Radio's STAR of STARS

FFIFTY years ago, the title of this little essay might have been, "Buck Benny Rides Again," or, "You Can't Keep a Good Man Down."

For that's the story. Radio Guide has just completed its annual Star of Stars Election, and once more Jack Benny stands at the top of the heap, head and shoulders over the crowd, the Star of Stars of the greatest show on earth!

That's a story in itself. But there's a bigger story behind it. Because Jack Benny ranked No. 1 in 1936, too. And it was the same Jack Benny who was voted America's best in the year 1935!

Radio-and-Screen Top-Notcher, Jack Benny: Winner of Radio Guide's coveted Star of Stars award—three years in a row!

From amateur entertainer in Waukegan, Illinois, to a three-time title as the biggest name in radio—that's the saga of the pride of the Benny family. And while we're on the subject—on page 8 of this issue of Radio Guide you'll find a story about the 1937 Star of Stars.

Radio Guide has a special pride in the Star of Stars Election. We're proud of our annual contest, proud that we are able to conduct it, proud of its rating as a reliable barometer of radio popularity. But most of all we're proud of the enthusiastic response of radio fans everywhere.

Characteristic of us as Americans, of course, is an inborn delight in contests.

That philosophy, that idea, is an evident characteristic of Radio Guide's Star of Stars Election. Everybody gets in! Ballots come to this office from the windy plains of the Far West with the name of the writer's favorite star painfully scrawled with the stub of a pencil—and they come beautifully and precisely written, enclosed in a starchy English envelope with a Park Avenue address!

Today, in June of this year 1937, this is your Star of Stars rating:

1. Jack Benny
2. Nelson Eddy
3. Lanny Ross
4. Frances Langford
5. Lulu Belle
6. Bing Crosby
7. Rudy Vallee
8. Eddie Cantor
9. Joan Blaine
10. Jessica Dragonette
11. Fred Allen
12. Don Ameche

There are lots of surprises in that listing. Eddie Cantor furnishes one of them. Third in 1935, he rose to second place in 1936—to drop to eighth in this year's ranking. Nelson Eddy, not even in the running two years ago, shot into third place in '36, and is now crowding Jack Benny for top honors!

You'll notice that Frances Langford, in fourth place, tops all the rest of her sex. That's a quick climb. She went from nowhere to the top in one year!

Speaking of Benny again—and we were, you know—down there in eleventh place you'll find his late hated rival, Fred Allen. Allen will probably say that he was driven into the cellar when Benny played "The Bee!"

And so another Star of Stars Election passes into history. And from the bottom of our hearts, we of Radio Guide thank you, readers and radio fans everywhere, for your whole-hearted participation.

STARS REBORN

CAREERS-IN-RADIO DEMAND
GOOD LOOKS AS WELL AS TAL-ENT—AND SURGEONS SEE THAT STARS FILL THE BILL!

A FEW years ago, a radio star was a voice. Sheltered by the protective shadow of the microphone, she could be fat, thin, pretty or ugly. It didn't matter. Today, newspapers, magazines and million-dollar publicity campaigns bring the star's faces to the attention of the public daily. And because we, the public, are human beings and react to beauty and ugliness in normal ways, we want our idols to be beautiful.

Besides, a radio star today cannot be confined to radio activities alone and expect to stay on top. Broadway shows, personal appearances, night-club engagements, Hollywood films—all these are now considered necessary to the build-up of a successful radio star.

Look over your radio stars today—it's the Frances Langfords, the Gladys Swarthouts, the Lily Ponses, the Bing Crosbys and the Nelson Eddys who get the best programs, command the biggest money. There's no question but that their stage and film appearances contributed largely to making them the great stars they are in radio.

Radio stars have seen the warning signal and are taking heed. Miss Y, for example, who had a misshapen nose, faced facts. She saw two paths open to her: brief popularity and then oblivion—or a new face and a renewed life on her career. Her decision led her to the plastic surgeon's office.

The physician examined her nose and found it to have a slight hump and a downward bony curve at the tip. When the nose was covered, Miss Y's potentialities became apparent. Her lips and chin were soft and well curved, her slanted green eyes took on a strangely beautiful and exotic expression.

"The corrective operation," the surgeon explained, "can be easily performed and in from thirty to sixty minutes' time. You needn't be afraid.

There is no danger, no pain, little bleeding and you will be discharged in about two weeks."

After her operation, the girl's professional success was merely a matter of wise management. She appeared in a New York musical show, then in various New York night clubs. Step by step she was building up a glamorous reputation and background for herself. Then came a screen test, which she passed. Today she is in Hollywood featured in pictures, and her radio appearances net her about five times the salary she used to receive. She is described in the newspapers as "the beautiful Miss Y," and she is about to marry a highly eligible and sought-after young movie actor.

Other examples, similar to hers, may be found in radio. Not only because it generally leads to Hollywood and from there on to unlimited possibilities in film and radio work, but because of the imminent arrival of television. Many radio people don't want this new and fast-approaching medium to find them unprepared.

The experience of Miss Y is a common one, and plastic surgeons can duplicate her story with countless other examples of radio artists who have come to them for new faces.

But not only women take advantage of plastic surgery's benefits. One of the most dramatic stories, in which plastic surgery saved not only a career but helped to solve a marital problem, concerns a well-known orchestra leader whom we shall call John Q.

John, a husky, rugged young man, symbolized American youth, even to the broken nose which he had received on a football field during his college days. He wore this nose proudly, as a mark of former glories. When he left school and formed his own orchestra, he accumulated a vast following, particularly with the

radio favorite—as she appears today

Rainbow's End

THIS story is important to every girl who has ever dreamed of pursuing a radio career or any other kind of career. Nearly every story you've ever read about a radio Cinderella has been built around the idea that she was entirely self-made. Never a word about knowing the right people, establishing the proper contacts. Now, for the first time, because of Jean Dickenson's gratitude toward Lily Pons, you can learn the truth about what it takes to become a radio star.

If it were possible for a girl to make the grade in radio entirely on her own, Jean Dickenson could have succeeded without anyone's help. For she is beautiful, slim and petite, with an exquisite pert face, dark-brown wavy hair with glints of gold, and vibrant brown eyes. She has a glorious voice that has brought her to the attention of many people at the top of the musical profession.

Yet for over a year Jean Dickenson had waited for her break on the air. Under contract—without pay—to NBC, almost daily she reported for lessons in mike technique. And that was all she did achieve, except for one guest performance with the Beauty Box program. In spite of the fact that the NBC Artists Service was sure it would sell her shortly to a sponsor, nothing happened.

It seemed all the more strange because of the furor they had made about her while she was attending the Lamont School of Music in Denver.

Armed with letters of introduction from her teacher, when she came east on a vacation, she had auditioned for both NBC and CBS. And both offered her contracts immediately; CBS was willing to pay her $50 a week for the privilege of handling her. And Gus Haenschen wired her, begging her to sing on the same program upon which she is starred today. Offered her then, in fact, more money than she is getting today.

But Jean, who was to graduate from the conservatory in six months, decided to finish her schooling first. Certainly if they thought so much of her coloratura voice, when she had a little more experience she'd be all the more valuable to them.

So it wasn't till George Engles, head of the NBC Artists Service, visited her in Denver that she actually signed her NBC contract, giving NBC a long-term option on her services.

Things didn't turn out as she had planned. When she came to New York, eager to begin her professional career, Gus Haenschen said he was in no position to change stars then and couldn't use her. Didn't want her—she thought bitterly. Nobody wanted her.

None of the programs for which she auditioned materialized.

Put yourself in her place. "I had expected the world at my feet," she told me, passing her slim hand through her short, wavy, brown hair. "And everyone avoided me as though I had the plague. When I called, people were out.

"Believe me, I was mighty blue those days.

"I guess," she admitted, "I was as near to giving up then as I'll ever be. Till Lily Pons came along."

Remember back to spring, 1936? Lily was searching for a young singer whom she could befriend.

Over fifty prospective proteges had auditioned . . . and to the critical Lily not one had a voice fine enough to warrant encouragement. In despair she refused to listen to any more.

When NBC suggested Jean Dickenson, Lily was frankly dubious. Finally, when they told her that Jean could sing G above high C easily, she consented to listen to Jean if she would come to the Pons apartment.

"Mother dressed me up in my best blue suit," Jean told me, "and my accompanist, Edwin MacArthur, and Mr. A. Frank Jones, of the NBC Artists Service, took me to Miss Pons' apartment on West 57th St.

"First I sang an aria from 'The Barber of Seville.' When I finished, Lily, who listened with her little head cocked to one side like a bird, motioned me to continue. So I sang a semi-classical number, 'Love, Here Is My Heart'."

As the last note died away, Lily Pons sprang up and clapped her hands animatedly. "That was lovely," she said. "You will let Lily help you, n'est-ce pas?" Without waiting for a reply, "With whom do you study? What have you done so far?"

"She was so kind and interested, I felt right at home," Jean said. "I told her all about myself. I was practising by myself in New York, for I could not afford a first-rate teacher, and I wanted nothing but the best."

"But that is silly," Lily frowned. "A coloratura soprano needs much training. You will go tomorrow to my teacher. I shall speak to him, yes?"

When Jean went to Lily's teacher, she explained that she could not afford to pay much for lessons.

"For my friend, Lily Pons," he said, "I will teach you for nothing."

And so it was . . . till Jean was making money as a singer, he instructed her free of charge, giving her the same careful training he gave his well-paying pupils.

Whenever Jean grew discouraged, "Lily will be proud of you some day," he'd say. "You must work hard."

"But that wasn't all Lily did for me," Jean said, her brown eyes shining.

"About a week after I had sung for her she arranged a party for me at the Ritz Towers, where she introduced me as her protege to all the critics, many of her Metropolitan Opera fellow singers, and other influential people.

"I suppose I was a little shy and hung back. 'Do not be afraid, ma cherie,' she said. 'Lily will take care of you.' We took pictures together at the piano, and she got me some marvelous publicity."

So great was Lily's confidence in Jean that she arranged to introduce Jean as her protege on her next Coast-to-Coast program. And Jean must sing then the same songs she had sung for Lily.

Then she became ill. It started with a common cold. Hastily summoned by her family, the doctor said: "Pharyngitis. This child must be put to bed."

Jean's throat closed up, and for almost two weeks she lay in bed, rasping and panting. As she couldn't swallow, liquids were poured down her raw, aching throat.

The days and nights alike were nightmares. Haunting her constantly was the thought that she might never be able to sing again, that the timbre of her voice might change.

Just three more days before the Sunday night program. What could she do?

Once in a lifetime an opportunity like this comes: from certain nonentity and failure she was offered the chance to scale the heights, by a perfect stranger, Lily Pons. Now she must go back on Lily, bring disgrace upon herself, and write finis to what she had dreamed would be so lovely and fine.

Saturday, as she lay wide awake in the awful stillness of the night, she made up her mind. In spite of her doctor, in spite of her family, she would sing the next day.

And Sunday no one could keep her home. With trembling fingers she adjusted her clinging white-satin evening gown, especially ordered for this occasion.

At the huge studio, every seat was filled, for ermine-clad women and shop-girls alike eagerly waited to hear the gorgeous voice that had enthralled the great Lily Pons.

Afraid to look at the huge audience, Jean took her place before the mike. Now was no time for doubts—she just had to go through with it. Though she could hardly hold herself up, Jean Dickenson went through that program.

"My voice was still hoarse," she told me, "and I felt I had sung terribly." She imagined everyone was staring stonily at her, whispering about her failure, laughing at Lily Pons' "find." At least she would apologize to Miss Pons, tell her how miserable she felt at letting her down.

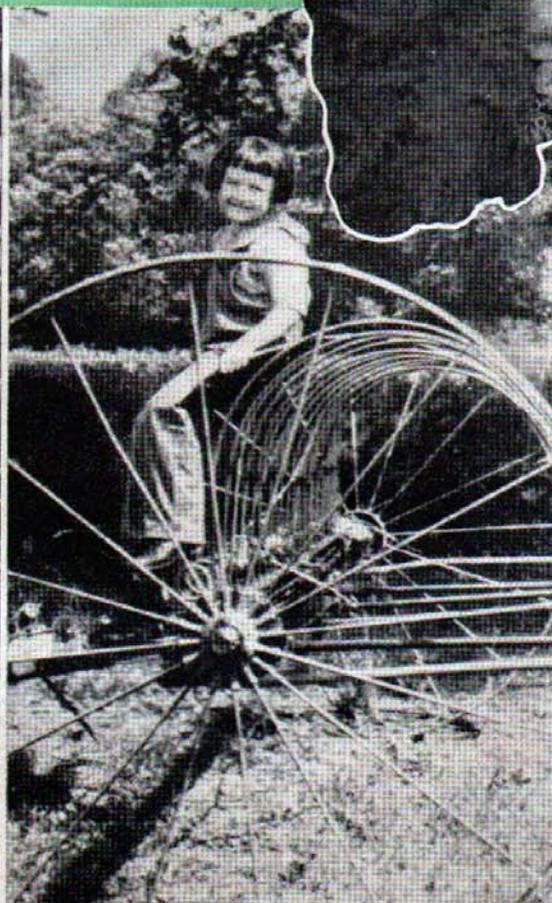

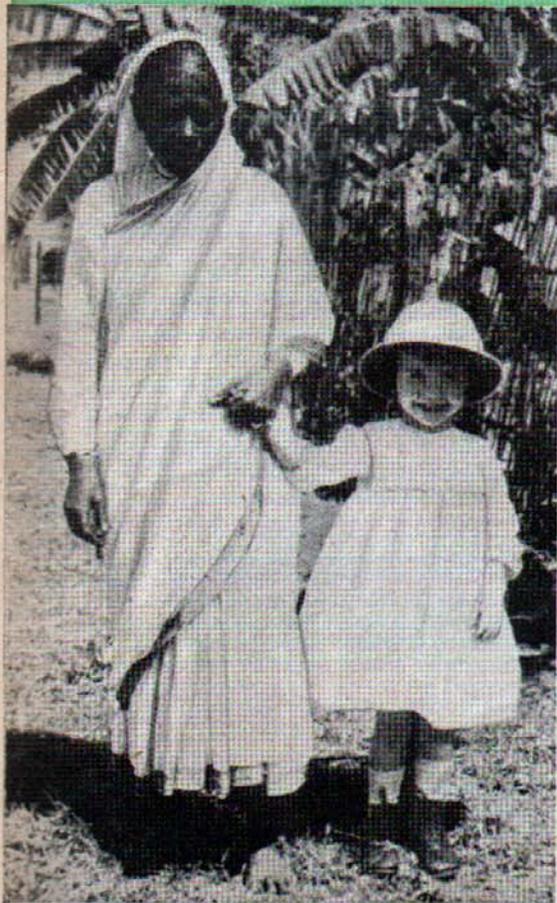

Evidently Lily didn't feel she had flopped. "You did fine, ma cherie," she beamed, kissing her on both cheeks and hugging her. "You will see, you will be famous some day."

