THE TRUTH ABOUT THE BENNY-BURNS SMUGGLING CASE

RADIO DIDN'T "JUST GROW"

{ A GUEST EDITORIAL
PRESIDENT - NATIONAL

BY LENOX R. LOHR }
BROADCASTING COMPANY }

IN ALMOST every field of human endeavor we rapidly reach a point at which we accept passively feats that, when first they were made possible, we regarded as awe-inspiring. No other phase of modern life presents this phenomenon so strikingly as does radio broadcasting.

We have all come to accept as our due the wealth of entertainment and education that flows from our receiving sets. Broadcast programs have become an accepted part of our civilization. We give little thought to all that has taken place to make them an actuality.

Radio is not a passive science; it is alive in every sense; it is progressive. Great as are the manifestations of broadcasting today, they fade into insignificance before that promise which the future holds in store. None of this just happens. Radio doesn't, like Topsy, "just grow."

It is easy to sit in a comfortable chair, turn on the radio with a flick of the finger, and listen to programs that may range from the music of a symphony orchestra under the baton of a famous maestro to the pronouncement of the leader of a nation. We give little thought to the countless details which lie behind the reception of these programs. As far as the listener is concerned, the program might be said to originate within the cabinet of the receiving set in his home. It is the point at which he receives it. He is concerned with nothing else.

But behind every broadcast lies a story—a record of achievement which, to those who work with radio, is as fascinating as the program itself. Before an operatic star presents her ageless songs over the air, before we can thrill to the drama of a football game, coming to us in a play-by-play account from the fifty-yard line, there have been countless hours of work on the part of hundreds of men and women.

The story of any broadcast is a complicated one, but each piece in this jigsaw puzzle of preparation comes precisely in its proper place. Before the prima donna steps to the microphone, she, the client, program-builders and representatives of the radio station meet and plan every minute detail.

Music rights must be cleared, special orchestrations written, members of the orchestra rehearsed again and again, with the star soloist before the microphone. With the dress rehearsal come tense minutes in which to find and correct any flaw which might mar perfect performance and reception.

Each broadcast presents its special problems. A championship prize-fight is arranged months, even a year, before the men enter the ring. Broadcasting arrangements must be made just as far in advance. Plans for a football game, or a World Series, are discussed days and weeks before the final stand-by order to broadcast.

In football, the flashy halfback, swerving and sidestepping toward the goal, receives credit and acclaim. Only students of the sport notice the fine blocking, the teamwork of line and backfield. Yet it is this split-second coordination which makes the halfback's performance possible.

Radio also has its unsung heroes, backing up those who capture the spotlight. Technicians, program-directors, sound-effects men, musicians, announcers and countless others are working so that we, in our homes, may enjoy all that broadcasting offers.

During the recent crisis in Europe we saw and appreciated what the great force of radio can do in a constantly shifting situation to keep the world informed of every move by men who might call for war or peace. Not only were we told of what the dictator said, we heard him say it; we could make our own interpretations of the slightest inflection of his voice. It is probable that because the world, and America in particular, was so well and so quickly informed of world events, peace was preserved.

Again, it came to us from radio-receivers. Few of us even knew of the existence of special-events and news men, field engineers, announcers standing by in the studios, ready and anxious to see that the show go on. We heard premiers and dictators because men worked long hours, going without sleep and without food, dedicated to the traditions of their craft.

Obviously it would be impossible to pay tribute to all of those who serve radio, and through radio the public, but credit must be given to the army of amateurs throughout the country. Many of the advances of radio have come about as the result of experiments by amateurs, men who are amateurs only in that they receive no pay other than satisfaction for work well done. In every disaster, such as floods and hurricanes, they have served ably and unselfishly.

No one can expect the general public to picture this panorama of unseen activity. The success of broadcasting as an industry is acknowledgment enough. The public, however, can and is giving these men recognition in the most effective way—by seeing to it that nothing interferes with the freedom of the air, as guaranteed under the American system of broadcasting. The loyalty of those working in radio, backed by the loyalty of those radio serves, combine to assure us the untrammelled enjoyment of all that radio offers.

ANNOUNCING the winners! Ladies and gentlemen, you have chosen as your Star of Stars Joe Penner.

You have selected as your favorite radio program the Rudy Vallee Hour.

You have picked as your favorite orchestra Wayne King.

You have elected as your favorite radio team Amos 'n' Andy.

That's the way it was back in 1934.

The year of 1934 marked the beginning of radio's own Star of Stars poll. Broadcasting was much simpler then. Only four classifications were listed on our ballots.

Behind Joe Penner were Bing Crosby, Jack Benny, Eddie Cantor, Rudy Vallee, and Lanny Ross in the order named. After the Rudy Vallee Hour in the most popular program group came the Chase and Sanborn program, the Chevrolet program, One Man's Family, and Sinclair Minstrels. Behind Wayne King and his orchestra came Guy Lombardo. Among the teams, Amos 'n' Andy were followed by Burns and Allen, Myrt and Marge, the Mills Brothers, and then Jack Benny and Mary Livingstone.

This year, modern streamlined broadcasting has multiplied the number of classifications. People are listening more carefully and in more specialized fields. There is the Toscanini fan and the swing fan.

This year, in the ballots already counted, there is a special degree of interest exhibited in both educational and children's programs. Many people are telling us independently that they are anxious to improve broadcasting in general. They think the Star of Stars Ballot is the best and most direct way they can be effective.

