Medal of Merit

A Weekly Award for Excellence in Broadcasting

AWARDED TO LUM AND ABNER

LUM AND ABNER'S method of selecting a theme song is as typical of them as their own finger-prints. They needed a theme so they went into a music store and asked to hear some records. One was the song "Eleanor," and they simply liked it.

No fuss. No consulting of musical nabobs who would attempt to catch the vibration of their personalities and match it with melody and counter-melody. An ordinary music store was all these very ordinary but quite remarkable fellows needed.

Chester Lauck and Norris Goff are two young men from Mena, Arkansas, who have made good. The world, however, knows them better as a couple of other fellows. And then some. Chester Lauck, who is tall and spry and also Lum Edwards, likewise plays Grandpappy Spears, Snake Hogan, Cedric Weehunt, Butch Dolan, Oscar Fields, Dan Davis, Frank Foster, Clarence O. Willoughby, and the presiding judge and defense counsel in whatever courtroom scenes are required.

Norris Goff, who is short and dapper, is heard as Abner Peabody. He also takes the parts of Dick Huddleston, Squire Skimp, Mose Moots, Caleb Weehunt, Lord Cholmondelay, and a half-dozen incidental male characters.

In their many roles and in their wisdom they have treated the radio audience to some profound remarks. Listeners still recall Lum's famous comment on friends.

"We always figured," he stated, "that if a feller would choose his friends the way he chooses his britches there would be fewer rips in friendship and no patches on the seat of his wisdom."

Back in Mena, Ark., in 1930, today's amazingly successful Lum and Abner were employed respectively by a local finance company and a wholesale grocery. They did not know that a neighboring hamlet would change its name from Waters to Pine Ridge. They did not know that they would sign a contract which would pay them $355,500 for slightly more than two years of radio work. Nor that they would live in Hollywood on magnificent estates and have for their friends the star-spangled celebrities of the screen and radio.

Certainly they did not foresee that their radio fame would become so great that their listeners would demand of Radio Guide that the Medal of Merit be awarded to them.

But the boys have made good. Because they have, because in their whole careers their programs have never stooped to the use of off-color words or meaning, because they please a huge and growing army of listeners, we award to Lum and Abner and their broadcast for the Horlick's Corporation, Radio Guide's Medal of Merit.

HAPPY LISTENING

No Pons

FOR radio, we give thanks. Last week, we were in a slough of despond, a blue funk, an abyss of despair. Our editorial pride had been cut to the quick by one of the unfortunate errors to which such a publication as Radio Guide is subject. To be exact, our beautiful cover had stated with no possibility of argument that Lily Pons would appear on the "Vick's Open House" program.

But she didn't.

To be sure, at the time we went to press it seemed that she would sing in place of Miss MacDonald, but subsequent developments changed that. So Radio Guide was in error and our editorial head was bowed in grief.

But radio brought us a message. It was a program whose name escapes us but to which we shall be everlastingly grateful. In a voice ringing with conviction and sincerity, a full-throated announcer told us that it is good to make mistakes. In his own words, "He who makes mistakes is he who makes discoveries."

That brightened us up a lot.

On Temperament

AS A matter of fact, Radio Guide is an easy prey to errors. Periodically, we cleanse our souls by apologizing for them, as in this case. Actually, we do reassure all who read our columns that no amount of expense or time is spared to make our listings of programs as complete and authentic as is possible. Whenever we do err, the chief reason lies in the fact that people are human and bodies are frail, and the temperamental or hurried folk who build radio shows change their minds after we go to press.

For these errors—as for Miss Pons' lamentable absence after we had announced her—we beg your understanding and sympathy. Believe it or not, it hurts us worse than it does you.

Pacific Beauty

WHAT is there about the Pacific slope which produces such beautiful girls? Kathleen Wilson, who is one of the brightest stars of "One Man's Family," is the subject of our cover this week. We offer this work from the brush of our art director, Mr. Charles Rubino, as a distinguished addition to the private collections many readers are making of our cover portraits.

NBC Symphony Orchestra to be conducted by Rodzinski. NBC, Saturday, 10 p.m. EST.

Rodzinski, born in Dalmatia of Polish parents, is among the most celebrated of the young school of conductors. He'll bring forth grand music.

THERE is no patter of feet in the Valley of Magic, and seldom is there a clapping of hands. But there is laughter and hope, and a courage quite beyond the ken of healthy folk whose bodies have never been blighted by infantile paralysis.

For there in the valley of Warm Springs, snug in the hoary mountains of middle Georgia, nature and man labor in the same vineyard for the same cause—defeat of a disease that knows no master, and obeys no barriers. And miracles are wrought there with water and words: dead muscles are awakened and sleeping sinews are quickened with music, and radio becomes a comforter and healer.

They will tell you in that haven: "Enter here, you who are heavy-laden and without hope, for God gave us this valley and man gave us radio."

I had heard of the miracles of water and words at Warm Springs, and I wanted to see. I entered the Valley of Magic at noon, coasting down through the eastern pass. The earth seemed to be napping. Autumn had come to the land. Rabbits darted through the cotton stubble. Squirrels scampered across the highway. Bob Whites whistled in the clover fields and a mocking-bird perched on a sign which read:

"Careful, please Patients' crossing."

DOWN in the valley a community scurried on wheels. There came a shriek of childish delight, and a youngster about ten came tearing down the hillside in a wheel-chair. He took the inside of a curve, banked his vehicle like a motor-car racer, and shot across the road. His comrades followed his trail.

"Last one in is a polecat!" the leader shouted over his shoulder.

The racers jerked at the auxiliary wheels on their chairs and sprinted. They whooped and laughed in excitement as all kids have always done in the race for the swimming-hole. Three were rolling neck and neck for the lead, their warped little bodies leaning and weaving to maintain balance of the flying chairs.

I held my breath! A pebble—an error in timing would have hurled them from their chairs. It would have meant broken bones, but, after all, what is a broken arm or a sprained ankle to kids with infantile paralysis?

They grabbed their wheels and skidded their chairs to a stop inside the white walls that shelter the warm springs from the gawks of the curious. They were lifted from their chairs by attendants and their withered and gnarled little bodies were placed gently in the water.

THEN they were like fish—darting and ducking, doing everything you did in the old swimming-hole except climb out and dive. And some of the game little fellows even did that—by pulling themselves along the spring-board and tumbling over.

A radio near one end of the pool was droning football results, and some of the fellows clung to the side of the pool with their twisted fingers and listened. An announcer swung into the running-fire description of a game, and the boys jumped up and down in the water.

And every time they jumped their muscles gained a speck of strength!—jumping to words and words giving strength. Wonder if Ted Husing ever realized his voice was helping cure some youngster of infantile paralysis?

"Come on, you guys," yelled one lad who was bouncing in excitement at the broadcast, "touchdown!"

I tried so hard to feel sorry for them, but you can't weep for kids who laugh in your face.

Someone moved to switch the radio to a musical program, and a howl of protest came from the boys.

"We want football," one shouted. "Leave it on or we'll get you in here and duck you!"

"Yeah, we'll run you ragged," yelled another, who can't run.

The game got exciting, and the boys hushed and cocked their heads to catch every word.

"Wait 'til I get well," said one to nobody in particular. "I'm going to play football."

THE boys laughed. "You!" a companion snorted. "They don't play football in a wheel-chair!" Children often are cruel even to their own friends.

"I'll play football," said the lad quietly. The odds are ten million to one against him, but I won't give them. I won't bet against courage—never against the kind of courage that is born in the Valley of Magic.

Attendants lifted them from the pool and rubbed their limbs. I approached a group of them.

"Hello, fellows. Just heard you listening to that radio. Interested in radio?"

It sounded very silly. They obviously thought so, too, for they looked at me rather blankly and queerly.

"Interested in radio?" one answered after a pause.

"Say, mister, if you sell radios you'll starve to death here. Everybody's got a radio—and a wheel-chair."

The crowd laughed, actually laughed!

"We go to bed by radio and wake up with it," said another. "You see, mister, the more we wiggle the better we are—and radio helps make us wiggle. And you never get lonesome when you've got somebody to talk to you, and the doctors say that keeps us from worrying, and if we don't worry at all and wiggle a lot we'll get well—maybe. Go up to Georgia Hall—up the hill at the foundation—and ask about radios. We'll be up there in a minute. Come on, fellows, race you up the road."

Georgia Hall is the hub of the Warm Springs Foundation, an organization begun by President Roosevelt in 1926, a year after he went there and began treatments that eventually restored his health but never complete use of his legs.

Up the side of Pine Mountain, between rows of mimosa, leads the trail to the community that never walks. Off to one side—simple and white and cool even in the Georgia sun—is the "Little White House," the health home of the President. Georgia Hall, stately and impressive, is in the center of the community. Grouped around it are the brace-shop, the playhouse, the exercise house and the infirmary.

"The Magic Door," operated by an electric eye, leads into the patients' entrance of the hall, and around the lobby are radios. Virtually every cottage also has a radio.

The Valley of Magic was a wilderness not many years ago. Legend says Indians told Ponce de Leon it was the Fountain of Youth and his search for Warm Springs lured him on the futile journey, seeking life everlasting. The valley is shadowed by a fringe of hills, created when the earth had a spasm, and ancient before the Rockies were born. The hills droop to the west. At the base of Pine Mountain gushes Warm Springs, spewing forth 1,700 gallons of water a minute to the surface.

To the west is Magic Hill, where nature cuts one of her craziest capers. Your automobile seems to run uphill in neutral, but you have to put it in gear to pull downhill. Scientists say it's an optical illusion, but a view into the Valley of Magic is not an illusion.

It's a valley of few steps, where every house has a runway and children play baseball in wheel-chairs, and whirl and weave in square dances, and where radio is the eye and ear and voice to them from the great world beyond their valley.

GEORGIANS knew of Warm Springs before the turn of the century, and there was a tiny health resort there. But the waters were not used for treatment of paralysis until 1922. Then it was discovered that the waters contain 13 of the 21 necessary chemical elements. It also was learned that the water has a specific gravity of 998 and is so light that it can be drunk in huge quantities. Its temperature never varies from 90 degrees. A paralysis victim discovered that the "light" water brought life to his limbs. The story reached Franklin D. Roosevelt, who had been stricken. He went there in 1925 and the fame of the valley became universal.

Geologists, studying the phenomenon, found that Pine Mountain was formed when the earth heaved up the bottom of the sea ages before the beginning of man. And about the time mammals crawled from the oceans and began to develop lungs, a mighty earthquake gripped the mountain, twisted its spine, left its insides in folds and formed a kind of reservoir deep in the hills.

It takes water 40 years to seep from the surface to the reservoir, and there it is heated by rock decomposition at considerable depth, due to radioactivity.

So rightfully, the Fountain of Magic owes its life to radio.

I was rolling down from Pine Mountain when I met Russell Poreh. He lives in a trailer, about three hundred yards from the pool. His trailer is parked by the side of the highway. It gives him easy access to the springs—and then, too, he can not afford a cottage on the hill.

GAY music floated from his little home and I stopped to investigate. Russell was propped on a couch. A Negro man servant was at his elbow. A little radio was doing its chore and Russell was reading. The servant was turning the pages.

"Come in," he called. "Pull up a chair, and stay a while. Just getting a little music. Thought I might dance."

He grinned. He is paralyzed from his neck to his toes. He was such a friendly fellow, propped up there smiling. Thank God, even paralysis doesn't wipe away grins.

He had eaten beans and white bread—"light bread" in Georgia—for lunch, and his servant hadn't cleaned the dishes.

"How 'bout some grub," he suggested. "Got plenty. Have to have—I've got an appetite like a vacuum cleaner. But it doesn't do me much good. Most of my digestive organs are paralyzed. I can't get a thimbleful of strength from a planked steak."

We chatted. He was sorry the Giants lost the World Series. He's a Chicago Cub fan, however, since he lives in central Illinois. We talked about the rumors of war.

"I was too young to fight the last one," he said, "and there's one thing sure, I certainly won't be drafted for the next one."

LISTEN, old man," I said. "I've heard a lot about what radio means to fellows like you. I've heard it inspires you. That it helps return your health. Come on—tell me about it in one-syllable words."

He was thoughtful for a minute.

"Let me ask you a question," he said, softly.

His man servant lifted his master's arm, and Russell wiggled the first digits of two fingers.

