunshine. Roses and Drums has renewed for 42 weeks, the ten missing shows to be taken off at the beach after June 18.

Plums and

PRUNES to the similarity of games the sponsors ask us to play in order to win their handsome prizes. Can't they invent something new, or must we forever word-build or sloganize? . . . and many withered, mouldy ones for two-thirds of the unimaginative and inferior gulf they call programs and hand out on the airwaves from morning until late afternoon . . . Plums for Fred Allen's wit, clean, fresh and always sure-fire; for the satires of Jack Benny; for the silliness of Col. Stoopnagle and Budd; for Phil Baker and his stooges; for the pioneers of high-priced laughs on the air—Burns and Allen. As for Baron Pearl, the votes are divided. It depends on the night. Mr. Wynn may make you laugh—but not always me—and as for Cantor, I pass . . . To Vallee for his March 30 bill, a carload of plums. Ilomay Bailey and Lee Sims helped make it a gem . . . Next week; "Studio Applause and Its Place."

REVIEWING RADIO

By Mike Porter

I WISH I knew of some way to break this news gently—but that would be violating the rules of journalism. So prepare, gentle readers, for a shock!

There is, according to news-in-the-making down in Washington, a sweeping, amazing and utterly stupendous revolution in radio broadcasting under way!

By a fortuitous circumstance, I have come into possession of information that leaves no doubt that the Government is planning—

(1) To abolish the Federal Radio Commission.

(2) To place control of all American radio under authority of the Post Office Department.

(3) To appoint Senator Dill, of Washington State, a sort of assistant Postmaster General in charge of every phase of radio.

(4) To surrender to Mexico perhaps half a dozen choice wave-lengths now held by American transmitters.

(5) To abolish any notion that frequencies belong to any company, firm or individual by prior rights.

(6) To impose a federal tax upon all transmitters, in ratio to their power, frequencies and prestige.

(7) To work out a system for auction bidding among the broadcasters who will be required to compete by rates of taxation for power and place on the dial.

(8) To issue a general order reducing power to a minimum in sea-coast areas, to avoid blanketing and facilitate marine, naval, and army radio traffic.

(9) To concentrate all super-powered plants in central sections of the country, thus obviating interference in coast sections, and removing the necessity for many of the units now included in the chains, since super-power, from a central point will insure national coverage.

(10) To effect a general reallocation of broadcasting wave-lengths, by assigning the high-powered plants to the lower channels, and the low-powered plants to high channels, thus reversing the dial set-ups currently in effect.

I DO not say that all these ten points will materialize, because I know the broadcasting companies will fight. But there is no doubt about the taxation becoming a legal measure, nor is there any doubt that Mexico will get what it wants in the way of surrendered wavelengths at the imminent conference. The network executives will not take the rest of the program lying down, but they will be up against a concentration of authority if Dill assumes the radio dictatorship, with none of the advantages of divided opinion which so often has made impotent the attempted ruling of a radio commission.

The information that comes to me from Washington indicates that President Roosevelt is sold on Senator Dill as a director-general of radio, and that the Postoffice Department is the logical directorate for the handling of radio matters, as in England and Germany.

Should the plan for a central concentration of high power be successful, the networks would find it necessary to move their headquarters to points near Chicago, though they never could hope to transport talent there. The natural expedient therefore would be to maintain New York and West Coast studios with relay lines to the power plants.

Naturally, this set-up would be a godsend to the independent stations. It would, so the technicians in Washington believe, banish the chaos on the lower channels, because the high-power plants are so comparatively few, and in that region of the dial, would draw the bulk of listeners, while up in the higher channels, the low powered plants would find new audiences and no blanketing. To put it briefly, so

At this time, sponsors are not numerous. Business, so far as time and talent buying goes, is at the lowest ebb in radio history. Things are so tough that there is serious talk of shortening the broadcasting day this summer.

One of the first moves, whether the tax is to be passed on to commercial sponsors or not, will be to emulate the movie industry by cutting into the salaries of the performers. Before another year has passed, the big-money men and women among the radio artists will learn that the golden era has passed. At the moment, artists without any great amount of fame are working sustaining programs for nothing, just to be on the air, or, for the proverbial coffee and cakes. The help in all departments of the networks are having their salaries sliced, and if sponsors are to share the taxation to be imposed on broadcasting, they are going to deduct it from the big dough paid out to artists.