Have you voted? Your favorite programs deserve your support. Your opinion, when multiplied by the opinions of thousands of others, gives a true picture of what all the listeners want. It is the democratic method of settling any question.

THE TRUTH ABOUT THE BURNS-BENNY SMUGGLING CASE

A Photo, a Shopgirl's Memory, and a Hotel Register Combined to Change Jack Benny's Mind

BY T. H. TRENT

When Federal sleuths began a routine investigation of a New York smuggling case, they had no idea that the trail would lead finally to George Burns and Jack Benny. It was the baggage of the elegant Albert N. Chaperau that provided the first important clues. One note from George Burns told Chaperau that Gracie was crazy about her bracelet. A memo read "See JB re clips for ML." Quite unknown to Jack Benny and George Burns, Chaperau was an imposter who had wormed his way into their friendship. As yet they had no idea of the embarrassment he was to bring to them and their wives because they permitted him "to do them a favor."—EDITOR.

IN LOS ANGELES, Federal men were checking up on Gracie Allen and Mary Livingstone and their new jewelry, on orders from New York. In Manhattan, detectives were sifting every piece of paper found in the swank Chaperau suite at the Hotel Pierre.

One piece of paper was a photograph of Jack Benny and Chaperau together on a beach. Chaperau, the now-known lawbreaker, and Jack Benny. How would the man whom the Federal investigators had got the habit of calling "Tell-O Again" laugh that one off?

The boys in the Los Angeles area had by this time succeeded in bringing the jewelry picture into sharp focus. Gracie Allen, it now developed, was not only sporting a new diamond bracelet but a new ring. Mary Livingstone was wearing not only a pair of diamond clips but a beautiful bracelet.

Now the investigators began to piece together, in a general way, the movements of Burns, Benny and Chaperau during the previous several months. Steamship records disclosed that Benny and Chaperau had been in Europe at the same time the past summer, namely, during the month of August. Benny had returned to these shores August 30, and gone straight to the Coast. He hadn't declared any purchases such as a diamond bracelet and the clips when he came in, and as a matter of fact, so far as the Los Angeles investigators could ascertain, Mary Livingstone had not been seen wearing the new "ice" until about the middle of October.

NOW, the middle of October was an incriminating period of time, in the opinion of the sleuths, for two reasons. First, Chaperau had arrived in New York from Europe the first week in October, and that is when he would have brought in the jewelry, if he had brought it in. Then, too, George Burns was in New York, at the fashionable Sherry-Netherland Hotel, the day Chaperau got in, and remained for several days afterward, arriving back in Hollywood around the middle of the month. When the investigators added the fact that not only Mary but Gracie both began to wear their new jewelry at the time in question, the boys figured they had something there.

What would the next move be? Veteran law-enforcement officials are agreed on one thing: When you seem to have the goods on a guy, put it up to him. If he is smart, he will spill all he knows, plead guilty, and get the case washed up with a minimum consumption of aspirin for all concerned. A plea of guilty saves a lot of tedious and expensive investigation, not to mention a long courtroom headache.

So it was decided that the Government's strategy should be to talk turkey to George Burns. The Los Angeles customs gentlemen dropped over to the Paramount Studios on Vine Street and had a little chat with him under the pepper trees. They told him, in a nice way, that in their humble opinion the smartest move Mr. Burns could possibly make would be to hop a plane for New York and stop down to the Federal Building and have a talk with Mr. Delaney, the Assistant U. S. Attorney.

"What for?" asked Mr. Burns.

"IT HAS something to do with smuggling diamonds into this country from Europe," the comedian was told. Then it was added that Mr. Burns, inadvertently no doubt, had been keeping bad company by being seen with this fellow Chaperau, and that he had certainly been very indiscreet in writing a note to the spurious diplomat saying that "G. is crazy about the bracelet."

It was all very sudden, shocking and embarrassing to Mr. Burns, and he just sat there, under the pepper trees, thinking faster than he had ever thought for an ad-lib. Finally, he said:

"All right, I'll go."

So George Burns, obviously scared to death, landed at Newark Airport thirty-six hours later, and was whisked off to the Federal Building in Manhattan. Those close to the case say they must hand it to George. He knew he was in bad, that a Federal prison was staring him in the face, but he didn't cry on anyone's shoulder. He talked straight and fast, like a man.

"MR. DELANEY," he said to the Assistant U. S. Attorney. "I'm willing to take my medicine."

He insisted that Gracie had known nothing about how the jewels were brought into America. He had met Chaperau through mutual friends some time previously, and hadn't the faintest idea that the man had a criminal record. When Chaperau, who was apparently a diplomatic attache and could pass through the customs without examination, explained that he often carried little items in for his friends, when he offered to help George save a piece of money, it seemed logical and not at all vicious.

So Chaperau brought in a bracelet and a ring in October and delivered them to Burns at the Sherry-Netherland Hotel.

Then U. S. Attorney Delaney took a shot in the dark: "And when Chaperau delivered the jewelry for your wife, he also gave you the jewelry to deliver to Jack Benny, for Mrs. Benny?"

"Did Chaperau tell you that?" asked Burns.

"No," said Delaney. "Chaperau isn't talking, but we know that the logical thing for him to have done would have been to give you the jewelry to deliver to Mr. Benny, inasmuch as you were here in New York when the stuff was brought in and your friend Benny was on the Coast."