"See that? Those are the only muscles I can move in my body. Suppose you had been active all your life—loved to hunt and work. Suppose you were stricken with a disease nobody understands and you had to begin life from zero? Suppose you had to sit propped here, day after day, knowing that if you felt sorry for yourself you would go mad?"

"Then suddenly you discovered you could twist a knob and bring to yourself companionship—that you could live again the life you loved and that that strange little thing—" he nodded toward his radio—"can bring the world to your door and give you anything you want, except health—and can help you get that. What would radio mean to you?"

I began to understand

"YOU are a stranger here," he continued. "You don't belong in this valley. You can walk. You are not a polio. That's what we call one another. Like you say. 'Hello, neighbor, we say 'Hello, polio. We really have poliomyelitis, but for some crazy reason folks got to calling it infantile paralysis. But it doesn't just pick on kids!

"No! Not polio! It picks on anybody—and the bigger they are, the harder they fall. What causes it? God knows. and if I ever get to heaven I'm going to find out. Tell you what I think though. Doctors may say I don't know anything about it. Maybe not—I'm just one of the guys who has got it! It's a germ, all right, and it jumps on the fellow who is run down. You can't run away from polio. The best way to duck it is to keep your body healthy.

"I don't know where I got it. There are fellows here right now who got it in the scourge last summer. But my case was the only one in my town.

"Don't pity us. Pity will drive us mad. We never allow ourselves to think about our plight. I never give my mind an idle moment. I keep my radio going, or I read. Or I pray. Sure I pray. You would, too, buddy if you were like this and knew only one Doctor in the universe could cure you.

"I never read serious stuff. I used to—back in Illinois. But serious stuff makes me think, and I can't allow myself to think. I even like light stuff on the radio. Serials—blood and thunder adventure.

"No, I don't sit here just by myself. I swim and sometimes I go to the movies. Sure, we have movies. There are no chairs—just a runway for wheel-chairs. Sometimes I go to the dances. No, I don't dance. But some of the polios do. In wheel-chairs—the old square dance, you know—swing your partner!

"My story? I told you we don't think about ourselves, much less talk

BUT a statement here, a memory there, patched together his story of journey's end. Up in Illinois, he had just branched out in the grain-elevator business. He worked hard—maybe too hard, but a man of thirty-two can stand a lot of hard work. Then, too, there was the family, a wife and two children—and ambition. Love and ambition are ruthless taskmasters.

Eight months ago he was stricken. "I didn't feel anything at first. I just went numb—like I was falling asleep all over. There was a sort of a tingling, prickly feeling, then no feeling at all. For five days doctors said I wouldn't live. That was polio. It doesn't hurt—the damn sneak. It steals up on a fellow, knifes him in the back and puts his body to sleep. Then polio runs away, and leaves a fellow twisted and frightened. Then the pain comes."

RUSSELL shuddered and his face went white at the memory. The smile vanished and his eyes stared straight ahead—stark, as though there was a vision out there in the dancing shadows of the Valley of Magic.

"Pain! Have you ever been hit on the muscle with a baseball, or cracked your elbow sharply against a hard substance? Remember that quick, biting pain? Well, that's the way it felt. All over! Every muscle in my body! For five months! Day and night! Even morphine couldn't stop it! I could see pain. I tell you—see it! Like red streaks it looked.

"Every organ below my neck except my right lung, my heart and the tips of two fingers was paralyzed.

"I was simply wasting away. My money was gone. But I got a trailer and came here. Why? Good God, man, you don't know how precious a spark of life is until you feel it slipping away from you!

"I can sit propped up now. The second joint on one finger is loosening. I can feel it! I can feel life creeping back there! It's a start! Just one joint. I know it's not much, but it's something! There's hope, I tell you—there's hope! I'm not dead—I'm not licked by a long shot!"

His voice shook.

"Life will come back to my hands, my stomach! I'll make it come back! They said I couldn't live. Well, I'm alive! I'm here! And I'll walk again. by God—I'll walk some day!"

There was a strange light in his eyes.

"I got thrown back to zero. Well, that's where I started when I was born. Except I could wiggle then, my mother said."

STUNNED at his determination, I thoughtlessly bleated out:

"But man, what can you do? You haven't got a chance. You—"

"Haven't got a chance, huh?"

He glanced around his tiny home. On a shelf was a framed poem—written by a dying man—

*Out of the night that covers me,
Black as a pit from pole to pole—
I thank what e'er gods may be
For my unconquerable soul.*

Then he looked out into the twilight and up Pine Mountain where the mimosa paraded down to the Valley of Magic and pine trees stood their silent guard.

"Haven't got a chance, huh? Who hasn't? Roosevelt did right well for himself, didn't he?"

NOBODY loves a bass. Not unless it's the kind of bass that rhymes with "lass," and which one catches with a hook and line.

When it rhymes with "face" and means a grand-opera singer nobody likes it Nobody. No—nobody . . .

So insists Ezio Pinza, whose luminous, deep voice will rise in robust song over CBS on the "Chesterfield Program" Wednesday night, and Pinza ought to know. He is a bass. Singing under the direction of Andre Kostelanetz and assisted by the "Chesterfield" orchestra, Ezio Pinza brings to music-lovers the rare opportunity of hearing one of grand opera's greatest bassos this week.

But being a basso—there's nothing worse, says Pinza. They get all the dirty deals. They are the blackest of black sheep, the sinisterest of sinister villains. They get the boos and the raspberries and the ax. Excitable Italian opera fans up in the peanut gallery sling pop bottles at them as if they were umpires. Even the other singers are mean to them. They always give a basso the oldest and dirtiest dressing-room.

"Only Chaliapin," says Ezio mournfully, "ever managed to get treated like a tenor." He sighs wistfully, and a tear glints in his eye.

What is a basso like when he is not singing:

Many-y brave hearts are a-sleep-p in the deep-p

So be-wa

WHAT is he like? Ezio looks like a rather lean Ricardo Cortez, with overtones of Gary Cooper. He has what is commonly known as a chiseled profile, and exquisitely cut almond-shaped eyes, for which any woman would give her left ear. He stands an inch over six feet and weighs 195 pounds. He got into opera by mistake. What he wanted to be was a six-day bike-racer.

As Italian as spaghetti, Ezio was born in Rome, the son of a lumber dealer. When he arrived he was so puny that they didn't expect him to live and didn't even bother to get a christening name for him, according to the custom, from the church. When he was still alive after two days, however, a friend of the family suggested "Ezio." His father rushed him to church and found to his horror that it was the name of a pagan conqueror. As Ezio he survived, however, and grew up to go to school and study civil engineering. He quit school to go into professional bicycle racing.

Ezio is probably the only professional bike-rider in the world who has never won a single race. Once, though—only once!—he did come in third. The triumph made him delirious with happiness. When they went to the showers after the race he sang at the top of his lungs.

"As a bike-rider," one of his teammates remarked significantly, "you've got a pretty good voice."

After some thought, Ezio took this to be a delicate hint that his friends thought he might do better in the vocal line than on the track, so he gave up his bike-racing and went to singing school. Thus another basso was born. Such are the accidents that

Ezio Pinza—he wanted to be a bike-racer, not an opera singer determine our lives. Bicycle accidents!

"And now look at the roles I have to sing on the stage," he groans. "Is it any wonder people don't like me?"

And he tells you sadly about "Boris Goudounow."

"Boris Goudounow" is a Russian opera. The Russians, as has frequently been pointed out, are a somewhat morbid people. In "Boris Goudounow," Ezio has a very pretty little part. He assassinates the heir to the throne and tries to get himself elected czar. The people don't like the idea, so he hires some strike-breakers to bang them over the head with iron pipes until they change their minds about their dear new czar. Finally there is a revolt against him and he writhes on the stage, as the curtain falls, dying a horrible death in keenest agony. By that time the audience feels that nothing is too bad for him. "Go on, boy," they yell. "Write! Write! We like it."

This makes Ezio very, very sad.

Then there is "Aida." In "Aida" he is a high priest of the Egyptian temple, in forty pounds of beard and costume. After stalking around the stage scaring everybody half to death, he pounces on the handsome hero—the tenor—and has him sealed up alive in a tomb. As a generous gesture he permits the girl who is in love with the boy to go in and stifle with him.

Then there is "Faust." In "Faust," Ezio is the devil. He buys the soul of Faust, the good doctor, and tricks him into seducing an innocent young maiden. After murdering her child, the girl goes insane. The devil thinks this is very funny and laughs merrily as he dooms Faust to hell.

One begins to understand why nobody loves the big, bad Ezio.

And the awful part of it is that he is really a very nice fellow at heart. All he wants is to be friendly. And yet when he does make a friend something terrible always comes of it; something heart-breaking. There was the time, for example, when he was singing in "Carmen" in a small town in northern Italy. His role in "Carmen" lets him be pretty decent, comparatively, and one of the local farmers took a great fancy to him. It may be funny to us to think of farmers going to operas, but in Italy operas are like corn-shucking contests: you go to see what the boys can do. Anyhow, this farmer became a Pinza fan. Ezio was happy. His heart sang. All his life he had wanted a fan and now he had one. And then—

THE farmer decided that Ezio was so wonderful that he would have to give him a present. He thought and thought. What should he give him? The opera was "Carmen." Then—the great idea! In "Carmen" a bull is on the stage. It is a papier mache bull; a dummy. What could be nicer, what would thrill the wonderful Ezio more, the farmer asked himself, than to give him a better bull to fight while he sang? That night when the company came on the stage for the second act they found a real live bull charging out at them from the wings. When the animal was finally lassoed and locked in a dressing-room, and the sopranos and tenors and mezzo-sopranos were coaxed down from the various lamp-posts and trees in the neighborhood, which they had hurriedly climbed, everyone was very angry with Mr. Pinza. They blamed it on him and his fan. So it was just the same old thing. Even when he made a friend, the friend only succeeded in making other people dislike him.

Even so, "Carmens" are rare in Ezio's life. For one dashing toreador he has to play ten deep-dyed villains. "I am bad," Ezio says dismally, "and if I want to be a good actor I have to be very bad. The better I am the worse I am."

HIS handsome face grows sad as he ponders his other nefarious, gruesome roles—Don Giovanni, for instance. In "Don Giovanni," Ezio is a licentious young nobleman. He begins by making ardent love to an innocent girl. She returns his passion, whereupon he kills her father. This is rather impolite of him, perhaps, but that is the way things happen in opera. After stabbing her father, he runs away from the girl. Shortly afterward he meets another of his old, previously deserted sweethearts. He murmurs words of love into her shell-pink ear and then deserts her again, making it twice for good measure and setting them up in the other alley. At this point he takes a little trip out into the country, no doubt for his health. And there at a country wedding his roving eye falls on still another young girl—a pretty peasant lass—the bride. He tries his old tricks once more, nearly gets caught, and in cowardly fashion

Estelle Liebling, renowned New York voice teacher, was a well-known operatic and concert coloratura soprano before she devoted herself to teaching. Her debut occurred at the Dresden Royal Opera and for two seasons she sang at the Metropolitan, where she made her first appearance as Musetta in "La Boheme" with Caruso, Sembrich and Scotti. Mme. Liebling is well suited to tell the interesting story of Mme. Jeritza's life, for Mme. Jeritza is one of her best-known pupils. Jeritza's triumphs, her failures, her idiosyncrasies are startling, and it is with pleasure that RADIO GUIDE herewith presents this fascinating, unbiased story of The Divine Maria.

AT A fashionable tea party one afternoon, thirty or forty of New York's most conservative society women sat under their loads of silver fox and orchids, sipping from their cups. Suddenly a human pin-wheel rolled the length of the room, her long legs flying—a six-foot blonde, with a pair of the violet eyes which are never seen outside Austria.

"Good heavens!" A gasp ran through the room.

"The lady asked me," innocently explained Maria Jeritza, "if singing in opera kept me in good health."

And with the simple directness of one who lives, sleeps and breathes opera, Jeritza had supplied the answer in a practical demonstration.

Sunday night the "General Motors Concert Company" introduces you to this startling prima donna.

In bringing the Divine Maria, as Europe calls her, to the air, General Motors features a woman who justly may be said to do exactly that; who lives, sleeps and breathes opera, who has devoted her every waking moment to it since she was fourteen years old. More legends have sprung up about Jeritza than about any other stellar prima donna. We don't have women like her in America. Our women are either mannish or ultra-feminine. Jeritza is both. So tall that she looks thin, she strides like a grenadier guard and is muscled like an acrobat. Yet she is so feminine that after years of doing it it still embarrasses her to take a man's part on the stage and show her legs in knee breeches.

