BEHIND the scenes of radio there rages a battle which pits against each other the finest artists in the land. It is the battle of New York against Hollywood as broadcasting's first city.

Recall for a moment those dazzling days when the National Broadcasting Company piled high its magnificent monument to human progress and called it Radio City. Then, all radio roads led to New York and all artists clamored at its gates. So positive was the trend that the Columbia Broadcasting System purchased a million dollars' worth of land, decided to build a broadcasting plant second to none.

But those plans of yesterday's mice and men had not taken into account the great attraction of that comparatively tiny village called Hollywood. Thus, when radio producers began to go west in search of fresh voices and finer talents, they did so gingerly at first and with fear and trembling.

Could broadcasts be made from the West? Could those mysterious vibrations which are sound waves travel without distortion through thousands of miles of copper wire strung over freezing mountains and blazing plains?

Today's answer to these questions is a glance at today's program listings!

Jack Benny leads the list, then come Burns and Allen, Bing Crosby, Jimmy Fidler, the Radio Theater, Fred Astaire, Jack Oakie. And presently a revived "Show Boat" will be broadcast from the great Hollywood studios.

The latest offering from the Film City is the new Chase & Sanborn program in which Don Ameche pits the incredible W. C. Fields against the equally incredible Charlie McCarthy.

No new show since broadcasting began has caused more favorable comment after its first broadcast than this fine new program. Wherever one went, the talk was of radio's newest feud—that of the reconstructed Fields versus a ventriloquist's dummy.

But could the drama of a comeback by a man whose life recently had been given up by his doctors be duplicated by W. C. Fields—would his humor ever be so tangy again? That was the question that people asked one another.

Ensuing Sunday nights gave an answer to that—an answer which established the new Chase & Sanborn show as a Sunday evening favorite. Hollywood's latest super production is a smash hit.

The men and women who plan new shows are saying that Hollywood is the place where the talent is; where all the big shows of tomorrow must originate.

The battle between the Little City and the Big Town is not over. Possibly it never will be over. But, for the moment, the Little City has dealt the Big Town such a body blow that we can confidently depend on most of our important air entertainment originating in California's star-spangled studios this next winter! Show after show has gone West—few have returned. This is today's radio!

STORIES OF THE SONGS YOU LOVE

Barcarolle

THIS is a saga of genuine horror. And yet it concerns a love song! It's the amazing story of the tragedy-stung Barcarolle, a love duet which occurs in the second act of Jacques Offenbach's famous French opera, "Tales of Hoffmann."

Today, you may not recognize the Barcarolle as a love duet because it is more frequently heard over the radio as an orchestral number rather than in its original two-voice form. But if you know the tune at all—and who does not?—undoubtedly you recognize it as one of those insidiously beautiful melodies that, once heard, continues to haunt indefinitely.

It is universally known as one of the world's most precious melodies, yet strangely enough, one tragedy after another, including a calamity in which 900 persons lost their lives, has pursued this tune.

To tell the complete story, to relate all the weird circumstances that may have bearing on the subject, requires more than one approach.

First to be considered are the unusual happenings in the life of the composer of that opera, who, incidentally, was not the composer of this fatal melody.

The music world knows him as Jacques Offenbach, but he was born as Jacques Levy, at Offenbach-on-Main, Germany, June 21, 1819, the son of a Jewish cantor in Cologne. He turned out an incredible list of works, including several operas, before he died in Paris, October 5, 1880. However, only his "Tales of Hoffmann" and a few overtures have survived the appraisal of time. But that's ahead of our story.

We must now turn to that Hoffmann whose fantastic tales form the plot of the opera in which occurs this melody with its many tragic consequences. This Hoffmann actually lived, a strange genius whose biography reads like a mystery story.

Many believed him in league with the devil, for black magic and the strangest satanic hocus-pocus abound in his writings. One of his books, still read today by students of the occult, is called "Elixirs of the Devil," but his most enduring effort is a collection of weird stories which bears a title of twenty-one words—"Views of the Life of Mur, the Tomcat, with Fragments of the Biography of Johann Kreisler, from Loose and Spotted Sheets."

Offenbach read and re-read them. Their strange poison got into his blood and eventually he saw in them a plot for his second opera. Jules Barbier was commissioned to arrange them into a workable libretto.

But the occult scenes captured Offenbach's imagination more than they inspired it. He labored over this score for years. He wrote and re-wrote, never quite satisfied. Nor was he to be completely content for many years because the mystery of the "Barcarolle" lay in the far-away past when Jacques Offenbach was tiny Jacques Levy.

One of his earliest recollections was the lullaby with which his mother lulled him to sleep in his infancy. The first measures of that song haunted him all his life, but, try as hard as he could, he could never recall its completing phrases. In time the yearning to recall the rest of that tune became a mania. Offenbach began searching music shops and libraries for a copy

Bess Johnson—her family considered her a black sheep!

YES, women have succeeded in radio. They have become successful actresses, script writers, singers. Such names as Lily Pons, Joan Blaine, Kate Smith—they are stars, and their names are on everyone's lips. They have proved that radio offers equal opportunities to both sexes.

But there is another side to radio, the "behind the scenes" side. It's the executive side of radio.

As far as I know, only one woman has ever successfully invaded that field, given the men cards and spades, and still come through with flying colors. Her name is Bess Johnson, and her talents seem to have extended into almost every branch of radio: acting, announcing, producing, directing. As the radio head of one of the country's leading advertising agencies, Bess is a cool-headed, aggressive executive. As the beloved Fran Moran, of "Today's Children," she is an emotional, skilled actress. And as the director-producer of "Junior Nurse Corps" and the Wayne King shows she has combined these two facilities with unusual success.

And in addition to being one of the busiest women in radio today, Bess also finds time to be her charming self, a genial hostess, and, I'm proud to say, my friend. That is why I can tell this story, because I know every word of it is true. I know what Bess Johnson went through before she found success, know that besides the ordinary hardships, she was forced to combat something even greater: there were a thousand tiny strings tugging at her heart. She was a girl fighting to get ahead, to forge a career for herself, knowing it would be at the cost of losing the one man she loved.

"I HATE to make statements," she told me, "because every person is different. What might apply to one woman, wouldn't be right for another. But for myself, I know that marriage and my career would never work. I had to choose between them, I chose the career, and I think it was the only way I could have found happiness."

Born in Elkins, West Virginia, Bess came from a socially prominent family. Traditionally, the men became senators, the women were beautiful. That is, all except Bess. Being beautiful was too easy. She wanted something difficult, wanted to tackle some tough job, and do it better than anyone else. It didn't take her family long to realize she was going to be the "black sheep" of the flock.

Down the road was the stately house of Perry. It, too, had a black sheep: young Paul. Paul was an unruly youngster, who gave early evidence of independence. For one thing, he asked too many questions and took life too seriously. He was never satisfied with where he was, he always wanted to be a little farther ahead. Even before he'd finished grade school, deciding he was going to become a doctor, he had started in. Much to the dismay of his parents, he began dragging home stray dogs and cats to doctor them up.

But his family tolerated his eagerness. After all, ambition was not to be discouraged in a young man.

Not so, however, with Bess. She was a girl! Girls are not supposed to have other than social ambitions. Of course, they didn't mind when she directed several amateur plays in high school. But when, upon her graduation, she made the startling announcement she was going on the stage, her family came forth in fiery opposition. An actress? No, they said, she must get such ideas out of her head. She was going to finishing school, prepare for her debut. She must start thinking of marriage.

Perhaps it was, at that turning-point in her life, when the "two black sheep," Bess and Paul, realized how much they meant to each other. Rushing out of the house, Bess went to find him. Good old Paul. The two of them had grown up together, fought each other's battles, always understood. "Can you imagine," she said, "they want me to go to finishing school, learn how to pour tea!"

Even in his teens, Paul was wise. He sat thinking before he answered.

"You don't have to," he said softly. "You mean . . ."

"Right. Run away."

"Run away? Why, how could I? I want to go to Carnegie Tech and study. What would I live on?"

"Get a job, go to work," he said. "That's what I'd do if Father wasn't sending me to medical school."

And Bess Johnson started thinking. Hers were daring thoughts, too. She actually began thinking that she could stand on her own two feet!

THUS she found herself in a strange city. Yes, it was a courageous step for a young girl to take, but Bess Johnson made it because she had a deep determination, a strong will.

With her talents, Bess made rapid progress. She built a firm foundation for a career. But there are other things in life besides success, and two young people began to learn that lesson. Paul, driving himself to learn the mysteries of medical science, Bess, never ceasing in her efforts to master dramatic art, found companionship together. Suddenly they realized they were in love with each other, had been from the time they were kids together.

Neither of them had a dime. Paul had years of study ahead, Bess was out of a job. Yes, I think again that this story could have happened only to these two particular individuals. They were in love, desperately in love. So they got married.

Bess soon realized her life had changed. She was no longer Bess Johnson, she was Mrs. Paul Perry. The career she'd planned now became secondary, the important goal now was her husband, the man she loved. His life, and his success, now became her job. To build him, not herself; to keep the ship on its course while Paul studied and progressed, while he brought forth the genius which she knew he possessed.

Those were lean years, but happy ones. Bess was modeling clothes during the day, and playing with the Goodman theater group at night. Paul was taking a post-graduate course at the University of Chicago. Sacrifices? Yes, every day was a sacrifice. There were no parties or fine clothes, only their small apartment and hard work. But they were two young people in love, and they were happy.

It was a proud day when two young people stood outside a little house in Evanston, in the suburbs of Chicago, and looked fondly at a gilt-lettered sign: "Dr. Paul Perry, Physician and Surgeon" . . . But it was a prouder day for Bess. She had a surprise to top even that. There was going to be a baby born in that little house soon!

Paul was working harder than ever these days. His small practise took up little of his time, but he seldom put in less than fifteen hours a day bending over his laboratory bench, experimenting, studying, testing. And while he worked, Bess sat home, waiting. Paul was not to blame, but neither was Bess when, having stood inactivity as long as she could, she went looking for a job. Slowly, slowly, the walls of Jericho began to crumble.

AT FIRST, Paul didn't even know she was working. The small parts she played on various radio programs took up little of her time. But Bess was not intended for small parts. She always had that little extra something which makes a winner. Already the big-wigs were perking up their ears in mild interest. But she had to get good and roaring mad before she got the first break.