Burns just sat there, staring out of a window. "Yes," he said at length, "Chaperau gave me the stuff to take out to Jack. There's no use trying to hide anything; I'm not going to sit here and lie to you."

Burns was asked if he were willing to tell his story to a grand jury, and warned that whatever he said in the jury-room would be used against him—and also against his pal, Benny.

"Sure I'll talk to the grand jury," said the funnyman. "When do I go?"

"Right now, Mr. Burns."

So Burns spilled his tale to the grand jurors and wound up with a smuggling indictment up his back. Mrs. Lauer, the Supreme Court Justice's wife, and Chaperau had also been indicted. It seemed as if the case were going to be cleaned up without much trouble now, for both Burns, Mrs. Lauer and Chaperau walked into the courtroom and pleaded guilty. Burns was fined eight thousand dollars, given a prison sentence of a year and a day, and placed on probation for the same period.

JACK BENNY, however, remained a holdout. He came to New York and appeared before the grand jury. We don't know what he told them, but we do know what they thought about what he told them, for they indicted him on three counts, one of which specifically charged him with wilfully, knowingly and unlawfully smuggling jewelry into this country. Strong, serious words, those.

Back in Hollywood, Jack was telling intimates that he was going to fight the case to a finish. He believed he had not smuggled jewelry wilfully and knowingly. He thought he could prove the case. No jury in America would

At this beautiful coast resort of Cannes, France, Jack Benny made the mistake of being photographed with Albert N. Chaperau. The picture was later to assume important proportions as a clue in the smuggling case convict him. Later his plea of "guilty" was to show a change of heart.

Meanwhile, the machinery of the Federal Government meshed into high gear.

United States custom investigators in Paris, where Benny was known to have spent part of his summer vacation, were instructed to find out at what hotel he and Mary Livingstone had stopped, and when. The answer was the Ritz. The register revealed that the Bennys had gone into the Ritz for a short stay around the second week in August, that they had been absent about ten days—somewhere—and had checked in again for another short stay nearer the end of the month.

THE next question that had to be answered was this: Assuming that Benny had bought the jewelry himself, and given it to Chaperau to bring in for him later, where would a wealthy man, stopping at the Ritz, be most likely to make such a purchase?

The investigators ran into a piece of luck here. They didn't have to look any further than the Ritz lobby, where

THE slight man with the bristling red mustache and bristling manner advanced to the front of the stage.

"Hello, everyone," he curtly greeted nine hundred and fifty assembled citizens of Oshkosh. It wasn't necessary to add "Boake Carter speaking." These nine hundred and fifty Oshkosh citizens knew that. That's why they had packed the Little Theater of Oshkosh State Teachers College. They knew Boake Carter was off the air now. They had heard that there was something mysterious and politically sinister about the case and they anticipated a speech full of Carteresque punches.

Boake Carter didn't leave them long in wonder. "Thanks to Mr. Roosevelt," he said, "I am enjoying a vacation after eight years of being a slave to the radio."

The good people of Oshkosh leaned forward and licked the lips of their curiosity. Here was dynamite and drama. Here was a man who had commanded the greatest regular audience up to that time of any radio commentator, an audience estimated conservatively at 5,000,000. Here was a man whose opinion had been respected and feared. Here was a Cyrano de Bergerac who had been ambushed, so he insisted, by a hidden enemy, and now, with sword bared, stood with his back to the wall, slashing at the invisible forces that surrounded him.

This was a different Boake Carter from the commentator who had only a few months before won many popularity-poll awards, drawn down a salary in the vicinity of $10,000 a month and gained both favorable and unfavorable notoriety as an editorial opponent of the New Deal administration. He was a slightly older, perhaps a bit wiser and certainly a much sadder man than the national figure that had been launched on the public consciousness by the Lindbergh kidnaping in 1932. The historians might call the case "The Rise and Fall of Free Speech on the Air" if Carter's viewpoint is correct. Ellery Queen, writer of detective fiction, might name it "The Boake Carter Radio Mystery." Under any title it's an interesting case—you may consider it a significant case—woven about an interesting figure of contemporary America.

We may well consider the Boake Carter situation and its implications very carefully, for if his contentions that he was the victim of official speech-gagging and that he was squeezed off the air by coercive force from Washington are true, then his predicament may have far-reaching significance for us and our radio system. Let us, however, examine the case in the light of Carter's own background and personality.

Back in the depression-scarred early thirties, Carter was just another city-room journalist in the $50.00-a-week bracket. His rewriting, copy-reading and assistant-editing for the Philadelphia Daily News earned him enough, with the help of his wife's salary, to support his wife and little girl in medium comfort. He had married Olive Richter, assistant society editor of another Philadelphia paper. They lived in an old Dutch farmhouse in Torresdale, eighteen miles from Philadelphia.

Carter's associates respected his flair for elegant writing; they liked his dynamic personality; and they tolerated his Anthony Edemish characteristics—his pompous pipe-smoking, Bond Street manner and meticulous English accent.

It was his early contact with radio that trimmed the Oxford speech down to something more nearly American. In 1930 he went on the air to describe a Rugby game over WCAU in Philadelphia, because he was the only man available who knew the game and who could give the proper British voice atmosphere to the event. The atmosphere was all right, but his listeners just couldn't understand what he was saying. That was Carter's first radio spanking and he modified his accent. Then he went on the air at WCAU as a news commentator, soon becoming a Hearst globe-trotter. Shortly afterward he obtained a sponsor, an auto-accessory company, who paid him $150.00 a week.