JERITZA was born in Brunn, Austria, a town that is half modern and half medieval. Half of it is rather like Pittsburgh. "When I am in Pittsburgh I always feel at home," she says. Yet when the Emperor Josef II had himself locked up in the dungeons of Brunn's old Spielberg Castle once, for fun, he found them so horrible that he gave orders they should never be used again. Maria's parents were poor, but in spite of that she took singing lessons from the time she was twelve. She was very shy about her voice—so shy that regardless of the occasion or the individual she would not sing for anybody but her teacher.

But one afternoon, under the pretense that it was only a regular lesson the little Brunn singing teacher had her run through her entire repertoire. And when she was done, out from behind a red velvet curtain where he had hidden himself stepped the director of the Olmutz Theater. "Very good," he said. "You are hired for our opera company." She almost fainted. The first time she sang in "Faust" at the theater, the devil looked so real in his ghastly make-up that she screamed and wouldn't go near him until she touched him and made sure he was only another singer. And when the director presented her to the Queen of Wurtemberg, after the performance,

Madame Jeritza: She's letter-perfect in more than fifty roles

she called her "Mrs. Queen" as she dropped her curtsy instead of the conventional "Your Majesty."

Jeritza rose rapidly to the top. Her only setback came when she sang in the great city of Hamburg as a guest artist and the critics, objecting to her youth, ordered her to go back to the sticks because Hamburg "didn't want its art in diapers." To this day she has never sung in Hamburg. When she is asked she says, "Oh, no, I'm still too young. I'm sure Hamburg doesn't want its art in diapers." Every woman has a vein of malice in her, and revenge is sweet. But she was soon the petted darling of composers and royalties alike. Puccini personally corrected a score for her. She was almost a family friend to the old Emperor Franz Josef and to the Empress Zita, now in exile hoping that Hitler will restore the throne to her son Otto. She came to America and the Metropolitan Opera for the first time back in 1921.

A story is told about Maria's first appearance in the United States which reveals her highly emotional nature in amusing fashion. Devoutly religious, she spent hours on her knees in church every day praying for success, tears streaming down her cheeks. She drove to the church one afternoon in a taxicab. In her sable coat, her arms full of red roses, she made a striking picture, and as she dismissed the cab a good many people turned on the sidewalk to stare at her. Sincere as her religious emotion might be, Maria was still enough of a prima donna to notice the attention she was getting, and she swept up the steps proudly with her head held high—and tripped and fell flat on her face. She is sport enough to tell the story on herself. She got just what she deserved, she thinks, since "pride cometh before a fall."

JERITZA'S falls are famous and she owes much to them. Rehearsing an aria for "Tosca," in which she was supposed to sink to a sofa in the throes of profoundest grief, she missed the sofa and landed on the floor with a resounding bump.

"At last," cried Puccini, the composer, who was there, "we have the exact way the Vissi d'arte should be sung—on the floor!"

From the floor she sang it, and from the floor she has sung it ever since, and it has been one of her greatest triumphs. How she manages it is her secret. Singing arias while lying on the stomach is anything but easy.

She is every bit as temperamental as fictional opera stars are supposed to be. She is quite capable of going to a party and refusing to enter the room until everyone puts out his cigarette—something which does not make her popular with the other guests. Between the acts at the opera house she eats soft-boiled eggs, cooked in her dressing room, and she firmly believes that swallowing a mouthful of pineapple just before she steps out on the stage improves her voice. On a concert tour her accompanist played a Paganini concerto to give her time to make a costume change. She always called the concerto her pineapple number. When she was invited to sing in Milwaukee and a private car was coupled to the interurban train for her in Chicago, the thing which pleased her most was not the private car but the fact that they let her jerk the whistle-cord as often as she liked all the way. A bouquet of roses once hit her over the eye, so she refuses to let the audience throw flowers onto the stage any more. When she heard Caruso the first time she laughed, wept and clapped in such a frenzy of enthusiasm that her incredibly long golden hair fell down her back. She dashed backstage, impetuously flung her arms about him and kissed him.

BUT under all her temperament lies a sober scholarship, an ability to take punishment, a single-minded intensity of purpose which a laboratory scientist might envy. Jeritza is letter-perfect in more than fifty roles. Gatti of the Metropolitan said, "She's disciplined like a soldier." She practices every day. For her "General Motors" appearance she left California two weeks early in order to come to New York and polish her performance song by song and note by note. She took a singing lesson every day and had six rehearsals over the microphone. She works as hard as the greenest beginner. And this, remember, is the woman whose roles as Octavian in the "Rosenkavalier," as Elsa in "Lohengrin," as Elisabeth in "Tannhauser," as Sieglinde in "Die Walkure" are among the greatest ever created by a singer.

Her friends tell one little story about Maria as evidence of the intense seri-

STARRING RICHARD CROOKS AND BIDU SAYAO IN "MANON," THE "MET" SEASON OPENS SATURDAY

OPERATIC broadcasting must soon pass, as its personality, color and movement can never be successfully transmitted by wireless." That astounding statement was published in a Paris newspaper only three years ago. The writer probably has eaten his words by now, and let us hope they did not give him verbal indigestion.

No doubt he is aware by this time of the overwhelming hold which the Metropolitan Opera broadcasts exercise every Saturday upon millions of American and foreign listeners. The performances represent the most fascinating musical service now offered by radio.

Starting this Saturday with "Manon," featuring Bidu Sayao and Richard Crooks, another season of lyrical delights is with us, and again the unseen and unseeing auditors will enjoy the musico-dramatic masterpieces, hear great voices, a splendid orchestra (just fortified with a transfusion of new young players), expert and illuminative conducting.

The invisibility of radio opera can be made almost negligible by any listener who takes the trouble to read the libretto in advance—or, at least, the stories of the operas, available in many books on the subject—to lend ear to the official commentators, and perhaps give attention to phonograph records of selected numbers, or even of the entire operas. Such previous preparation and devoted communion with the radio performances cannot fail to put opera completely within the understanding of anyone who has an open mind and intelligent ears.

The Metropolitan Opera remains the most important institution of its kind in the world, both because of its past glorious traditions and its current achievements. No other opera house has so numerous a company, gives performances in so many languages (Italian, German, French and English) or gathers together under one roof such an array of remarkable voices. One looks over the international musical map in vain to find any lyrical stage provided in a single season with artists to match Mmes. Flagstad, Pons, Lehmann, Ponselle, Rethberg, Moore, Cigna, Brauzell, Thorberg, Wettergren; and Messrs. Melchior, Martinelli, Martini, Crooks, Tibbett, Bonelli, Thomas, Tokatyan, Pinza, Schorr, Althouse, Maison, Hofmann, Kullmann, Bentonelli, Dickson, List and the host of younger singers who are on their way to higher rungs on the ladder of fame.

To hear most of those artists during the winter broadcasts is the privilege of radio listeners, even those who have never looked at opera. (Television is on its way with the remedy for that.) The Metropolitan has had letters from far-off Alaska, Labrador, and other distant points, confirming the excellent reception of the melodious airwaves.

This season there are sure to be more radio listeners than ever before enjoying the operas to be selected from a list embracing, among others, "Fidelio," "Norma," "Carmen," "Romeo and Juliet," "Don Giovanni," "Coq d'Or," "Barber of Seville," "Rosenkavalier," "Elektra," "Salome" (all three by Richard Strauss), "Ring of the Nibelung," "Meistersinger," "Parsifal," "Tristan and Isolde," "Tannhauser," "Lohengrin," the usual Verdi and Puccini repertoire, and two American operas, "Amelia Goes To the Ball," by Menotti, and "The Man Without a Country," by Damrosch.

For myself, I hope that Richard Strauss' gay "Rosenkavalier" and Wagner's sublime "Tristan and Isolde" may be two of the broadcasts, and I feel fairly sure that they will be.

As far as possible, Radio Guide plans to give its readers advance information about the cast and story of each opera. Melodious listening to all its readers!

MAX GENE NOHL WILL ATTEMPT RECORD DIVE OF 360 FEET IN LAKE MICHIGAN WEDNESDAY

—And down went McGinty To the bottom of the sea.

THE old song will be apropos on Wednesday, when Max Gene Nohl drops over the side of a coast-guard cutter and sinks into Lake Michigan during an NBC-Blue network special-events broadcast.

For Nohl, dressed in a diving-suit he designed and perfected with the aid of Captain John D. Craig, world's premiere underwater photographer, will attempt to descend to the bottom of the lake, a depth of 360 feet. If he makes it, he will have descended 53 feet deeper than any human being, clad in diving garments, has ever been able to go.

Standing by, carrying to millions of listeners a vivid description of what goes on so far below the surface, will be a corps of NBC engineers. Nohl, speaking over a special telephone, will describe his sensations and thrills as he speeds to the muddy bottom of the lake, and his voice will be short-waved from the Coast Guard Cutter Antietam, commanded by Captain J. L. Ahern. The short-wave broadcast will be picked up at the nearest point ashore and rebroadcast over the NBC-Blue network facilities. The first broadcast will be devoted to a description of the descent. The second broadcast will offer a description of the adjusting process, which takes place ten feet below the surface of the lake.

It all sounds simple, like the first girl reporter going down in a submarine—just another thrill. But behind the broadcast are months of work, of intense study and dangerous experimenting. And, to the man who descends to this unbelievable depth, this dive will be the supreme test for his brain-child—the special diving-suit.

NOHL believes he could descend to a greater depth than he will attempt to reach next Wednesday. He bases his belief on the experience he has gained in a series of experiments, most notable of which was the descent made last April 10 in a preview of their Lusitania diving plans, when he dropped down to the bottom of Lake Michigan to look for the hulk of the Norland, which sank in a storm in 1922. He found the wreck on that occasion and NBC described the descent in much the same manner as it will be described this time.

The first fifteen-minute broadcast will cover preparations for the dive and the descent and exploration on the bottom. The second period will cover the last part of the time passed at the ten-foot level. Both will be direct from the diver.

Nohl's secret for such deep diving lies in the application, perfected jointly by him and Captain Craig, of a mixture of helium, oxygen and nitrogen in the suit. Helium, being an inert gas, holds its volume at maximum depth—oxygen is replenished as it is used.

RECENTLY I suggested a straw vote concerning musical commentators. A poll might also determine the general reaction to the Sibelius Symphony course functioning under the direction of Erno Rapee. The fact that Rapee offers it is a high compliment to the public at large. This department would like to know how listeners take to the Finnish master and his by no means easily understood music.

Much exalted emotion distinguishes the third symphony, lightening the long stretches of sombre reflection.

The "Burlesque" by Richard Strauss is his only work for piano and orchestra. Its sparkling and witty passages will keep Miss Schumann's fingers agilely busy.

COMPOSED in 1841, Schumann's imperishable Quintet for piano and strings, stems from the ripest period of his artistic fruitfulness.

He was just past thirty, and in the first year of his marriage to Clara, after one of the most romantic courtships in musical history. Elevated and inspirational in mood, a quick succession of creations poured from Schumann's mind and heart—many of his mastersongs, four instrumental quartets, the choral "Paradise and Peri," and the monumental Quintet, played at this concert by the Coolidge organization. The composition breathes happiness, sentiment, vigor, joy of living.

A note of amusement always creeps into my listening when I hear the opening four notes of the Quintet, for they strongly suggest the Italian ditty, "Funiculi, Funicula." However, while its composer made only a popular song of his idea, Schumann fashioned the four-note motif into a classic of rare eloquence. The slow movement speaks in accents of tender beauty. The Scherzo might be descriptive of elves dancing in the sunlight. To deliver that section with the required speed and agility is possible only for a truly virtuoso foursome.

Mendelssohn's Quartet is closely related in spirit to the foregoing composition, as he was contemporary with Schumann and both men fell deeply under the influence of their time—an era which has come to be known as the Romantic.

One can never encounter Mendelssohn's music without marveling at its euphony, fragrant feeling and perfection of form and craftsmanship.

WHEN, in 1912, the seventy-year-old French composer, Jules Massenet, passed away in Paris, he bequeathed to the world an abundant heritage of about twenty-five operas. "Manon," however, is likely in the end to be the one enduring opera by Massenet, both because of its exquisite music and its immemorial love story, authored by the Abbe Prevost.