It was during the rehearsal of a network show a few years ago, and the director was spoiling the entire scene because he didn't know the first thing about dramatics.

Bess kept conceding, backing up, giving way. But finally she could stand it no longer. She knew that her words would probably cost her her job, but she let fly with both barrels. Then she started for the door.

But sitting silently in the rear of the studio was a quiet little man who heard everything. Stepping forward, he stopped Bess and introduced himself. He was an advertising executive.

"I like your spunk," he said. "Would you like to come to work for me?"

THE next morning Bess reported, to become third assistant to the third assistant behind a tiny desk, piled high with papers, in the far corner of the room. But as she sat down, Bess suddenly realized that she was happy again. Happy because she had a job to do, hard, difficult, and plainly marked for her; a path leading through that maze of desks and underlings right straight into that private office at the end of the hall.

The months that followed were happy ones for both Bess and Paul. He saw that old sparkle return to her eyes, the zest and enthusiasm which he had seen there before. And he understood.

But with that understanding came also a slow drifting away from each other. Paul's work in X-ray therapy had commanded attention, and a short time later he gave up his small practise to join the research staff of the University of Chicago. There he too found happiness, found the one thing he had always wanted. A huge laboratory at his disposal, the finest equipment at his fingertips, and nothing to do but work.

Bess, too, had thrown herself into her work. She no longer occupied that little desk in the far corner—she was directing programs now, and a member of the staff's planning board.

But she suddenly realized that her marriage was doomed to destruction. She stopped to ask herself why.

To answer that took very little thought. But to make a decision? That was the hardest battle she ever had to fight. If she gave up everything to be just Mrs. Paul Perry, could she save her marriage, which, in its present course, she knew was doomed? Or would she, gaining success, be happy if it meant losing Paul?

Yes, she finally chose a career. She chose that path, and stuck to it, made a success of it. She became the busiest woman in radio. She lives in a palatial apartment on Chicago's North Shore, now, with her daughter, "Jop."

The divorce becomes final in June. What was it she'd said? "For me, marriage and a career would never work. I had to choose a career, and I think it was the only way I could have found happiness."

Bess Johnson may be heard Monday through Friday, on "Today's Children" over an NBC network at 10:45 a. m., EDT (9:45 EST; 9:45 CDT; 8:45 CST; 7:45 MST; 6:45 PST).

WHEN the curtain swings up at the broadcast, when the orchestra swells its cue for the baritone star of the show to render his first number, a tall young newcomer to radio strides from the wings into the gold bubble of light around the microphone. He smiles, bows low to his audience, nods to the maestro. And then, holding himself very erect in readiness, Walter Cassel looks far out across the shadowy mat of faces to scan eagerly the darkened back rows of the studio.

If he sees the white handkerchief, if he sees the girl's hand holding her handkerchief for a brief second above her head, he answers the signal in code. By rubbing the palms of his hands together. And then he sings.

Nobody ever notices, of course. It's a lovers' secret between the man at the microphone and the girl in the shadows. You'd think, watching him poised there in his tall Viking blondness, pouring out his virile rich voice with self-assurance and showmanship, that Walter Cassel was a lucky fellow without a care in the world. But if you could stand close to him, and know what he has endured, you might see the scars cut deep in his eyes and wide on his heart.

For of all his like on the air today, no other young man has paid more dearly for the right to stand before a microphone and sing than Walter.

The girl in the shadows is pretty and small, with navy-blue eyes and golden-brown hair. She's the wife of the man at the microphone and the mother of his three babies. And she's also the girl who everybody back home said had ruined her husband's chances to get where he is today.

WHEN Nadine Blackburn, 17, eloped with Walter Cassel, 19, it caused a furor among the people who knew them. Walter was one of Omaha's pet sons. He had everything it would take to make him a great singer and a pride to Nebraska—until he married Nadine Blackburn. But that marriage, of course, promptly burdened his future with the responsibilities of a wife. So people, not considering the fact that elopements are usually fifty-fifty ideas, said it was thoroughly selfish of Nadine to tie down a poor ambitious boy like Walter. Her mama ought to spank her outright. She deserved it.

As a matter of fact, her mama would have liked very much to haul out the hairbrush. Both families, bitterly opposed to the courtship, had cooperated for two years in doing everything they could to keep Walter in Creighton University and Nadine in high school.

They'd forbidden the two to see each other and actually spied on them when they suspected secret meetings.

Walter and Nadine met at their voice teacher's studio, and promptly fell in love over the baritone and soprano parts of Open the Gates Oh Jerusalem. Sundays they sang together at church and Thursdays they sang together over Station WOW, and somehow nothing is so conducive to romance as walking home from a choir meeting, or a nice radio rehearsal with nobody around but the controlman.

Family opposition notwithstanding, their love continued to bloom in rear soda booths and dark second balconies at the movies. Until, one Sunday night, at an Epworth League service they decided all this secret business was driving them crazy, borrowed a ten-dollar bill and a Model T, and drove fifty miles to Logan, Iowa, where they were married a few minutes after midnight.

They never knew where they got the nerve to do it, or the nerve to drive straight home and walk in the Blackburns' front door at three in the morning with the wedding certificate in Walter's pocket. It was pretty awful, Walter standing there white-faced in the hall, holding onto the bannister and saying, "I—well, we got married a while ago over in Logan, sir—" and Nadine, afraid to come out from behind the protection of her husband's broad shoulders, begging, "Please don't cry that way, Mama, please don't carry on!" and crying a little herself all the time, and the Blackburn household treating them with such demonstrations of rage that they ran out into the night as fast as they could. Consequently they didn't rate a speck of financial help from their in-laws, not even a small check for a wedding present. The first six weeks, they lived at a cheap boarding house and Walter sold his college text-books to furnish car-fare for job-hunting. Nadine did all her own housework, even the heavy washing, right up until the day John Walter, Jr., arrived, ten months after they were married. And because they were industrious they got along. But it wasn't much fun.

IT WASN'T much fun, because they hardly ever had any leisure together. Walter discovered it took a lot of hustling to support a family. During the day he worked as a filing-clerk in a flour mill, at night he picked up odd jobs lettering windows. He had one radio program a week, a choir job on Sundays, and four evenings a week he played the trumpet for a dance orchestra.

At Christmas time in 1933 the Tuesday Music Club announced that it was bringing Lawrence Tibbett to Omaha for a concert. Since Tibbett had always been his greatest idol, Walter not only reserved two first-row seats for the performance but persuaded the Music Club's manager to let him accompany him to the station to meet the great singer.

"Nadine, I've got to meet him!" he explained to her. "I can't keep on neglecting my voice this way if it's good enough ever to be first rate—and there's no point in wasting effort on my voice if it isn't worth it. I want a man like Tibbett to hear me sing and advise me frankly how much talent I have. Whatever he says goes." The awful midnight when Tibbett arrived, right in the middle of the worst blizzard in years, he was much too frozen and exhausted to say no to a blushing young blond chap who shyly persisted in begging for an audition. And as soon as Walter could thank him and murmur goodnight he raced home, choked with the hot happiness in his chest and throat, to tell the great news to Nadine.

Overjoyed and at once scared out of his wits, he sat tense in the chair under the bridge-lamp long after she had given up trying to make him get some sleep. "Suppose I don't make the grade!" he said to himself for the thousandth time over, following the thought immediately with, "Oh, I will—don't worry—I've got to!" for the thousandth time again. Until finally he slept, to awake cold and cramped at six in the morning, to shower and run through his old voice exercises again and again and suck throat lozenges until he was weary of the oily taste of them.

WHEN he arrived at the hotel at noon there were circles deep as heel-prints under his eyes and the palms of his hands were wet with trembling. The great Tibbett sat calmly over his breakfast tray at the window while Walter and his accompanist set up their music. And at last the moment came when the music could not possibly be fingered longer or the audition put off another second, and Walter was asking jerkily, "Shall we start, sir?"

"When you're ready," Tibbett answered casually, as if reaching for another piece of toast were the only important thing in the world.

Walter sang. Without seeing or thinking, as though all the fright and joy—as though even moving and breathing and remembering were stopped—he sang the booming words and tones of The Road to Mandalay. And he didn't realize he'd finished the song until he saw the head of Lawrence Tibbett, cut clear against the white curtains, shaking. Slowly. Shaking no. And the voice of Lawrence Tibbett saying kindly—and simply—"Sorry, young man."

Weakly he sat down, his knees flattened against the chair when he understood. He hadn't made the grade. "Whatever he says goes"—and this was it. Walter had Tibbett's answer.

You couldn't change it. You couldn't say, "Mr. Tibbett, you see—I'm out of practise, really—" or anything like that. Not now. You couldn't tell those things to the illustrious man who was now so nonchalantly suggesting, "But you might try something more lyrical," and opening up a newspaper and settling down behind it.

With a great calm, because the test was over now, Walter picked up his heart and stood unfeelingly to sing the song he and Nadine had often decided was really the most beautiful song in the world, Du Bist die Ruh. And suddenly, before he'd gotten half-way through it, Lawrence Tibbett had hurled his newspaper to the floor and was dashing around his hotel suite in an ecstasy of excitement.

"Stop! No—start again! Wait a minute—Willey!" he called to his own accompanist across the hall, "Stuart Willey! Come here and listen to this. It's marvelous! Just listen to this—"

They made him sing it four times, and then they made him sing everything lyrical he'd ever known. And after an hour of it Walter sat in a dim blur of realization that Tibbett was phoning the city newspapers, telling them he wanted to make a statement that Omaha had in Walter Cassel one of the most promising young singers he'd ever heard.

"But don't be foolish enough to give up your work and come to New York," he warned him again the last thing before he left town. "Conditions are very bad there now, hundreds of fine singers are out of jobs, and unfortunately I can't help you at the moment." He looked at Nadine. "I'd better tell you, Mrs. Cassel. Don't let him do anything unwise." And with that Lawrence Tibbett departed from Omaha.

EVEN if it had been advisable for Walter to journey east he knew he couldn't possibly manage it. The baby would be coming in a few more months, he hadn't any savings, and a man couldn't transplant his family to a place like Manhattan without at least the promise of a job. So he took great pains to hide his disappointment and frustration from Nadine.