The very next morning she was offered a thirteen-week contract to sing on the Hollywood Hotel program, and that same week she found herself on a plane bound for Hollywood.

Today, as the new prima donna of the American Album of Familiar Music, Jean no longer needs the championship of Lily Pons, but Lily has not forgotten her.

"When Lily was indisposed a few weeks ago, I was selected for the great honor of taking her rehearsals for her Philharmonic Concert at Carnegie Hall," Jean said proudly.

In spite of the fact that she needed Lily Pons' help to get to the top, Jean Dickenson is no clinging vine; quite the contrary. This girl has lived, and knows what it means to fight for what you want.

Born in Montreal, the daughter of a mining-engineer en route from Alaska to India, Jean spent the first years of her life in India with uncivilized natives as her neighbors. When she was five, she contracted malaria, and it left her white and pasty-faced.

"If you want your child to live," the doctor told her mother, "you must get her out of India."

It was just after the World War, and thousands of British subjects marooned in India swarmed the steam-

Bert Lahr lost 16 jobs in 3 months—then turned to the stage—and fame!

RECENTLY Elsa Maxwell, pet of Park Avenue, gave one of her famous parties. Among those present were Doris Duke Cromwell, Gloria Baker, Woolworth Donahue, Prince Serge Obelensky—and Bert Lahr.

Bert Lahr's old friends were amused. They knew he had been invited because he was a successful Broadway clown, and Broadway clowns are an added fillip to a society shindig. But they decided to rib him about it.

"What's the matter, Bert? Going top-hat?"

"Waddya mean, top-hat? Waddya mean?" Bert spluttered. "I'm still a mugg!"

Then the Mugg proceeded to worry about it. The Mugg always worries. Off the stage and radio, Lahr forgets his sense of humor. He worries if his friends think he's going society. He worries if a gag didn't get a big enough laugh. He worries if you don't like his new suit. He worries if he thinks he hasn't left the waiter a big enough tip.

And this is the man who earns over $3500 a week and has been a success for fifteen years! This is the comedian who was called in on the "Manhattan Merry-Go-Round" program.

A few days before he started his series on the air, Bert carried his radio script around with him and read it aloud to everyone he met. "What do you think of this gag?" he asked anxiously, reading the entire script through. "Which line is better, this . . . or this?"

He was afraid his roughneck humor would not go over the air and that his most valuable comedy props, to wit, his pudgy nose and his startled, oft-times crossed eyes, would be lost in radio.

As the day of his broadcast approached, his script was finger-marked and worn and his friends were afraid he would muffle a line through nervousness. But Bert came out on the stage, saw the huge studio audience and felt completely at home. He went through his lines completely disregarding the advice he had so frantically sought, and the first program on his new radio series was launched. Then, for the next seven days, he began to worry about next Sunday's show.

Maybe he was thinking of his first radio venture, made five years ago for a big cigarette company. After the first week, the company had bought off his contract. A second, and successful, radio series following that, plus a flock of Broadway hits, never completely obliterated his first radio flop. He once said, "When the stage hands say I'm funny I'll know I'm good." But even though the men who shove the scenery backstage at the Winter Garden, where Bert is co-starring with Beatrice Lillie in "The Show Is On," give him their guffaw of approval on opening night, he continues to pore over his lines to see if he can't improve "business."

HIS tendency to never take success for granted is one of the reasons why his name has never been out of lights since the neons first spelled it out on the Big Street. Some years back, in the Broadway hit "Hold Everything," he was in a wrestling skit with a comedian of gargantuan proportions. Bert felt that he couldn't properly burlesque a wrestling match unless he first knew what it was all about. He went to a former heavyweight champion.

"Give me some wrestling lessons," he said.

The man sized up Bert, took in his dressing-room pallor and his fancy suit. "I'll give him lessons," he said to himself. "Terrible lessons."

He stacked him up against a tough hippodromer who had a set of cauliflower ears and terrifying arms. At the end of the week Lahr was so crippled he had to give up golf. But he stuck it out for six solid weeks, letting the bruiser pummel him like a lump of putty. The night "Hold Everything" opened, the audience was laughing in the aisles, but Lahr collapsed in his dressing-room after the performance.

In "The Show Is On" he does a take-off on male "scat" singers which is a delicious bit of satire. He blubbers and croons and ends up by growling impishly at the orchestra leader, "Oh, you dawggggg!" To be sure it would be a true burlesque, he made the rounds of the Fifty-second Street swing-spots, studied the technique of the band singers and finally ended up by hiring one of the singers to give him private lessons.

Lahr's story is the saga of Broadway. It contains all the elements of recklessness, persistence and fool luck which went into the evolution of The Street. And like most Broadway veterans, he likes to reminisce about the halcyon past when show business was wild and woolly and parents did their best to keep their offspring off the stage, rather than on it.

Bert was born some forty-odd years ago of not-so-poor but honest parents. So honest were they, in fact, that when Bert showed unmistakable signs of stage fever at the age of twelve, they looked at his knobby, homely face and tried to talk him out of it. Through the influence of Papa Lahr, Bert got a job in a clothing store. The next day he was sent home, express collect. Bert got and lost sixteen jobs during the next three months. Ruefully, but philosophically, his parents let him pursue a "career."

School shows were the vogue then. Even four lunatic brothers by the name of Marx were tolerated in one of these "kid acts." Bert joined "The Nine Crazy Kids" and they proceeded to startled vaudeville audiences all over the country.

"It was a cinch," Bert remembers. "All we needed was a lot of nerve and a cast-iron stomach. We lived on crackers for weeks at a stretch. That is, until we learned how to get our meals with a matchstick. A matchstick did the work of twenty nickels. We'd go to the Automat and as soon as a patron lifted the little glass partition to get a sandwich, we'd stick a matchstick in the partition so that it was never really closed. Then when a fresh sandwich rolled around, instead of inserting nickels in the slot to open the partition, we lifted it with the matchstick. And heaven pity the customer who left a beefsteak pie on the table for a minute to get a cup of coffee!"

Unscrupulous managers were no rarity then. More than once a manager took the show to a little town, collected the money for the evening performance and then skipped. On one of these occasions, Bert was locked in his hotel room to be allowed out only on condition that he leave his luggage for security. He summoned the manager, blandly showed him his suitcase in the corner and walked out a free man. "I just stuffed my wardrobe in my shirt—which shows you how big a wardrobe I had—and left my $2.98 cardboard valise behind," he said. "I was onto all the tricks by this time."

A burlesque magnate happened to see him at one of these carnivals and offered him thirty-five dollars a week to paint his nose red and splutter before an audience. That looked like security. Bert accepted quickly, and began to send money home.

THAT was a lucky move, for Bert came into burlesque at an opportune moment. At that time, Ziegfeld was lord of Broadway and he had introduced a Babylonian display of gorgeous women to the stage. So frantic were the other producers to match him woman for woman, that in no time at all there was the appalling situation of too many legs and not enough comics on the New York boards. Feverish talent scouts were sent out to comb the country for new comedians. Vaudeville houses came under their dragnet first, and finally, with great reluctance, the burlesque houses. Result: Bert Lahr entered the high sphere of Broadway. As an explanatory note, among other comedians recruited from burlesque at this particular period were Jack Pearl, Joe Cook, Willie and Eugene Howard and Eddie Cantor.

With Bert and Broadway it was a case of love at first meeting. His zany comedy, his blithe "mugging," his dumb sputtering hit a blase beauty-drunk theater audience with the impact of a tornado. Ascent was rapid, and Bert, who was used to a fifty-cent top, was now playing to a $7.70-a-seat first night! So popular did he become that once George White and another producer went to court to fight over his services, each claiming that his show couldn't go on unless Lahr was in it to draw the audience. When producers fight over you in court—you're good! Another success sign . . . the Shuberts, veteran show producers, once offered Bert $300 to appear in one of their productions. Today, he is in their "The Show Is On" at ten times that salary. With his added earnings from radio and a movie contract which will be fulfilled some time in the summer, Bert is rapidly approaching the millionaire class.

AND yet with all of this, Bert is unsure of himself. Always perfectly at home before a big audience, he is nervous in a small gathering. He suddenly becomes afflicted with tongue-tieditis and mopes alone in a corner, a half-worried frown clouding his face. He is not an expansive speaker, his vocabulary is limited, and he freezes up in the presence of strangers. Only when he is with his small coterie of intimate friends does his self-consciousness disappear. Then he is again a clown. His most overworked word is "throw." "Throw me a filet mignon and potatoes," he tells the waiter. "Throw yourself a cigarette," he tells a visitor. Always the word "throw."

author left for Spain, and almost talked Lahr into taking the trip with him, but Bert's passion for the theater overcame his yearning for travel.

His true mentor, however, is Harry Schaefer, to whom he refers, with a grin, as "my valet." Harry dresses him, scolds him, sees that his suits are pressed and is the tester for his radio jokes. If Harry laughs, the gag stays in. Lahr has no sense of time or money, no memory for details, no recollection of appointments or faces. Harry remembers for him. Although no Beau Brummel, Bert is the delight of his tailor. He visited a tailor seven years ago, had his measurements taken and orders all of his suits by phone. "Throw me a gray herringbone suit," he says. When Harry notices that the Lahr waistline is fluctuating, he measures him and relays the news to the tailor.

Harry watches over him like a police dog. For example, a few weeks ago Harry had to be removed from a movie set because a collapsible chair Bert was to sit on wouldn't collapse.

Harry had nailed it "so Bert wouldn't be hurt."

Somehow, it speaks very well for a man when he inspires such fidelity in his employe. It suggests that the employer himself is capable of great loyalty. In Lahr's case this is true. His partner during his happy-go-lucky burlesque days came down with an incurable illness about ten years ago. Every single week from that day on, a sizable chunk of Lahr's earnings have been put into an envelope and sent to the sanitarium where the ailing partner is fighting the dread malady. Of course, the story didn't come from Lahr. He doesn't think he's noble. Any burlesque trouper would do the same. For that's what the fellow who calls himself "a mugg" is.

This is the Life..

ONE night in Vancouver, B. C., Jack Benny was sitting in his dressing-room taking off his make-up. In the next dressing-room was Zeppo Marx of the Marx Brothers. "What are you doing after the show, kid?" asked Zeppo. "Eating," said Jack, eating being his favorite pastime. "I know some people here," said Zeppo. "They've asked me out to their house. Come on along. They won't mind." Zeppo's friends in Vancouver turned out to be just ordinary home folk. It was like Waukegan. They weren't connected with the show business. They were a married couple with two little girls—one about twelve years old and the other a year or so younger. It was a pleasant, friendly, quiet home evening. Now we skip to 1925. Jack, still barnstorming around the country, was playing at the Orpheum Theater in Los Angeles in 1925. The evening in Vancouver was only a pleasant memory in his past. Vaudeville actors used to be like sailors in that they had friends, if not girls, in every port. It was the only home life they knew. And, in Los Angeles, Jack's friends were a married couple by the name of Mann. Mrs. Mann phoned him at the theater and asked him if he would like to go out to a night club and take her sister along as a blind date. He took a liking to Sadye Marks, Bebe Mann's sister, and they saw each other two or three times before he left California. Then it was back to the old grind; trains and towns, trains and towns. A week before Christmas in 1926 Jack was playing at the Palace in New York—a headliner, now, at the theater which had once been the scene of his worst flop. After the afternoon performance he decided to go for a walk in Central Park and get some exercise. "Outside of Dad and Florence I haven't even got anyone to send presents to," he thought. He stopped on the sidewalk. He was in front of a jewelry store. On impulse, he stepped inside. "That's a nice bracelet, there," he said to the hovering clerk. "I'll take that, I guess." "Yes, sir," said the clerk, holding up the sparkling circlet of diamonds. "To whom shall I send it, sir?" "Oh, sure," said Jack. "Uh. Um. Put 'Sadye Marks, care of Mr. and Mrs. Al Mann, Los Angeles, California,' on it, will you?" "Is there a card?" "Merry Christmas from Jack.' I guess that's all." Another year went by.

Jack Benny whirlwind-romanced Mary Livingstone, but couldn't remember where he had first met her

Mary and Jack — they've been married for ten years

IN 1927 Jack was back in New York once more, and once more walking up Fifth Avenue. Not ten doors from the very jewelry store in which he had bought the bracelet he bumped into a woman in a fur coat. "I beg your pardon, Madame," he stammered, lifting his hat. "Why, Jack Benny! What in the world are you doing here?" cried Bebe Mann, Sadye's married sister. "Are you on your way back to L. A. or have you just come east?" he asked her. "I'm going home in a couple of days. I'm just on a shopping trip. I'm going to stop off in Chicago." "That's practically my home town, you know," Jack told Bebe Mann. "I'm going there next week myself. I'm opening in 'The Great Temptation,' the Schubert show."

Mounties in a big red coat and boots. "She hasn't any right to. I don't want her to," he found himself thinking unhappily. "I'll stop it. By golly, that's what I'll do; I'll phone Bebe right now." He jumped out of bed and grabbed the phone. It was 4 a.m. when he got her. "Jack!" she exclaimed. "What on earth has gotten into you? It's almost morning!" "Say, Bebe—" "Yes, you idiot!" "I'm lying here worrying about something. We're both going to be in Chicago next week. Will you have Sadye meet us there?" "Will I what?" she demanded. "Wire Sadye to meet us in Chicago." "Oh, all right! I'll wire her! Anything to keep you quiet. Go to sleep." Sadye met them in Chicago. Jack rented a car and they drove up the lake shore. "Say, Sadye," he said as they drove along—and these are the exact words he used—"how about you and me getting married?" "Yes," said Sadye—surprisingly. He stared at her in a dazed, stricken way and the car nearly ran off the road. "Sunday?" he ventured gingerly. "Yes," said Sadye again. It couldn't be true. It must be the moon. She would get over it, he was afraid. . . . And the next day it began to look as if she was getting over it. She was jittery. He could tell. He understood perfectly how she felt. Engaged to one man in Canada and telling another man that she would marry him Sunday—a vaudeville actor, too! "Honey, you're getting scared," he said, confessing his fears to her. "If I wait till Sunday you're liable to back out on me and go back to the Coast and marry that other fellow after all. Come on—hop in the car and we'll drive to Waukegan and get married right today." And Sadye gave him a scared look and said "Yes" again. FOR a wedding ring he gave her the plain gold band which had been his mother's, which she had given to him just before she died. The license carried the date of January 12, 1927. So, as you see, Jack and Sadye (better known as Mary Livingstone) have been married ten years. But now— Five weeks after they were married they were in Baltimore having their dinner at the Belvedere Hotel. As the waiter brought them their dessert Mary shot a quizzical, speculative glance across the table. "Life is funny, isn't it?" she mused. "I mean, about the way we met—" "What's funny about that?" Jack asked her. "Where do you think we met?" she asked in turn. "In Los Angeles, of course." Mary shook her head. "Well," he asked, "where did we meet, then? I guess I ought to know where I met you; I was there." She stirred her coffee reflectively.