After a year or so of this, things will adjust themselves, but in the beginning, it will mean that the big shots will be few and far between—with the resultant depreciating effect on the quality of air presentations, after present contracts have run out.

The plans of Senator Dill would not go into effect simultaneously, even if there were not the inevitable lobbying and litigation, which are bound to result. To avoid confusing the audience, the allocations would be made slowly and systematically, possibly over the period of a year. In this connection, I would say that two years would be nearer the truth, because undoubtedly, there will be court hearings, although complainants will find themselves up against a single authority. One of the points that will be challenged first will be the possibility of competitive bidding for position and power. At first glance, this would seem a trifle unfair, but when it is remembered that the wealthiest stations are in sea-coast territory, it becomes clear that they cannot figure influentially in the bidding without moving to central territory. My impression of this phase of the contemplated change is that quality and service will count a great deal in the bidding.

I suppose all these statements will bring the usual denials, and that I will be stigmatized as an alarmist, but I can assure the audience, and radio executives, too, that all the foregoing plans are under serious discussion, and I have no doubt that there is nothing surprising in these statements to the radio executives, who, last week, hastily entrained for Washington when they received the first intimations of the government plan.

far as the listener is concerned, the manner of hearkening to programs would be entirely reversed.

The plans of Senator Dill would not go into effect simultaneously, even if there were not the inevitable lobbying and litigation, which are bound to result. To avoid confusing the audience, the allocations would be made slowly and systematically, possibly over the period of a year. In this connection, I would say that two years would be nearer the truth, because undoubtedly, there will be court hearings, although complainants will find themselves up against a single authority. One of the points that will be challenged first will be the possibility of competitive bidding for position and power. Effect on Fan—

GRANTED that the federal tax on transmitters—one of the new administration's means of helping balance the national budget—is certain to eventuate, how will this affect the listener? Adversely, I'm afraid, for it means that the stations must make up for the added expense by further curtailments in expenses, or by adding a portion of the tax on the time rate for sponsors.

ALONG the AIRIALTO

By Martin Lewis

BELIEVE it or not, I was there, heard it with my own ears and I have witnesses. Nat Brusiloff, who has been making music for Kate Smith ever since she went airing a year and a half ago with her famous "When the Moon Comes Over the Mountain," was going over the numbers with the portly warbler a few minutes before the program was to go on the air. Everything was set. Numbers timed, well-rehearsed and everybody was set to go.

"And then out of the clear studio sky, up pops Nat the Brusiloff and asks Kate what theme song they were playing that night. From what we could gather, after those present in the studio could regain their composure, Nat had evidently figured that it was high time for that moon to get over the mountain . . . Kate is wheeled into the studios for her broadcasts these days because of her operation, but she is still as gay and jolly as ever."

Winchell and Bernie have been playing together at New York's and Brooklyn's Paramount Theaters for the past two weeks and if any of those radio fans who wrote to Winchell's sponsors, objecting to his panning the ole maestro over the air, could have seen these friendly enemies playing together they would have hung their heads in shame . . . Incidentally, last Tuesday night, Bernie was still on the stage at the Brooklyn Paramount at 7:30 p. m. . . . the NBC studios were five miles away; he was scheduled to go on the air at 8 p. m. . . . a motorcycle squad with screeching sirens escorted the "Jazz King" and all his merry lads to the studios and they arrived a few minute before schedule.

AFTER a recent "Show Boat" program, Lanny Ross went immediately to an M.D. and had his tonsils clipped . . . both the owner and voice are doing nicely, thank you! . . . Ted Husing, in my opinion the "King of Announcers," without any notes or script, reeled off 410 words a minute during the first thirty minutes of a sports broadcast . . . Do you wonder why I think he is King . . . Here's one for the "Gags and Boners" column, which seems to have been passed up by you air sleuths. David Ross was telling me the other night he made an error while reading his commercial, "We are giving women free," he said. Of course, it should have been, "We are giving free, to women." . . . However, the Golden Voiced announcer received a letter a few days later signed by all the members of a fraternity, who took him seriously . . . they requested

Dave to send them an assortment

from a photograph taken on a previous trip to the hospital. Now scarlet fever has her off the air. of blondes, brunettes and red-heads. "We can use them," they wrote . . . Lowell Road in Hartford, Connecticut, was recently named after your news commentator, Lowell Thomas . . . Stuart Churchill, the tenor with Fred Waring's orchestra, was picked up by Fred at the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor where he was singing for his meals . . . If you wondered whose laugh you heard above others on this giggle program, it is none other than Rosemary Lane, whom I accused of receiving extra remuneration for being chief stooge.