But he couldn't hide a thing from the canny intuition of the girl who loved him.

"You want to go, don't you, Walt," she said to him quietly one night when they were sitting together listening to John Charles Thomas on the air—and before he could deny it she added, "Well, you're going, dear. I've decided on a way."

They waited for Jeanne Katherine to be born, and when the doctors' bills were paid they started laying plans. First they saved fifty dollars. Then Nadine secured a nurse to stay with the babies during the day, got herself a job clerking in Brandeis' department store and took over her husband's choir position. That gave her a combined income of twenty-six dollars a week to support herself and the children while Walter would be gone.

Everybody said they were insane, ridiculous youngsters to attempt such a thing. People tried to discourage them and nobody offered to help, still they went ahead. Finally a friend finagled a permit for Walter to ride to New York on a freight train as caretaker of three cars of live stock going out of South Omaha.

Six days and nights later, six of the dirtiest, coldest, hardest-working days he'd ever spent, he landed in Jersey City with the three cars of yearlings. His overcoat had been lost en route and in his pocket were only forty dollars of the fifty he'd started with. He ferried across the Hudson to the nearest Manhattan Y. M. C. A., cleaned up, and that night stood waiting at the stage door of the Metropolitan Opera House to see Lawrence Tibbett when he came out.

Tibbett didn't come out, though, because he was in Hollywood making a picture. So Walter was stranded without a single contact in New York. And soon he had just five dollars left and no job and no prospects.

He was hungry a lot those days, he was booted out of rooming houses innumerable times, and even if some radio station had granted him an audition he couldn't have taken it with his throat constantly locked with cold from prowling the slushy streets. He didn't tell those things to Nadine when he wrote her each night before bed. He never wrote, "I stood in a bread line today for the first time in my life and yet I'm too proud to come home a failure."

Nor did Nadine, when she wrote, tell him how long both she and Johnny had been perilously ill with flu, how desperately she had wanted him the night her fever was 104. Knowing he'd

IN HIGH school he "hated poetry," he couldn't understand it, and when he first read the classics over the radio he did it just for spite. Yet he met with success almost instantaneously—and now the program in which Ted Malone reads poetry is one of Columbia's most popular features.

It all happened by accident, too. If it hadn't been for unforeseen difficulties at KMBC, Kansas City, where in 1929 he filled in here and there and even sang a little on sustaining, he might still be waiting for the big break which would make his voice known to millions of radio listeners.

"One afternoon something went wrong at the station," he recalls, "I don't know what, but there was a gap on the air and they said, 'Here, grab this book and do something, read something, read anything but read it quick.' Well, I read it—don't even remember what it was—and some people wrote in right away that they liked it. Or anyway, somebody must have liked it because they decided I should keep on reading the stuff from then on."

So Ted Malone began reading "the stuff." But he didn't know anything about poetry, didn't like it and didn't understand why anyone else should. His "conversion" came after a sudden flood of complaints about his choice of material. Without worrying whether the letter-writers were justified, Ted decided he'd show 'em. Just for spite, from now on he'd pick only the "real stuff," the acknowledged classics. Then, when a fussy Missourian kicked, he'd simply retort, "Why, honey, don't blame me, you've just got bad taste."

AND so one day Ted chose "Thanatopsis," bane of his schooldays because he had to memorize it. He read casually toward the magnificent finale, and somehow, as he murmured the lines, there dawned upon the cocky beginner in radio the idea that maybe Mr. Bryant had something on the ball after all, that perhaps there was an inscrutable logic behind the development of a "classic"; that a piece of verse had to be pretty sane and pretty sensible and at the same time beautiful and moving if it were to survive. Ted Malone finished his stint that day in the grip of a vague uneasiness. He began to study poetry in earnest.

"And then the thing happened," he explains, "that would have happened to anyone who read poetry aloud for a few minutes every day. The things that I hated I found to be beautiful. With 'Thanatopsis'—why, I didn't know what the title meant—and when I finished reading it over the air that time—why, I was ashamed."

So he learned that Shakespeare and Keats and Shelley were not merely labels in text-books. He grasped the difference between schools of poetic thought. He studied rhythms, meters, rhymes. And the Malone who appeared before Kansas City audiences developed a quiet pride in his discovery, a faith that he was on a track that really led somewhere. The listeners, without knowing just what had happened, must have sensed something. They wrote in for more and more Malone.

Meanwhile, Ted wanted to learn how to gain closest contact with his fans. He believed in "little visits," because he held—and still holds—that "most people listen to the radio alone." He decided to find out what every-day men and women said to one another when they met informally.

RADIO'S MILLIONS—AND HE LOVES IT!

Between the Bookends of Life

"I went downstairs in Kansas City one lunch-hour," he explains. "I just stood on a corner and watched the people go by and listened for what they said to each other. Mostly it's 'Hello, there,' especially if you don't remember the guy's name. I knew then that 'Hello, there' was what I wanted."

So the man who had taken up poetry for admitted "spite and good-natured revenge," became a lover of fine writing and a student of the art of communicating it by voice to people he didn't know. "Between the Bookends" progressed astonishingly, and in October, 1935, Ted went to New York.

He arrived, timid and uneasy. "But they treated me like I was a big-shot already," he chuckles. "Honest, I didn't know how to act. Maybe I still had that old idea that a man who reads poetry—well, that a lot of people think there's something funny about him."

He lost that idea for good when a soft-drink deliverer, who had once worked in a Pennsylvania mine, told him his reading of Joseph Auslander's "Steel" had rung true to the spirit of days he had sweated underground. Ted appreciated that tribute more than most of them; he has no fears about the simplified notion of his job now. Letters come from men and women, and if the latter predominate, Ted feels it's because they're more likely to be home at the time he broadcasts.

He considers the audience "someone I've never met, but who is a composite of everything I've ever wanted."

The advantage of that approach, he smiles, is that he can say: "If I'm a little silly today, you're big enough to understand. And if I mispronounce a word, or stutter—well, you're big enough to understand that, too."

If that technique is not convincing, Ted's general attitude toward his work is. You know he loves his "little visits." The chubbiness of his cheeks, the utter unaffectedness and enthusiasm of his way of talking, sell him to you pretty thoroughly, even if you've become chary of all sorts of professional entertainers.

He never tires of joking over the way he pleased listeners by combining common sense and good luck. His favorite fan letter, for instance, came from the mother of a little girl in Ventura, California. One day Ted opened his program this way: "Hello, there. My what a pretty blue rug in the living-room today!"

The child, whose mother had just purchased a new rug, asked, "Mother, can that man really see through the radio?"

"Of course not, darling. He just happened to guess. Lots of people have new blue rugs."

The child turned away, not quite satisfied. And the very next day, Ted's voice came purring: "Hello, there. My, what a pretty dress we have on today. I just love those little ruffles . . ."

Resplendent in a new frock, with ruffles, the youngster turned to her mother, hands on her hips and eyes screwed up. "Don't you tell me again he can't see through the radio," she warned.

Ted Malone doesn't try to deceive. He's glad to share his little "secret," the business of throwing out a suggestion he knows will strike the fire of fact in at least a few of the thousands of homes he reaches. "'Cause after all the kidding and all the fun," he concludes, squirming a little in his chair, "if the program expresses anything at all, it expresses sincerity."

JUST about ten years ago, one Halloween, he had his first date with Verlia Mae Short of Courtney, Mo. She'd never been on a date before; he had to beg, cajole and promise her family before they'd let her go. Ted took Verlia to a house party, then courted her four years. They were married on her twentieth birthday, Nov. 10, 1930. Now there's Verlia Elaine, called "Bubbles," an additional bright spot in Ted's life, even if she's only 5.

Ted's 5 feet 9, weighs 165 and definitely looks his part. He's soft-spoken, easy-going, twinkly-eyed. He hasn't traveled much and says he likes his "little visits" more than any sport or hobby. His principal assistant is Howard Ely, who was his organist in Kansas City. Fred Feibel plays for him now and Ted teases him by calling him "stooge."

One thing is certain. When "Bubbles" reaches "Thanatopsis" in school, her dad is going to be mighty interested in her reaction. Through the timeless human "just for spite" tendency, he converted himself to a way of thinking and working that brought out his best possibilities. But he can't forget the poem that played the biggest part in the conversion.

CHICAGO.—Combatting the seasonal urge to gambol in the pastures, the networks are filling the kilocycles with more and more sports events which are calculated to take us out of our lethargy. Noteworthy this week are two announcements from NBC. The first is that the Braddock-Louis fight here, June 22, will be aired from Coast to Coast over 125 NBC stations. The second is that NBC will have microphones at four important Notre Dame games next October and November. By that time, however, our spring fever should be over. Meantime, the summer months are being filled by Mutual, CBS and NBC with tennis and track meets, golf matches, automobile speed classics and horse races.

Don't make any plans for tuning in television for at least the next two years. Take the word of several leading radio-set makers and the authoritative word of Major Lenox R. Lohr, head man of NBC.

Visiting Chi last week, Al Pearce staged an 18-act vaudeville show for his sponsor's dealers—25,000 of 'em! Incidentally, the Pearce Gang will broadcast from Chicago June 4 . . . Which reminds me that ex-Pearce Gangster Morey Amsterdam, now m.c.-ing the new NBC Night Club Luise Barklie, radio's "Hope Carter" and "Hope Alden," has had her maiden name made official. Her ex-husband is Fritz Blocki, playwright and critic . . . Decreased pork production evidently hasn't created a scarcity of hams. On the eve of resuming their summer tent show with which they tour through the Midwest, Toby and Susie, of the National Barn Dance, advertised for stock-company actors. Applications came from 900!

LAST week this department mentioned several of the ether stars who were taking a summer vacation and the names of those who were to do the subbing. More news has reached us in the interim. While Eddie Cantor is off, the half-hour will be occupied by Pinky Tomlin, the song-writer, Ella Logan, the wee-bit-of-Scotch songstress, Eddie Stanley, the comic, Jimmy Wallington and Jacques Renard. Although Eddie is scheduled for a thirteen-week rest from his radio work, don't be at all surprised if he makes an appearance from time to time. Incidentally, I would advise you not to believe what you may have read elsewhere about the signing of a six-year contract by Eddie Cantor with his present sponsor. This is entirely erroneous; Cantor has not signed such a contract.