The Lindbergh kidnaping in 1932 gave Carter his big chance. He moved into Trenton, N. J., March 2, and over a national hook-up gave a ready-made audience its first acquaintance with the characteristics that were later to be-

Boake Carter lives with his wife, Olive, and their children in Torresdale, Pa., in a rambling home that began as an old Dutch farmhouse and was expanded by Carter. The commentator does most of his work at home, where he maintains elaborate equipment for gathering news. He has also a private studio which he had constructed in his home and from which he did his broadcasting when he was sponsored by General Foods come a unique Carter brand. In addition to his reporting, he began to editorialize, with the old reliable targets of crime and corruption to fire at. Listeners were impressed by his hand-writing-on-the-wall voice and technique that keyed in perfectly with the tenseness of the whole situation.

On the strength of his sensational leap to prominence, Philco signed him for a series which was to develop into a five-year association. His Crossley rating climbed to as high as fifteen, an unprecedented figure for a commentator, for that was a third of Charlie McCarthy's best mark. Carter's salary was in four healthy figures. Soon many commercial endorsements were making his face familiar to millions of Americans. According to numerous ads, he rode in Nashes and Pullmans, used Gillette razor-blades and Underwood typewriters.

AS CARTER'S position became more prominent, he became more and more the editorialist and outspoken trouble-shooter. By now he had moved steadily from lukewarm support of the New Deal into a one-man fort, from which he bombarded Washington and anything or anybody that wandered into the firing-zone. He began to run into trouble, too.

Commentators influence, to some extent, a large portion of public opinion. One may easily fall into the practise of assuming the role of a superior oracle on many subjects. If a commentator's confirmed opinions and strong expressions are opposed to the incumbent administration, they may and often do become very embarrassing. Boake

Carter's case was a precise example of this sort of situation.

Among his candid comments was strong talk concerning the United States Army and Navy and the stupidity of its executive officers. The Army and Navy did not enjoy it. Blasting the government in the cause of an independent flying-force, Carter got under the official hide to such an extent that it was reported they were considering a move to deport him on the grounds that he lacked naturalization papers. Boake practically told them to go rub their noses on his citizenship papers. They found he was really a bona fide American citizen, though born in Baku, Russia, the son of a British consular official. About his naturalization, Boake wrote the following pertinent passage (Commentator, April, 1937, condensed in Reader's Digest):

"The cardinal sin that I commit is that I should be so despicable as to criticize out loud in public forum. It just is 'not done,' which to the British is the same thing as betraying tradition. That is the sin I committed in becoming an American citizen! But it is a sin I shall ever be thankful that I had sense enough to commit." In 1935 Carter learned a little of how Colonel Lindbergh must have felt, for he was himself threatened with kidnaping. He hung around the WCAU studios carrying a gun and a case of jitters. "Publicity stunt! Hell, no!" he stormed. The incident blew over without any serious consequences.

Trouble came, too, from labor factions. In the course of Carter's denunciation of labor situations he incurred the active disfavor of the Philadelphia C. I. O. They picketed station WCAU and caused worry in general for the station, for Philco and for Carter.

With all this it was no wonder the cocky commentator was developing a sizable martyr complex. No wonder he was beginning to mutter darkly of being smeared by governmental agencies and of pressure being exerted to remove him from the airwaves.

Carter is either stubborn or brave, perhaps both. After the Army and Navy rumpus had quieted, he returned to the front lines. In 1937, he even got around to writing a book, which he called "I Talk as I Please." The implication of the boast was carried out in the chapters, the titles of which give a rough idea of the broad field he was covering. For example:

- "Edward of Windsor."
- "The Wagner Labor Relations Act."
- "Reorganizing the Supreme Court."
- "Italy's Sit-Down and Fascism."
- "John L. Lewis."
- "The President and Neutrality."

In his radio studio, Carter had installed a box with a panel showing numerals 5-4-3-2, indicating to him by a light how many minutes his program had to run

In his home studio and news office, Carter has teletypes for rapid communication and news-gathering for his column and his broadcasts—when on the air

Carter has written a number of books himself, and he maintains a home library, where he does extensive research. He also uses the telephone lavishly

- "Hawaiian Defenses."
- "War and the Bankers."

There was little in the broad orbit of political life that Mr. Carter did not talk about, and talk compellingly, with his own pat opinion of just what would improve any existing maladjustment. To a man who is determined to talk as "I please," any restraint may seem to constitute censorship. He is apt to read into any tabooing of subjects the dark menace of dictatorship. Only a philosopher, perhaps, could have survived the accumulation of forces that were working against him without developing something of a persecution complex. Boake Carter is not a philosopher.

It might have been pressure from labor, fear of governmental disfavor, sliding sales-figures or just business judgment which caused Philco to terminate the association with Carter early in 1938. Presently, however, he had interested General Foods in the audience that he commanded, and they turned over to him the promotion of Post Toasties and Huskies. Immediately the toreador of the air began again waving his red scarf and grabbing all the available bulls by the horns. Once more the bulls proved to be no flower-smelling Ferdinands.

but his expression is dignified and most kindly. Of course, he wears the prescribed uniform and wig—the pig-tailed one.