FLASHI—Rubinoff got a hair-cut! Wonder who took up the collection? . . . Downey may change his mind about going over to London this summer on account of pending commercials . . . he just says he wants to be around when they want him.

Tip to Evans Plummer: Don't be surprised if you hear that Homay Bailey and Lee Sims will move their residence from your windy city to the big town . . . dickering is being done at this writing . . . Your announcer, Uncle Louis Dean, is baby-talking these days "ooz little ootsie wootsie is 'oo'." . . . Teddy Bergman, who you remember as Joe Palooka, playing the "tough guy" in most of the dramatic air acts, was told to "Stick 'em up" the other day on his way home . . . Teddy forked over the two bucks he had in his pocket without going into a rehearsal of any of his other parts . . . Mary Eastman is another who heard the same unkind words. She was driving home from the studios alone (I should have known). Mary doesn't believe in arguing with strange men, so she handed over her bag.

Elsie Hitz, who plays June Armstrong in the Magic Voice program and also Patricia Barlow in the Mysteries of Paris is laid up in the hospital with scarlet fever. She will not be heard on the air for at least a month.

Program Bits—

IF you will be listening, George Bernard Shaw will speak to you over an NBC network on Tuesday, April 11 . . . Walter Connolly, who plays Charlie Chan, will be in the cast of Sunday's episodes of Roses and Drums. Mr. Connolly will take the part of Colonel Bendon . . . Starting this Monday night for the next twenty-six weeks, Singin' Sam will be heard only once a week . . . Saturday, April 8, will mark the first of a series of special broadcasts heralding the World's Fair which opens in Chicago June 1 . . . He offers no comment about the wolf at the door. . . . Don Bestor, ordinarily regular in his life's routine, will not allow his band to be photographed. "I'm sure to lose some of my men!" declares the popular director . . . "Three on a Match" is Ford Bond's especial aversion.

It is not generally known, but B. A. Rolfe, the rotund maestro, will not countenance whistling in the studio during a lull at rehearsals.

There is another large class of superstitious studio folk who can't abide visitors for the very simple reason "it tends to bring bad luck." These include, Floyd Gibbons, John whenever she takes an audition, and on these occasions she also always enters the studio backwards.

Freddie Rich, CBS maestro, has one extremely deep-seated superstition regarding "The Rosary," Tosti's "Goodbye," and "When Day is Done." He flatly refuses to play any of these since the death of a close member of the family shortly after he played "The Rosary," and if any of these numbers is scheduled on one of his programs he leaves the studio until after the selection is played.

Portland Hoffa's chief superstition affects her but once a year. She thinks it bad luck not to take down her Christmas tree before New Year's Day. Her hubby, Fred Allen, admits no superstitions, except an occasional knock on wood. Roy Atwell, word-scrambler of the Allen troupe, thinks the worst possible bad luck is not getting his pay check. He doesn't like to start a new commercial program series on the thirteenth, but he admits he may be wrong, for when last he did the series became a howling success. He also likes to touch a hunchback's hump if it can be done surreptitiously. He tries always to see the new moon over his left shoulder, and he's not the least bit enthusiastic about broken mirrors. Comedian Stoopnagle's only superstitious indulgence is that which forbids two people walking together to allow an obstacle to separate them, and partner Budd Hulick harbors no superstitions at all. Bob White, the Dr. Petrie of the "Fu Manchu" dramas hates to play thirteen parts either in one day or one year. Juano Hernandez, who portrays the fabious and mythical "John Henry," violates a popular conception of his race when he insists that he is not the least bit superstitious. He is, however, a deep student of psychic phenomena, and has a strong belief that evil or good deeds travel in cycles and returns as they left, greater, but unchanged.

In Defense

Quincy, Ill.

Gentlemen:
Answering Mrs. M. L. of Chicago I wish to make a protest more violent than her own unjust one about Irene Wicker. They say a little knowledge is dangerous and I would suggest that Mrs. M. L. who seems to know about the talented Irene Wicker, her husband and her children, keep quiet until she really knows what she is talking about.