College closes for Jack Oakie on June 23, and it is doubtful that it will reopen in the fall, for Benny Goodman takes charge after the 22nd. The program will be cut to half an hour and will originate in New York instead of Hollywood.

With so many shows leaving the air for vacations, with new programs replacing them, and some stars going off for weeks at a time, it is a relief to report about one big name who will not leave the air during the torrid months. For the first time since he started broadcasting, Walter Winchell will continue with his news flashes throughout the summer.

Sonja Henie, right, seven times an Olympic skating champion, now a featured film-actress, went on the air as a guest star of the Sunday Night Coffee Hour, May 23

I almost forgot to mention another possible replacement. There is some talk about Lou Holtz holding down the spot now occupied by Al Jolson while the mammy singer vacations. When it comes to dialect stories, I think Holtz is in a class by himself and, although I've listened to him many times, the comic rendered his best assortment of laugh-provokers during his recent "Show Boat" appearance. The studio audience sounded hysterical, for which I couldn't blame them in the least.

Clark Dennis, the young tenor who has been singing on Don McNeill's NBC Breakfast Club for almost two years, has been given Lanny Ross' job, which starts when the "Show Boat" docks in Hollywood. Everything is all set for the show but the music. Al Goodman has been asked several times to go to the Coast, but it would mean giving up his "Hit Parade" broadcasts and the Beauty Box Theater, too. It is understood the maestro was given an incentive in the way of remuneration, but as yet he hasn't given his decision.

A radio dramatization of Robert Louis Stevenson's "Treasure Island" will be broadcast in serial form over a CBS net. Irving Crump, the editor of a popular boys' magazine, is doing the radio adaptation, which will be aimed chiefly for the youngsters. No date has been set for the premiere of the series, but there are a couple of sponsors looking it over.

Jack Haley, who scored such a hit in the Winchell-Bernie flicker, "Wake Up and Live," may soon hit the air-planes as the star of a new half-hour show originating in Hollywood. Ted Fio-Rito will get the musical assignment . . . The M-G-M show that created so much conversation several months ago is again being discussed. Reports have it that several sponsors are bidding for the privilege of presenting Jean Harlow, Clark Gable, Robert Taylor, William Powell and all the other important M-G-M stars.

You may have read it elsewhere, but you can take my word that it isn't true that "Fibber McGee and Molly" will switch the time of their broadcast and be spotted opposite Burns and Allen. It's just another one of those false alarms . . . The Rubinfeld show returns to the East early in June, but Walter Cassel may not go along because of previous movie commitments . . . Leo Carrillo makes a guest appearance on the "Hit Parade" June 5, followed by Gene Raymond, the 12th.

Leopold Stokowski, left, world-famous symphony orchestra conductor, has moved to California, is building a home in Beverly Hills. He'll be in Deanna Durbin's next picture, "One Hundred Men and a Girl." Right, Bruce Kammern, "Kaltenmeyer" of Kindergarten fame, backstage at circus

Walter O'Keefe has gone to Hollywood to look for some new writers to prepare the material for his new job as emcee on the Fred Allen show. Some of you may recall that a few weeks before the Caravan went off the air, several seasons ago, the Broadway Hillbilly was blessed with an abundant supply of new material for his jesting when a son was born to him. Now, on the eve of Walter's new job, a second child is expected! And Walter is likely to have new material for gags!

3rd Birthday of Dionne Quints To Be Aired

Yvonne, Annette, Cecile, Emilie and Marie — the world-famous Dionne quintuplets—will again greet the world via radio on their third birthday, Friday, May 28, over the NBC-Red network.

In this radio celebration of the birthday of the Quints, American listeners will have the opportunity of noting the rapid development of the children, who now talk, recite nursery rhymes and sing simple songs. The broadcast will probably include an interview with Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe.

They will be supported by Gregory Ratoff, author of the original story.

This is the third appearance of each of these stars. Both have been heard in scenes from "Love Is News," and Miss Young in "Ramona," and Power in "Lloyds of London."

The musical portion of the program will be provided by Jerry Cooper, singing star, Frances Langford, Anne Jamison, Igor Gorin and Raymond Paige and his orchestra.

To Air Indianapolis Auto Race Monday

Charles Lyon and Graham McNamee, veteran NBC announcers, will bring a complete description of the 25th annual 500-mile auto race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway to NBC-Blue network listeners in a series of five broadcasts on Sunday, May 30, and Monday, May 31.

The start, progress and finish of the great motor race, which annually attracts the country's finest cars and most daring drivers, will be put on the air in three separate broadcasts.

Lyon will open the series on Sunday, with a broadcast of driving instructions to the racers by track officials. Later, he will interview mechanics and drivers putting the finishing touches on their cars.

On Monday, May 31, NBC will put the first fifteen minutes of the race on the air, follow with a switch to the starter's platform, then to the timers' booth, where the activities of the official timers—one to each of the 33 cars—will be described.

The next two broadcast periods will describe the progress of the race and its conclusion.

Monday, May 31—NBC, CBS and MBS (For time, see adjoining columns)

Bidu Sayao Is Sunday Hour Soloist

Bidu Sayao, noted Brazilian soprano, will be guest soloist on the Sunday Evening Hour on May 30.

Miss Sayao, who made her American operatic debut last February in "Manon," with the Metropolitan Opera Company, has the distinction of being the first South American on the distaff side to be admitted to the exclusive ranks of the "Met."

Credit for bringing Miss Sayao to American audiences, however, goes not to the Metropolitan but to Arturo Toscanini, famed conductor of the Philharmonic-Symphony. Bidu Sayao came to New York last winter merely for a visit. Toscanini, who had heard her sing abroad, was looking for a soprano to sing "La Demoiselle Elue" of Debussy. When he heard that Mme. Sayao was in town, he invited her to appear with the Philharmonic. The Metropolitan engagement followed.

Mme. Sayao has long been well known in Europe, has often been highly honored. Queen Marie of Rumania gave her a valued insignia, the Crown Prince of Italy sent her a diamond-encrusted symbol of his estate when she sang at a special performance on the occasion of his wedding.

Sunday, May 30—CBS 9 p.m. EDT (8 EST; 7 CST)

DOCTOR Walter Damrosch is an old friend of radio dialers and, since all of us had the opportunity of hearing his third and latest opera last Saturday, it is interesting to compare our reactions with those of the nation's most distinguished critics.

Of "THE MAN WITHOUT A COUNTRY" Olin Downes wrote in the New York Times:

"It would be a pleasure to say that in composing this opera a celebrated musician of long and distinguished service to his community had accomplished a deed of equal value in the creative field. Unfortunately that is not the case. Emotionally, the music never goes deep. It is melodious but along too well-trodden paths. It readily becomes sentimental, but rises no higher and constantly resorts to clichés, or in the words of Hazlitt, launches platitudes with the fury of thunderbolts.

"It need not surprise us that possibly the thought of Philip Nolan hopelessly sailing the seven seas makes Dr. Damrosch think of Wagner's Dutchman in his marine wanderings, while sundry fauna of the "Ring" lurk in the underbrush of the Damrosch score. But one has a right to anticipate of a composer that whether or not he uses familiar idioms he will do so with a fervor and dramatic emphasis that will carry the emotional situation convincingly over the footlights.

"What Dr. Damrosch has done is to write clearly set numbers, associated with the stock situation, with the hand of authority and experience. He employs certain motives and on occasion weaves them together with a skilled hand. He produces, at will, a song or dance of any sort and scores with prevailing sonority and color. For the rest, the effect of the opera was contingent upon the performance. It was well staged and dramatically interpreted . . .

"As for Dr. Damrosch as conductor, he excelled, inspiring all with his own authority and enthusiasm, the geniality of his temperament, the capacity to lead the interpreters and imbue them with his own fire. Here were the youth, and the gifts which characterize the musician, if not the composer."

About Mr. Damrosch's opera Lawrence Gilman wrote this in the New York Herald-Tribune:

"Mr. Damrosch has dealt simply and unpretentiously with a simple and unpretentious tale. He has not attempted to give us a music-drama a la Richard (Strauss or Wagner). He has paid no heed to the siren temptings of the ultra-modernist composers. Mr. Dam-rosch, in 1937, writes as though Berg and Schoenberg and Hindemith had never set pen to music-paper—his heart, like his own Midshipman's, "is true to Kate," the lovable lyric Muse of the romantic nineteenth century. He has made much use of the device utilized with incomparable effect by Beethoven in "Fidelio," that of contrasting spoken dialog with song.

"Mr. Damrosch employs freely this device. When his characters have sung as long as he thinks sufficient for his musico-dramatic purposes, he lets them shift their vocal gears, and speak; and there is no doubt that this ancient expedient has its uses. Communications that are not essentially lyric, but are needful in explaining things to the audience, can be neatly and expeditiously disposed of in this manner. The lovers utter their longings and their hopes and their fears, and the story gets along, and time is saved.

"Mr. Damrosch's music moves fluently with apt and appropriate relation to what is happening on the stage and in the hearts of his characters. It stops to let them speak, or it accompanies discreetly their spoken words. Once in a while it goes alone on its own, as in the orchestral prelude to the second act, a sort of instrumental seascape. There are dances, songs of Negro boatmen, sailors' chanteys, and an old American hornpipe. Sometimes the music is richly flavored with tinctures from the past; sometimes it is straight Damrosch. It would be fantastic to expect a sensitive musician to conduct as much great music by other men as Mr. Damrosch has done without some of it becoming part of his mental tissue.

"But always in this score Mr. Damrosch is the practised, resourceful craftsman, the accomplished musician. He knows what he wants to say, and how to say it with economy and precision and effect; and always the music is responsive to the contours and implications of the play."