The symphony begins. Lovely music, as usual. His Highness nods approvingly. A great fellow, his musical menial. Already his fame has spread to envious Vienna: How the Emperor would love to have such a Kapellmeister! Now the second movement ("Bravo! Bravo!"), the third ("Schoen! Wunderbar!") and at last the finale, airy, graceful tripping to a merry close, when unexpectedly a lugubrious adagio sounds and—what is that? Two players rise, blow out their candles, leave the stage. After a moment, two more go, then another pair, and a third. The listeners glance at the Prince. He stares angrily and frowns. Where is the conductor's strict discipline? But the exodus continues, with the music now dwindled to tiny volume. The last of the players depart. Silence. The conductor turns anxiously, somewhat frightened. Gradually His Highness' frown relaxes. He smiles and understands. "My good Haydn," he says, "if all go, we may as well go too. Tell your men to get ready for Vienna."

Yes, it is Franz Joseph Haydn, the first great composer of symphony and chamber-music. Even then he had earned his nickname of "Papa" because of the prevailing cheeriness of his music and the many pranks he wrote into it. This one was his "Farewell Symphony."

With all his fine surroundings and feathers, Haydn of Esterhaz had been born (1732) the son of a humble wheelwright father and an excellent cook mother. Of his early boyhood, Joseph tells: "God, to whom I continually render thanks, gave me such great facility in music that by the time I was six I stood up like a man and sang masses in the church choir and could play a little on the clavier and violin."

As a chorister at St. Stephens' in Vienna, he got into plenty of mischief. Once when the Empress Maria Theresa caught him climbing a high scaffold in the chuchyard, she had him spanked. (Long after, when he appeared as an acclaimed musician at her court, he reminded her of the painful experience.) His boyish voice changed and

BY LEONARD LIEBLING

MUSICAL GIANT SERIES

A GALA evening in 1772 at Esterhaz Castle, ancestral seat of the famed Esterhazy family, near Eisenstadt, Austria . . .

Prince Nicolaus, head of the clan, had constructed the magnificent house, theater, and extensive gardens—all modeled after the palace at Versailles.

He lived almost the year around at Esterhaz, where he kept his own symphony orchestra, conductor and composer, the two latter combined in one person, and under rigid contract. It called for the musician's professional appearances attired in "white stockings and linen, powdered wig, either pig-tailed or tied." It required him to be "temperate, not unduly familiar, and free from vulgarity in eating, drinking and conversation." It stipulated that "he must attend daily upon His Highness punctually at a certain hour and ask for orders." It made him responsible "for any injury to the music sheets and instruments." It obliged him "to eat at the table of the household officials." It forced him to "write any composition demanded by His Highness, and not to write for anyone else or dispose of such compositions without His Highness' permission." Lastly, the services included "continual residence at Esterhaz, except when accompanying His Highness elsewhere." In short, the party of the second part signed away nearly everything except his life and nominally became a sort of feudal piece of property, only a bit removed from the standing of an upper servant. His luxurious salary was $300 per annum!

A gala evening in 1772 at Esterhaz . . . Prince Nicolaus, his family and guests are gathered in the brilliantly candle-lighted theater. Candles, too, are on the racks of the orchestra players. A program of symphony, with a new work by the composer-conductor. His Highness beams with pleasurable anticipation. Framed in glittering luxury, he feels that near-by Vienna and its royal court have nothing more munificent to offer than Esterhaz. Why, then, ever leave his castle? Here he will remain, even though he knows that the long-imprisoned conductor and players long to go to Vienna, where he takes them on the rare occasions when he opens his state mansion in the capital.

The conductor enters, makes obeisances to the aristocratic audience. They look upon a forty-year-old, sturdy man, below middle height, somewhat short-legged. His features are regular, broad forehead, strong jaw, aquiline nose, dark-gray eyes and swarthy complexion, pitted by smallpox. By no standard could he be called handsome, broke, and St. Stephens' dismissed him. Teaching and hard study followed, and Haydn endlessly scribbled compositions on every bare piece of paper he found. He prospered enough to become engaged, but his sweetheart decided to be a nun. Her prudent family persuaded Haydn to marry the younger daughter. (More of her later.) Once married, the budding composer secured a post as second conductor at Esterhaz, then presided over by Prince Paul Esterhazy, predecessor of Nicolaus.

Under the latter, Haydn had an easier time than his cast-iron contract would imply. The Prince allowed him the liberty of concert trips so that he became celebrated even as far away as London. He always spoke with gratitude of his Esterhaz years and said: "I was so long cut off from the world and heard so little music except my own that I could not help acquiring the originality for which I receive undeserved praise. Then, too, I had an orchestra and string quartet to try out my scores, a boon which I would wish for all young composers."

Always generous in his attitude toward his colleagues, his chief admiration went to Mozart. The two were the dearest of friends. To Mozart's father Haydn remarked: "I declare to you on my honor that I consider your son the greatest composer I have ever heard." Mozart called Haydn "Father." The latter spoke out often in praise of his youthful friend, asserting to critics that he considered Mozart the greatest composer living. He urged Prague to retain Mozart and expressed indignation that his friend was not engaged at some imperial court. In the period of his declining health, Mozart was often visited with what he considered evil omens. His imaginings were not unfounded, for the last time he parted with Haydn he said, "I fear that we see each other for the last time," a prediction which his death confirmed.