"Were you ever in British Columbia?" "Yes. In Vancouver." "Do you remember one time years ago when you went out with Zeppo Marx after the show to call on some people?" "No—oh, yes, I do, too," Jack admitted. "I remember something like that." "The people had two little girls. One of them—the one with the black hair—was about twelve years old. She didn't like actors." "Yes," said Jack, "I remember her. What are you driving at?" Mary looked across the table. "Her name was Sadye Marks," she said. And that's the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. The almost incredible way Jack Benny rocketed to radio's top after his first mike appearance, and the tenacity with which he has clung to the top rung of the ladder ever since, will always be regarded as a radio phenomenon. Don't miss the final chapter of this amazing story—in next week's issue of RADIO GUIDE! Jack Benny may be heard Sundays on his own program over an NBC network at: EDT 7:00 p.m. — EST 6:00 p.m. CDT 6:00 p.m. — CST 5:00 p.m. MST 4:00 p.m. — PST 3:00 p.m. and later for the West Coast at: PST 7:30 p.m. — MST 8:30 p.m.

Gene Austin — his own song caught up with him

INSPIRED BY HIS OWN SONG—A WRIT-

ER-PIANIST-CROONER COMES BACK!

*When whippoorwills call,
And evening is nigh,
I hurry to my Blue Heaven . . .*

OFF in a corner of the night club a boy and a girl listened to the sweetly sad music, and his hand closed tightly over hers.

"Every time Gene Austin sings that, it hits me right where I live," murmured the youth.

The fellow at the piano was young, too, but his eyes were old. Girls were attracted to Gene. He was too good-looking for his own good, with those finely chiseled features, tanned skin, wavy brown hair. But he didn't care much for girls. He was a rover and always had been. Two years through the hell of France and out of the Army at nineteen. Nobody believed he was that young, and it didn't matter to him what they thought anyway.

He looked at the couple sitting alone in the corner.

"Suckers," he murmured.

Yes, they all fell for that song. Funny, too, because it had kicked around at a music house for seven years, and nobody had given the tune a tumble. A piano-thumper at Feist's urged Gene to give it a try, and to oblige he had added it as an extra number. Maybe it was the way he sang it, crooning sort of, instead of giving it the spectacular kind of treatment, a la Al Jolson, that was the vogue.

The young couple went out, with the girl pressing blissfully close to her boy friend's arm.

WELL hafta call you cupid," grinned the manager when Gene finished. He leaned across the piano. "A guy in here last night, he says he was going with his girl three years when he heard that. He proposed right away. He was passin' out the cigars."

Gene grinned.

"That's an old story, Al. They all get a yen for a little fireplace and a pair of slippers when they hear that number. Ain't it the bunk! I'd better liven 'em up. Here's one that ought to wow 'em in Tin Pan Alley. I just wrote it."

And the hot jungle-beat of "How Come You Do Me Like You Do" vibrated like a fever through the piano wires.

It was a hit, all right. Yet "Blue Heaven" was the one they all wanted. For some fool reason everybody went sentimental over it.

After a slow start it became the best seller on Gene's list of recordings. He was going like a house afire, those days. Gene Austin was a name to tie to in Tin Pan Alley.

It was like an invitation from royalty to be invited aboard his yacht. When he spent a Summer cruising in it from New York down around Florida and up to New Orleans, just fishing and putting in here and there to loaf and cash royalty checks, Gene would think of "Blue Heaven" and wonder how many more marriages it had accounted for. No matter, though;

How
found

it was a real money-maker for him.

He wanted to put in at New Orleans and go up to Yellow Pine, where he'd been reared. Maybe that ancient Civil War piano would be there still. He'd learned to play on its yellow, warped keys, just picking out melodies he'd heard sung or whistled. Never had a lesson in his life and couldn't read a note, and here he was rolling in money . . . when good artists went hungry. Life was like that. Ironical.

The little town was not changed. From it he had run away to join a circus, and done everything from riding bareback in the ring, tangy with pine shavings, to playing behind the smelly steam boiler of the wheezing calliope. That was the life!

How could people take root and be content to live in some dinky little cottage way off here a thousand miles from the bright lights? Marry, raise kids, grow old.

HIS apartment in New York cost $40,000 to furnish, and was as big as the Grand Central Station. Just about as many people went through it, too.

He'd have to get the latest copy of Variety.

Gene read the headline and chuckled: "WALL STREET LAYS AN EGG."

Reading further, it began to appear that business was taking a nose-dive. Things were happening to the stock market. Well, that didn't bother the young Gene Austin much. He was a songwriter, not a financier. So long as people kept on singing, he'd do all right.

But he didn't do all right. Tin Pan Alley began to die on the vine. The great bubble had burst, the bubble that had sparkled with green and purple lights and the golden sheen of flowing money, money that had flowed like a yellow stream.

"Okay, I'll get out of song business," Gene told his pals. "I'm fed up with it anyway."

And he was. With the changing mood of the country, his own mood had changed. He didn't feel like singing any more. There were now dozens of fellows picking up that intimate style of crooning he had started. Let 'em have it.

Gene went into the auto business. It failed, and thousands of dollars went down the river. He financed a manufacturing concern and wound up behind the eight ball.

THE old life began to get out of his system. Men he met were different from those in show business. They had homes and were fighting to keep them. They had wives who stuck through thick and thin. And always when they had troubles, they'd ask Gene to play "Blue Heaven."

*A turn to the right,
A little white light,
Will lead you to my Blue Heaven . . .*

There was a slim, dark-eyed girl listening. Her name was Agnes Antelline, and she thought Tin Pan Alley was probably the name of a dump where they threw old rubbish.

"By jingo," thought Gene, "it's got me going, too."

*You'll see a smiling face,
A fireplace, a cozy room . . .*

Funny, when he'd sung that song for the recording the words had meant so little to him that he had forgotten the second verse, and merely sang snatches or hummed it. And people had said: "I love the way you sang that second verse!"

Had the song he sang all those years finally reached him? Maybe these people weren't suckers after all, to believe

Mr. and Mrs. Gene Austin and their baby daughter—Charlotte

BY JACK SMALLEY

These three are happy in their first home—it's "Blue Heaven"

in matrimony and a little home. Maybe there was something to it. Was he too disillusioned, too weary of the empty phrases to love?

With this girl he felt ambition again. He wanted to write songs for her. He wanted to make money, get back on top of the heap, so that she'd like him.

She liked him anyway. It took time for that to sink in. She didn't care if he was broke. She didn't care anything except that Gene Austin was the man for her.

So they were married.

Trouping was the only way Gene could make a living, and he went back to it. In Charlotte, North Carolina, their little daughter was born. They lived in trunks, but they were happy.

What were the words?

*Just Molly and me,
And baby makes three,
We're happy in my Blue Heaven . . .*

FOR the first time, they made sense. Sentimental? Sure. But what of it! He had "flung roses riotously, gone with the wind"; now he'd fight to win his Blue Heaven.

Hollywood was the place to make the attempt, where the big radio programs were lining up talent, where there might be work in the studios.

Discouragements came thick and fast, yet Gene now knew what he wanted. And when a fellow knows that, he's gone a long way on the come-back trail.

He wanted a little home for his wife and daughter. How he schemed to get it! He ground out songs and tried to peddle them. He haunted radio stations. He announced he was on the wagon, because that way he could save a few dollars more. A few dollars toward buying that Blue Heaven.

Then persistence began to pay. Gene was commissioned to write songs for Mae West. He turned out songs that had heart in them, and the biggest money-making star in Hollywood issued orders: Gene Austin writes my songs from now on. He made some musical shorts that clicked.

And the best break of all came when Joe Penner, another lad who had known how it feels to be taken over the bumps, gave him a spot on his program.

GENE and his wife shopped for furniture. They knew exactly what they wanted. They found a little cottage, neat and glossy new—and there were roses growing on the porch!

His first home! Gene never knew, never even guessed, what it meant to say that. The furniture arrived and was put in place. His wife, in an apron, hung pictures, while baby trotted around and put smudgy fingermarks on the glass, and wasn't even scolded for it.

There was a corner in the living-room, next the fireplace, just made for Gene's piano. He sat down to play, then remembered something. Rummaging around in a closet he found them, a pair of old slippers. Then he ran his fingers over the keys . . .

*Just Molly and me,
And baby makes three,
We're happy in my Blue Heaven . . .*

Mrs. Austin came and tucked her head against his shoulder. Then she looked at him and smiled.

"Sucker," she said, and kissed him.

Gene Austin may be heard Sundays with Joe Penner over a CBS network at:

EDT 6:00 p.m. — EST 5:00 p.m.

CHICAGO.—All of you who've seen the Bernie-Winchell opus, "Wake Up and Live," will say that it would be impossible for a person to find an open, unattended microphone, as Jack Haley did in the picture, and impress his "phantom" voice on a program being broadcast. But that's where you're wrong. It happened here last week on a Poetic Melodies presentation! Franklyn McCormack had just completed reading a poem with the lines, "Whether mighty in station or lowlier born, unwelcome's the fellow who toots his own horn," when a hollow voice rang out with "Hello!" But the hello-er wasn't visible. Amazed, staff engineers sprang to attention and began a frenzied search for the cause of the ghost greeting . . . and they found it. In a small studio used by the mikemen who make those station identification announcements, they came upon Ernie Dahl, a new page boy, studying a book on "How to Be a Radio Engineer." Ernie was surprised at the excitement, "I just pushed the announcer's button," he said, "to see how it worked. Then I said 'Hello.' I didn't know the studio was on the air! But it worked!"

Romance in June: June 26 is the date set by America's Sweetheart, Mary Pickford, for her marriage to Buddy Rogers . . . Mrs. Lebert Lombardo, who changed her name June 14, was socialite Helen Pershing Healey, of Bradford, Pa. . . . August will see the nuptials of pretty Alice Patton, musician - actress, who plays the roles of "Nancy" and "Jane Watson" in "Backstage Wife." She'll become the bride of W. Hatfield Smith, a Chicago stockbroker.

Hollywood Flicks: Nelson Eddy's former sponsor has signed the newly wed Jeanette MacDonald (Mrs. Gene Raymond) for a series starting in September . . . W. Winchell will do a few mikings from N'Yawk this summer . . . They're digging the cellar of Don Wilson's new home in San Fernando Valley . . . Dorothy Lamour's hubby, Bandleader Herbie Kay, is on his way east after a visit with the screen charmer . . . That Jack Benny-Mary Livingstone trip to Europe is shriveling. Picture commitments are delaying the sailing . . . Sneak into Amos 'n' Andy's studio between broadcasts and you may hear a hot jam session going full blast with Andy swinging the ivories, Amos sizzling the fiddle, and Joe Gallicchio's musicians joining in to lay the cats in the groove . . . "Fibber McGee's" pronouncer, Harlow Wilcox, is polishing up his polo . . . Lum 'n' Abner have turned music publishers. Their theme song, "Eleanor," will soon be on the music counters.

NBC's "Don Winslow of the Navy" serial, by the way, has a new theme song—which, NBC points out, has nothing to do with the rival CBS network. The song? Why, "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean," of course.

Impersonator Sheila Barrett, blond Songstress Benay Venuta and Joe Rines' orchestra are auditioning in Chi for a new commercial . . . Boake Carter will be off the air next week while playing sailor and having fun . . . That demonstration the other day in the Hotel Sherman lobby was merely Batonner Jan Garber whooping and leaping upon Warbler Jackie Heller to welcome him back to town . . . Jack Fulton celebrated his birthday last Sunday, he-man style. With a flock of friends, he went on a picnic and cooked in the open—wieners and toasted marshmallows! . . . Al Pearce's stop in Chi last week revealed his original sin—a matter of being the first person in the United States to own a ukulele

. . . Dave Rose, the pianist-arranger, tripped over a music stand and landed in glorious Gale Page's lap. Blushing, Gale remarked that the suddenness of his approach almost flattened her out . . . Another matter of laps is the argument between CBS Mikeman Tommy Bartlett and WISN Sportcaster Allan Hale. They're settling it by means of a midget auto race at the State Fair Park in Milwaukee . . . A rural touch is brought by a letter from Lulu Belle, who reports that Scotty has just finished fencing their 50-acre North Carolina farm and is starting to paint the barn. Lulu has her chores, too.

If you can't sing, try this: Nancy Joyce Durkin, six-year-old Windy City redhead, earned much applause at a recent amateur talent broadcast by singing while standing on her head. Maybe I've been going at it the wrong way all these years! Upsy-daisy!

Podium Pothooks: Any minute now Eddy Duchin will be a daddy. So his Palmer House contract permits him the necessary time off to fly to New York when the event occurs . . . Paul Whiteman will be returning to the Chi Drake Hotel November 5, with increased pay . . . Bernie Cummins and his musicians have a special technique for making music at the windswept Beach Walk of the Edgewater Beach Hotel. The direction in which they point their horns and fiddles all depends upon the direction of the wind—thus making Cummins a real ork pod! . . . Very danceable are the rhythms of that new band of the Jesse Crawford's at the Congress Hotel. The twin electric organs add zip to the arrangements . . . Phil Spitalny's all-girl band will stage its broadcasts in various cities next season, and the leader expects to make the most of his tour by scouting for added feminine talent. Radio stations will be searched.

Louis Roen, the NBC mikeman, was telling Bess ("Today's Children") Johnson of his work in putting his boat in condition for Lake Michigan, so she promised him a gift of "something for his ice-box." On the next Saturday, after Roen had done much anticipation, the "something" was delivered to his craft. It was nothing wetter than a 25-pound cake of ice!

Dramatically Speaking: Dave Gothard, leading man of "Helen Trent" and "Modern Cinderella," last week received a letter from his mother that had been mailed December 14 in Los Angeles. Across its envelope was stamped: "Damage due to airmail interruption near Salt Lake City, Utah, on December 15, 1936." The interruption, of course, was the crash of the airliner whose wreck was found recently . . . Joan Blaine is readying to do a series of guest turns on the Edgar Guest "It Can Be Done" programs . . . There's talk of bringing Francis X. Bushman back to Chicago to play the "First Nighter" role of the programs so named . . . Incidentally, Barbara Luddy, the ingenue of that show, started out to be a singer, lost her voice in the midst of an operetta, and became an actress instead . . . Joint candid-camera men are Les Tremayne, Bill Bouche and Charles Calvert, all of the "Betty and Bob" cast, who share the same darkroom.