Writing of Mr. Damrosch's new opera in the New York Post Samuel Chotzinoff says:

"With several operas and with many years of conducting opera behind him, it was a foregone conclusion that Mr. Damrosch would deal with The Man Without a Country in theatrical fashion. And he did so lavishly, introducing Negro choruses and dances, sea chanteys, topical songs, hornpipes, ballads, solos and duets. That the spirits of composers dead and gone hovered over the score is also not to be wondered at, since they have a habit, these days, of ganging up on all who emulate their labors on earth. It is true that there were times when the scene on the stage and the music in the pit combined in entertainment that is not generally associated with grand opera—as in the first scene of the second act, when the deck of the Guerriere and the behavior and the music of the sailors resembled the pleasant doings on H.M.S. Pinafore. Yet there was also more serious moments of battle, remorse, true love and heroic death, in the time-honored procedure of music-drama.

Pitts Sanborn writes this of the world premiere, in the New York World-Telegram:

"Mr. Damrosch's knowledge of the theater and his skill in orchestration are constantly in evidence, and he is adroit in his application of styles, using now a Negro boatmen's song, now an old American hornpipe ("Captain Hull's Victory"), now a dash of Spanish cadences and rhythms. There are also bits of latter-day dissonance, as in the opening measures.

"Yet largely the score is a homage to Richard Wagner, a composer whom Mr. Damrosch has served so long and faithfully, though Wagner is by no means the only standard operatic composer whose influence is traceable. However, he predominates, and, the times being as they are, I won't say I'm not glad."

This year's transcontinental tour of the Philadelphia Symphony which ended last Sunday had only lukewarm response. Lacking the magnetic personality of Leopold Stokowski and his genius for effective ballyhoo, the famous orchestra did not receive the attention it deserves.

Gladys Swarthout will make her final broadcast of the season on the General Motors Promenade Concert Sunday and on June 6 Lucrezia Bori will be joined by Joseph Bentonelli on the same series. These concerts will originate in Hollywood's famous Bowl and we hope that the artists will be allowed to sing songs which suit their voices, not meaningless ditties.

The Philharmonic-Symphony Society announces that its ninety-sixth season will contain twenty-eight broadcast concerts, all but four under the baton of John Barbirolli. The series will begin October 24.

Albert Spalding will be soloist at the opening of the Stadium concerts June 23, playing the Brahms violin concerto with Vladimir Golschmann conducting. This is the famous American violinist's third consecutive appearance on a Stadium opening night.

STORIES OF THE SONGS YOU LOVE

of that very remarkable song. "This is how it goes," he told them, tapping with his walking-stick to emphasize the measure.

"Sorry, sir, I do not recognize it." So they told him, one after another. But one day he sang it to a wizened old music-shop keeper.

"Yah," the old man nodded. "It sounds like a tune written long ago by a man named Rudolph Zimmer."

"Where can I find him, this Zimmer," Offenbach asked breathlessly. The music-dealer shrugged. Whereupon began a search which took Offenbach to music centers all over the world, including a visit to the United States in 1875. In New York, the composer found several persons named Rudolph Zimmer, but not one who had ever composed a bar of music.

Then occurred an accident which sounds more fiction than fact. Offenbach and a friend were driving along a narrow street in Paris when suddenly their cab jolted and stopped.

"Mon Dieu," screamed the driver, "I've killed a man."

"Get him into my house," Offenbach quickly ordered, and together the three of them carried the aged derelict into Offenbach's apartment near by.

As it turned out, the old man was more stunned than injured, and when he began to revive, his eye fell on Offenbach's piano and music manuscripts. "Are you a musician?" he inquired.

"Yes," said Offenbach, and more to divert the old man's attention than anything else, he asked him if he too played.

"Once I did," he replied grudgingly, whereupon he sat down at the piano and began to play the very measures which had haunted Offenbach's dreams!

"You're Rudolph Zimmer," he cried out. And the old man nodded sadly.

Offenbach begged for a copy of the song, offered to pay any price for it.

"That accursed song? Never! The day I wrote it my wife died. Then I lost my position, my money and finally my health. The song is cursed, I tell you! The melody is bewitched!"

BUT when Zimmer discovered that it was the famous Offenbach pleading for a copy of his ill-fated composition, he promised to write out one for him. "This is my address," he told the composer. "Come in two days. The manuscript will be ready."

Early on the appointed day Offenbach drove to the address given. "Yes," the landlord told him, "Herr Zimmer lived here, but if you will step in you will see that he is dead!"

As Offenbach stood beside the dead man one of the neighbors in attendance recognized him and recalled finding an envelope addressed to "Jacques Offenbach" near the deceased's body. Offenbach opened the envelope. There was the promised manuscript, that melody for which Offenbach had been searching for years. Then he vowed he would immortalize the unknown composer by including that melody in his fondest labor, those "Tales of Hoffmann" upon which he had been expending every ounce of his creative energy.

The rest of the opera came to Offenbach like magic. This "Barcarolle" seemed to be the key to it all.

As the work neared completion, a premonition seized him, as M. Carvalho of the Paris Opera Comique records,—"Make haste, make haste to mount my piece; I am in a hurry, and have only one wish in the world, that of witnessing the premiere of my opera."

But another tragedy in the history of that "Barcarolle" occurred. Offenbach died of gout at his home in the Boulevard des Capucines, in Paris,

Solution to Puzzle Given Last Week

five months and five days before the "Tales of Hoffmann," revised by Giraud, reached the stage of the Opera Comique, February 10, 1881.

Wholesale tragedy attended the work's premiere at the Ringtheatre in Vienna. During the singing of that fateful "Barcarolle" the theater mysteriously caught fire and nine hundred persons were burned to death!

THE next major tragedy occurred only a few years after the holocaust of the Vienna premiere when the merciless tyrant, Tz'u Hai, was still Empress of China. Pacing the magnificent gardens of her summer palace in the still Forbidden City of Peking, a crazy idea seized the despot's old witch. She imagined how beautiful it would be to see a snow-white marble ship floating in that sea of flowers. Her whims were orders. Marble and workmen were ordered from Italy, and soon a full-sized white marble ship begins to rise in the summer palace gardens. Old Tz'u Hai watched each day's progress. As the Italian laborers worked they forgot they were in China, and as they worked, they sang, just as Italians are wont to sing wherever they labor. Opera arias blended with their native folk-songs, for even the Italian laborer has his operatic repertoire.

One melody alone captivated the wicked old Empress. She had never heard anything so beautiful, and she applauded that "Barcarolle" like an opera gallery-god.

"Quick! Summon the court musicians," she shouted. "I command the foreign devils to stop work and sing that mysterious melody again and again, so that my musicians may learn it. Tonight they shall play it for me—or they die. If one band cannot play it, off with their heads, and the next, and the next!"

Official archives do not record the casualties, but whispers told of that night's red carnage and of many other nights, for when future renditions failed to please the temperamental old despot, more heads fell, and more!

The "Barcarolle-loving" Empress died in 1908, and four years later when the Revolutionary Government was set up, one of its first legislative acts was to pass a law banishing that accursed melody from China. To play Rudolph Zimmer's "Barcarolle" from Jacques Offenbach's "Tales of Hoffmann" became a criminal offense, and unless that law has been repealed, it is still a tragedy to be caught playing, singing or humming that tune in the Land of the Dragon.

TWO AGAINST THE WORLD

welcome an occasional box from home, some beaten biscuits, or some ginger nut-bread, she often came in dog tired from the store to stay up late baking good things to send him. Sometimes he lived on those boxes for days, picking up odd jobs to pay his room rent.

Then one morning when Walter had been in New York ten months and was worn out with sheer despair, he had an idea. Once, years before, he had gotten a letter of congratulation from Thornton Fisher, the famous sports writer, who had heard him sing over WOW. He decided he'd call Mr. Fisher and go to see him. When he finally located him on the phone the writer remembered the letter, was extremely nice and invited the lad from Omaha to have dinner at his Long Island home that very same evening.

In the flush of his excitement, his wonderful luck at the prospect of a delicious meal and somebody to talk to after months of weary loneliness, Walter accepted. But he was sorry later. For he knew the end of the evening was inescapable—the painful embarrassment of having to borrow money from his host. He hadn't known until he was on the train that it cost forty cents to get to Forest Hills, and after he'd paid his fare he had only two dimes left in his pocket.

IT MAY well be that genial Thornton Fisher noticed him lingering in the doorway, sensed with his keen understanding a hint of what was wrong and immediately took over the situation with superb tact.

"Wait a minute, Walter," he called to him from the inner hallway, "I forgot something I want to show you!" Then when they were alone in his den he added, "What can I do for you, young fellow?" with such genuine friendliness that Walter was somehow no longer embarrassed to tell him.

"Mr. Fisher," he said, "I need twenty cents to get back to New York."

His host not only pressed a considerably larger loan on him but stepped to the phone to dial one of the most powerful executives at Radio City. And to this day Walter Cassel cannot recall a single incident of his journey back to the city that memorable night. All he knew was that he was to sing on Airbreaks the next afternoon and get ten dollars for it!

Walter immediately fell heir to an epidemic of breaks. B. A. Rolfe engaged him for a vaudeville tour. He guested on the Hammerstein Music Hall, the Motors program, and filled Conrad Thibault's shoes for eight appearances on "Show Boat." Then when NBC put him under contract he at last had a steady job.

The first thing he bought with his money was an end to loneliness, an end to terribly wanting the girl he loved to be waiting for him at supper-time, to wondering how tall Johnny had grown and how Jeanne had changed. The glad day came when it was his twenty-fifth birthday, when a maid was cooking a turkey in a peach-and-white kitchen in his own beautiful new apartment in Forest Hills, and he was pacing before a train gate at Grand Central station in a cold sweat of excitement.

Walking through the lobby of Radio City that night, Nadine beside him with a train of gold sequins on her gown, and the world too beautiful to be real and Walter sure he was mad, he whispered: "Sit in the back of the studio, darling, and when my turn comes to sing hold up your glove so I'll know you're there—I swear, Nadine, that awful lonely feeling keeps coming back, I can't believe—"

And that explains why Walter Cassel and a girl in the shadows have betwixt them yet a lovers' secret about a handkerchief in the dark.

COLLEGE ON THE AIR

BY MEL SHAVELSON

IT'S a young man's business. Look around the studios at any broadcasting station and see for yourself. A new industry—a new art—requires youth and vitality and imagination, trained men who can grow up with a toy that has become a billion-dollar industry, yet only yesterday cut its eye teeth.