A short orchestral prelude announces some of the melodies heard throughout "Manon," notably an especially graceful episode for cello. The score of the opera is lightly lyrical and descriptive of the contrasting moods of the story.

ACT I

Manon, a pretty country girl, is being escorted to a convent school by her rascally uncle, Lescout. To break the journey, they stop at a wayside inn. Lescout leaves her in the courtyard, while he goes in to drink, admonishing her to be a good girl while she waits for him. She sings an entrance air, "A Simple Maiden Fresh From Home!" De Bretigny and Guillot, two rich roués accompanied by several actresses, are dining in a pavilion. Manon watches them fascinated, meanwhile singing a song warning herself against dreaming too much of vanities. More sophisticated than she looks, Manon flirts with the two roués. The dashing young Chevalier des Grieux comes into the courtyard, sees Manon and falls instantly in love. He sings a wooing aria, Manon responds, they do a duet, and decide to steal Guillot's carriage and elope to Paris.

ACT II

The lovers dwell in a chic apartment. Des Grieux' mad infatuation meets with opposition from the scheming Lescout who has come to see his niece, with De Bretigny. While Des Grieux is out, De Bretigny tells her that Senior Des Grieux is against her marriage to his son, and plans to carry him off by force. Manon's cupidity aroused, she casts favorable eyes on De Bretigny, even though she loves the younger man. De Bretigny and Lescout leave, and Manon and Des Grieux are alone. He sings the famous

"Dream," an entrancing air with soft harp accompaniment. They have supper and then Lescout's confederates kidnap the Chevalier. Manon meanwhile has decided to accept the luxury offered by her elderly admirer.

ACT III

(Scene I is sometimes omitted)

Scene 1

A fete at the Cours de la Reine, in Paris. Dancing and gaiety. Manon beautifully dressed in early nineteenth century fashion, appears with De Bretigny, and sings the celebrated Gavotte ("List to the Voice of Youth"). She learns that the Chevalier is about to enter a seminary at St. Sulpice Church.

Scene 2

Sensing that Des Grieux still loves her, Manon, veiled and modestly garbed, seeks him at the church. She hears his father admonish him and leave. Coming out of her hiding place, she seduces the Cavalier from his priestly intentions. They sing a tempestuous love duet and elope again.

ACT IV

A fashionable gambling house. The Chevalier, having spent most of his money on Manon, stakes the remnant of his cash, wins consistently, but finally is accused by Guillot of cheating. Manon and her lover are arrested, and confronted with the elder Des Grieux. The act ends with a genuinely heartfelt lamentation by the ill-fated girl.

ACT V

A lonely spot on the road to Havre. Manon, legally condemned as immoral, is to be deported to a French penal colony in Louisiana. The Chevalier, freed through the influence of his father, plans to attack the convoy escorting Manon to the ship. However, hopelessly ill and exhausted, she falls by the wayside and dies in the Chevalier's arms. Even at the end, the keynote of her character is stressed when she has a delirious vision of glittering jewels, but she gazes at Des Grieux, kisses him and sings, "I Love Thee," as she expires.

HERE is, well-exemplified, Leopold Stokowski's frequent inclination toward leaving the beaten track in his programs. With the exception of Bach, no strictly classical composer is engaged in this list. His Prelude (written to introduce the Cantata "We all must bear much sorrow to enter the Kingdom of God" will have Fernando Germani officiating as the player of the new electric Hammon organ recently added to the Philadelphia Orchestra. The instrument is an improvement in fullness and vibrancy of tone over the older style of organ.

How quickly some composers are neglected by a public that once adored them. Take the case of Camille Saint-Saens. A fertile and fascinating producer of sprightly music, that French master comes to hearing now practically only with his "Samson and Delilah" (to be revived at the Metropolitan Opera this winter) and the present "Danse Macabre," which may be hackneyed, but to me is still an arresting caricature of the subject of Death. The sardonic orchestral imitation of the skeleton-bones was conceived before Richard Strauss accostomed us to realistic characterizations.

Debussy looms larger every year as the embodiment of poetry and mysticism in music. The "Cathedrale" composition, suggesting a holy edifice submerged under water and floating its bell-tones over the waves, is deeply suggestive in theme and treatment.

The programs on these pages, based on advance information, are subject to change at the time of performance.

And "Saxie" Dowell, comedy singer whom Hal and his partner-manager, Alex Holden, wanted to take a second band unit on the road, is strongly desirous of continuing to be a Hollywood citizen. "A few weeks later," Harris narrates, "it was graduated and returned home so snooty that it wouldn't have anything to do with us. So I sent it back to the trainer and told him to make the dog more friendly. Next time it returned home it let take more than two minutes! Practically every star's home is fitted with an elaborate push-button alarm system connected direct with branch police stations. Push a button, a light flashes at the nearest station, the alarm is immediately broadcast and a listening squad-car rushes to the scene. Since Lum and Abner recently received a kidnap threat, their homes have been equipped with the system. A few days ago, nervy souvenir hunt-

Fred Allen is being cured of his worst habit by Hollywood. Either he's being cured—or killed by lead poisoning. You see, on the "Sally, Irene and Mary" movie set the other day, he parked his gum on the rear of a harmless-looking door. Along came a workman who painted right over Fred's gum. Fred, returning a moment later to his gum-parking lot, plucked the tidbit off the door and flipped it into his mouth without even noticing the wet paint . . . Oh well, maybe Sal Hepatica will help.

The Stroud Twins have changed managers again. They do it every six weeks. First Clarence is manager. Then, after six weeks, it's Claude's turn. Claude's it right now. His duties will include answering the telephone, paying all traffic tickets, and sending out the two-pants suit to be pressed

The lucky couples: The Nate (Penner producer) Tufts, a boy; the Danny (Lux talent signer) Dankers, a girl, and the Jim (radio publicity man) Beales, a daughter, Celia. All mothers are doing well . . . Recovering from emergency appendectomy: Norma (Mrs. George Jessel) Talmadge at St. Vincent's Hospital.

The whole Texaco Town radio crew has gone "movie actor" since Jimmie Wallington won a part in the film "Start Cheering." That is, all except Jack Renard, who'd rather sing—on the radio. Recently, at rehearsal, when Bobby Breen guested on the show, he had his chance. Eddis Cantor, in the control-room, was showing Bobby how to sing a certain part of "Ave Maria" which Renard had arranged with "Chapel in the Moonlight." Jack saw his chance. The mike was unguarded, so he crept forward and crooned the words!

If you've been missing Barbara Jo Allen (Beth Holly) from One Man's Family of late, it's because she has a conflicting program heard only along the West Coast, in which she has an important part. She'll be back.

Tag Lines. The Stroud Twins have one Hollywood barber in a ditch and a lather. He shaved and haircut Claude one recent morning; a half hour later his unshaven brother Clarence turned up in the shop looking for Claude. The barber almost drew his razor to slay the ghost . . . Anne Jamison sang her American concert premiere at San Diego on November 23 for the Amphion Club . . . If those bagpipes played recently on the Open House show by Tommy Freebairn-Smith sounded a little bit squeaky, Baritone Wilbur Evans asks you to have respect for their age—150 years . . . Vi Bradley and Rube Wolfe are readying a musical novelty show for the Mutual net which will be tagged "Temporarily Yours" and which will have as its theme a song of Vi's.

It was a real pleasure to act as RADIO GUIDE's ambassador recently in awarding Medals of Merit to Actor Edward G. Robinson and Hollywood Newscaster Jimmie Fidler. Robinson was like a child with a Christmas tree full of toys; Fidler was thrilled to the point of tears. Jimmie, I discovered, always eats a bowl of vegetable soup before each broadcast; restrains his

AIRIALTO LOWDOWN

BY MARTIN LEWIS

DURING my recent visit to the Hollywood aircastles, I couldn't help but notice how differently the stars dress for their broadcasts compared to the way they dress in the East. On the Coast I have seen them come to the studios in sweaters, sports shirts, slacks and even riding-habits. Personally, I admire the informality, and offhand I don't know of one broadcast where the strictly formal ruling prevails. Recently I attended the Andre Kostelanetz broadcast, which resembles, in appearance, Hollywood airings—that is, by contrast. Deems Taylor and Kostelanetz wore white-ties-and-tails. The musicians in the orchestra and Announcer Paul Douglas wore tuxedos.

Eddy Duchin, Mark Warnow and Harry Salter always show up for their programs in formal attire. As a matter of fact, Duchin's studio is even bedecked with huge baskets of flowers. This gives you an idea of how things are done in radio on each coast.

Getting back to the Kostelanetz show, I want to repeat which I said a few weeks ago: It is one of the best musical contributions on the airwaves. When not speaking into the microphone, Deems Taylor sits in a very comfortable chair in a corner of the stage. Maestro Kostelanetz heartily applauds the guest artist after each number. The entire half-hour is very impressive, and I doff my hat to the sponsor for taking so little time to advertise his product.

The other Tuesday night I visited the Al Pearce show and was surprised to see Arlene Harris, who is also known as the "Human Chatterbox," do her stuff before the microphone without a script. She memorizes every line of her bit each week, which is quite unusual in radio.

A sight for sore eyes is Bill Comstock, who is familiarly known to loudspeaker eavesdroppers as "Tizzie Lish." For some time I have been wondering what was the cause of the burst of laughter after Tizzie finishes "her" routine. The reason, my friends, is a very ungraceful, but funny, curtsy.

If you happen to walk into the CBS Playhouse of a Thursday at exactly 6 p.m. to look for Ted Collins, Kate Smith's mentor, you can almost always bet that you will find Ted in a chair with a towel wrapped around his neck and a man working over him. Ted's personal barber has a standing appointment to come to the Playhouse every week at the same time to give him a shave—and a haircut, if needed—so that he can look presentable by broadcast time.

Mentioning the Kate Smith show calls to mind the scene witnessed during a recent program which featured James Barton and Betty Garde in "The Informer." Betty fractured her ankle the previous night, and despite her doctor's urging she refused to stay away from the broadcast. That is the reason why the actress hobbled into the studio on crutches. Miss Garde apparently has heard the old theatrical slogan, "The show must go on!" Anyway, it was a grand gesture.

Songstress Jean Ellington had something of an accident, but not quite so serious. It seems Jean always steps out of her shoes before going on the air because, as she explains it, it brings her luck. After her last number at a recent broadcast, she glanced down as she stood before the microphone, and saw that only one of her shoes was lying beside her. The other had disappeared. After the show, page-boys and engineers joined in the search for the missing shoe but it was nowhere in sight. Jean hopes it's only a practical joker who went off with the footwear, for it is one of her favorite pairs of shoes. Anyway, she had to limp to an elevator, ride down to the street floor standing on one foot, and hop to a cab. Such goings on!

Major Bowes is very sad, and he has every reason to feel that way. On Friday, November 12, about 5 p.m., he received a telephone call informing time Uttal was informed he couldn't do it because he wasn't a member of the Musicians' Union. There was no time to change the script for the show, so a union musician was called in, and the few drum-beats cost $24—union minimum for the two broadcasts of the show!

Irene Wicker's eleven-year-old daughter, Nancy, made her debut as a radio actress recently when she took

So, when one of them suggested a "dream" title for their next song, the other objected. "I wish I could stop you from 'dreaming,'" he said, "so we could concentrate on another type of song." "You can't stop me from dreaming," said the other partner, laughingly. They both paused. "There's our idea," said one, "and our song!"

Thinking Out Loud: If I am not mistaken, Jack Benny made a mistake in reviving "Buck Benny Rides Again." To this eavesdropper, it has worn out its welcome . . . After listening to the second edition of M-G-M's Maxwell House show, I am convinced that Comic Ted Healy is a natural for the air. Healy will soon give you plenty of laughs in the Warner Bros. version of "Hollywood Hotel."

An informal game of "theme song" was indulged in by Mark Warnow, Tony Wons and Doris Fisher at the CBS studios recently. "Theme song" is the simple game in which one contestant hums a theme melody of a popular orchestra which the other contestant must identify. The game is simple, but taxes the memory, for there are over 200 eligible theme songs to choose from. Try it yourself sometime and keep score. Warnow recognized 128 out of 150, which isn't bad at all. In fact, it's very good!