IN 1790 Prince Nicolaus died, leaving Haydn $500 after he had advanced his yearly pay to $390. Now there was freedom for the composer, as the next Esterhazy, purse-conscious and cutting expenses, required his Kapellmeister's presence only a few months annually. Haydn accepted an offer from Salomon, a successful London impresario, to visit there for a series of concerts. He went in 1791. Waving him good-by as the stagecoach rolled away, was Mozart, a bit envious. "Never mind," promised Salomon, "next season I'll take you too." (Next season poor Mozart lay in a pauper's grave.)

London instantly recognized Haydn's eminence and heaped unprecedented honors upon him, all of which he accepted with unflinching modesty. He wrote six new symphonies, thereafter known as the "Salomon" symphonies. Oxford made him a doctor of music, and for the occasion he performed another "new" work, one of his best, later entitled the "Oxford" symphony. Relentless historians have since discovered that the score was an older one, and that Haydn had merely added some extra orchestration to make the opus appear freshly created. "Papa"

This skull of Haydn was stolen from his grave, was later recovered and now reposes on a black-velvet cushion in a Vienna music museum drove him from home and into the arms of other women. He always looked upon himself as an ugly man and confided to a friend, "I cannot understand why so many handsome women were attracted by me." His letters tell of Mrs. Hodge, "the loveliest woman I ever saw"; and then there is the correspondence with Mrs. Schroeter. Not exactly close-mouthed about his conquests, Haydn once pointed out a packet of billet-doux from Mrs. Schroeter and commented: "An English widow who fell in love with me. She was a very pretty woman, and had I been free I certainly should have married her." Instead he dedicated three trios to the lady.

Despite his role as a Lothario, Haydn's composing industry never flagged. He wrote in all 125 symphonies, seventy-seven string quartets, about seventy trios for strings and other instrumental combinations, innumerable concertos, sonatas, songs, duets, cantatas and shorter church works, three oratorios (among them "The Creation" and "The Seasons"), and about twenty-five operas.

Most of that music reflects good humor, and even hilarity, but never quite reaches the profundity of Bach or the depth and sublimity of Beethoven. His outstandingly valuable contribution to art is his shaping of the quartet and symphony into the perfected four-movement form they represent today. Broadly speaking, Haydn's symphony is the song of the child; Mozart's of the youth; Beethoven's of the man.

HAYDN never stopped learning. A few years before his death he complained that "I have only just acquired in my old age the use of the wind instruments, and now that I do understand them, I must leave the world." He hated set rules and always advocated progress. When someone pointed out a bold departure ventured by Mozart, Haydn declared, "If he did that, he must have had a good reason for it."

On another occasion, "When something beautiful comes to me, I use it, and let grammatical errors and pedantry go hang. Art is free and must not be hampered."

Unquestionably the finest national air was written by Haydn. He had long admired England's "God Save the King," so he gave to the Austrians his noble and stirring "Gott Erhalte Franz den Kaiser." Later the Germans took the tune for their "Deutschland Ueber Alles." It remained the composer's own favorite work.

After he had finished "The Seasons" Haydn's health began to fail. And his industrious pen was almost stilled. He lived in seclusion, and his chief pleasure was to tell tales from his charmed life and show all his many medals, diplomas and other souvenirs to his friends.

His last public appearance was in 1808, at a performance of "The Creation," to which he was brought in an armchair. At the words "And there was light" Haydn's face became transfigured, he pointed upward and exclaimed, "It came from there." The old man's agitation grew so strong that he was carried out of the hall. As the armchair neared the exit, young Beethoven leaned over and kissed the master's hand and forehead. On May 26 the dying composer tottered to the piano and played his "Gott Erhalte" three times. Five days later his great soul left this world.

At his funeral an honor guard of French officers sent by Napoleon surrounded the catafalque. Mozart's Requiem was the mortuary music.

They buried Haydn in the little churchyard near his home. A dozen years later, when the Esterhazys disinterred his remains to remove them to Eisenstadt, it was found that the composer's skull had been stolen. Later recovered, it now rests on a black-velvet cushion in the museum of the Association of the Friends of Music in Vienna.

HAPPIEST COMPOSER

NUMBER TEN

Haydn was at work again!

In 1792, he started home (with a net profit of $1,750), his last months in London saddened by bitter and prolonged weeping over the news of Mozart's death.

En route, Haydn stopped at Bonn, where a young composer showed him a cantata for which he asked his distinguished elder's judgment. Later he became Haydn's pupil, Ludwig van Beethoven.

The second London visit of Haydn occurred two years later, and again he celebrated ringing triumphs with the aristocrats and the public, this time netting $6,000, after composing six more "Salomon" symphonies.

But music was not the only London activity of the Austrian visitor. He interspersed it with considerable philanthropy. His wife had turned out to be a real Xantippe whose nagging temper

Franz Joseph Haydn was born in this humble house in 1732, the son of a wheelwright father and a mother who was an excellent cook. Haydn as a boy was something of a musical prodigy, singing in church at the age of six

NEW YORK.—"What's My Name?" will occupy a half-hour of the Fred Allen spot while the comic vacations this summer. Fred Uttal and Arlene Francis will ask the questions, which makes me wonder how Uttal is going to make this show. At present he announces the Paul Whiteman show, which signs off just before it's time for Allen to go on from Radio City and the Whiteman studio is several blocks away . . . "For Men Only" will probably take over the other half-hour period as it did last summer . . . A new cigarette series will hit the air on July 3 with Larry Clinton's orchestra being featured . . . Rumor has it that Eddy Duchin's orchestra will be replaced on the Monday night ciggie show by Matty Malneck and his band, a crew that has clicked big in a Hollywood night-spot . . . While you listen to the running of the Kentucky Derby over CBS you'll be hearing plugs for the new flicker "Rose of Washington Square," because 20th Century-Fox is going to sponsor the broadcast . . . Ray Perkins is going to conduct a "Man on the Street" series of programs direct from the New York World's Fair grounds starting May 7 . . . The "Aldrich Family" sketches now heard on the Kate Smith show will definitely go on in place of Jack Benny while the comic vacations this summer, despite the fact that Ted Collins, who really should know, told me it wouldn't . . . I hear Chesterfield is looking for a new musical show for the fall, probably to replace Burns and Allen.