But where can the young man—or woman—get the training that radio's high-pressure jobs demand? A few technical schools may give him a smattering; one or two colleges and universities will train him in educational broadcasting; or he may have the good fortune to be taken in hand by some enterprising network or advertising agency. But for the great majority, it's a case of hit-or-miss, luck, and knowing the right people at the right time.

The logical place to begin training as fussy as old-maid aunts where radio is concerned, and since they have complete control over their undergraduates, it's best to listen to aunts. We do.

Yet, in spite of all these hindrances, we have had our program on the air every week; and even more important to us than the actual broadcasts are the things we've learned about radio from the inside, every phase of it from imitating a machine-gun to pacifying a soprano!

During our first full year on the air (the school year 1935-36) we presented a weekly fifteen-minute program. We developed "The College Parade," frankly modeled on "The March of Time" but devoted to dramatizations of Cornell news, and presented bi-weekly; we broadcast original plays, and interviews with everyone from the leaders of the freshman-sophomore riots to the trainer of Rosie, the ele-is on the campuses of our great universities; but so far they have paid slight attention, officially, to this upstart profession. That is why on May 22, 1935, a group of undergraduates at Cornell University, aided by interested faculty members, formed the Cornell Radio Guild, an extra-curricular organization, to provide training for commercial broadcasting and to give listeners to the university's Station WESG a picture of undergraduate life and talent.

THE Guild isn't unique; all over the nation similar undergraduate groups have been springing up. Undergraduates want to learn all they can about modern radio broadcasting, and if no one's going to teach them, they'll learn for themselves.

Commercial broadcasters may have their problems, but compared to ours they're just pleasant diversion. How would Rudy Vallee feel if his featured guest star called him up and told him he couldn't make the broadcast because the coach wouldn't let him out of football practice? Or suppose Nelson Eddy told his sponsor he couldn't go on the air because his girl friend was coming up for the week-end? Or three of Cecil DeMille's stars on a Radio Theater program couldn't emote, poor dears, because they were being initiated by their sororities and couldn't talk out loud until Wednesday? And suppose the boys in Benny Goodman's band couldn't broadcast because they had to study for final examinations?

We have to face problems like these every week; and there's the further problem of censorship. Universities are phant star of Jumbo who was imported for Cornell's Spring Day; we presented the music of campus dance orchestras, comedy, satire—everything!

The practical lessons we learned during that time have been applied this year. We now have men—and co-eds, too—who know something of radio technique, what a balanced program is, how to use sound-effects and control a dramatic cast, and a few thousand small details that, as listeners, they never knew existed.

Most of our programs this year have been half-hour productions. During the football season, one of our regular features was an analysis of the Cornell games and a prediction on the future broadcast by a former Cornell star. We have presented "Man in the Street" broadcasts—interviews with undergraduates on timely questions.

To climax our dramatic experiments, we recently received permission from Alex Yokel, Broadway producer, to present our own radio adaptation of Irwin Shaw's famous anti-war play, "Bury the Dead!" Our broadcast marked the first time it was ever presented on the air; newspaper critics called it the equal of a professional production.

THERE'S still a lot to learn; but at least we—and similar organizations on other campuses—have proved that today's collegian has the initiative to learn for himself; he's not content to sit and wait until university faculties recognize broadcasting as they have recognized journalism.

It's a young man's business—and the young men are ready and waiting.

VOICE OF THE LISTENER

The "Voice of the Listener" letterforum is a regular feature in Radio Guide each week, offered to the readers as a means for expressing and exchanging opinions about radio.

Radio Guide will pay $10 for the best letter published each week and $5 for the next best. Other letters deserving our readers' attention also will be published.

PHILANTHROPIC OPPORTUNITY ($10 Prize Letter)

Voice of the Listener: Since more people's lives are affected by radio than through any other medium, what could be more philanthropic than to sponsor radio programs for the sole purpose of informing, inspiring, or simply entertaining radio listeners? Wealthy people often endow colleges or establish foundations for students. Why not do the same in radio? Think how many people would be benefited by such sponsoring of radio programs. When radio development and sponsorship offer such splendid opportunity for living memorials of world-wide service, why do not more wealthy persons sponsor programs?—Hazel E. Hartman, Bedford, Indiana.

HELPING THE BLIND ($5 Prize Letter)

Voice of the Listener: There is a class of people who obtain much of their amusement and a part of their education from the radio—the blind.

Many of these courageous people have special training and talents which would rank them with professionals if it were not for this great handicap.

I believe that it would be possible and profitable for some radio station to promote a program composed entirely of blind people.

I know that they have a timid, uncertain feeling when competing with sighted people, but grouped to themselves, they would be capable in many lines of entertainment.

A program composed of blind performers would certainly be unique and worth while, and surely some sponsor would be quick to see the interest that such an unusual broadcast would have for the listening public.

Why not help these people to find their places in this great field?—Lulu F. Wheatley, Isabel, Kansas.

COPY-CATS

Voice of the Listener: Why is it, what one program has, others copy. Seems to me that we have enough trouble and sorrow in real life without having it on the radio. I refer to the death of Bobby Drake in Betty & Bob. Since then, Mrs. Alice Warner in "Girl Alone" lost her baby, and now in "The Youngs," Mr. Bradley is not expected to live. Why can't they have more cheerful stories?—Irene Hunt, Fort Wayne, Ind.

A NIX FOR RADIO HICKS

Gentlemen: Why do commercial advertisers still have the antiquated idea that synthetic farmer programs are entertaining to intelligent listeners? Don't they know that the "By Heck and B'Gosh" line with their nasal twang and falsetto voices are as out of place in this age of educated farmers (and people of other occupations, too) as an ox cart in an automobile show?

They are underestimating the intelligence of the millions of radio listeners, and it is not very complimentary to the prospective customers for their products.

F. H. Marshall, Fredonia, Kansas.

PATIENCE, PLEASE!

Our mail has been swamped with ballots! The voting in this year's Star of Stars Election has been so heavy that it is impossible for the Election Tellers to give an accurate report of the standings in this issue. We ask your indulgence. Final winners will be listed as soon as possible. Meanwhile, remember three days remain in which you can vote and still get your ballots in by the May 31 deadline!—THE EDITORS.

Time given is EDT; for EST subtract one hour. Short-wave programs of American stations are shown along with the regular listings beginning on page 29. These are indicated, for example, by (sw-11.87) in parentheses following a program listing. This means that on 11.87 megacycles the same program may also be heard over an American short-wave station. Please note that foreign stations do not always adhere precisely to their announced program schedules.

SHORT-WAVE reception conditions on Coronation Day were good, and the new 50,000-watt Daventry transmitters gave an excellent account of themselves. However, the evening rebroadcasts direct from England were slightly better than the morning version of the ceremonies which was carried in full by the American networks. Not only was the royal show the most complicated, lengthy and expensive radio broadcast ever heard, but part of it was seen as well by those in metropolitan London fortunate enough to possess television receivers. Special mobile scanning equipment televised the passing procession for the benefit of its viewers.

DICK MERRILL'S successful two Atlantic Ocean flights provided plenty of thrills for short-wave listeners lucky enough to tune in the hourly broadcasts direct from the plane. Station WEEP (6.59), at the Newark Airport, could be heard at just five minutes past each hour during the crossings calling KHMER, on 6.59 megas, the 100-watt phone transmitter aboard Merrill's plane. E. L. Peters of Westport, Nova Scotia, plainly heard KHMER come back to WEEP when the plane was 725 miles out from Newfoundland on its way to Europe.

Joe Miller of Brooklyn, N. Y., has received a highly prized verification from Poste Bizertin (12.32) of Bizerte, Tunis, for his reception of that station on April 10. The confirmation is in the form of a white card with the name of the station in red. The address given is Amicale Du Poste, Bizertin, 14 Rue H. Hersent, Bizerte, Tunis.

ACCORDING to the "Canadian DX Relay," RV15 of Khabarovsk, U. S. S. R., may shift to the 25-meter band for the summer. Reports addressed to Kaborowsk, Pridsedatelu Radiokomiteta, T. Tkackenko, U. S. S. R., Siberia, are being verified in less than six weeks' time. . . . Lyle Nelson, Yamhill, Ore., writes that a mysterious station believed to be a pirate was heard recently giving a talk in English concerning "wretched conditions of the natives in India," and exposing alleged English misrule in that country.

In answer to several queries, the Greenwich time signals are now heard over the Daventry stations daily as follows: 9:45 a.m., 12:30 p.m., 2:15 p.m., 5:15 p.m., 9:15 p.m., 11:45 p.m. and 2:30 a.m. EDT (8:45 a.m., 11:30 a.m., 1:15 p.m., 4:15 p.m., 8:15 p.m., 10:45 p.m. and 1:30 a.m. EST).

THE 1,000-watt NBC transmitter WMEF aboard the S. S. Avocet, near the Eclipse Expedition's base camp on Canton Island, in mid-Pacific, is testing on 12.862 and 17.31 megas. The 25-watt portable broadcaster W10XEP, which will be used to relay programs from the actual camp site to the S. S. Avocet, will utilize frequencies between 30 and 40 megas in an attempt to get away from the tropical static. W10XEP probably will not be heard in North America. . . . Short-Wave Service states that the high-power broadcasting center of the "Voie Maritime du Nord," whose offices are in Moscow, U. S. S. R., has completed an intricate two-way communications system which enables them to maintain constant contact with frontier polar stations located thousands of miles distant.

quencies between 30 and 40 megas in an attempt to get away from the tropical static. W10XEP probably will not be heard in North America. . . . Short-Wave Service states that the high-power broadcasting center of the "Voie Maritime du Nord," whose offices are in Moscow, U. S. S. R., has completed an intricate two-way communications system which enables them to maintain constant contact with frontier polar stations located thousands of miles distant.

ED2GT (7.26) relays broadcast station EAJ8 of Bilbao, Spain, daily starting at 3:30 p.m. EDT (2:30 p.m. EST). . . . A verification from OAX4J (9.33), Lima, Peru, states that its hours of operation are daily from 1 to 4 p.m. and from 6 p.m. to 2 a.m. EDT (12 noon to 3 p.m. and from 5 p.m. to 1 a.m. EST).

VK6ME (9.59), the new Amalgamated Wireless station at Perth, West Australia, which can be heard daily except Sundays from 7 to 9 a.m. EDT (6 to 8 a.m. EST), is utilizing a power of only 200 watts at present.