One of the current tunes which has me humming is "Vieni Vieni." If you listen to the recording of it by Benny Goodman's quartet, you will have trouble keeping your feet still. It's plenty hot! And so are the Mills Brothers harmonizing "In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree," which makes me wonder why some sponsor doesn't put this excellent quartet on the air. They were headliners in radio some years ago, and they still are tops, in this scribbler's opinion.

Doctors and nurses at New York's Polyclinic Hospital were both amazed and startled when a patient upon whom an operation was being performed murmured clearly through the anesthetic: "Don't shoot! They got me! Here come the cops! Let 'em have it!" The doctors ordered an immediate investigation and learned that they didn't have a gangster on their hands. The patient, Harry Hofman, is a member of Phil Lord's "Gang Busters."

Romance in the Air: Barney Ross the fight champ, took his pal, Abe Lyman, with him when he called on the gal to whom he recently announced his engagement. The orchestra leader met the gal and also her sister, and they tell me Abe has fallen—but hard . . . Kathryn Cravens, CBS flying commentator, may have an important announcement to make very soon. (Don't forget to let me know when congratulations are in order, Kathryn) . . . At this writing, Dave Rubinoff's daughter, Ruby, is waiting for her papa's consent to procure her marriage license . . . Jean Yewell and Bill Thorne, members of Roy Campbell's Royalists, who are heard on the "Time of Your Life" show, will be looking for a preacher very shortly . . . In case you didn't know, Edith Adams of the "Jenny Peabody" dramas is the wife of CBS Announcer Paul Dowty.

The other day Edward MacHugh received a letter and took out a piece of paper that looked like a summons, which frightened him for the moment. A deputy clerk of the Supreme Court in Brooklyn, New York, who is an ardent fan of MacHugh's, thought of this unique method to get Edward to sing his favorite tune, "In the Garden." The novelty request had the desired effect and MacHugh sang the song.

him that the main house of his country estate in Westchester Hills, New York, consisting of sixteen rooms, had burned to the ground. If you recall the pictures that appeared in a recent issue of RADIO GUIDE, you can appreciate his loss. The Major, however, doesn't estimate it in dollars and cents. There were many things lost that were of great sentimental value to him, such as valuable paintings, and the late Mrs. Bowes' room which had been left intact since her death in March, 1934.

On a program aired over CBS, they needed a few drum-beats as part of the sound-effects background. So the announcer, Fred Uttal, was told to take care of the job. Just before broadcast the part of Margaret in "The Magic Fishbone," a Sunday dramatization by "The Singing Lady." Nancy had been playing around the studios for some time while her mother broadcast, but heretofore had been heard only as a member of an occasional chorus in her mother's shows.

Harry Salter, currently performing on the "Hit Parade" series, tells how Cliff Friend and Dave Franklin came to write "You Can't Stop Me From Dreaming"—a best-seller in the field of popular music. Friend and Franklin had each published a song hit previously with the word "dream" in the title. Their first collaboration was "When My Dream Boat Comes Home."

IN ALL of contesting, nothing is more valuable than a friend. Don't misunderstand. This is no friend you have now. This is not your mother-in-law or your sister; your friends of the bridge-table or of business; your next-door neighbor. This is a friend you've never seen—and will never see, if things go well! This is a "contest pal"—a friend in contesting alone.

There's a need for friends in contesting, because nobody is his own best critic. It can't be done. Ordinary friends won't fill the bill either. Here's why: Your family is pretty much obligated to approve anything you write because your feelings are dear to them. They don't want to hurt you. Neighbors, too, know the danger of criticizing. If they value your friendship they won't brave your scorn to help you build a better contest entry. They would rather say "It's just lovely" and let it go at that. So it goes. Almost everyone you know will hesitate to give you a frank criticism of your creation. If you have done it, it's good—to all who are close to your heart and near at hand.

They are not hypocritical in this. The fact that they know the writer influences them somewhat. They can't help wanting to like it.

Judges aren't that way. When they select an entry that means a gain for one person, they know perfectly well that hundreds of thousands of others must lose. The judges can't care on which side of the fence any one person falls.

Where can a contestant turn, then? What can he do? That is a brace of questions that experienced contestants have faced and answered. This department is trying to give beginning contestants the benefits of others' experience. Here is one of them—revealing a method of finding good critics.

Find a Friend

The procedure has been simple. When a list of winners in a big contest is announced, it is circulated in newspapers, magazines, on the air, and in contest publications, of which there are several. Contestants who follow contest news read these lists, select a likely name, and write the winner a letter. It doesn't have to be much. It's just an opener, to get an answer. As a matter of courtesy, the person who writes first generally includes with his letter a self-addressed stamped envelope. This keeps the winner from spending all his money on stamps! If an answer comes, and it's to the liking of the one who started the whole thing, a friendship may be built up. Contest winners are a friendly sort, anyway.

That solves it all. Two people who owe nothing to each other, who are not bound by any earlier friendship or relationship, and who are both obviously interested in contests, become contest critics for each other. It's as simple as that. And it works.

Sometimes an arrangement is set up so that if one member of the team is entering a certain contest, the other will stay out of it, to avoid any thought of "cribbing" entries which have been sent for criticism. More often entries are built on a cooperative basis, so that each profits from the other's study of the contest problem. Both usually have better entries because of their criticisms.

Let Us Help

To give this department's readers a flying start on this contest aid, here is an offer that has never been made by any publication, as far as we know. It's the sort of thing that will build a family of followers of contesting—and that's what this department is trying (Continued on Next Page) to do. Our offer is this: Write us a letter of not less than fifty words nor more than one hundred, on any subject related to contesting. With that letter, we'll attempt to see what your strong points are, where your contest weaknesses lie. As others do the same thing, we'll analyze their letters in the same way. And if you enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope, we'll send you the name of one of these others who seems able to help you improve your entries. If you write with beautiful adjectives and are weak on irregular verbs, we'll send you the name of a person whose grammar is perfect, but whose writing is stilted. If your ideas are good but your expression is weak, we'll send you the name of a person who is just the opposite.

When you write to each other, your correspondence and criticisms should help overcome your weaknesses. Everyone should profit. As a help for us, here's one thing we'd appreciate. If you want to ask another question about contests, don't make one letter do. To facilitate handling, requests for "contest pals" must be separated from other correspondence with this department. If you want a friend who'll consider your contest entries his personal concern, let us know. There are others who feel the same way!

Judging Entries

Most people who don't win become sceptical about the way contests are judged. Some of them wonder whether they are judged! Then they write letters right and left, stating that the real situation is that all the entries are thrown down a long stairway, with all entries which stick on the top step winning prizes; or they report that a large vat holds all entries until the contest closes—then winners are selected by burying the arm up to the elbow in the vat, grabbing an entry, and proclaiming it the best of the lot.

These might be ways of judging contests. They are not the way contests are judged.

In response to many queries, here's a typical procedure in the judging of a contest. The system varies, of course, but many sponsors and contest agencies work along these lines.

The first hurdle an entry must take, in contests in which they are required, is the proof of purchase. If the box-top or carton or wrapper is not enclosed, the entry goes immediately into that unhappy file where there is no further consideration. Ordinarily, no entries are destroyed; even those which have broken elementary rules are filed and saved. Sponsors never know what kind of litigation or complaints may be received after the close of the contest and they don't want to throw away evidence which might be valuable. Most sponsors and judges refuse to enter into any correspondence regarding such losing entries, but ordinarily they have them. It is their protection against the cranks who are the scourge of contesting.

Second step is some more routine checking. Obviously, if the contestant has not signed his name or given his address, he cannot be given a prize, so such entries are dropped. If the dealer's name and address are required, a is becoming increasingly common these days, omission of these will disqualify an entry. If the rules ask for entries on a single sheet of paper, other kinds are discarded. The top word-count may be twenty-five, yet hundreds of entries will run as high as five hundred. They don't win.

Details of form are also checked by clerks. If the rules ask for "a sentence," statements written in two sentences will not win in contests judged strictly. Other points peculiar to certain contests are checked at this stage also.

Plagiarism comes under consideration, too. If entries have passed other tests, they may be checked at this point with files of past entries to be sure that the sponsor will not be sued by someone who has already bought that statement or slogan or name and copyrighted it. Sometimes this test is reserved for entries which have passed all other requirements, to cut down on the amount of work.

These Win:

Judging varies a great deal after the checks listed above have been made. In most instances, the judges read all entries which have reached this point, and, on the basis of quality, select a hundred, a thousand, or whatever figure will give them five or ten times as many entries as there are prizes. These are retyped on plain sheets of paper, with the contestants' names indicated by code letters. Thus, in contests judged in this way, decorated entries lose their advantage before prizes are awarded.

After this list of entries has been prepared, several judges indicate their preferences, and the entries getting the most votes from the group win the prizes. Sometimes the sponsor also rates them, or makes the final selection from the top entries chosen by the judges. Some sponsors have the winners sign short affidavits stating that the entries are their own, and that they are not connected with the company, its advertising agency, or any other group excluded from competition in the contest rules. Others have their local dealers deliver winning checks or merchandise, and the consequent publicity also lets others in the same town know that a local person has won.

Enter This Week!

This Saturday the General Electric contest closes (see "Your Opportunity Guide"). Its weekly prizes are mighty attractive—and the grand prizes selected from weekly winners are about as fine as contesting ever offers. Don't let this last week get by without entering!

Here are the ten people who won $200 merchandise certificates in the fifth weekly contest: Mrs. F. L. Aitchison, St. Augustine, Fla.; Hattie Brodman, Glenside, Pa.; Norma Thompson Carpenter, Lincoln, Neb.; Mrs. Beatrice B. Forster, East Hartford, Conn.; Mrs. Ruth Ham, Omaha, Neb.; Dr. Martha Lou Helley, Knoxville, Tenn.; Mrs. Mildred Horn, New Orleans, La.; I. K. Jackson, Knoxville, Tenn.; Mrs. W. J. MacKay, Hornell, N. Y.; Mrs. O. N. Ulry, Gambier, Ohio. These people are now eligible for consideration for the $8,000 and $12,000 grand prize certificates to be applied toward the building of new homes.

Recently the General Electric Home News published letters written for this contest, picked at random. Thirty-four letters were reprinted. Some won prizes, some didn't. We don't know which ones won, but here is our choice as an unusually fine letter:

"The Electrical way of living appeals to me, particularly, because:

"With all modern electrical appliances and plenty of light, my electric bill is never over $4 per month in the winter time.

"For $4 per month we operate a washer, ironer, two radios, refrigerator, control for heat, nine 100-watt lamps in the basement. Our five-room house has six floor plugs in the living-room and two or more in every other room.

"There is nothing in the world that can give us more pleasure for $4 per month than electrical appliances. We enjoy them all very much."

The letter is more specific than any other reprinted; it does not merely eulogize electricity's benefits, it evaluates them and prices them. It doesn't use flowery adjectives nor over-state the case for electricity. We don't know who wrote it or whether it is a winner. But we're willing to wager that most judges would read it over several times; and we'll guess that there will not be many that are better. Make yours as good and it will have a good chance to bring you a prize in this excellent contest.

Yours Is The World With a Fence Around It!

The air crackles with news of world-shaking events. Newspaper headlines clamor for our attention. A king abdicates . . . a president is killed . . . a dictator turns pirate . . . a scrubwoman tortures a millionaire . . . a young movie star dies . . . a Baltimore belle decides not to visit the old home town. What does it all mean? How can one keep abreast of the news? How can one hope to understand it all?

To the pell-mell procession of contradictory world happenings, broadcasting brings many an observer, many an authority. Their voices, wise and clear, are ours if we but listen.

To the perplexed and busy listener, Radio Guide will soon bring a new department. In a daring editorial section, it will tell you when to listen.

RENAISSANCE

BY DEE LOWRANCE

PERSONALITIES in the entertainment world seem to follow a regular route: Discovery, rise to stardom, fame and fortune, disappearance and virtual oblivion. Once in a while someone in a reminiscent mood will start that "Wonder what happened to So-and-So?" game. But most ex-stars have discovered to their despair that out of sight is only too much out of mind with the public.

For this reason it is a case of man-bites-dog when a star who has not been seen for some time suddenly reappears. And when that star turns up again in a totally new field, sporting a completely new voice and looking fresher than the proverbial daisy, the fact is definitely news.