The other day, Henry Saxe, called to take the part of a doctor in "While the City Sleeps," began studying up on the pronunciation of medical terms—for when he was handed his script to read, he learned he was a doctor, all right, but of the veterinarian variety, so the cast gave him the horse laugh!

Above: When Rubinoff left Hollywood for New York recently, chorines who worked with him in "This Year's Kisses," bade him good-by. It was the maestro's first movie

Below: Harriet Hilliard is teamed with Tenor Bill Brady in the new movie, "New Faces of 1937." In private life, Harriet's the wife of renowned Orchestra Leader Ozzie Nelson

Left: Singer Edythe Wright gets a more prominent part on the Friday night cigarette-sponsored show when Jack Pearl goes on vacation. Edythe and the rest of the T. Dorsey gang will carry on by themselves

Right: Rosaline Greene holds the distinction of being Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt's announcer. She will fade from the air when Mrs. Roosevelt takes a summer vacation from radio, beginning July 14

Left: Diminutive Diva Lily Pons is being succeeded on the Wednesday CBS cigarette-sponsored show by Romantic Tenor Frank Parker. Lily's shown here besieged by autograph hunters

Below: On July 8, Hillybilly Wit Bob Burns will be in his glory—for that is the date on which he becomes head man on the Bing Crosby "Music Hall" show, while Bing vacations!

PHIL LORD'S "We, the People" will be back on the air in the early fall in the interests of a coffee concern. The day, time and network have not been set at this writing. A popular show designed for the youngsters also will return to the air in the fall. It's the "Tom Mix Series" and it will be heard over the NBC-Blue network starting September 27.

So much for programs coming back. Here's news about one going off which may surprise many baseball fans. Babe Ruth folds his twice-weekly baseball gossip and interviews on July 9. My personal opinion is that this program was aired too late in the evening.

Bing Crosby is going off the air, but don't be frightened; it will be for only one month, which means merely that Bing is taking his annual vacation. During the crooner's absence, Bob Burns will lead the guests to the microphone in his own inimitable way.

Incidentally, when Jimmy Dorsey and his band leave Crosby's "Music Hall," their place will be taken by a new band under the direction of Johnny Trotter, who formerly played with Hal Kemp's popular music makers.

Here's some more news of other additions to come. When Walter O'Keefe replaces Fred Allen on the "Town Hall" show, his femme stooge will be Alice Frost, who was last heard as the female foil for Stoopnagle & Budd. You may recall she worked with O'Keefe when he was head man of the Caravan Series heard over CBS several seasons ago. And if you're interested in her full name, it's a very long one—Mrs. Alice Dorothy Margaret Frost Foulk.

The "Tune Twisters," a popular male trio, will join the summer series replacing the Jack Benny show, starting July 4, which really will give them a good reason for celebration. The boys were last heard with Ray Noble until he departed for Hollywood and the Burns and Allen show.

Shirley Ross makes her final appearance on the Ken Murray show on June 30, and at the moment the most popular contender to fill this spot is Benay Venuta . . . Jean Sablon, who was imported from France by NBC, is going to be heard regularly on the "Magic Key," starting next month.

Mentioning France reminds me to inform any readers who are contemplating a trip to that country, that they can follow the Burns and Allen scripts while they are across the big pond. The B. & A. programs are being translated into idiomatic French and broadcast by a station in Paris with French artists portraying the parts of the American comics. The program is very popular over there—which may prove that fifty million Frenchmen can't be wrong! Not all the time, anyway!

I'm going to let you folks in on a little secret which the parties concerned even tried to keep from me. The script used by Kate Smith on her broadcasts is typed on a special machine with letters and numerals almost twice the size found on standard makes of typewriters. This is due to the fact that the "Songbird of the South" is quite near-sighted.

The conductor of a popular Sunday afternoon program recently visited a southern city, from which he put on his broadcast. Just before the program went on the air, one of the boys at the radio station asked the visitor how it was possible for him to put on such marvelous human interest programs. In all seriousness he replied, "It's because I have lived so long and suffered so much." Of course it almost floored the local boy, who tried hard to keep a straight face through it all.

If you didn't hear the Marx Bros. when they appeared recently on the "Hollywood Hotel" show in a condensed radio version of their picture, "A Day at the Races," you missed out on many laughs. It was one of the funniest air shows this loudspeaker eavesdropper has ever listened to. So, here's my vote to the sponsor who is interested in these comics for a regular series. They have what it takes to make a successful program.

The night the "Vox Pop" show, with Parks Johnson and Wally Butterworth, goes on the air a large banner telling about the program is placed in the lobby of the hotel or theater or other public place from which the show originates. Two weeks ago the show came from the Hotel New Yorker lobby, and when it was over the boys looked around and noticed the banner had disappeared. Ten minutes later, the house detective found it on the 20th floor, where it apparently had been carried by a playful practical joker!

Did you know that Judy Starr, currently heard with Rudy Vallee, and Patricia Norman, new vocalist with the Eddy Duchin band, are sisters? Incidentally, Judy is leaving Vallee's program very soon—within a few weeks.

Meredith Willson, West Coast maestro, will probably get the job to supply the music for "Show Boat" when the program originates from Hollywood starting July 8. Baritone Thomas L. Thomas and Soprano Nadine Conner will join Charles Winninger, who takes over the program on the same date . . . Exactly one month later to the day, Nelson Eddy will join the "Sunday Night Variety Show," emceed by Don Ameche, which is already overflowing with big-name stars, making it the highest-priced program on the air.

There had been much concern over the condition of Mrs. Lanny Ross for some time. The arrival of the expected stork was late, as I reported here several weeks ago. At last it came. Her baby was born Saturday, June 12, at 1:30 a.m. It was a girl. But it was born dead. That night Lanny sang in Pittsburgh and then hurried back to the hospital in New York City to be with his wife. She is doing nicely and there is no cause for alarm.

In September the airwaves will be graced with the charming voice of Jeanette MacDonald, who has been signed to be the singing star of the "Open House" program's new series. The total radio experience of Miss MacDonald has been limited to infrequent guest appearances. J. L. Rawlinson, the radio director of the program, was successful in persuading Miss MacDonald and her predecessors, Nelson Eddy and Grace Moore, to sing on weekly radio programs of their own, although all three had previously refused to sign for a regular series.

Parkyakarkus and his bride will trek eastward for a four-week vacation in New York and his home town, Boston . . . Kay Thompson turned down a new radio job in order to go on a belated honeymoon with her maestro-hubby, Jack Benny. They will go to Bermuda, an ideal vacation spot, if you should ask me. Too often radio stars are compelled by their work to postpone or sacrifice their honeymoons.

4 Al Donahue plays the violin, conducts, sings and arranges for the orchestra! He married Socialite Fredericka Gallatin, has one son, Albert Donahue, Jr., age 3. Another baby is expected. Al studied law at Boston University, later attended the New England Conservatory of Music. He has had a band ten years, has played six consecutive seasons at the Bermudiana Hotel, Bermuda

Goodman Fills Oakie Spot On CBS

"Pres." Jack Oakie having deserted Ephus Hall of Jack Oakie's College, Swingmaster Benny Goodman will carry on through the summer while the "Pres." asserts his academic right to a long vacation.

The program will be reduced to a half-hour under Goodman's direction, and will continue to be heard over the Columbia network on Tuesday nights. Oakie is expected to return to the program under the same sponsorship after the summer.

Goodman, heralded as the greatest of the hot clarinet swingsters, will lead his men in informal "hot weather" jam sessions on the new series. His own style will mark the nature of the program. Goodman rose to a new pinnacle of popularity on the wave of enthusiasm for swing music, with which he is closely identified. Other personalities will be introduced on the programs, but the shows will be largely musical.

'Richard III' Second In Barrymore Series

The second of a summer series of 45-minute "Streamlined Shakespeare" broadcasts starring John Barrymore will be heard over NBC on Monday, June 28. On the first of the six programs Barrymore presented "Hamlet," and on this second appearance he will present "Richard III."

The programs, in addition to stressing the essential modernity of Shakespeare's works and the contemporary turn of his mind, will be the first performances specifically designed to take advantage of special conditions under which classic drama is broadcast. Barrymore faced two problems in his radio presentations: the extreme length of the plays and the difficulty in creating by auditory illusion the dramatic scenes and situations. To conquer these obstacles, he uses the ancient Greek device of the chorus and narrator. Appropriate musical background for the chorus and dramatic narration will be directed by Will Prior, graduate of the Berlin Conservatory and the Royal Hochschule.

Monday, June 28—NBC
9:30 p.m. EDT (8:30 EST; 7:30 CST)

Dick Powell Guests On 'Hotel'

Dick Powell, former master of ceremonies of "Hollywood Hotel," will return to the program on Friday, June 25, to enact a radio preview of his latest motion picture, "Singing Marines." He will be supported by Hugh Herbert, Lee Dixon, Doris Weston and Anne Jenkins, members of the movie cast. Jerry Cooper, Frances Langford, Anne Jamison and Igor Gorin, with Raymond Paige's orchestra, will be the show's regular stars.

Benny Closes Series For Summer

Jack Benny will appear on the air for his present sponsor exclusively until 1940, but the final program in his present series will be broadcast over NBC on Sunday, June 27. He and Mary Livingstone will take a three-month vacation while the sponsor's air-time is held by a new cast headed by Don Ross and Jane Froman (Mrs. Don Ross).

The summer show will be musical, with Ross, one of radio's outstanding singers, and Jane Froman teaming to produce the greater part of the show. They will be assisted by the "Tune Twisters," a popular new male trio, and D'Artega's orchestra. The first broadcast of the summer series will be on July 4.

Sunday, June 27—NBC
7 p.m. EDT (6 EST; 5 CST)

Frank Parker Takes Over Lily Pons' Spot

Frank Parker, star of stage, screen and radio, will replace Miss Lily Pons on the Wednesday night cigarette-sponsored program featuring the 45-piece orchestra and chorus of Andre Kostelanetz on the broadcast of June 30. Miss Pons will spend the major part of the summer, during which she will be off the air, in making a motion picture.

Parker, one of America's leading romantic tenors, has had a "Horatio Alger" career. As a boy he sold papers on New York's upper West Side, later worked as a roofer before his first opportunity as an entertainer won him a place—as a dancer—in such musical comedies as "No, No, Nanette." Radio gave him his first professional chance as a singer, and he won many engagements because of the fine carrying qualities of his voice on the air.

Wednesday, June 30—CBS
9 p.m. EDT (8 EST; 7 CST)

James Barton Guest Star on 'Bandwagon'

Playing in a radio adaptation of "Burlesque," James Barton, star of the New York stage, will be guest star of Kate Smith's "Bandwagon" over CBS on Thursday, June 24. The play deals with the love of a wife for a trouper who dissipates when he becomes a great success and ultimately winds up a complete failure. Having divorced him when his downfall began, she returns, helps him recover. Barton, who will star in the radio play, is also star of Broadway's perennial hit, "Tobacco Road." Musical portions of the program, in addition to Miss Smith's songs, include selections by the Ambassadors, male trio, and Jack Miller's orchestra. Henny Youngman, comedy discovery on Miss Smith's program, will return in another monolog and comedy violin solo.

DIARY ENTRY—Find myself, due to enthusiastic cooperation of the Lady, Patricia, in possession of the Number One Ticket on the Number One Trans-Pacific Commercial Passenger Flight between the United States and China! The Clipper takes off on April 29 and if all goes well will arrive in Hongkong six days later, and six days after be spilled in the "Big Drink" hundreds of miles from the nearest land.

Or whether it was our take-off from Honolulu while the fleet was in. We taxied down Pearl Harbor, with the giant battleships, destroyers, cruisers and other Navy ships lining our course on either side. The decks were lined with officers and men watching us get as farmyard fowls, who duck and bow and mince and dance by the hour in their ritual marriage dance, squawking and honking and clacking as though their lives depended on it.

Or again was the excitement most intense when we flew into the sunrise at four-thirty one morning between Guam and Manila, when the clouds stood perpendicularly like great alabaster temples and huge marble pillars. And then the sun came up and set them off with flame so that they looked like gigantic pillars of fire against the deep blue of the ocean more than two miles below us.

OR WOULD it be Guam, that most peaceful, most serene of Pacific Islands with its twenty thousand native Chamorros, who know nothing of strife or competition or any of the other hectic complications of modern civilization. Clothes are a simple and minor irritation, and for food there is a profusion of breadfruit trees, coconut palms and other tropical plant life. The men are friendly and the girls are beautiful and life is one long lazy procession of uneventful days.

Or perhaps that thrilling moment was when we flew over the multitude of islands in the vicinity of Macao, the Portuguese free port on the China Sea, where Chinese junks rode by the hundreds. Macao, as many of you may bed later than four a.m. and often it was as early as two-thirty in the morning. We were always in the air by daybreak, and quite often we saw the first crack of dawn from our reserved seats twelve thousand or more feet high in the air. This early starting was for a definite reason. It allowed the maximum number of daylight hours to reach our next destination. Not that all this time was necessary, for we nearly always arrived at the next island early in the afternoon, but there is an edge of safety in daylight flying.

And now just a word about radio. All the way across the Pacific (and I say this with a certain smirk of satisfaction) Hongkong was the only place I came upon where there wasn't someone who knew about One Man's Family. And I still think if I hadn't been limited to fourteen hours there I'd have found someone.

Honolulu is in rather a difficult spot in the radio world. She is just close enough to the mainland to get a taste of our network programs and still too far away for sustained communication.

In Manila I found that most of the program department were Americans but the plant department consisted primarily of native Philippine boys. There they talked enthusiastically about sponsored programs, but these were entirely of a musical nature. It was all the same in Honolulu, Manila and Hongkong. Radio drama was something they dreamed about, but they didn't know how they could start it.

They were all tremendously interested in the spoken word and saw its tremendous potentialities, but it was such a new field and everyone was so untrained in presenting it (I'm speaking of the spoken word in its dramatic form, of course) that they all seemed a little reluctant to tackle it. Although one station manager in Honolulu announced that if he could obtain the story of One Man's Family from the beginning he thought he'd like to tackle it with local talent.

In Hongkong the British station is under the guidance of the postmaster general. Here, too, the plant men seemed made up entirely of native Chinese boys. They appeared to have a keen grasp of the mechanics of radio and handled their equipment with ease.