THE ultra-modern short-wave communications system that will link various outposts on the great Navajo Indian reservation in Arizona is a far cry from the old method of news transfer by the beating of drums or dispatching of runners. A 250-watt transmitter will be placed at the central agency at Window Rock. Utilizing the call KTGM, it will operate on 2.994 megas and maintain contact with 150-watt rigs installed at Tuba City, Shiprock and Kayenta. Two 50-watt mobile units for use in emergencies are also to be included in this new set-up, which will replace and supplement telephone facilities.

Earl Roberts, of Indianapolis, Ind., writes that KWO (14.515) of Dixon, Calif., has replaced KWU (15.355) as the U. S. end of the trans-Pacific telephone link. KWO was heard calling XOJ (15.795) in Shanghai, China, at 10:45 p.m. EDT (9:45 p.m. EST). . . . Radio Liberta (7.38), opens its daily transmission from 7 to 8 p.m. EDT (6 to 7 p.m. EST) with a recording of "L'Marsellaise." This would tend further to confirm the location of this station as France.

PAUL J. BARTER, Melrose, Mass., gives the schedule of VE9HX (6.132), Halifax, Nova Scotia, Canada, as follows: Daily at 7:30 a.m. EDT (6:30 a.m. MST), morning exercises; at 1 p.m. EDT (12 noon EST), stocks and news; at 3 p.m. EDT (2 p.m. EST), luncheon music, rebroadcast from Daventry, and commercial programs; at 6 p.m. EDT (5 p.m. EST), children's programs, and from 7 p.m. to 1 a.m. EDT (6 p.m. to 12 mid. EST), musical programs and features of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. This station's verification will be sent only upon receipt of a dime.

ALEC TEMPLETON, the blind pianist-composer! His performances on the radio, in the Rainbow Room, and at the concert hall have won him fame. Templeton is both a student of the classics and an interpreter of modern music. Bert Ward, his guide, does his seeing for him!

We Applaud

WITH SKY-HIGH FAME AT STAKE,
THESE STARS PLAYED THE GAME AND WON — THE HARD WAY!

SHIRLEY ROSS, red-headed singer on the Ken Murray program. Shirley achieved fame in Hollywood, then became a radio star. (Many hope their radio performances will take them to Hollywood.) "Waikiki Wedding" proves she's really a talented young actress!

—Romaine

KATHLEEN WILSON, better known by radio listeners as Claudia of "One Man's Family." Here you see Kathleen with King Lan Chew (Last Orchid), the only Chinese concert dancer in America. Kathleen is studying dancing under this distinguished artist. She's not a beginner in the art of dancing, for she appeared with Ruth St. Denis at the age of six!

—Ray Lee Jackson

DONALD DICKSON, youthful baritone on a Saturday night broadcast. The Metropolitan Opera Company recently signed Dickson for its Spring series. He formerly sang opera for three seasons with the Cleveland Symphony, is 25 years of age, a student at Juilliard School

GEORGE HICKS (left), NBC announcer. The kite he is flying is also an antenna which he may use on June 8 when he broadcasts the total eclipse of the sun from the Phoenix Islands—which are uninhabited and 1700 miles from Hawaii. This distant isle broadcast will tell of the longest eclipse in 1200 years

How to Build A HIT SHOW

A PRIMER IN PROGRAM-PLANNING
—WITH FRED ASTAIRE'S SMASH HOUR SHOW FOR TODAY'S TEXT!

Photos by FRED HENDRIX

1 So you want to build a hit show? The first thing to do is buy time on 64 NBC-Red stations—for $14,000. Then, to write the show, you'll want three bright boys like Jess Oppenheimer, Tom Everett and Austin Peterson (above)—and they cost $1,000 a program!

2 For all-around work with the baton, get a versatile leader like Johnny Green. You have to pay him $3,500 every week—but you get dialogue which he writes, a character actor-comedian-composer—and he pays the boys in the band himself!

3 If you want your show to sparkle with fine singing in spots where comedy might begin to pall, you'll get Baritone Conrad Thibault and Soprano Francia White to do the job for you. They'll cost you $500 each, but if you're clever you'll remember that an hour is a long time on the air—and music hath charms for the savage listener. They're essential to your show!

4 If your comedy sequences are to sound natural, let your $2,000-a-show comedian, Charlie Butterworth, waste a lot of time in bull sessions with Nancy Leach, Cliff Arquette (his stooge), and Joe Stauffer (your producer). Some of the brightest comedy gets into the script when they kid each other before the show!

5 Then, to give the listeners more than they can get anywhere else on the dial, get a star who can do everything! Fred Astaire can—but he'll send a weekly bill for $6,000! Fred "wowed" stage audiences with Sister Adele, was a smash in movies with Ginger Rogers—and he's breaking records on the air—alone!

6 During rehearsal, your hired hand, Charlie Butterworth, will change his lines every time he reads them—but don't worry about that. When he gets on the air, he'll change them again—and get a laugh! His dead-pan delivery amuses studio audiences—which adds to your success!

7 Trudy Wood will duet with your star for $150 a week—a bargain! She won't stand in that door when Sound-Man Virgie Reimer wants it—although "miscues" often get the loudest laughs!

8 Sound Expert Harold Deiker may take time off during rehearsal to show Trudy his storm- and wind-machine, but he concentrates when the show is on. Background for Fred Astaire's songs gets involved sometimes—but not too involved for NBC's technical staff!

9 Your producer, Joe Stauffer, has a whale of a job. He puts his cast through two dress rehearsals, many small ones. He keeps Johnny (left) and Fred encouraged, doesn't lose control even when in first rehearsal, Charlie can't read his lines, Johnny can't play, Fred can't dance

10 If Johnny "ribs" Fred during the "brushing-up" period of the last rehearsal, you can sigh and relax. Don't be upset when everyone is laughing—it's when tension grows and tempers sharpen that a show is in danger! The Astaire cast likes each other's company, enjoys working together—and that tells a lot about the show's success!

11 If you can, get Paul Green to sit at the mixing-panel and handle your show from the control room. Without his delicate control of sounds to go on the air, all the rest of your efforts would be wasted—he's your final requirement!

12 You can tell whether you've planned your show well when local crowds come to see the show. They're the sort of people listening. If they clamor to get in, millions more are crowded around radios on Tuesday nights, too!

"Be It Ever So Humble—"

BRIGHT LIGHTS DIM, THE WORLD'S CHEERS FADE AWAY — AS GREAT STARS REMEMBER — "THERE'S NO PLACE LIKE HOME!"

Above: In the late 1880's, carpenters of Austin, Texas, rode out south of town in wagons to build a big, rambling frame house in what was then called "South Austin." Finishing it, they thought no more of Jerry Belcher's birthplace. When Jerry came along, there was no street address—mail came through rural delivery. He grew up with a cow, lots of chickens, two horses and a dog—sometimes more dogs—left home to answer radio's call in New York. Now Jerry lives with his wife and baby in a Connecticut cottage near Litchfield. He loves Connecticut, but remembers that old Austin home—between NBC broadcasts of "Our Neighbors"

Dave Rubinoff (left) was born in the cellar of this building in Grodno, South Russia, Sept. 3, 1897—lived with his parents, 3 brothers, 2 sisters. Upstairs was the imperial photographer's studio, where one day Czar Nicholas heard the young musician playing downstairs, thought nothing of it. Dave first played the balalaika, attracted the attention of a teacher who persuaded his mother to buy him a $1.50 fiddle despite the elder Rubinoff's contention that musicians are no better than gypsies. Today Dave plays on a genuine Stradivarius!

Elinor Harriot (right) greeted Duluth, Minnesota, with her first crying episode on August 30, 1910. Since then, she's made radio history—doing the same thing! She is the first, only woman ever to appear on Amos 'n' Andy's show. Elinor started on the show on memorable Christmas Eve, 1935, playing Mrs. Amos Jones. Now she plays the Jones' baby, Arbadella; Andy's adopted girl and "Mrs. Kingfish." At four, she made her first public appearance, imitating stars in a Duluth benefit. Then came a stock company, understudying on Broadway for Sylvia Sidney. She's 5 feet, 3½ inches tall, enjoys ice-skating, golfing, hiking, swimming

Phillips Lord (left) was born to Dr. and Mrs. Albert J. Lord in the Congregational Parsonage at Hartford, Vermont, on July 13, 1902. Shortly the parson moved to Meriden, Connecticut, is still pastor of the First Congregational Church there. Phil won the Maine State tennis championship while at Bowdoin College. He ranks as a leading idea-man—built "Seth Parker" around his grandfather, Hosea Phillips; now produces "We, the People" and "Gang Busters." Was once presented on floor of Congress as "source of more enjoyment than any person living today in U. S.!"

—MAURICE SEYMOUR

Irene Seaton was born on Nov. 24, 1906, at 625 North Fourth Street, in Quincy, Illinois. The "Irene" became "Irene" because a numerologist advised it; the "Seaton" became "Wicker" when Walter Wicker suggested the change after a University of Illinois blind date. Irene Wicker's "Singing Lady" programs for children won the Radio Guide Star of Stars Poll in their division last year. She's a leader: versatile, talented, sincere!

—MAURICE SEYMOUR

Joan Blaine was born at Oaklawn Farm, near Fort Dodge, Iowa, April 22, 1909. An infant prodigy, concert-platform singer and harpist, star of stage plays, radio narrator, "Mary Marlin" in "The Story of Mary Marlin," star of "A Tale of Today"—these and many other activities have been crowded into the years of her busy life. Joan's just had her first vacation in 3 years—spent it with a college chum in Gulfport, Miss., took along her mother, whom she calls her best critic. Joan is unmarried, weighs 115, is 5 feet 6 inches tall, has brown hair—blue eyes!

1. Excellent 2. Satisfactory 3. Unsatisfactory

DEANNA DURBIN, radio's—and Universal Pictures'—sensational young star was born in Winnipeg on December 4, 1922. When she was one year old, the family moved to Los Angeles because of her father's failing health, and she has lived within a stone's throw of the picture studios ever since. Up to last year Edna May—that's Deanna's real name—was just another Los Angeles schoolgirl, almost unknown outside of her circle of friends and relatives. Now—less than twelve months later—Edna May has become Deanna, star of the screen and radio!