Just such news is the reappearance in the public eye of Olga Baclanova, this time as a radio star headlining her own airshow and singing in a decidedly new voice. Movie-goers will remember Baclanova as a slim, blond "menace"—a vamp, in other words. Broadwayites remember her for her work with the Musical Studio (or the younger generation) with the Moscow Art Theater when she starred in operatic roles in "Carmencita and the Soldier," "Lysistrata" "Perezola" and many others. She was presented in these operatic roles in all the leading cities in the United States.

But to radio audiences Olga Baclanova is neither the heavily dramatic actress of the films nor the operatic soprano of the stage. As mistress of ceremonies on her own program, "Olga Baclanova's Continental Revue," listeners tuning in every Friday evening hear a naturally low speaking-voice that lilts gaily, with but a touch of an accent as it announces the musical numbers, interposes remarks about performers and songs to be heard and then sings in a deep, throaty contralto. This is the new Baclanova.

The first question everybody (not having heard of her for a while, the public is naturally amazed to find her on the air) asks is "How did it happen?" The answer is not very complicated. Baclanova came to America when Morris Gest imported the Moscow Art Theater company of "Carmencita and the Soldier." After an eight-month stay the company returned to Europe, but Baclanova stayed behind to play the nun in "The Miracle," later appearing in other stage plays and touring the country.

HER tours were so successful and she became so famous that she was sought by the film industry to prove her ability in another way.

Then Hollywood called and she played her first screen role in "The Dove," with Norma Talmadge and Noah Beery. Next, Mauritz Stiller, the director who discovered Greta Garbo, cast Baclanova in Emil Jannings' "Street of Sin." That led to many other film assignments. The sudden advent of the talkies did not affect Baclanova as it did so many other foreign actors because, by 1928, she had learned to speak English.

But Baclanova had been typed from the first by the movies and she was heartily tired of never being able to play another sort of character but vamps, so she suddenly made up her mind to break completely with the films and return to her first love, the stage. Being a lady of quick decisions quickly acted upon, she left the films and was next seen in several straight plays and musicals on the Coast, playing twenty weeks in "The Cat and the Fiddle" and twenty weeks in "Grand Hotel." Next, she was starred on Broadway in Earl Carroll's "Vanities."

Meanwhile she kept on working with her voice, still as a soprano, and perfecting her English. Last winter she spent in England, playing the lead for six months in a musical comedy, "Going Places." Then she returned to America and it was shortly after her return that she made the startling discovery that she could sing in two entirely different voice ranges—the soprano she had been trained in and a low, dramatic contralto.

The contralto was an exciting discovery. It was new and Baclanova found it fun to use. Against her voice teacher's advice, she was auditioned by Mutual Broadcasting System officials and, after only one audition, signed to a long-term contract.

Mutual had been looking for someone just like Baclanova to take over a program idea they had—a "Continental Revue"—to be devoted to songs of all nations in all languages. Here was a name personality, with a voice admirably suited to the radio, who spoke four languages (Russian, English, French and German) and who could sing in two others—Spanish and Italian. What could be more "Continental"?

With only a week's notice, Mutual scheduled her program, for early every Monday evening and supplied a supporting cast, made up of musicians already familiar to radio listeners. These were a baritone, Raoul Nadeau, a French-Canadian who sings in French, Spanish and English; a twenty-four-piece orchestra under the direction of Bob Stanley, recently appointed house-conductor for Mutual; and an ensemble made up of three female and four male voices known for their featured work on other programs as, respectively, the Embassy Trio and the Key Men.

UNTIL she was signed by Mutual, Miss Baclanova had only appeared on radio as a guest artist on Rudy Vallee's hour and had made two appearances on Hammerstein's Music Hall.

The aim of the Continental Revue is to present, dramatically and with variety, all types of songs in all languages. After only two weekly broadcasts, and in response to listeners' requests for a chance to attend the broadcasts, Mutual changed the time, date and place of the program. It is now being presented, as a few sustaining programs, at the WOR Mutual Playhouse in Times Square, every Saturday evening from 8:30 to 9 p.m. EST over a Coast-to-Coast network. All of which is quite a feather in the cap of this newcomer to the airwaves, Olga Baclanova.

HOW OFTEN CAN YOU KISS AND MAKE UP?

FEW husbands can understand why a wife should turn from a pleasant companion into a shrew for one whole week in every month. You can say "I'm sorry" and kiss and make up easier before marriage than after. If you're wise and if you want to hold your husband, you won't be a three-quarter wife.

For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three ordeals of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "mild old age."

Don't be a three-quarter wife, take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and Go "Smiling Through."

THE DIVINE MARIA

ousness with which she studies a part. "Mona Lisa" is an opera which is not often sung. Its heroine goes insane. Preparing for the role, Jeritza went day after day to an actual insane asylum to study the gestures, attitudes and facial expressions of the patients. The performance was an acting triumph for her, but she will never sing the part again. She was sick in bed for three days afterward. "Those poor, unfortunate creatures," she says, "buried alive in their mental darkness!" They haunt her. She can't forget them.

SHE brings to the air the same sense of self-discipline which led her to hurl herself headlong down a flight of steps night after night, on the stage, to give realism to a certain piece of action. Her body was covered with bruises from head to toe when she returned to her dressing-room. It is the same sense of discipline and self-sacrifice which sent her to Odessa to sing for the soldiers at the end of the World War, although the Russians had no love for the Austrians, who had been shooting at them for four years, and a decoy train sent on ahead of hers was blown up with a mine.

And such unselfishness, such willingness to answer all demands which her art may make upon her is all the more admirable when one remembers that Jeritza is an extremely rich woman, who need never sing a note if she chooses not to. Not only has she the money which she herself has earned—her gowns on the stage cost hundreds of dollars, though her street clothes are often plain to the point of dowdiness—but she is the wife of Winfield Sheean, the movie producer.

Wherever she is, and in whatever home, she is a noted hostess. Her closest friends in Hollywood, outside of Max Reinhardt, whom she knew in Europe, are Paul Muni and Spencer Tracy. On the whole she prefers men friends to women, but her few intimate women friends are loyal. "If Maria likes you," one of them once said, "she would sit next to you on the gallows."

This is the woman, then, whose voice comes to you now in the songs she has made immortal on the operatic stage. A woman who grew up in the most glamorous of European capitals, who was a pet of royalty in the days when royalty meant something, who owns as many decorations as any cabinet minister, who has had songs especially written for her by the greatest of the modern operatic composers. And a woman, for all that, who is as gay and simple, as excitable and playful as a child. Her golden hair is still as long, her eyes are still as violet, her tastes are still as simple as those of the little Austrian girl who skyrocketed from the operetta stage to the opera houses of the world.

Maria Jeritza may be heard Sunday on General Motors Concert Company over a NBC network at:
EST 8:00 p.m. — CST 7:00 p.m.
MST 6:00 p.m. — PST 5:00 p.m.

THE BIG BAD BASS

blames everything on his servant, like a nice boy. Then he beats the bridegroom almost to a pulp. At about this point, you will not be surprised to hear, a fiery pit opens in the middle of the stage and Ezio is dragged down to the bad place by a lot of cute little red gentlemen with pitchforks.

"Among artist, I tell you somet'ing," Ezio says (I forgot to say that he speaks with a strong accent, just having learned English last year), "you never have a frien'."

Small wonder, Mr. Pinza! Small wonder!

But if you think Don Giovanni is something, you ought to hear him in some of his other little numbers! In "La Juive," for instance, he throws his own daughter into a tank of boiling oil. In "Rigoletto," he is a murderous young innkeeper. For twenty lira he agrees to kill a duke. But his dear little sister (dear as a snake) is in love with Dookie.

"Okay," Ezio says with a shrug. "I took the money. I gotta earn it. I'll kill somebody else."

So, just to earn his dough, he kills the heroine, crams her body into a sack and delivers her to her papa, who promptly goes nuts, or commits suicide, or something.

By now you are perhaps beginning to get a rough idea of why mothers in opera-loving families make their children be good by saying, "You behave, you little devil, or Pinza will get you."

It has gotten so bad that poor Ezio even resorts to trickery to get friends nowadays. Not long ago he sang at a concert in the Middle West. The same day, a circus came to town. A group of newspaper reporters knocked on his door.

"We're looking for Tom Thumb, the midget," they said.

Ezio was lonely. So lonely! He eyed them sadly.

"I," he informed them, "am Tom Thumb."

But they didn't believe him, because he stands six-feet-one, as previously stated. They made jering noises with their lips and went away.

People just don't understand bassos. They are like the earnest committee-woman, assigned to a reception committee, who met him at the railroad station not long ago when he was touring in concert. "Where are the other three?" she asked him, peering over his shoulder. "I thought basses always came in quartets."

OH, IF only I could be a tenor," sighs Ezio. "Tenors can even be silly and people still like them. Look at the tenor in 'Tristan.' He and the girl have a love duet that lasts an hour. He sings, 'You are mine.' She sings, 'I am yours.' He sings, 'I am yours.' She sings, 'You are mine.' After forty-five minutes of it they ought to drop dead. I am cruel, I am sinister, I am evil, I boil people in oil and stifle them and cut them up and put them in sacks—but at least, when I'm on the stage, something is happening! Tenors are silly—and people like them. Nobody likes a bass."

A boy's best friend is his mother, the old song says. If he's a basso, it may be added, she's his only friend. It's a bit like that other offense concerning which even your best friend won't tell you. If you're a bass your best friend doesn't have to tell you. You can hear yourself.

So, Wednesday night when you hear Ezio on the "Chesterfield Program," singing an aria in that glorious, roaring voice of his, and the announcer says, "Ladies and gentlemen, Mr. Pinza is about to strangle the three tiny princesses and chop off their grandfather's legs with a cleaver," don't think too harshly of him.

Really and truly, honest to gosh, all he wants is to be friendly.

Ezio Pinza may be heard Wednesday on Chesterfield Program over a CBS network at:

EST 9:00 p.m. — CST 8:00 p.m.
MST 7:00 p.m. — PST 6:00 p.m.

VOICE OF THE LISTENER

The "Voice of the Listener" letter-forum is a regular feature in Radio Guide each week, offered to the readers as a means for expressing and exchanging opinions about radio.

Each week Radio Guide will publish letters deserving our readers' attention.

CLOSE UP!

Voice of the Listener: Why do radio artists insist on having their photos taken with their mouths open? They are all doing it. We like to think of them as being beautiful, but how can we if they insist on showing us their tonsils?—Mrs. Maude Davis, Gastonville, Pa.

What did you think of "Betty Lou Riggs"?—Ed.

REMEMBER THE SICK

Dear Voice of the Listener: Answering the "kick" of Raymond Cyr, permit me to say that there would surely be "another kick" if the time of the General Motors concerts were to be changed on Sunday evenings. One should not forget the listeners who are ill and who could not listen to the concerts if they were on at a later period. Because of our ills, many of us find the relaxation we need in good music. We would ask the sponsors to remember us.—Therese de Cadillac, Quebec, Canada.

NO INTERRUPTIONS

VOL: I imagine there are hundreds of listeners who feel as I do. Why do local stations have to do commercial advertising when a very interesting chain program is in progress? For instance, the other evening while listening to the Eddie Cantor dinner program, while the master of ceremonies was introducing the second speaker, our local announcer cut in and advertised for a local automobile agency. It really was very discouraging. We would much rather hear an uninterrupted program, as we hear the local advertising about once an hour.

Is there any way of dispensing with these interruptions? So many of our good chain programs are really cut short so the local announcers can get in the commercials.—A. M. K., Portland, Ore.

Very often it happens that your local station is getting no revenue from the chain programs but is including it on the schedule in order to bring you better entertainment than is available from recordings or local talent which it would otherwise be forced to use. In order to operate, such stations must rely on local commercial announcements from which they receive a definite income. The Cantor broadcast was in the nature of a special program and it is likely that your local station had sold that particular local announcement long before the Cantor dinner had been planned.—Ed.

SWINGING THE KING

Dear VOL: I have just read Patricia Albee's letter condemning Wayne King's rendition of swing music. Miss Albee thinks it is a "grave mistake" on the part of Mr. King. Well, I most certainly think it will be a grave mistake if he stops playing it. No swing band can play "Caravan," "Satan Takes A Holiday," or "The Big Apple" better than the "Waltz King." Long live the king and long may he swing!—Doris M. Hammel, Baltimore, Md.

VOL: I agree with Patricia Albee regarding Wayne King's swing music. I wish he would stick to his smooth waltzes, as there is nothing more restful to tired nerves.—Mae E. Lynch, Nyack, N. Y.