I am an Irene Wicker fan from Quincy, Ill., her home town. I have known Irene's work since she was a pupil of mine and the most talented little girl in Quincy. She has more right to earn whatever she makes than Kate Smith and Ruth Etting whose "personality voices" net them weekly salaries well up in the thousands for two or three weekly broadcasts of mediocre singing. Irene not only enacts her daily fifteen minute children's program but prepares her own material for it which is no small task.

The Judy and Jane program to which Mrs. M. L. refers as one of Irene's husband, Walter Wicker's two programs, was Irene's own idea. She wrote the original stories or scripts as you call them and outlined the story for a year. She then turned over the job of writing to an outsider whom she pays a nice salary. She also employs at least ten others as performers and pianists for this program at good salaries.

Mrs. M. L. should also be told that Irene and her husband Walter not only take care of their own family of two children but contribute to the support of some near relatives who have been ill for several years. They also gave positions as house-keeper and secretary to some old friends, a mother and daughter whose husband and father was lost a year ago.

Sincerely yours,
Miss H. H.

Bands vs. Bangs

Germantown, Pa.

Dear Editor:
To be necessarily deprived of the divine music of the genius Rubinstein, and his violin; the capers of Eddie Cantor and the wealth of wisdom which lies beneath his timely banter thru one's own bungling of plans is, to put it colloquially, "bad enough". To be forced to listen to such an enjoyable program under adverse conditions over which one has no control is certainly "adding insult to injury".

This outburst is the aftermath of listening to last night's "Chase and Sanborn Hour" thru stations WEAF, WGY etc. which for some unknown reason after six o'clock at night, develop a most torturing habit of "crashing" and "banging" unmercifully! Such disturbance in reception is most annoying to one's mental composure, plays havoc with one's disposition and causes one to "miss the points" more than not.

Having no knowledge of the technicalities of radio I cannot suggest an adequate remedy for the acting up. I can however make a plea to my fellow Philadelphians to lend their co-operation in suggesting the return of WFI to the chain over which the Chase and Sanborn Hour is broadcast. Whether it has been definitely decided to permanently drop WFI from the chain I do not know but I think its return might be seriously considered if we Philadelphians band together in filing our complaints and submitting the suggestion. After all, Philadelphians are the ones who are suffering. It's up to us. Let's go.

Dear Editor:

May I be frank? I think the guy who pays the bills for Myrt and Marge is plain crazy when he hollers for more laughs in their story. Don't we have enough of that stuff from the Baron, Fire-Chief, Budd and Colonel and the Marx Brothers? We like it but we also like a change and I know a score of people who would rather listen to Myrt and Marge as they are. They're ace high with us. Leave them alone.

Voice of the Listener:

What a laugh Rudy Vallee must get when (and if) he reads some of the letters written by his hecklers.

While these poor saps are working up a temperature trying to think of all the nasty things possible to say about Rudy, he is going complacently along gathering in the do-re-mi in bushels full.

These people are strangers to Rudy so of what value is their opinion to him? He's doing his best, his sponsors like him, his contracts are renewed when they expire and he's probably getting more money per week than his hecklers are getting per year! And besides, all these letters which are written to annoy and anger Rudy really are giving him some free advertising.

If these nasty letter writers weren't such asses they'd realize Rudy doesn't give a good gosh darn what they think as long as it doesn't affect the Vallee popularity or the Vallee bankroll.

I tell you there's nothing like walking into a theater at night, putting the old makeup on, stepping out on the stage to face that audience just sitting there waiting to be entertained. You see their smiling faces, you hear that laughter, you don't think of your salary, your only thought is to entertain. And if you entertain, the people are not slow to let you know about it. Brooklyn Shows Off

Brooklyn, N. Y.

Gentlemen:

I'm sure this won't be printed in your paper because you're always trying to literally "Show Off" with your out-of-town patrons. This is about the fourth time I have written but I suppose the reason you don't print my letters is because I'm too outspoken.

The best man singer on the air is James Melton. You may have your Rudy Vallee, Russ Columbo etc., but give me Mr. Melton. I'm sure many fans agree but are afraid to insult the "god" of many people, Mr. Vallee. The only singers that compare with James (I hope I'm not getting too personal Mr. Melton) are Bing Crosby and Donald Novis and the latter's voice seems to be going dry lately.

Yields to Temptation

Pontiac, Ill.