ON THE program side, however, I had a feeling that Hongkong was the farthest behind in what went to make up a good program. Their attitude and approach reminded me very much of our own stations some ten years ago. A great deal of their entertainment is complimentary. The "won't you come up and play and sing for us tonight" sort of thing.

And now—a word about why I took this strange trip across the Pacific. It is the first vacation I've had for four years, and what with one thing and another it appeared that it might be four years more before I got one.

Patricia, the lady down at Seven Stones, who by the way is also my wife, knew I needed a vacation. And likewise she knew it was going to take dynamite to blast me out of five years of my script-writing routine. And so, as women will, she set about to find a way. She found it by dangling the number-one ticket on the number-one United States-China flight before my eyes. And as you know—it worked!

One Man's Family may be heard every Wednesday over an NBC network at:

EDT 8:00 p.m. — EST 7:00 p.m.
 CDT 7:00 p.m. — CST 6:00 p.m.
 MST 5:00 p.m. — PST 4:00 p.m.

FLYING the PACIFIC

A NEVER-TO-BE-FORGOTTEN FLIGHT TO CHINA WAS THIS RADIO WRITER'S VACATION!

BY CARLTON E. MORSE

 Right: The ½-ton of mail it carried that I'll be back in San Francisco! Twelve days to China and back! It'll not only be the fastest round trip ever made across the Pacific but will be SOMETHING if we bring it off.

AND twelve days later I WAS back in San Francisco, and to say that the trip was SOMETHING is about like describing the Pacific Ocean as a "large body of water surrounded by land."

Over and over I've been asked what was the most thrilling experience on the trip, and I'm still trying to make up my mind whether it was the disappearance of the Pacific Coast-line on the horizon, knowing that for the next twenty hours those motors up front had to function perfectly, or we'd all into the air, giving the performance an air of spectacular significance that gave everyone a deep inner quiver.

Or was that big thrill our first sight of Midway, looking like a postage stamp afloat more than a thousand miles from the next dot of land. There it was, so small you could nearly run around its shore-line in half an hour, surrounded by water the deepest turquoise blue you ever saw, washing on sand so white it dazzled your eyes.

Or was it the Goonies, those silly birds that looked much like seagulls, if seagulls were as big as turkeys. Those strange Goonies who come down from the Aleutian Islands every spring to hatch their young and then fly back north with the new generation in the fall. Those great, gawky birds as tame know, lies only forty-five minutes by air from Hongkong, and is known throughout the East as the hangout of most of the famous Chinese pirates now in existence. We passed directly over a small island off the coast known today as Pirates' Cove. Macao itself is known throughout the East as the great wide-open city. It consists to a large extent of gambling palaces, numerous opium dens and sing-song girls.

Each one of these incidents was thrilling and exciting, yes, and yet I wouldn't give the laurel to any one of them. Each was a part of the whole!

Each night, Captain Dahlstrom, our commander on the entire round trip, with the exception of from Manila to Hongkong, set the hour for the take-off next morning. Never were we out of

of the MASTERS

THEY say that John McCormack has gone . . . that he will sing no more among us. If that be true, the most sincerely beloved tenor living is lost to us. There is no other to take his place.

Mr. McCormack was for years the most popular and therefore the highest-priced recitalist in the world. In his heyday, more money was paid annually to hear him sing than to hear any other singer. The reason was not alone that his art was superb, but that he was the first of all story-tellers in song. Whether it was Mozart or the Irish tune from the County Derry, listeners always understood exactly what he was singing about.

Some snobs complained that he sang down to his audience—that he featured too many Irish ditties. It is true that he always sang the songs of his native land and that he was particularly generous with Irish encores. But they were very popular with his listeners, who, after all, were paying to hear him sing.

It should be remembered, too, that he never sang a concert without including in it the masterpieces of song literature from Bach to Wolf. And it should be remembered, also, that no other singer of the generation was a more accomplished master of the art of fine singing than John McCormack.

His sense of style, his diction, his feeling for the correct inflection, and, above all, his ability to translate the meaning of music into a language that all could understand . . . all these made him unique among tenors. And, with all his skill, John McCormack had a charm and sincerity that are rare. He was always simple, unaffected and modest.

The famous story of his meeting with Enrico Caruso in the Copley-Plaza is worth repeating. The great Italian was coming across the lobby from the elevator when he saw McCormack in front of the cigar stand. "And how's the world's greatest tenor this morning?" the Irishman inquired.

"Since when have you become a baritone, John?" was Caruso's quick reply.

Whether Count McCormack (as he is known in Ireland) returns to his Irish home or whether he makes another film, as is rumored in Hollywood, the good wishes of millions of music-lovers around the world go with him . . . and for his friend and fellow countryman, Robert Irwin, we all wish a success as great as that of John McCormack.

One of the most grateful of all Mr. McCormack's acts was his kindness in bringing this young Dublin man to try his luck in America, as so many of his fellow Irishmen have done before him.

On the occasion of young Irwin's first American broadcast, he gave evidence of a pleasing voice of fresh and sympathetic quality. It will be interesting to hear him sing Mozart, Schubert, Wolf and the French chansons. If he learns to negotiate them as well as his musical godfather, the bright light of the Emerald Isle will not go out for a good long while.

It is unfortunate that when announcement was made of John McCormack's retirement, he was quoted as lashing out against radio. Knowing this great artist as I do, I am confident that he was not letting out a blast against radio as such, or against the institution. He deploras, as we all do, certain paradoxes and inconsistencies on the radio as we know it, and he wants to see it improve the quality of its output and its presentation.

Radio was very kind to John McCormack in this country—as it should have been—and I have heard him express high regard for it. He knew it was improving but he was impatient and wanted it all to come at once.

BY CARLETON
SMITH

IT WAS strange to hear the ranking tenor of the Metropolitan, himself a Dane, singing in Danish Vesti la giubba, Canio's air from the Italian "Pagliacci," to an American audience. Something of an international complication, I should say!

When someone asked Conductor Eugene Ormandy what could be done to improve radio, he replied quickly, "Cut the commercial announcements to a minimum by only mentioning the name of the sponsor in a very dignified manner."

"There is too much talk," he went on to say, "any kind of talk, be it regular commercial announcements or so-called good-will messages, interrupting music on the air today. Countless letters I receive prove it. Too many speakers are thrown in for good measure and the music becomes mere bait for the speaker."

In discussing television prospects, Mr. Ormandy said he believed it would be harmful to some and helpful to others.

"Within the range of the television camera, showmanship in a sincere manner will be necessary," he said. "Sham artistry will be eliminated. There will be no musical fakirs in television. No conductor can merely beat time with a pencil. Millions will be watching him. In a concert hall, possibly 200 actually see him; the others see only his back. On the radio no one sees him. Television will be so revealing."

It is gratifying to note that there are still a few of our great artists today who have not succumbed to the current mania of endorsing every throat spray, gargle, and medicine that is produced; or to giving personal viewpoints on every subject from "How to Dance the Rhumba in Six Easy Lessons" to "Removing Onion Stains from the Hands in a New and Different Manner."

Arturo Toscanini is perhaps the most complete personification of a great contemporary artist who has gained his recognition through intrinsic worth rather than through such acquired means—such as bizarre publicity. He never makes ridiculously startling statements to the press, nor does he visit zoos (at least while cameramen are around), give out cooking recipes, employ color-organs, or indulge in other forms of ballyhoo and extravagant publicity stunts practised by lesser men than the great Toscanini.

Another good example is Kirsten Flagstad. She absolutely refuses to see either the press or the public. This is no pose. She is not trying to create an atmosphere of mystery. Mme. Flagstad just doesn't understand why anyone should want to see her. Off-stage she is a shy, retiring person who, once she is before an audience, becomes a magnetic personality who gives her "all" to her listeners.

She has not become a social butterfly, as have many of her fellow artists. While she was in Cincinnati for the May Festival, she alone of all the artists participating accepted no invitations to the famed Cincinnati homes. Not even Alice Roosevelt Longworth was able to entice her out. While others were wining and dining, Mme. Flagstad could have been found at the near-by theater, enjoying her favorite pastime to the utmost. Neither has our Flagstad been involved in fifty divorce suits, to attract attention. She does not need that kind of publicity. She has become the Met's greatest drawing-card without it!

That every artist has a soul and that every soul has its own medium of expression are not new ideas. But we feel that this medium of expression is too fast becoming far removed from the soul and too subject to extraneous influences nowadays to be really valuable to music-lovers. We feel that there are two kinds of showmanship practised today, which we have labeled legitimate and illegitimate. The former kind is used by artists like Toscanini and Flagstad; the latter by small-time press-agents for pseudo-artists.

The public is the judge. And I'll back the public taste every time!

younger crowd. He played at a large and popular hotel grill, and appeared on a Coast-to-Coast sponsored program.

In time he married a beautiful young singer and they settled down in ideal domestic bliss. They both had their careers, and his surpassed hers in prominence, giving him the masculine superiority which many deem necessary in a happy marriage.

DUE to the fame of this pair, both attracted the attention of movie men and they were given screen tests. The girl passed. John did not. His nose took on ugly, abnormal proportions before the magnifying eye of the camera.

He urged his wife to accept the flattering Hollywood offer, which she did with amazing success. Her movie appearance quadrupled her worth as a radio singer, and her new glory made her husband's success seem modest by comparison.

But she could not bear to be separated from him and she returned to New York. Soon the whispers began: "John Q. is jealous of his wife's success" . . . "She's sacrificing her career for him . . ." John's independence was being lowered, his married life endangered by the turn that events had taken.

Recently his wife was called back to make another film. If she refused this offer in order to stay with him, she might throw up that sacrifice to him some later day. If she did go out there alone, what might happen? A three-thousand-mile separation, plus an overwhelming balance of success on her side, did not promise much for their future happiness.

But if they both went out together, if they both pursued a Hollywood film and radio career together, then their problem would be solved. He turned to plastic surgery!

HIS nose was rebuilt quickly and safely, and is even better formed than it was previous to the time it was broken. Since his other features were photographically good, he passed a screen test. As a result, a motion-picture company signed him up, and sometime in the summer he and his wife will be in Hollywood—together! "Does a plastic operation on the nose affect the voice?" That harrowing possibility kept one singer from knowing the sweet joys of fame when opportunity first knocked. A motion-picture company was looking for a young girl to play the lead in a film which concerned the life-story of a famous singer.

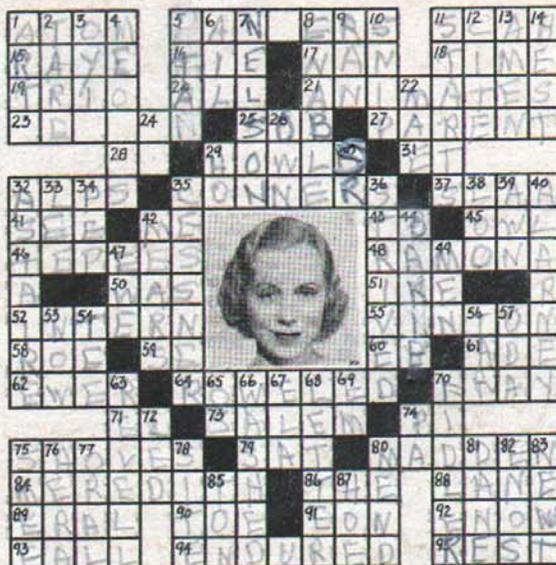

Miss X was tested for the part. She passed the voice requirements easily but failed in the screen test. Her nose robbed her of any feminine or romantic possibilities. Another girl was given the lead, while Miss X did the singing for her. The other girl, as a result of this film, achieved nationwide renown and today is a famous movie celebrity. Miss X, however, whose voice was in a great measure responsible for her success, was left in the background, unknown.

"I'll go into radio instead," she explained, "where a banded-up nose doesn't matter."

But it did matter, after a while. Radio fans wanted to see as well as hear their favorites—see them on the stage, in the movies. A movie company offered her a contract if she would have her nose reconstructed. A radio sponsor would consider her if she had a Hollywood background.

In desperation, she consulted a plastic surgeon and was assured that in no way would her voice be affected.

Today Miss X has a piquant, delicate nose which harmonizes with her other finely chiseled features. A recent screen test proved satisfactory and she is now in Hollywood co-starring with a famous male singer on one of radio's outstanding programs.

Then there was the case of a young violinist who asked the surgeon to "pin back" his protruding ears. The young man was genuinely distraught as he told his story. "In pictures taken of the band in the radio studios or for motion-picture 'shorts,' my ears stand out like donkeys' ears. In order not to make the band look ridiculous, I'm shoved in the background when we're before a camera. Since the life-blood of a radio artist is publicity, this isn't doing me much good. Besides, I'm made the butt of jokes by the other boys, and it's gotten so that I imagine everyone in the studio audience looks at my ears and laughs at them."

NOR was the young man exaggerating the tragedy of his situation. The huge, fanlike appearance of his ears distorted his face and gave an idiotic cast to his expression. The fear of his fellows' derisions was beginning to deaden his personality, fill him with an inferiority complex which might in time develop into a serious neurosis. Fortunately, however, his was a common trouble and one that plastic surgery could easily remedy.

Several male actors now in Hollywood have undergone the same type of operation with satisfactory physical and financial results.

Thus the parade of radio artists who find a facial abnormality holding them back is slowly coming to the plastic surgeon for help. And not all of plastic surgery's miracles are confined to nasal reconstruction, either. An aging actress with years of Hollywood and Broadway experience behind her must join the competition of younger, prettier actresses. She asks the plastic surgeon to smooth out the wrinkles around her eyes and cheeks. Some come with unlovely mouths, some with facial scars, some with port-wine birthmark blemishes. All of them must obey the new edict of beauty in broadcasting.

At one time they might have been doomed to live with their faces as they are, and let their more fortunate brothers and sisters gather the fruit. Today, they ask science to help them obtain a new grip on a radio career.

To these people in radio, plastic surgery is a salvation and a new hope!

ship companies, begging to get back to their homes. When Mrs. Dickenson tried to book passage for herself and Jean, she was refused.

So she pleaded with the consul to find some way for her to get back to America with her daughter. When her pleading failed, she broke down and wept. Finally he said:

"The only passage I can book for you is on a small cattle-boat, with accommodations for a dozen passengers. However, I certainly wouldn't advise it, for the boat is hardly seaworthy, particularly now during the monsoon season."

It didn't take Mrs. Dickenson long to make up her mind. To remain in India meant certain death for Jean. Any chance was worth taking!

A few days out at sea a monsoon sprang up and huge waves pounded the tiny boat. In that storm-whipped sea, it tossed about like a bit of cork. Unable to cope with the smashing waves, the captain stopped the motors, and for a week the boat drifted wherever the storm carried it along the Indian Ocean.