HELP!

Voice of the Listener: In this week's RADIO GUIDE you dazzle your readers with the millions to be won in contests. And yet, there are readers of RADIO GUIDE, all good American citizens, registered at the local U. S. A. consulates wherever they may be, and who are among your really most appreciative readers because they are often lonely and homesick, who are excluded from the contests you mention because they are non-residents of the United States.

Many of us have time on our hands during a part of the year, and yet we can not go home because of a lack of cash. Don't you think you could persuade some of those generous sponsors to let us "alien Americans" in far-away lands, who can give real proof that we are Americans, also have the opportunity to while away a few lonely hours by competing in one of those big prize contests? Perhaps we would be lucky enough to win enough to have a vacation at home.

We all use the products that are advertised, but pay more for them. We feel that we are just left out and not getting our share of the prizes offered. Not that I would ever win anything, but I would at least like the privilege of being able to try, after all.

Also, a word about those Sunday night broadcasts when there are two good programs on at the same time. We can't hear them both, so please see if you can have them at different times so that we don't have to miss any of them. All I have is my radio to bring me something of the outside world, and there must be millions of others in the same exile.—Leonora Beimudez, Cardenas, Cuba.

Perhaps if more protests were received from listeners experiencing the same problems as do you, the sponsors would become aware of the seriousness of the situation. After all, it is the sponsors who are responsible for the programs, who buy the time and dictate the policies of their broadcasts. Unless they are convinced by a wave of protests that they are wrong, they will continue to believe they are presenting the right programs at the right time and in the best manner.—Ed.

DEFENDS RADIO'S HONOR

Dear VOL: In the Voice of the Listener column in RADIO GUIDE issue under date of week ending November 13, I note a listener protested against profanity on the air, under title "Too Much Profanity."

I will appreciate expressing an opinion relative to the above, due to the fact I am deeply interested in radio, and in defence of radio programs.

It has been my privilege and pleasure to be a listener to radio since the birth of same, and it gives me infinite satisfaction of this opportunity to advise, to date, I have never heard the name of the Lord taken in vain. That name has never been mentioned only with the greatest of respect and reverence. I can also advise, I have never heard one profane word used in any program.

In defence of the programs of today, and all of those behind the mike who are responsible, radio is the cleanest of all entertainment. Spice adds to the seasoning, and when taken into consideration the millions of listeners of every description, and walk of life, would be an impossibility to please each individual, therefore we have diversified programs, and the listener the option and privilege of twisting the dial.

Criticism is always welcome, and through criticism judgment can be rendered, but I can not defend criticism of something that does not exist.—W. W. Portser, Wichita, Kan.

QUESTIONS

Voice of the Listener: Why did they put Benny Goodman and Oakie College in the same hour? It seems to me that Benny Goodman is slowing up on his swing and I think it is due to putting him on a joint program. It may be the sponsor's idea, but I think it is a very bad one. Why couldn't they put him back to his Tuesday night broadcast and put Oakie College on Thursday night or some other evening? I believe that it will help the sponsor and also Benny Goodman.—Harold O. Ailor, Oak Grove, Mo.

OPEN LETTER TO JESSEL

Voice of the Listener: An open letter to Mr. George Jessel and other radio and moving picture entertainers!

Dear Mr. Jessel:
Your rating as a comedian is well up among the best ten, not the best perhaps, but yet not the worst by far, hence this letter to you rather than to the hundred or more pseudo comedians and offenders I could have addressed it to.

The major complaint, in fact the only complaint I can think of, is that you use the phrase, "you-all," in the singular when trying to imitate a southerner. Permit me to inform you, George, that regardless of any theory you or anyone else may have about it, no southerner, from the poorest Negro tenant farmer or poor "white trash" to the uppermost strata of aristocracy, ever uses "you-all" in the singular.

Indeed, one frequently notes one southerner, of most any class, approach another and say to him individually, "how are you-all?" Yet he does not use it in the singular and furthermore, it is a perfectly proper method of speech, and quaint.

He means, "How are you and ALL your folks?" When he says, "you-all come to see us," he means for him to bring his family and visit a spell.

Honestly now, even if southerners did use the phrase in the singular would it be funny? No hard feelings. George, because I think your phone confabs with your mother are clever and your patter very entertaining and funny.—William Lightfoot, Madisonville, Ky.

THE BIRTH OF CHARLIE McCARTHY

1 Frank Marshall's first step in dummy-making is to draft the head of the dummy on heavy paper. After the profile and portrait have been sketched, they're cut out for patterns

2 This is a typical "Fresh Kid" pattern, the basis of nearly all dummies. It is dated 1914, belonged to Theodore Mack

3 The pattern is traced on a block of kiln-dried, 4-ply basswood, and the outline is cut out on a band-saw

8 The jaw is band-sawed (left), then hinged in place. Afterwards, rolling eyes, winking lids, other effects which operate by springs and strings (right) are put into place

STRICTLY speaking, Charlie McCarthy is an orphan. Theodore Mack, who carved Charlie from a block of basswood in 1923, died within the year—and so did his brother Louis and son Charlie, with whom he operated his shop. Surviving, however, were two wood-working assistants, Alex Cameron and Frank Marszalkiewicz, and, buying the business from the Mack heirs, these two carried on the unique trade. In 1925, Marszalkiewicz bought Cameron's interest, and since that time has been the only man in America making ventriloquial dolls exclusively. Marszalkiewicz—whose name the ventriloquists have shortened to Marshall—was present at the birth of Charlie McCarthy, of course, might even have had a hand in his creation. But that is neither to be proved nor disproved, for in 1923 Edgar Bergen was a Northwestern University student and an obscure ventriloquist; Charlie McCarthy, just another dummy. Charlie's birth differed in no respect from that of 5,000 other dummies that Marshall has made since 1917. That its readers may attend the birth of Charlie McCarthy—using a "stand-in" for Charlie, of course—Radio Guide tours the basement workshop of Frank Marshall at 5518 Loomis Street, Chicago, watches the one-man industry create distant "relatives" of the show-stealing Charlie McCarthy.

9 When all movable effects have been put in the head of the dummy, the two halves are screwed together again

4 Using a mallet and a heavy chisel, Marshall then does the rough carving of the head

5 Using regular wood-carver's tools, Frank finishes the face of the dummy with hand chisels, sandpaper

6 Between the two center pieces of wood there is a layer of paper, so that the head can be split without being broken

7 The next step is to hollow out both halves of the head. Again Frank uses the hand chisel

10 The head is then given four coats of a special paint Frank mixes himself. It's sanded between each of the first three coats

11 Above: Wigs for Marshall's dummies are bought by the dozen from a Chicago wigmaker. Right: Hands for the dummies are carved from solid blocks

12 Making the body frame. Basswood is used, because it's soft and light, won't check or split

13 The arms and legs, stuffed with wood wool, are made of muslin Frank buys by the bolt

14 Regular boys' clothes are used on the dolls. Frank buys them at department stores at regular prices, tacks them on

15 The mouth movement is a bellows made of inner-tube patches, controlled by a bulb

16 Lever (No. 1) and the bulb control the mouth movements, cord (No. 2) works the winking eye, ball (No. 3) rolling eyes

17 Frank Marshall and three of his dummies, all "brothers under the bark"—of Charlie McCarthy. Dummies with only the movable mouth sell for $50 upward, others, more complex, up to any price the ventriloquist wants to spend. Seldom are more than seven movable effects incorporated in any one doll

MILLION-DOLLAR CALL-BOY

WORLD'S highest-paid call-boy is Johnny Roventi, the 27-year-old page-boy who has become the million-dollar trade-mark of Philip Morris cigarettes. And because he lives only as a public figure, Radio Guide scores another scoop by publishing these exclusive private-life pictures. Johnny was born in Brooklyn, sold newspapers there as a boy, later spent four years as a page-boy in New York hotels at $25 a week. In 1933, he was seen by a radio executive—and given a lifetime contract by his present sponsor. Insured by Lloyds of London for a million dollars against further growth, the 43-inch call-boy gets $300 a week, leads a life of luxury, is continually feted by celebrities, and has even been the guest of President Roosevelt!

Johnny still lives at home with his family, and has no marriage plans. His favorite sport is riding. Home-made spaghetti and ravioli are his favorite dishes.

Above: Johnny Roventi—when he still sold newspapers—dressed for his first communion at the Roman Catholic Church, Brooklyn

Above: Mrs. Roventi with Johnny. He still lives at home with his parents and four brothers and sisters

 Below: Typical of the many events Johnny attends is the rodeo held at Madison Square Garden, New York, each year

Right: Chauffeur and bodyguard of the million-dollar call-boy, Louis Oliver is with Johnny everywhere

STARS AND SATELLITES

WORKING BEHIND SCENES, THESE PEOPLE HELP BURNS AND ALLEN TO BE THE SENSATION THEY ARE

George Burns does as much work building the Burns and Allen show as anybody—but a staff of trained helpers is needed to put the program

BACK of the most important stars stand lesser luminaries, people whose names are far overshadowed by those of the stars—though they are as essential to the smooth performances heard on the radio as the stars themselves. Glory is not the lot of these unsung heroes of every-day life, for they work in the background, efficiently tending to the hundreds of necessary details that listeners never know about. They're taken for granted, yet they make radio programs the huge successes they are—and look for no praise.

Such an organization of trained helpers stands behind George Burns and Gracie Allen—in spite of the fact that George Burns is one of the few outstanding stars who keep an active hand in the building of all their broadcasts. At home, a staff must be maintained to look after Sandra and Ronny, their children, and to keep the household running smoothly while George and Gracie lead their busy radio lives. For each broadcast, gags must be thought up, scripts must be written, publicity must be checked, music must be arranged and rehearsed—all these things call for assistants. The need for various specialists can't be overlooked.

The result is that when a Burns and Allen broadcast takes the air, two people are heard as the stars—while in reality, the combined efforts of a complete organization are represented. Here are the people responsible for the show's continued success.

German-born Arthur Weyersburg is chauffeur and butler for the comedians. Driving Gracie and picking George's ties are his main duties. Arthur is married, but his wife does not live at the Burns and Allen home with him

Bandleader-Comedian Ray Noble rehearses his orchestra 12 hours a week—for the 3 numbers it plays on the air

Minnie Herbert is the Hungarian cook who works for Burns and Allen. Their favorite dish is chicken—in any form

Tony Martin, vocalist on the show, is one Burns and Allen satellite who is a star in his own right. He's featured in the movies

Lucille Helt (above) supervises the children's diets, helps Business Manager Bill Burns handle finances. Right: Maria Wenninger, Gracie's personal maid

Technician Burdo MacKenzie (below) spends a day a week in the control-room completing details for the Burns and Allen show

John P. Medbury (above) works with Harvey Helm on Burns & Allen scripts, formerly wrote their vaudeville skits

George Burns' brother, William, is financial and personal adviser of the comedians—also checks publicity

Everard Mead, representing the advertising agency, is producer, general overseer of the show, checks timing

Fredda Gibson, dressed in black lounging-pajamas, looks the successful singer she is

BOUDOIR PEEKS

About four years ago, when she first started singing, she bought this pair of bedroom slippers (what's left of them). Now they're a superstition—remind her "when"

Fredda brings out some shoes—sports, evening & afternoon models. Pays about $8 per pair for them

FREDDA GIBSON, radio "find" and Hit Parade vocalist heard over NBC Wednesday nights and CBS Saturday nights, reveals little hidden traits of her sparkling personality by cooperating with Radio Guide's photographer in a tour of her boudoir. Fredda is a young miss, still in her teens, and, as shown by these pictures, is decidedly feminine, in spite of the fact that she is often erroneously billed as "Freddie." Her singing career began about four years ago. Richard Himber heard her voice on a recording, and offered her a contract by long-distance telephone. She accepted and he billed her as "The Gibson Girl." More lucrative pastures soon beckoned to Fredda, resulting in her recently buying up her own "Gibson Girl" contract. She warbles in the "torchy" manner, and, though born and reared in Worcester, Mass., she somehow acquired a most effective southern accent.