Dear Voice of the Listener:

Several times I have been tempted to write a response or comeback to some of the letters published in your columns. I didn't know until now. A letter, published under the title "King is Razzed" aroused my ire as it were. Supposing Ben Bernie is a year or two older than Paul Whiteman; and then again, supposing the Roosevelt Hotel wasn't built in 1922. After all, what's a few years between friends?? The crack about "people laughing at anything" wasn't a bit funny and it seems to have been made without considering the fact that Ben has a "swell" orchestra. As far as the "Constant Reader" being the composer of "Götterdämmerung" who knows? Maybe he is. Queer piece, isn't it?

Considering "Guy Lombardo was 29 years old four years ago, thus making him a little more than thirty now" I wish to congratulate the Reader on his splendid calculation.

Now that that's off my chest, I want to throw in a good word for one of the greatest of the great "Maestros". None other than the one and only TED WEEMS. Why is it that we never hear much about Ted? Bernie Cummins is plenty good, but here's one reader that's wishing Ted a speedy return to the Trianon.

RADIO GUIDE is a part of our radio equipment. There's nothing that makes a guy lose his religion so fast as when twisting the dials trying to find his favorite.

Spencer, Ia.

Dear Editor:

With the exception of your department "Voice of the Listener" RADIO GUIDE is one of the most readable and entertaining of magazines. But that department is the fly in the ointment. All people of intelligence welcome constructive criticism. Criticism however, when it is not helpful, degenerates into a means by which ill-tempered people give vent to their inferiority complexes. Their letters read like "A tale told by an idiot, full of sound and fury, signifying nothing". Their envy of those who have attained success solely on their merits, is palpable. Their lack of intelligence is obvious. Would an intelligent person listen nightly to entertainment he dislikes so intensely?

If you would cease to print the vulgarly worded letters of those whose attempts to attract attention are really pathetic, you would doubtless have a department conducted for people interested in intelligent criticism.

Why lower the whole standard of such a unique magazine by giving us the "Voice of the Louse" instead of the "Voice of the Listener"?

Dear Editor:

Why don't all Rudy Vallee fans and those irritated by him call a truce? This business of panning Rudy is passe since it began over two years ago! Personally, I like his music but I am indifferent to him as a personality.

Incidentally, I believe Evans Plummer is long overdue for compliments on the splendid handling of RADIO GUIDE's daily WJJD broadcasts.

Dear "Voice":

This is not meant to be a vitriolic letter but a warning to other listeners-in.

I am sick, t.b., and my only pleasure, pastime, life you might almost call it is my radio. I have written to those people who "cheer me up" (?) with their professionally gaiety, to ask them for photographs. Another patient here wrote and received beautiful pictures of Burns and Allen, Boswell Sisters, etc. (autographed) I wrote and received nothing. Why, I wonder? Ruth Etting and Mme. F. Alda were charmingly kind enough to send me pictures. But if you listeners would save postage, effort and heartbreak do not write to the following: Dorothy Hall, Boswell Sisters, Richard Crooks, Lawrence Tibbett, Juan Reyes, Easy Aces, Burns and Allen, Mary Eastman and Donald Novis.

Now, I ask you why don't they reply to me? And that exponent of kindness to those who are institutionalized, Kate Smith, not an answer. Perhaps my method is wrong. Am I supposed to enclose money for the photographs I want?

I don't suppose that this letter will find a nook in the "Voice" either. It just isn't my luck.

But may I take this opportunity to tell you how very much I enjoy your RADIO GUIDE. Could you manage an article on the Voice of Experience, Vic and Sade and the Easy Aces? I'd like to learn the inside story about them.

Long may the RADIO GUIDE wave

A Male Thinks

Portage, Wis.

Dear Editor:

Have been reading your GUIDE since it was published. The V. O. L. has always interested me greatly. Was very much amused by a letter in your last issue. Miss A. Brakefield wrote it and evidently let her temper and pen get the best of her.

I personally don't see how a person can get so "worked up" over insults to your favorite radio artist, even though you are greatly devoted to him or her. Turn a deaf ear to all insults and put the other ear to the loudspeaker. There are worse things than "insulting names" that may hurt our "favorites".

Miss Brakefield thinks men are cowards. Well it certainly is encouraging to us men to know that she can think. I always believed that women couldn't think after reading the following lines from Kipling:-

"A fool there was, and he made his prayer
To a rag, and a bone, and a hank of hair"

So the combination of a rag, a bone and a hank of hair really can think!

Miss Brakefield hoped that Mr. Wallace and other men would read her letter. Well I did and now I hope that she and other "ladies" read mine.