On board, confusion and terror reigned. The dozen passengers huddled in their cabins, covering at each fresh onslaught of the waves. The captain forbade anyone's going on deck; one woman who disobeyed his orders was washed overboard.

After that, no one dared go above deck.

To little Jean the whole voyage was a hideous fantasy. Normally she would have run to her mother for reassurance, but Mrs. Dickenson was too ill during the entire trip to leave her cabin.

So it was the child who, hiding her own fears, tried to comfort the ill woman.

"The water's much smoother today, Mummy," she lied, day after day, while the pounding, shattering sea beat up against the cabins, so close she felt it would break in on them any minute, and sweep her away, as it had the woman.

Over a week late, the boat limped into port at Durban, South Africa.

TILL Jean was fifteen, the family traveled about constantly. Then they settled in Denver, where Mrs. Florence Hinman, who was connected with the Lamont School of Music, discovered that Jean had a promising voice and encouraged her to cultivate it seriously.

After she had started taking lessons, her father was transferred to New York. But Jean had made up her mind to remain in Denver.

"I'm tired of being a gypsy," she said. "I've started studying here with Mrs. Hinman and I intend to finish here."

"Don't be silly, child," her father said. "There are other teachers in New York."

"Sorry," Jean replied. "Here I stay." And all alone, she stayed in Denver till she came east to pursue her radio career.

To other girls who are anxious to get ahead with their chosen work, Jean says frankly:

"Don't be one of those people who turn their noses up at offers to help. The Horatio Algers notwithstanding, a helping hand is always a very good thing.

"Of course all the pull in the world will not help you unless you can produce when you get the opportunity; but sometimes it's much easier to get the opportunity through a good contact than to stumble along by yourself for years without getting anywhere."

Jean Dickenson may be heard Sundays on American Album of Familiar Music over an NBC network at:

EDT 9:30 p.m. — EST 8:30 p.m.
 CDT 8:30 p.m. — CST 7:30 p.m.

VOICE OF THE LISTENER

The "Voice of the Listener" letter-forum is a regular feature in Radio Guide each week, offered to the readers as a means for expressing and exchanging opinions about radio.

Radio Guide will pay $10 for the best letter published each week and $5 for the next best. Other letters deserving our readers' attention also will be published.

MOTHER-IN-LAW ($10 Prize Letter)

Voice of the Listener: A short time ago some one sang one of the most obnoxious "mother-in-law" songs that I have ever heard and recently a nationally famous star littered up the air for several minutes with supposed-to-be-funny "mother-in-law" jokes.

Now, most people regard Mother with respect and love bordering closely on reverence and would resent anything tending to ridicule her. And here is a peculiar coincidence—every mother-in-law I have ever known has been somebody's mother. In view of this fact, can't we dispense with such crude humor as the all-too-prevalent mother-in-law songs and jokes?—F. Phillips, Denver, Colorado.

MOUNTAIN TO MAHOMET ($5 Prize Letter)

*The world's an open portal,
Art's angels thru it go
Wing-fraught with modern culture
In ardent overflow.
The mountain to Mahomet
Is brought by radio.*

*The opera and lecture,
The tragedy of tears;
The comedy of laughter,
On listening starveling ears
Descend like living breathing
Adown New Era's years.*

*Like birds by heaven swallowed,
The things that do not count
Fly into Nothing's chasm,
And broken heart's blood fount
Is healed awhile, beholding

*To invalid bedridden,
To gathered family,
To isolated stranger,
O'er mountain, plain and sea,
The radio brings blessings Beyond all boons that be.*

—Alta Wrenwick Brown, Waterloo, Ia.

OPERA SUFFERER

Voice of the Listener: Why can't all Grand Opera be the sort dispensed by Jimmy Dorsey and the swingers on the "Music Hall"? Whenever I hear Bing introduce an "artist," I feel that he must be preparing to suffer along with most of us for the sake of a few so-called highbrows.

I must admit that I can't understand how anybody can enjoy the other kind—and I can't find anybody who does!—Eileen Eby, Mahto, S. Dak.

ENGLISH ANNOUNCERS

I
VOL: One hundred percent do I endorse the statement of Clarence Stonaker in the June 12 RADIO GUIDE—that our American announcers suffer lamentably when compared to the English in diction and enunciation.

Any high-school pupil, daily, can find laughable error in pronunciation and choice of words on our programs.—M. C. Bancroft, Boston, Mass.

II

VOL: When and if we crown a king, I am sure these announcers will rise to the occasion. They may speak with a Harvard or Georgia Tech accent, but the program will be put across with dignity and "beautiful diction." Our finer programs attest to that fact.

Our U. S. announcers prove their versatility by being able to clown a little when occasion demands.—Margaret E. Witham, Philadelphia, Pa.

REVERSE CAREER

BY ARTHUR MILLER

FROM an NBC network to a local station is the story of the rise of Ethel Shepard. She slammed into reverse the wheels of tradition and as a result is getting ahead very nicely. So well that she is getting back on a network by staying right where she is.

Sounds somewhat like Gertrude Stein, eh? Well, it's so, and there may be something to that Gertrude Stein style after all; for that's the best way of explaining the good fortune of Ethel Shepard.

She had a head start on a career, and the only thing that has overtaken her is success. At the age of three weeks she first went "on the road"—was bundled up and taken along wherever her father had a vaudeville engagement. So intimate has she been with the stage that her baby steps had a certain amount of rhythm—just a sample of what was to come.

this new act, something else loomed up before her. She looked across the street. On the other side of Times Square, Ed Sullivan's Dawn Patrol was beckoning to her.

Sullivan is a New York columnist who has invaded the theater, and you can trust a columnist to find the hitherto unknown. While Ethel danced in The Dawn Patrol, Sullivan discovered that Ethel could sing blues as well as anyone could hope to.

That marked the finis to her vaudeville ambitions. They were now for the radio. When Sullivan made that singing discovery it didn't do him much good. Ethel was gazing towards Radio City. Her ultimate ambition might be realized yet.

Only a couple of months after she found that she could sing, she actually accomplished what countless numbers of others had been striving for for

Ethel Shepard: She reversed the usual procedure by going from network to local station instead of from local station to network!

That rhythm was later expressed in her dancing—dancing that earned for her a good living and kept her off the list of hard-luck notables. She's never known hard luck and is none the worse for it. All the talk she hears about that College of Hard Knocks is just so much idle talk to her.

For a while her folks settled down in New Rochelle, N. Y. That was the hardest part of her young life. For shortly before, in Boston, she had made her first public appearance at a benefit show. She was six years old then, and that first taste of the stage only served as an entree. Her father wanted her to go on the stage and was keen enough to allow her to leave Trinity School in New Rochelle and enter the Professional Children's School in New York City.

No thought of radio as a career ever presented itself. Why should it have? She was a dancer, and dancing was not for a radio audience. Besides, Ethel didn't think of singing. If she could sing well enough she would have tried to get on the radio, for her ultimate ambition was to somehow reach the same audience as Lazy Dan of radio fame.

With the Larry Rich Revue in 1935, Ethel felt that she was only marking time. That was the beginning of her professional work, yet she thought herself capable of heading her own troupe and set out to form it.

There were six youngsters in the act which was billed at the Paramount Theater as Ethel Shepard & Co. She began at the pinnacle of the vaudeville world. When she was going along in years. As she had started in vaudeville at the top, so did she start in radio. She made her singing debut as a star on the Pageant of Youth on NBC. But she didn't feel that it was the top.

In radio, Ethel's desire to reach the same audience as Lazy Dan received a setback. He had not been on the air for about a year, and after she was on a while there was still no indication of his return.

HER life had been marked with changes, and all for the best, too. So it was when she gave up her work on the Pageant of Youth to go to WHN—a local New York station. Quitting a network show to become associated with a local station is something that seldom has been done. In her case it served as a benefit—monetarily.

On WHN she was not on one program, but on three. True, they were all local and she might be missing the opportunities that a widespread audience presents. But Ethel went into radio in the hope that her ambition would crystallize.

Then her luck became most evident. For the first time, WHN was to "feed" a program to WOR. Ethel was appearing on Swing, Symphony, Swing, the Cocktail Lounge, and the Broadway Melody Hour. It was this program, the Broadway Melody Hour, that was to be "fed" to WOR.

It would mean more money to this gal who was so good at singing the blues. Of greater happiness to her was the realization of her ambition. Then she would be able to sing on the same station as Lazy Dan—her uncle.

Time given is EDT; for EST subtract one hour. Short-wave programs of American stations are shown along with the regular listings beginning on page 29. These are indicated, for example, by (sw-11.87) in parentheses following a program listing. This means that on 11.87 megacycles the same program may also be heard over an American short-wave station. Please note that foreign stations do not always adhere precisely to their announced program schedules.

SHORT WAVES

BY CHAS. A. MORRISON, president, INTERNATIONAL DX-ER'S ALLIANCE

(Figures in Parentheses Are Megacycles)

COGF (11.79), a new short-wave station located in Matanzas, Cuba, that made its initial appearance during the latter part of May, is being heard with fine volume in all parts of the United States. The address of this station, which relays broadcast transmitter CMGF, is Calle General Betancourt 51, Matanzas, Cuba. Announcements are made in both Spanish and English. A regular broadcasting schedule will probably be put into effect shortly. A mechanical screech-owl. It is said that centuries ago the little screech-owls perched on the ledges of the Colosseum and announced the midnight hour to wakeful Romans.

Scoop!! "Radio Manila," the new short-wave relay station of KZRM and KZEG, Manila, Philippine Islands, will be officially inaugurated on Thursday, July 1. Broadcasts will be carried out daily on frequencies of 11.84 and 6.14 megs. The schedule will probably run from 10 p.m. to 10 a.m. EDT (9 p.m. to 9 a.m. EST) . . . At the time this goes to press, tests are being conducted on 11.84 megs. Signal strength is excellent after 5 a.m. EDT (4 a.m. EST).

R. B. Oxrieder of State College, Penn., reports that PJCI, Radio Curum of Curacao, Dutch West Indies, broadcasts daily from 7:36 to 9:36 p.m. EDT (6:36 to 8:36 p.m. EST). The regular frequency of the station is 5.947 megs but irregularly tests are being conducted from 6 to 7 p.m. EDT (5 to 6 p.m. EST), on a new frequency of 9.473 megs.

XEWX has been positively identified as the call of the new short-wave transmitter relaying the powerful Mexico City broadcast station, XEW, nightly on a frequency of 9.502 megs. Sometimes the broadcast call only is given, and this has prompted several of our readers to believe this might be the short-wave call.

Several readers report excellent reception of the Solar Eclipse Expedition's broadcast from Canton Island, on June 8, over WMEF on 17.31 megs.

C. E. Clark, of Philadelphia, writes that he heard RNE of Moscow, U. S. S. R., relaying a broadcast from the Russian Polar Expedition. The new frequency of RNE, according to a communication from Moscow, is 12.065 megs. Mr. Clark is also hearing a Soviet station on an announced frequency of 14.59 megs. The latter's call letters are given as RAEN.

A short-wave transmitter is being installed in the Komsomolskaya station of the Moscow, U. S. S. R., Kaganovitch Underground Railway. Passengers will be notified by radio of the departure of trains. All tunnels of the subway eventually will be connected by radio.

W10XGY (12.863), aboard the yacht Iorano, has been granted permission to transmit programs under the sponsorship of the Smithsonian Institution for relay over Broadcast Station WSUN of St. Petersburg, Fla. This ship transmitter was heard recently at about 6 p.m. EDT (5 p.m. EST), while broadcasting from the vicinity of Jamaica.

A letter from G. P. Burdett of Monze, Northern Rhodesia, Africa, states that the new short-wave station ZNB (5.9) of Mafeking, Bechuanaland, South Africa, is operating almost daily except Sundays from 2 p.m. to 3:30 or 4 p.m. EDT (1 p.m. to 2:30 or 3 p.m. EST).

West Australian Wireless News contains a statement to the effect that a national short-wave station similar in character to VK3LR of Melbourne will soon be under construction near Perth, West Australia. VK6ME (9.59), owned and operated by Almagamated Wireless, Ltd., was opened in this same city this spring.

YDB of Soerabaya, Java, is now operating on a new frequency of 9.55 megs. The old transmitter, which formerly transmitted on 9.66 megs, has been replaced by a more powerful one.

The Chicago Short Wave Radio Club's recent bulletin contained the following very interesting item:

"It was announced during the news broadcasts from Germany on April 9 that through a loudspeaker in Geneva, Switzerland, there was overheard a statement to the effect that 'Italian prisoners the Bolsheviks had taken' were going to tell how they liked the Bolshevik regime, the broadcast apparently having been made from a building housing the Communist radio station. The voices of the Italians, 'who had learned by heart their pieces,' were heard all right, it was said, but finally in the background there was distinctly heard a voice saying, 'I am only a plain volunteer from Sicily, and I can only say what we have been forced to say at the point of a gun is untrue.' There followed 'two shots and a scuffle. The voice was silenced and the broadcast terminated at that point.' . . . The Chicago Short Wave Radio club also announces that the Italian broadcasts are now being introduced by a unique signal consisting of a mechanical screech-owl.

For those who have never heard an Egyptian short-wave station, I suggest you tune for SUI5G, Alexandria, Egypt, on Friday, June 25, at 8 to 8:30 p.m. EDT (7 to 7:30 p.m. EST). A frequency of approximately 14 megs will be used for this special broadcast, which is being sponsored by the International DX-ers Alliance. The program will start with a series of chimes and a clock striking 2 a.m. Egypt time. Reports should be sent to Frank H. Pettit, c/o Mustapha Barracks, Alexandria, Egypt.

UNKNOWN, UNHERALDED, SHE MADE HER "MET" DEBUT, BECAME A SENSATION—OVERNIGHT!