Photos by Gene Lester

Because she comes from New England, Fredda knows something about woolen sweaters—has "about fifty million." Some cost $11. Blues and grays are her favorites. She's holding a blue cashmere

Above: In this drawer go bills, sun-glasses, receipts, cherished fan-letters. Right: Many of her 10 hats are for sportswear. Most are tailored, black, green, brown. Buys them in New York and pays from $5 to $7.50 each

SHORT WAVES

BY CHAS. A. MORRISON, president, INTERNATIONAL DX-ER'S ALLIANCE

(Figures in Parentheses Are Megacycles)

THE Federal Communications Commission has just provided allocations of frequencies to various classes of service in the newly developed portion of the radio spectrum from 25 to 300 megs. From the standpoint of space in the so-called radio ether, there now comes under regulation ten times the "ether space" that has ever before been attempted in this country.

Seven channels between 44 and 108 megs and twelve channels between 156 and 300 megs are made available for the assignment of television stations. Each visual broadcaster must have a frequency channel 6 megs (6,000 kilocycles) in width. The ordinary short-wave broadcast station requires a channel 10 kilocycles in width.

Seventy-five channels between 41.02 and 43.98 megs are made available for assignment to short-wave broadcast stations, while twenty-nine channels between 30 and 40 megs have been allotted for police use. Other services that have been assigned definite channels in this new section of the ether are aviation, relay broadcast stations, fixed service, experimental service, mobile press service, geophysical and motion-picture services, coastal and ship-harbor, special-emergency, marine-fire, and special services.

While the effect of these new allocations will not be immediately apparent to the general public, the importance of this action is the profound influence it will have upon the development of the radio industry, because in a manner it sets up guiding posts for every phase of the industry, including research, design, manufacture and practical operation. This is one of the most important basic actions taken in recent years in the development of radio, and there has now been laid the cornerstone of a vast new development of radio in its application to the service of the public.

T. Strzetelski informs me that the Polish authorities are very anxious to get reports of reception on the new programs to North America which are being radiated over Warsaw Stations SPW (13.635) and SPD (11.535) weekdays from 6 to 7 p.m. EST (5 to 6 p.m. CST) and on Sundays from 6 to 8 p.m. EST (5 to 7 p.m. CST). New verification cards, artistically designed, will be forwarded in reply to every report sent to Polskie Radio, 5 Mazowiecka Street, Warsaw, Poland.

The new 25,000-watt transmitter of Short-Wave Station COCQ (9.75), Havana, Cuba, will be inaugurated in a few days. Initial tests heard on Sunday morning, November 14, indicate that this station will be one of the loudest on the short-wave channels. It is hoped that the programs will be more of a high-class and varied nature than those that were radiated from the old station . . . COCO (6.01) is now using an increased power of 2,500 watts . . . COBC, "El Progreso Cubano," is now operating very close to its assigned frequency of 9.363 megs . . . The new Cuban list reports Station COCA (9.7), of Galiado No. 102, Havana, is now on the air, although thus far I have had no report of it being heard.

According to James Moore of San Francisco, Calif., Short-Wave Station KZRM (9.57) is being heard on Saturdays, often until 9 and 10 a.m. EST (8 and 9 a.m. CST), with a program which is entitled "The Rounds of Manila Night Clubs." The station usually signs off with the selection "The Organ Grinder's Swing," played by Johnny Jones and his orchestra.

The Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company is now making important changes at the W8XK transmitters at Saxonburg, Penn. The improvements which are being made include the construction of two new directional rhombic antennas, one to South America, beamed on Buenos Aires, and one to Europe, beamed on London. These new aerials will increase the power many times and will greatly improve reception in South America and Europe. Later it is intended to erect a directional antenna and to increase the power of the transmitter of W1XK at Millis, Mass.

John DeMyer of Lansing, Mich., suggests that listeners be on the lookout for South African amateurs on the 20-meter band between the hours of 11 p.m. and 12 mid. EST (10 and 11 p.m. CST). At 11:50 p.m. EST (10:50 p.m. CST) he was fortunate enough to hear FB8AB (14.28), located on the island of Madagascar.

Broadcasts from a radio station on horseback in the wilderness of the Amazonian jungle may be heard by any short-wave listeners in the United States fortunate enough to pick-up VP3THE, the transmitter of the Terry-Holden Expedition, which is expected to start test contacts with the NBC in the near future. Two listeners have already reported reception of VP3THE, on frequencies of 13.8 and 13.9 megs, respectively, when the station was in communication with VP3BG (14.12), of Georgetown, British Guiana. Orison W. Hungerford, the radio engineer of the expedition, is guiding the party through the jungle regions by means of triangulated radio bearings. On one of the early broadcasts from British Guiana, which the NBC expects to pick-up for its network listeners, John Melville, half-Scottish and half-Indian, who is chief of the Wapisianni tribe, will be the featured actor.

Eugene Darlington, Director of Short-Wave Broadcasting for the General Electric Company at Schenectady, N. Y., advises that his amateur station, W2ALP (28.54 and 29), is on the air Saturdays from 1 to 3 p.m. EST (12 noon to 2 p.m. CST), in communication with either G5AU in London, or W6OSH in Hollywood, Calif., and anyone hearing these transmissions is invited to send reports to him at the above address.

Champion tuner of the ultrahigh-frequencies, Clyde Criswell of Phoenix, Ariz., who has received the sound-transmissions accompanying the television programs radiated from Alexandra Palace, in London, every day except three since October 19, now adds further laurels to his remarkable record by logging the sound-channel (42 megs) accompanying the television programs from the Eiffel Tower, in Paris, France. Mr. Criswell has also received a letter to the effect that he is the first listener to report reception of General Electric's new 41-meg transmitter, W2XOY.

The first in an interesting new series of programs dealing with music in African life, which will take up the earliest known African music, will be radiated over Daventry, on Friday, December 2, at 1:40 p.m. EST (12:40 p.m. CST). Subsequent talks in this series will discuss "Witch Doctors and Music, Natural Jazz from Africa and The Keyboard Music of the Bantu." It is hoped that Professor Kirby, who is the speaker on these programs, will be able to illustrate the comments with his recordings of native African music.

Reuven Sokolovsky of 4, Nachlat-Benjamin Street, Tel-Aviv, Palestine, has informed Harold Schrock of Bloomington, Ill., that he will soon put the first short-wave transmitter in that country on the air, under the call-letters ZC6AB

A powerful new short-wave station which will be completed early in 1938 is now under construction at Singapore. A new 60,000-watt commercial short-wave telephone station for direct communications between Malaya and Great Britain is also to be built soon in the same city . . . The Greek Government has been erecting short-wave telephone stations at Mytilene, Chios and Crete, for communication with coastal shipping and Athens, Greece. The Mytilene-Athens circuit is already in operation

A letter from R. B. Oxrieder of State College, Penn., states that H1D, "Radio Opinion," Trujillo, Dominican Republic, is at present broadcasting on a frequency of 9.29 megs . . . XEWW of Mexico City, D. F., has also shifted slightly in frequency to 9.5 megs, where it is very effectively blotting out transmissions from popular Colombian Broadcaster HJ1ABE.

The American Consulate in Saigon, French Indo-China, reports that the four broadcasting stations in that country are as follows: Etablissements Boy-Landry, 213 Rue Catinat, Saigon, which operates on 11.7 megs, with 200 watts power, and on 6.03 megs, with 150 watts power (it is believed the latter frequency has been changed to 6.22 megs); Electric Entreprises, 98 Rue d'Espagne, Saigon, owned by Michael Robert, operates on 5.825 megs, with 10 watts power; Radio Club de l'Indochine, Hanoi, Tonkin, operates on 14.558 megs, with 15 watts power, and on 7.445 megs, with 100 watts power; Radio Club de l'Indochine, Haiphong, Tonkin, operates on 4.615 megs, with 15 watts power. Stations in French Indo-China do not use call-letters.

Short-wave programs of American stations are shown along with the regular listings beginning on page 29. These are indicated, for example, by (aw-11.87) in parentheses following a program listing. This means that on 11.87 megacycles the same program may also be heard over an American short-wave station. Please note that foreign stations do not always adhere precisely to their announced program schedules.

LOOKING AHEAD INTO NEXT WEEK'S RADIO GUIDE

Taking a Bow

Here we are with another new feature designed to give you a bit of advance information each week concerning some of the highspots to be found in the following issue and on your radio next week. May you find it of interest and real value.

Cinderella

One of the most interesting features in next week's issue will be a photo-story of the charming young lady who left the hills of Tennessee, worked hard, and found her efforts rewarded with stardom on the Metropolitan Opera stage. Since her opera debut, you've seen and heard Grace Moore in motion pictures and over the air. Three pages of pictures chronicling Grace Moore's story from the time she was a year old will make next week's RADIO GUIDE a special attraction for her host of admirers.

Rhythm Pays

Frank Dailey has an unusual band. Capable musicians and popular, too, for their original arrangements and rhythms, Dailey's men have proved themselves to be good businessmen as well. Working on the cooperative principle, the band has purchased the Meadowbrook Inn at Cedar Grove, New Jersey. There the band holds forth as the main attraction, with the individual members assisting the 84 employes at various auxiliary duties during rush periods. The cooperative success of Frank Dailey and his men is the reason for another special rotogravure feature next week.

Educational Feature

RADIO GUIDE next week takes another important step in its avowed intention of making this publication one of service to its readers in their enjoyment of radio. Convinced that there are large numbers of listeners who consider radio an educational medium, we have conceived a special two-page department which will bring information concerning programs of an informative and educational nature. Current news commentaries, discussions, debates, lectures, speeches, business trends, historical reviews, art developments, scientific discoveries—all have their place in radio broadcasts. In order that listeners and readers of RADIO GUIDE may know when these various programs are to be heard and pertinent information concerning them, our educational department becomes a regular feature starting next week.

Kaltenmeyer's Kids

One of the funniest shows on the air, providing wholesome comedy and rollicking entertainment for young and old, is Kaltenmeyer's Kindergarten, a regular Saturday afternoon NBC feature. Bruce Kamman started the idea six years ago last September 25, and it's been increasingly successful ever since. Next week you'll find two pages of pictures introducing the "kids" and those responsible for the program. Daisy Dean, Percy Van Schuyler, Professor August Kaltenmeyer himself, Johnny Johnson, Izzy Finkelstein, Cornelius Callahan—perhaps you've wondered what they look like. You'll find them all in next week's rotogravure.

Four Little Steps

One hears considerable about the various "steps to success," but up to now little has been said about certain four little steps which have supported such famous stars as Freddie Bartholomew, Joan Crawford, Angelo Patri, and others. They're located in Columbia's New York Studio One, and it seems that, sooner or later, everyone of importance on the air sits on them. You'll find a page of pictures in next week's RADIO GUIDE which brings to these steps the attention they deserve.

Covering the Opera

There's another service feature of RADIO GUIDE which will be of especial interest to lovers of the opera. In this week's issue on page 9 you will find an informative story concerning the Metropolitan Opera's presentation of "Manon," with Richard Crooks and Bidu Sayao in the starring roles. Each week's issue will contain such a story giving the background and important facts concerning the current opera broadcast. And with the introduction of that feature, RADIO GUIDE becomes the only publication giving the story of an opera a week before it is presented at the Metropolitan.

March of Music

A word or two about Leonard Liebbling's increasingly popular music feature to be found in each week's issue. Readers and lovers of good music are writing in to tell us of the pleasure they experience in finding this new department added to RADIO GUIDE's list of services. Leonard Liebbling gives an understandable commentary of the good music to be heard during each week's broadcasts and his informal and yet informative style has found wide favor with listeners.

Program Highlights

One must be born with an innate optimism to be able to state blandly that various features will be a part of radio schedules a week or two hence. However, we're a bit optimistic in calling your attention to some of the highlights promised for the week ending December 11. Far be it from us to state definitely that these features absolutely will be heard, but then again, it is likely that they will. For instance, on Sunday, December 5, Lawrence Tibbett, perhaps the most famous of baritones, is scheduled to be the Ford Sunday Evening Hour guest. That same evening Adolphe Menjou, filmdom's suave actor, and his wife, Verree Teasdale, are expected to be guests on the Chase and Sanborn Hour with Don Ameche, Charlie McCarthy, etc. Also on Sunday the Zenith Foundation shifts networks and will be heard over CBS at 10 p.m. EST instead of its present spot on NBC. On Wednesday evening, December 8, Kirsten Flagstad, opera's lovely soprano, will be a guest on the Chesterfield program with Andre Kostelanetz' orchestra. Your RADIO GUIDE next week will give you the dope on these highlight programs, and also there will be a wealth of information concerning other outstanding programs.