1 Ada Read and James Durbin were born in England. They married, settled in Manchester, had a daughter, Edith. Later they moved to Canada, had another daughter, called her Edna May. But the world knows her as Deanna. Here she's six months old

2 Edna May's father was in poor health, found he was unable to withstand the rigors of the severe Canadian Winters. So the family moved to Los Angeles, and Mr. Durbin went into real estate. At the time they moved Edna May was a year old

3 Edna May looks considerably older than she looked in the last picture. Yet only six months had passed. She was two and a half when she posed for this one. She was developing rapidly then, and still is, but she'll soon stop

4 Right now she wants a second-hand bicycle—but when Edna May was five she probably thought there was no way of getting around half so nice as on a pony. No, she didn't have one. This one was only borrowed for the picture

5 Like all other youngsters who attend school, Edna May had her likes and dislikes for certain subjects. She liked English and history, but hated arithmetic. Nevertheless, she did very well in school, as this report card shows

6 Although she doesn't care much for athletics, Edna May does enjoy roller-skating—and when it comes to swimming she's an expert. The thing that interests her most, though, is her dog. He's of doubtful breed—just a dog. But "Tippy" was tops with her two years ago when this picture was taken—and still is

Before sky-rocketing to fame, Edna May took part in school dramatics, sang at church socials, at neighborhood gatherings—was heard by a woman who was so impressed she called an actor's agent to tell him about Edna May's singing. The agent heard Edna May, found true what the woman had told him. He contacted Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer at once, received a contract for amazing Deanna Durbin the same day she was screen-tested!

Within twenty-four hours of signing her contract, she began studying under Andres de Seguro, for twelve years a leading baritone with the Metropolitan Opera Company and today one of Hollywood's best-known voice teachers. Previous to that time Ralph Thomas had been her teacher. He developed her—then Seguro polished her technique. Nothing more happened for four and a half months. She stood under Kleig lights once. But the film was not released. Then M-G-M failed to take up her option, let her go, broke her heart.

7 When she was twelve years old—and wasn't in a swimming-suit—Edna May looked like this. At that time she hadn't yet been discovered, and had no idea of the brilliant future that awaited her in the two years to come

8 When Edna May first tried to get work she used this picture. She was only twelve at the time, stood four feet, six inches. In addition to pointing out that she hadn't too many freckles, notes on the back say that she sang and danced

9 Today she is one of radio's most popular stars—but when this picture was taken in 1935, Edna May was still comparatively unknown. She is shown here as she appeared when she sang on the air for the first time, at the Los Angeles Breakfast Club. Fame came soon

10 Finally recognized in 1936, Edna May became Deanna, a Hollywood favorite. Shortly before his death, the late Irving Thalberg asked her to sing with Rosa Ponselle at a dinner, was so impressed he wrote this note. It is one of Deanna's most prized possessions

11 On still another occasion, Irving Thalberg paid tribute to Deanna. This time he said it with flowers. She appeared at a party that he and his wife, Norma Shearer, gave at the Biltmore, and next day she received this bouquet. Deanna's ability impressed Thalberg

12 When Deanna was still an insignificant high school girl, singing only at church socials and neighborhood gatherings, Jack Sherrill heard her, determined to make her a star. He contacted M-G-M, obtained a contract for her. Later, when her career seemed to come to a standstill, he got her a new contract with Universal Pictures. As her manager, he's had much to do with Deanna's success. This is a recent picture of the two of them

Soon after, Universal Pictures gave Deanna a new contract. And Eddie Cantor put her on his radio show. Success came—listeners cheered, wrote letters of praise, made Deanna happy. False reports say: Deanna makes $1500 a week. She gets $300 a week—half from radio, half from films. Soon her movie contract expires. But it will be renewed—with a much bigger weekly pay-check for Deanna.

Deanna is only fourteen, goes to school at the studio, still spends much time with her former schoolmates. Several times a week, they gather at her home.

Though she's a child in years, Deanna has a mature voice, adult vocal cords. As she grows up, her voice will change only in volume. Though a star of films and radio, she's still a normal little girl. Since making the picture "Three Smart Girls," she has grown six inches. At present she stands five feet two, is expected to stop growing at five feet four or five inches. She weighs one hundred pounds, has blue eyes, brown hair.

13 Though it's true that Deanna was already under contract to a movie studio when Eddie Cantor put her on the air, he's chiefly responsible for her immediate recognition. While film moguls stood by, undecided about her, he starred her on his program

14 Officials of the Metropolitan Opera Company are greatly interested in Deanna, have asked Andres de Seguro to keep them informed of her progress. He reports that she has one voice in 10,000,000, that her vocal cords are fully developed. Opera awaits her

15 Recently Deanna and her mother went to Philadelphia to record with Stokowski. On their way home they visited Deanna's grandmother in Winnipeg. They hadn't met in two years

16 Four unusual children taken together. In this picture Deanna is being entertained by the Abbe children, Johnny, Patience and Richard, as they recall some incidents in their book, "Around the World in Eleven Years"

17 Even Director Henry Kostner doubted Deanna's ability to act when she was cast for "Three Smart Girls." But she proved to be an amazing discovery. In this scene she is shown with Nan Grey and Chas. Winninger

18 Deanna was very proud when her first fan letter came, took it to Director Henry Kostner straightway. But since that time they've been pouring in by thousands, many of them coming from middle-aged people who applaud her, ask about her life

19 School Teacher Edith Durbin paid for Sister Deanna's voice lessons for over two years. A nationally known fencer, she's Mrs. Clarence Heckman now. She and Mr. Durbin attended the opening of Deanna's first movie, posed outside for this photograph

20 Deanna earns $300 a week, spends very little. She gets a twenty-five cent allowance each week, usually has two dollars in her pocketbook, which is replenished from time to time. But she enjoys shopping. Here she is in New York, visiting the stores

21 During her recent trip to New York, Deanna took a Fifth Avenue bus to get her first glimpse of the skyline, was thrilled with what she saw. She's kept very busy with her screen and radio work, but Deanna says she's having more fun than any girl in the world—and she really means that, too!

22 Deanna spent only one day in New York, saw a great deal, had a wonderful time. The papers were piled high on the desk of Mayor La Guardia, but nevertheless he had time to shake hands, welcome to the city this girl who has become a sensation overnight. They both enjoyed the meeting

23 Long considered an unlucky number, 13 proved to be the luckiest number in Deanna's life. It was during her thirteenth year that fame came to her through her work in the movies and on the radio. By the time she blew out the candles on her fourteenth-birthday cake, she was a star, the favorite of millions. While blowing out the last one this picture was taken

24 "Three Smart Girls" was such a success that already work has been started on Deanna's second picture. This one is to be called "One Hundred Men and a Girl." Here Leopold Stokowski is rehearsing Deanna. They are going over one of the arias

25 Much of the responsibility in Deanna's sensational year of success has fallen on the shoulders of Mrs. Durbin. She's been her daughter's close companion and adviser. This is a recent photo of the two of them together

On the stage of Radio City's biggest studio today will stand a short, intensely proud Japanese, Yoichi Hiraoaka, xylophonist. He is well known to the NBC's early morning listeners, but on this occasion he will be performing for the Magic Key of RCA in recognition of the presence in the United States of the Japanese Economic Mission. The Mission members will be attending the broadcast. Others to be heard on the program include Paul Draper, the sensational tap dancer who punctuates symphonic numbers, and Tommy Dorsey's orchestra with Edythe Wright singing.

Schubert's Fifth Symphony, in B Flat Major, and Mozart's Symphany No. 34 in C Major will be performed by the symphony orchestra under the direction of Howard Barlow on the "Everybody's Music" program today. Commentaries are to be given as usual by Henry M. Neely, radio's "Old Stager." The Mozart symphony yields an interesting note or two because, for one thing, it omits the usual minuet which characterizes most of the composer's symphonies.

CBS-Davis Cup Matches: WABC (sw-15.27)
The United States' battle to eliminate Australia in the final round of the North American Zone Davis Cup play will be broadcast exclusively by Columbia stations this afternoon with Ted Husing at the microphone. DANDRUFF!

Don't let Dandruff rob you of your hair! Combat it by following the famous Glover's System. It consists of conditioning the scalp — using Glover's MANGE Medicine with systematic massage. Shampoo with Glover's Medicated Soap. At all Druggists. Your Barber or Hairdresser can give you Glover's.

GLOVER'S MANGE MEDICINE

FRECKLES

Send for this true story of a freckled girl's life. Learn how her skin freckled easily — how her homely freckles made her miserable at fourteen — how she gave up hope of ever being popular socially, until one day she saw a Stillman's ad. She purchased a jar of Stillman's Freckle Cream. Used it nightly. Her ugly embarrassing freckles soon disappeared, leaving her skin clear, soft, smooth and beautiful.

Use the
NEW! SCIENTIFIC AERIAL
With the Dual Connection
The DUAL CONNECTION, a new feature exclusively our own, gives better distance and positive performance on all electric radios (pat. pend.). This aerial can be installed without tools by anyone in a minute's time. Goes right inside the radio completely out of view and it does not use any electric current. No climbing on roofs. For short or long waves.

$1.00 Complete Postpaid

NO OSCILLATING OR WHISTLING
This DUAL type aerial uses a new scientific principle which completely eliminates this annoyance as commonly experienced on inside aeriels. It also eliminates lightning hazards, unsightly poles, guy wires, etc. Enables the radio to be readily moved when desired. A complete aerial in itself—nothing extra to buy. Permanently installed and requires no adjustment. Ends aerial troubles forever. Send order today.

Try One 5 Days at Our Risk—More Distance and Volume

National Laboratories
Dept. D., Fargo, No. Dak.

Not an experiment, but fully tested. Many users report over 3,000 miles reception. Gives triple the volume over regular inside aeriels on many sets. Guaranteed for 5 years. Distributors and dealers write for sales proposition. Agents wanted.

Enclosed find $1.00 for Scientific Aerial, prepaid. If not pleased will return after 5 days for refund. Check here if desired sent P. O. C. O. D. $1.00 plus few cents postage. No C. O. D.'s to Canada.