1 At the age of 3, Lily Pons little thought that she would one day become a world-famous prima donna. Born in Cannes, gay city of flowers on the French Riviera, she was the daughter of Franco-Italian parents

2 Like many another opera singer, Lily began her musical career as a pianist, but fell ill and her doctor advised letting music alone for 2 years. Too active a person to remain idle for long, she took up acting, and when only 15 walked into the office of Max Dearly, famous Parisian producer—talked herself into an ingenue role in his new show

3 Lily (center) and Sisters Juliette and Christiana, both of whom are now in France. Living within a stone's throw of the azure Mediterranean, little Lily as a child learned to love the water and the delights of swimming. Their father, who's now dead, was an automobile engineer, used to stage-dare-devil stunts to test the endurance of his products—once drove a car from Paris to Peking. Their mother, Mme. Maria Pons, still lives in Cannes

4 It was in "Lakme" that Miss Pons made her operatic debut, in the tiny opera house in Muelhausen, Alsace, long before she ever dreamed of singing in America. A scene from this opera also formed an important part of her first picture—"I Dream Too Much"

5 Miss Pons made her South American debut in Buenos Aires, as the mad "Lucia" in Donizetti's "Lucia di Lammermoor." She's posed here with some of the lilies that crowded her dressing-room after the performance. Her South American public is enormous

6 Lily Pons took up singing merely as a pastime, had never had a vocal lesson until she was 21. Five years later she took the Metropolitan by storm in her debut as "Lucia." The reproduction (right) of a newspaper clipping tells the story of that great event

Tumultuous applause and cheering were evidences of the pleasure of the audience when Lily Pons, the young French coloratura soprano, made her American operatic debut in Donizetti's "Lucia di Lammermoor" yesterday afternoon in the Metropolitan Opera House.

7 Two years ago as part of the program at the Metropolitan Surprise Party, the 104-pound, five-foot-two diminutive diva and Wagnerian Tenor Lauritz Melchior did an Apache dance—brought down the fousel

14 Lily Pons, star of the concert, opera and radio worlds, met with equal success in the movies. She's shown here with Jack Oakie in a scene from RKO Radio's recent hilarious hit, "That Girl From Paris"

8 It was in Cannes, back in 1925, that Lily met and married Augusta Mesritz, wealthy Dutch lawyer. He was years older than Lily, but that did not matter, they were in love. Ironically enough, Mesritz, who later became divorced from his wife through her brilliant success, started Lily on her singing career

9 Jean Mesritz, son of Augusta Mesritz by a former marriage and step-son of Lily Pons. Although divorced, Augusta and Lily are very dear friends, such dear friends that when Lily vacationed in Europe she saw Augusta and his new wife, and it was a pleasant reunion. They admire her as a great artist

To Lily Pons

I bow low in admiration of a great singer.

George Gershwin

10 A page from the autograph book of Lily Pons. This collection is probably one of the most famous in the world. It contains tributes to Miss Pons from Paderewski, Mary Pickford, Heifetz, Lotte Lehmann, Helen Hayes, and the King of Siam! George Gershwin's tribute is reproduced here

Lily Pons

15 Lilypons, Maryland, may consist of just a few families, but it contains the largest water-lily cultivation business in the country. The town's name was changed two years ago, when Lily gave her consent. Last year, she was an honored guest and a beloved friend of all the townspeople, was officially greeted by Postmaster-Mayor C. C. Thomas

LILY PONS, sensational 30-year-old coloratura soprano of opera, screen and radio fame, was born at Cannes, on the French Riviera, of well-to-do Franco-Italian parents.

Like many another opera singer, Lily began her musical career as a pianist, and when she was graduated from the famous Conservatoire in Paris with a first prize at the age of 13, she decided to make piano her career.

But then she fell ill and her doctor advised letting music alone for two years. Too active a person to remain idle for so long a period, Lily took up acting while waiting to go on with music. She obtained a position with a Paris company and remained two years with them playing ingenue roles.

At the end of that time she went back to Cannes with the intention of resuming her piano studies. But there she met Augustus Mesritz, a wealthy Dutch lawyer, whom she married. It seemed for the moment that all ideas of a career were definitely shelved. Then one day, her husband, who had at one time been a music critic, heard his wife sing a few songs. He had heard many famous voices and he declared that she had great possibilities—she should study.

Lily thought it would be nice to have another hobby, so together they went to see the celebrated Parisian singing-teacher, Albert di Gorostiaga, who cried out when he heard her sing: "Hobby? Impossible, it must be your life vocation." Ironically enough, Mesritz, who later became divorced from his wife through her brilliant success, started Lily on her singing career.

After three years of hard study, Lily made her operatic debut at Muelhausen, in Alsace. The opera was "Lakme." Engagements in France and Italy followed, always at minor opera houses. Thus, when she was recommended to Director Gatti-Casazza for New York's Metropolitan she was almost unknown in the world's great opera centers. Gatti gave her a five-year contract, and Pons made her Metropolitan debut on the memorable night of January 3, 1931, as Lucia in Donizetti's opera, "Lucia di Lammermoor." It was one of the most sensational events in American operatic history. The audience gasped as she sang flawless high E's and F's and the applause and critical comment told the world that another great star of opera had been found.

11 Lily Pons, greatest of coloratura sopranos and darling of the Metropolitan Opera, as a night-club singer! This is a scene from Miss Pons' debut film, RKO's "I Dream Too Much," in which she sang, and danced as well

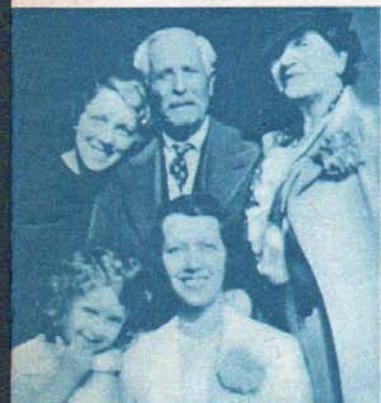

12 Miss Pons returned last year to sing at the Monte Carlo Opera, on the sunny Cap d'Antibes, just a few miles from her birthplace. Dressed in her favorite attire—flannel slacks and a tailored blouse, Miss Pons again enjoyed the radiant sunshine, the wealth of flowers and the brilliant blue waters she had known as a child

13 Last winter, Miss Pons scored a new triumph, in a new field. Playing the role of the "Princess" in Rimsky-Korsakoff's opera "Le Coq d'Or," at the Metropolitan, she sang her familiar coloratura marvels and likewise did a fantastic dance, for which she had studied with Michael Fokine, great leader of the old Russian Ballet

-Wide World

16 Four generations of the Pons family gather for a reunion with the now famous prima donna. The white-haired gentleman is her grandfather. Also shown are her mother, her sister and her little niece, who has her arm around Lily

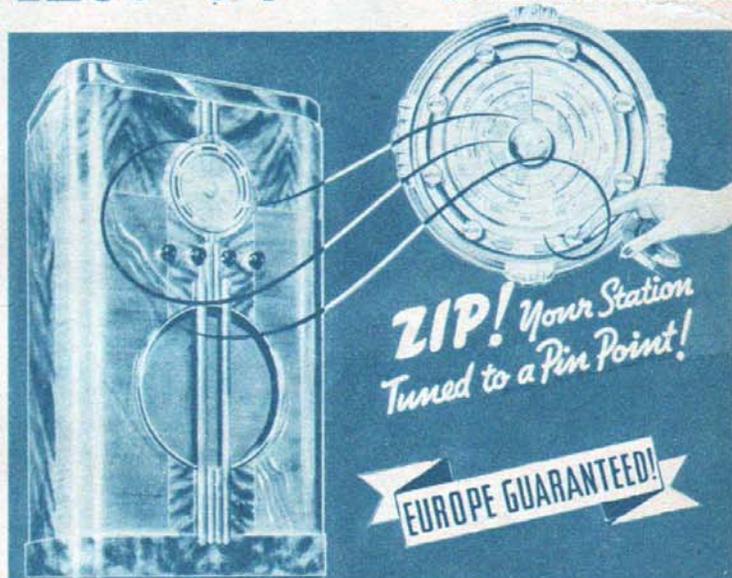

17 When not on tour, the 30-year-old diva divides her time between her country home in tranquil Silvermine, Conn., and a lovely apartment in Manhattan's 57th Street

18 Lily practices every morning for her CBS Wednesday night cigarette-sponsored show, often with Andre Kostelanetz, conductor of the program—and her fiance. Rumor has it they're married

Radio Guide TOURS

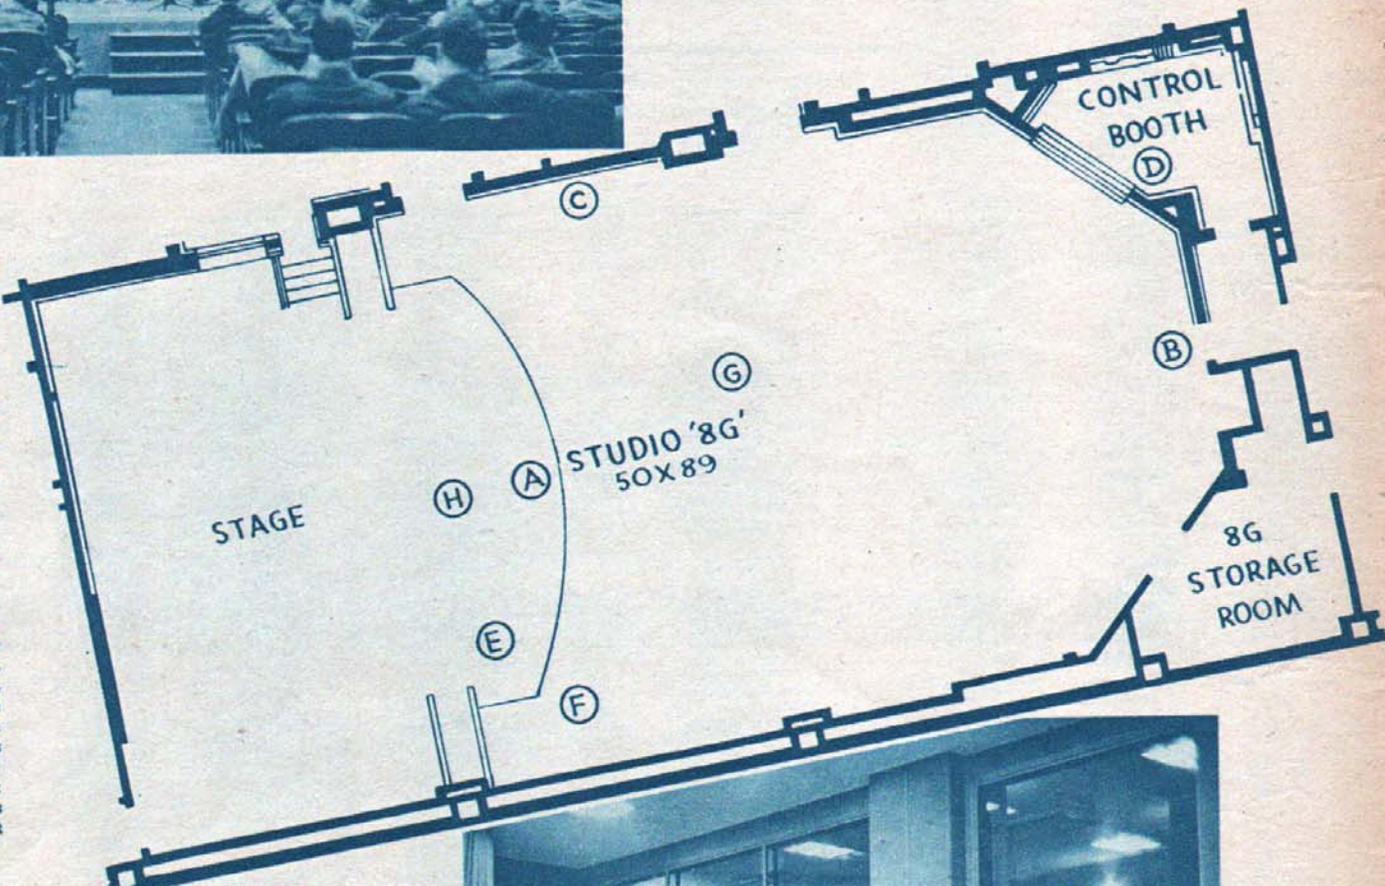

No. 1 — "Little Theater Studio" in Radio City

Above: NBC Studio 8-G's stage as it looks from Point G facing Point A (see diagram). Here you see Ernie Watson (standing, with hat on) directing his orchestra, while performers sit about, awaiting their turn at rehearsal. The lone mike in the aisle is used to pick up audience applause, laughter

Right: Floor plan of NBC Studio 8-G (better known as "The Little Theater Studio") located on the 8th floor of the RCA Building, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York. This is the studio from which Joe Cook's show, as well as the Rudy Vallee, Uncle Jim's Question Box and Death Valley Days programs are broadcast

Above: The door in the rear center (at Point B) leads to dressing-rooms, the control room (Point D), and to private exits and elevators (used only by artists and officials). The double doors in the right-hand corner lead to other dressing-rooms and studios. The glass-enclosed room in the upper right-hand corner is the client's booth, the one in the upper left-hand corner contains the switchboard, and the one in lower left-hand corner is the control booth (Point D in diagram)

Above: Here's a view of the side marked "C" on the floor plan. The two double doors lead into the main 8th-floor lobby. These are the doors through which the audience enters. Above you see a glass-enclosed balcony for extra people who cannot find seats on main floor

Right: If you were an artist broadcasting from the stage of 8-G and you should look up, this is what you would see. First, there's the contour curtain, then drops all the way back to the rear of stage. On close study of the picture, special lighting equipment can be seen

Above, left: If you were in the control room (Point D) with the engineer, here's how the studio would look to you. The engineer can see the entire stage, the entire audience and can thus regulate his instruments properly. When this photograph was taken from the control room, through the double glass, the Notre Dame Glee Club was rehearsing for Joe Cook's show

Above: If you were on the stage, rather than in the control room, here's how the Notre Dame Glee Club (singing at Point E) would show up. The boys in the rear are not necessarily taller than those in the front—it's just that steps are provided so those in the rear can see over the heads of those in front and better follow the glee club director and the program director

Above: Back in the control booth (Point D) are two men who can make or break the entire show. Standing, talking into the mike, is Norman Dicken, production man. Seated at the controls is Engineer Hollis Young

Above: There's a reason for such a sign (standing at Point F in diagram) as this: New York fire laws prohibit smoking in radio studios because of fire hazards and NBC prohibits artists from eating while they are rehearsing

Above: If you don't observe the sign in the picture to the left (above), watch out, this cop (who stands at Point B) will get you. He usually warns offenders, but if anyone gets tough, he's empowered to arrest and fine anyone as high as $25

Above: A sponsor usually engages an advertising agency to produce his show for him. The agency then employs men who know both advertising and showmanship to help put the show on the air. Such a man is Edward Gardner. He's at Point H

Above: If you stand on the stage during any rehearsal, you'll see things like this: In front (with glasses and script) is Jack Keating; in the second row, left to right, are Stanley McClelland, bass, and Lee Montgomery, arranger and accompanist; behind them, left to right, are John Seagle, baritone, and Morton Bowe, tenor—all members of the Cavalier Quartet. (They're seated at Point G)

Right: Ernie Watson (who sits at Point H) arranged music for many orchestras, did some novelties for Popeye, but never led his own band until Cook's show went on the air and he was selected to worry about the musical details—direct the band