Kilocycle Chatter

Ben Bernie departs from the airplanes on June 25 but is expected back for the same sponsor sometime in October . . . Allen Prescott had to change the title of his new quiz series from "How's Your Memory?" to "Don't Forget" even before it hit the air, because the first title has been used in radio before . . . And if you want to know the real reason for Horace Heidt's changing the name of his orchestra from the "Brigadiers" to the "Musical Knights," it's because his former sponsor owns the name and has it copyrighted . . . Kate Smith will celebrate May 1 in a big way. It's her birthday and ninth anniversary in radio . . . "Hobby Lobby" is to feature one big-name guesstar a week from now on, but he or she must have a hobby. Heywood Broun was the first to go on the show, and after he rehearsed his part with Elman, your reporter went down in the same Radio City elevator with him. Broun turned to his companion and asked, "Is that a popular program, I've never heard it" . . . Since Lanny Ross and the Raymond Scott Quintet have been added to the Lucky Strike Hit Parade, the show has become more popular than ever . . . On May 1 "Cavalcade of America" will dramatize the inauguration of George Washington . . . Roger Pryor's band has disbanded . . . A television company has announced that they have developed an inexpensive and simple receiver that can be attached to any radio set. The Federal Communications Commission is interested and has asked the company for further details.

Dave Elman will have a "Hobby Lobby" exhibit at the New York World's Fair which will include thousands of hobbies, and about a dozen hobbyists who will be paid to exhibit their hobbies. The hobbyists will be changed weekly and will be selected from those who have appeared on the radio show . . . Peter de Rose was given a party in the Hotel Piccadilly Circus Lounge by his friends as a tribute to the success of his song "Deep Purple"

Purely Personal

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Winchell gave their young daughter Walda a big treat on her birthday by taking her to a few of the better New York night-spots. I saw them at Billy Rose's "Diamond Horseshoe," and I was sorry I didn't have a camera with me to get a picture of Sir Walter wearing one of those funny-looking souvenir hats they pass out to the customers . . . A New York columnist reports a rumor to the effect that Kay Kyser and his vocalist, Ginny Simms, are Mr. and Mrs. K. Your reporter accused them of being married about a year ago, and although they both denied it at the time, I'm still not convinced . . . One of the happiest of married couples is Andre Kostelanetz and Lily Pons. I ran into Kosty on the street as he was rushing to the Grand Central station to catch a train for his home in Connecticut. Lily called him a few minutes before and told him she had a cold and was running a fever and he seemed to be quite worried. Under his arm he had the first set of the new records he and his wife made for RCA-Victor, and he hoped she would feel better after she heard them . . . Maestro Johnny Green has been walking on air ever since his wife told him he was going to be a papa in September . . . A few weeks ago Ozzie Nelson and his frau took a week off to go to Florida. It was the first vacation they have had since they were married, so they called it a honeymoon. What makes it funny is that they took their 2½-year-old child with them.

Doris Rhodes, whose theme song is "Deep Purple," walks into CBS wearing a lovely new outfit of the same color . . . Mentioning outfits, I've been to practically every Phil Baker broadcast, which is now going into its sixteenth week, and I've yet to see the Andrews Sisters wear the same outfit twice. What a wardrobe they must have! . . . Songstress Lucille Manners is another gal with a large wardrobe. She designs all her own clothes—draws a picture of what she wants and her dressmaker does the rest . . . Phil Spitalny's gals gave a few of the boys at the Naval Academy in Annapolis a big treat when they visited there recently. A lucky committee of thirty was appointed to show them around the place . . . Alice Remsen, who sings on "Horse and Buggy Days," sprained her ankle coming out of a cab at Radio City the other day and had to be rushed to the first-aid room for treatment . . . Ork pilot Raymond Paige scraped the knuckles of his left hand on the microphone that stands beside him, when he swung his baton too energetically during rehearsal last week . . . CBS announcer Mel Allen took his first flying-lesson a couple of weeks ago and likes it very much. He wants to own his

Bing Has a Winner

Unreeled before our eyes last week was the best Bing Crosby motion picture to date, his Universal production, "East Side of Heaven," with a supporting cast including Joan Blondell, Mischa Auer and—Sandy Henville; don't forget Sandy. The carefree, frictionless life that is the very soul of Crosby in person is so naturally portrayed by this David Butler-directed story that you'll love it from start to finish. Sandy Henville, youngest member of the cast (in fact she's a ten-month-old baby girl who is a boy in the film), steals every scene in which she appears, and small wonder. Sandy is a marvelous baby—and they discovered the child in the home of a humble milkman, purveyor of bottled health to Charles Previn, the musical conductor. "East Side of Heaven," with swell music by Johnny Burke and Jimmy Monaco, goes on your must-see list.

Who Should Muzzle Whom?