Above: Here's Charlie Cantor leaning over a row of seats to tell a Radio Guide reporter what he thought of a certain program the night before. Cantor, No. 1 stooge to many famed comics, is heard on the Fred Allen, Joe Cook and Phil Baker shows, and just about every comic program that comes from New York. Sometimes you hear him on the "March of Time"

Above: Master of Ceremonies Joe Cook in a merry mood as he rehearses for his Saturday show in "The Little Theater Studio." The studio bears this name because it's the only one at NBC that's built like a theater. Glib, story-telling Comic Joe brings a group of guest stars to the microphone weekly in a show that has something for every member of the family

Above: Movie Star George Raft was a recent Cook guest, and our cameraman, told to get unusual shots, waited, watched, got this choice pose of Raft at rehearsal. The main floor of the "Little Theater Studio" at NBC, plus the glass-enclosed balcony, seats 300. It is the only studio that has stationary upholstered seats, the only studio that has a stage and curtains

Above: Meet Junior O'Day, actor. You hear him most any time and any place, for he's in great demand for child parts. He's older than he looks, reads and interprets scripts as an adult, knows the tricks of the trade. Before the mike, he steps upon the director's platform. If such a platform isn't handy, NBC supplies him with one so he can reach the mike. He rehearses with his cap on—spends his spare time drawing

Above: Ben Grauer has a word with Radio Actress Alice Rhinehart while fixing up his announcer's script. Back in the control room the production man also keeps a script in his hand, one which tells him every word, every song, every movement of the show, even when the audience is supposed to laugh or applaud

Above: Gypsy Marko was a Joe Cook guest the night these photos were taken and here she is, pulling away at her accordion. The program's sponsor sits in the client's sound-proof booth, relaxes, watches the show, but hears it over a radio just the same as he would hear it if he were in his own living-room

Above: Mme. Suzanne Fisher, Metropolitan Opera soprano (the woman in black, singing) rehearses for her guest appearance. When a program is on the air and there has to be conversation between the stage and the control room, it is done by a special telephone system or by sending written messages back and forth

WEAF-NBC: Dr. Paul Van Zeeland, Premier of Belgium; WJAR KYW
Dr. Paul Van Zeeland, Premier of Belgium will be heard at this time in an address before the Foreign Policy Association luncheon. Dr. Van Zeeland will be introduced by Raymond L. Buell, president of the association, who will preside. While Dr. Zeeland is in this country, he will receive an honorary degree from Princeton University and visit President Roosevelt. Dr. Van Zeeland achieved international political prominence recently when he overwhelmingly defeated the Rexist Degrelle in a public election and thereby kept Belgium in the democratic rank of governments.

Fisherman

With his popular "Watch the Fun Go By" program, Al Pearce has proved he's outstanding as a radio entertainer. Recently he went fishing off the Coronado Islands in the Pacific, proved he's an outstanding fisherman, too! With him was a Radio Guide cameraman—who brought back all the thrills of this exciting trip—in fine photographs! Through them, you too can enjoy the thrills of this outing. They're yours—

Johnny Green, for his musical highlight tonight, will introduce three songs by unknown writers, whom he selects for future "big-time" hits. The three writers and their songs are: Mel Weuttergreen, "My Girl's Back Again"; Richard Lewine, "Zim Zam Zee"; and Ann Southern's sister, Bonnie Lake, whose song is as yet untried.

"The Mystery of David" is title of tonight's episode. The plot concerns Paul, who flew East last week, presumably to bring Patriella Hunter back as his bride, and returned with Beth Holly, the young woman with whom his name has been linked in a divorce action. Beth constantly refers to David, a four-month-old baby, but offers no explanation.

Barber Finds Old Book in Trunk Sells It for $4000

A small town barber discovered an old copy of "Pilgrims Progress" in a trunk that had been unopened for years. He hoped to sell it for a few dollars. Imagine his joy when he was offered more than $4,000.00 for that one book! This is cited from rare book annals, as one of the many such cases. The American Book Mart, Nationally known buyers of old books, will pay $4,000.00 for each copy of the same edition. They buy thousands of dollars worth of books annually — they want certain old school books, Bibles, story books, poetry, histories, travel, almanacs, letters, newspapers, magazines, etc. Many books, even as recent as 1931, wanted. A single book hidden in your old trunks, attic or basement, may bring you $25, $50, $100, $500 or even $5,000 each for certain books. Better investigate now! Send 10c today to American Book Mart, 140 S. Dearborn St., Dept. 3901, Chicago, Ill., and they will send you latest list of old books they want to buy and cash prices they will pay!

Tonight's performance of the Maxwell House Show Boat
 marks the end of the journey on this famous craft for most of the present talent. Next week the show boat will be moored in Hollywood and the veteran Captain Henry (Charles Winninger) will take over the helm. Lanny Ross will be missing as will Molasses 'n' January whose other program will keep them in New York City.
 Thomas Thomas, baritone, Nadine Conner, soprano and Meredith Wilson, orchestra director, have been engaged for the new series of Show Boat programs beginning a week from tonight.

Pinch-hitting for Bing Crosby until his return, tonight Bob Burns will take over the Music Hall and introduce Toby Wing, Roland Young and Mischka Levitski to the air audience. The newly married Arkansas hobbits will try to fill the gap that Crosby will leave, and at the same time keep his guest stars and his sponsor happy. The same procedure that of Crosby taking over for Burns, and Burns taking over for Crosby, was followed very successfully last year.

Quartets of German "lieder" and French "chansons," seldom heard in their original form, are being given in a new series of programs by the Liedersingers. The songs always strike a responsive chord in listeners because of their melodious character and easy comprehensibility. Composed to the lyrics of the great poets of Germany and France, the music includes such masters of the "lied" form as Schubert, Brahms and Schumann. The Liedersingers give representative programs of this type of musical, restricting themselves, however, to works originally composed for quartet singing.

I do not recall the play "SHALL NEVER DIE," but I may have missed it. You might query the director of the Lux Radio Theater, care of the Columbia Broadcasting System, Hollywood, Calif.—R. J. W., Putnam, Conn.

The part of "Grandma" in the "STORY OF MARY MARLIN" was formerly portrayed by Joan Blaine. Elinor Harriot takes all the feminine roles in the Amos 'n' Andy comedy series.—M. K., Winona, Minn.

According to our files, OZZIE NELSON has never made any recordings under the name of Dick Burton. Nevertheless, it is quite probable that there is an orchestra leader by the name of Dick Burton.—Miss M. L., Florence, Colo.

No, ED SMITH, who formerly announced "PAINTED DREAMS," is not ill. He has left Chicago for Minneapolis where he has taken an excellent position as manager of the radio features of General Mills.—J. L., Kalamazoo, Mich.

JESSICA DRAGONETTE was born on February 14. She is five feet, two inches tall. Rumors have it that her current series, the Beauty Box Theater, is to move to Hollywood shortly for the summer. NADINE CONNOR is five feet, three inches tall, weighs 114 pounds, and is 27 years old. Nadine is to join the Show Boat cast July 8 when it moves to Hollywood.—J. D., Los Angeles, Calif.

Don Ameche formerly handled the role of Bob in the series "BETTY AND BOB" but that role is now taken by Les Tremayne. The "voice" of Terry Moran in "TODAY'S CHILDREN" and that of Bob were never taken by the same character as far as our records show.—Mrs. A. B., Waterloo, Iowa.

Tasker Howard, composer; Joseph Littan's Orch.;

This is the second of the series "Whither Music?" featuring

John Tasker Howard, distinguished American composer and author, with an NBC concert orchestra directed by Joseph Littan. Mr. Howard's purpose in the new series is to explain in simple terms how modern music came into being, what it is and where, apparently, it is going. He points out that such established masters as Beethoven, Mozart and Wagner in their day were "modernists" and shocked the musical tastes of their audiences. Howard also will interpret to the lay listener the impact of industrialism and commercial life on contemporary music. To illustrate his remarks, Howard has chosen music that has marked turning points in the history of the art and will trace back to them the origin of many devices used by young composers of today.

MR. FAIRFAX KNOWS ALL

The terms RED Network and BLUE Network when used by this publication or the National Broadcasting Company refer to one or the other of National's two major networks. NBC, you see, has two networks, whereas the Columbia Broadcasting and the Mutual Broadcasting Systems have but one each. The color designation means nothing. Red and Blue were picked simply as names.

When an announcer says, "This is an ELECTRICAL TRANSCRIPTION," he means that the program is a recorded broadcast especially manufactured for use on the radio exclusively. These transcriptions are made much in the same fashion as a phonograph recording except that higher quality materials and more care go into their manufacture. Of course, the artists are not present in person at the studio when an electrical transcription is being played.

MILDRED BAILEY is still singing with RED NORVO's orchestra. They will have several sustaining spots on CBS shortly emanating from Steel Pier, Atlantic City. Red and Mildred are man and wife in real life.—E. W. G., Evansville, Ind.

According to our records, the WBAL "Movie Club" has left the air.—H. C. E., Lancaster, Pa.

MURIEL WILSON and FRED HUFSMITH were supposed to be engaged to be married, but I now understand their engagement was broken about four months ago.—M. B., New York City.

Jean MacGregor plays the part of Dorothy Moran and Bess Johnson does the role of Frances Moran Mathews in "TODAY'S CHILDREN," Ray Johnson, who plays the role of Henry in that same series, is not related in real life to Frances Moran.—E. H. F., South Bend, Ind.

RUTH BAILEY of the "GIRL ALONE" cast takes the part of Virginia Nardesty. To my knowledge she is not married. RAY JOHNSON, Today's Children actor, was born on July 24, 1911.—Miss E. P., Far Rockaway, N. Y.

The CBS sketch titled "BIG SISTER" is written by Lillian Lauferty. The cast follows: Alice Frost does the title role. Junior O'Day is heard as Ned; Heila Stoddard plays the part of Sue, the 19-year-old sister, and Martin Gabel is cast as Dr. John Wayne.—Mrs. J. S. M., Bessemer, Ala.

For information about the peculiarities of your "Silvertone" radio set's dial, write to the Sears-Roebuck Co., Chicago, Ill. Be sure to give the model number of your receiver.—F. M., Logansport, Ind.

Sorry, RADIO GUIDE does not announce or publicize any FAN CLUBS, whether authorized or not, as a protection to the radio artists. There are entirely too many rackets in fan clubs and, to save the great trouble of lengthy investigations, the ban on publicity is set up on all clubs of this type.—L. K., Chicago, Ill.

An addition to the cast of "TODAY'S CHILDREN" is that of Ed Prentiss who is taking the role of Arthur Donnelly.—P. P., Gary, Ind.

HORACE HEIDT is married and has a daughter. He is 36 years old and has led the Brigadiers for fifteen years. At present, I believe, Horace does not play any instrument with the band but just wields the baton.—M. M., South Ozone Park, L. I.

I have never heard of your two favorites, HUGH MARSHALL and DUDLEY LYNDON. This is most likely due to the fact that they have not appeared on the major networks. Thus I can give you no information as to their whereabouts. LAZY DAN, the Minstrel Man, is not on the air at present.—W. W. N., Madison, Wis.

The title of the theme melody of the "BIG SISTER" sketch is "Valse Bluette."—A. H. F., Wallhill, N. Y.

I believe you would have to write direct to CORNELIA OTIS SKINNER (try her in care of the NBC Artists Service

This exclusive NBC broadcast offers tribal chants and the pulsating tom tom rhythms of the First American which are being picked up at the Flagstaff (Ariz.) Pow-wow, the Southeast's greatest all-Indian show. More than 7,000
Indians, Hopis, Zunis, Com-anches, Navajos and others of famous Southwestern tribes, will be the Arizona town for the annual festival. Here their representatives vie with each other in presenting ancient tribal ceremonies and give voice to a musical heritage that is fast disappearing before the onslaught of the white man's civilization.
The program includes a wide variety of songs and dance music. These range from a clown dance with the chantings and Indian merrymakers to a war song of the Navajo sung by barabek riders
just as it was given generations ago. Yaquis will give the Pascolo, an Easter dance and ceremony, and a Buffalo dance will be given by members of the Hopi tribe. The songs will be as varied as the dances. Chief Taptuka will be heard in Hopi songs, Chief White Swan will sing a song of the Winnebago tribe, and two Zuni girls will give a Water Carrier's song.

DISCARD YOUR OLD AERIAL
It is Most Likely Corroded and Has Poor or Loose Noisy Connections
NO MORE BUZZES, CLICKS and shorts from summer rains and winter snow and when using an F. & H. Capacity Aerial Eliminator. Equals an aerial 75 ft.
long, strung 26 ft. high, yet occupies only 1 1/2 inch by 4 inch space behind your radio—guaranteed to give you nationwide reception or your money back.
BETTER TONE AND DISTANCE GUARANTEED
Sensitivity, selectivity, tone and volume improved. No lightning danger or unsightly lead-in and aerial wires. Makes your set complete in itself. Forget aerial wires and troubles—more your set anywhere.
NOT NEW—VALUE ALREADY PROVED
On the market five years, 100,000 satisfied customers in U. S. and foreign countries. In use from the Arctic Regions of Norway to the Tropics of Africa.
Tested by Government for use on Naval Hospital bedside radios. Each factory checked on actual long distance reception. Can not harm set—Easily connected to any radio, including radio having no ground or radio for doublet aerial.
5 DAYS TRIAL
Mail coupon at once. Pay postman $1.99 plus a few pennies postage on delivery. If not entirely satisfied, return within five days and your dollar will be refunded without question.
F. & H. Radio Laboratories, Dept. 185, Fargo, N. Dak.
Send F. & H. Capacity Aerial. Will pay postman $1 plus few cents postage. If not pleased will return within 5 days for $1 refund. Check here if sending $1 with order—thus saving postage cost—same refund guarantee.
Check here if interested in dealer's proposition.

RADIO GUIDE'S OWN MID-SUMMER LOG OF ALL STATIONS IN NORTH AMERICA

AFTER careful checking with the U. S., Canadian and Mexican governments, RADIO GUIDE presents its carefully compiled Mid-Summer Log of all broadcasting stations in North America arranged in order of their frequencies. Network affiliations and nighttime power are indicated in this log whose symbols are explained as follows:

DARK FACE TYPE indicates the station is a network member.

KEY—networks are indicated as follows: N—National Broadcasting Company; Nb—NBC's basic Blue network; C indicates Columbia Broadcasting System's basic station; c indicates an optional CBS station; M—Mutual Broadcasting System. This log will appear in four consecutive parts. Paste these columns on a cardboard and keep them to "Double Your Radio Enjoyment."