Scare headline on recent issue of a Hollywood trade-paper told how Jimmie Fidler and other national air gossipers would be muzzled by a board of script review on which a member of the Motion Picture Producers Association would sit. Story went on to say that the board, "the formation of which the NBC, CBS and MBS networks had endorsed," would delete "any gossip construed 'unfair' to motion pictures." Your reporter snooped around and found not a single particle of truth in the story. Said NBC's Hollywood head man Don Gilman: "Any statement that NBC and the producers association have reached an agreement is absolutely false. NBC allows no one to pass on the acceptability of its material." Said Don Thornburgh, CBS Hollywood manager: "Under radio law we are not allowed to censor any material except for libel and in the interest of public decency. We therefore would not allow any other group to perform this action." Said Lewis A. Weiss, general manager of Mutual-Don Lee network: "We are not aware of the agreement referred to in this article, but as a matter of principle we would not permit any commentator to attack the motion-picture industry as such."

Plums and Prunes

Recommended as plumful: The Grouch Club. That husky-voiced gent who pronounces his r's as "wubbleyou's" is Arthur Q. Bryan, and very good, too . . . A. sophomore coed, who has pipes similar to a cross between Judy Garland and Kate Smith . . . and Brushed off as pruneful: The too, too similar tune of "The Hon. Mr. So-and-So," which reminds one sharply of "Miss Otis Regrets," a more amusing and melodious number . . . The failure of my boss to include Frances Langford in the Star of Stars Poll reminder list. Didn't Miss Langford win the "most popular songstress" poll for the past two years? (We apologize abjectly, Miss Langford—Ed.) . . . The inadequate, slipshod audition tests conducted a few weeks ago by a midwestern agency representative who was searching in Hollywood for a male lead type.

Snappy Grandpappy Slaphappy

After waiting a decade to be discovered as a fine air comic, Cliff Arquette, known best to listeners for his excruciating Grandpa Sneed characterizations on a motor-car hour last year, is receiving a Vallee Variety Hour build-up, using Arquette's own name with an introduction as "that slaphappy grandpappy." At this writing, Cliff's score with Vallee is three dates in a row and good prospects for more. The agency directing the Vallee show likes Arquette—and if you likewise do, chances are that Rudy soon will be chalking up another comedian discovery on his blue bedroom wall.

CHICAGO.—Open note to Lady Esther:

Dear Lady Esther:

I don't specialize in this open-letter business as Jimmie Fidler does. I don't claim to be an authority on radio programs, either. But I think I know when I see a "natural"—and I think I see one.

It is rumored, you know, that your sales figures are languishing and that you're shopping for a new radio program through an advertising agency, Pedlar and Ryan, Inc., in New York.

I have a very well-founded hunch that you and your agency are considering or may soon be considering among others a certain set-up which, I believe, would be ideal. I'd like to add my voice to its support. If it makes the grade and if it smears the black ink generously back on your sales sheet, I'll not even ask a jar of four-purpose face-cream.

I'm thinking of Franklyn MacCormack's poetry-reading and "a certain" new and novel orchestra. They both have reputations, and what is more important, they both have the exact stuff your product needs. You must emphasize sweetness, sophistication and refinement, and you must appeal to women, mustn't you? MacCormack has a tremendous following, especially among women, and he has finesse. This new and unique orchestra is definitely on the sweet side.

I've nothing against the Lombardos. They must be good to win so many popularity polls. But if you must make a change, I sincerely believe MacCormack and that certain orchestra can peddle your cosmetics with a swell piece of entertainment in each and every program package.

Open House

The Windy City may be only the point for changing trains between New York and Hollywood or the between-the-two-World's-Fairs for most of the big night-time shows and their casts, but that's okay. More and more of them are stopping in for a show or two and getting a healthy sample of the Midwest hospitality. We'll be pulling more of them in here permanently one of these days; then with its practical monopoly of daytime drama and its substantial supply of sustaining talent, the crossroads can claim to be something of a capital.

Recent visitors include Professor Quiz with his cerebrum-stickers, and Dorothy Thompson, commentator on the "Hour of Charm." Tommy Riggs stopped off to put on his show for an appreciative audience and a lot of happy Quaker Oats clients, one of whom (poor guy) was sore because he had to sit in the audience instead of the clients' booth. That Riggs is a fellow who really enjoys his work, and he's more appealing to watch and hear than to hear only. He's quite a showman, and his girlish antics, belying his hefty build, are entertaining. On the program, too, was another artist who puts a lot into and gets a lot out of a performance. You don't think about Connie Boswell being a semi-invalid when you witness the rhythmic vivacity in her body and the bubbling charm of her personality.

Eddy Duchin's program, with Morton Downey, is in town for a series, since Eddy is filling an engagement at the Palmer House. Downey, beginning at the New York World's Fair soon, flies here each week for the program. Duchin is another sight for the eyes. When you see the facial expressions, the lip movements and the body dramatizations he goes through, you can understand how he puts over so much piano expression on the air. He treats the piano as if it were human—making love to it, kidding it, and pleading with it. Downey is the fellow that would give you a shock to be around him, if you hadn't already heard that he's a screwball. He's something of a contradiction, like a canary with a parrot's personality. That vibrant tenor voice with the exclusive Downey touch has a lot of fans, and moreover Morton's breezy—and wacky—personality has won a tremendous number of friends. He introduced the show before it went on the air. It struck me that he'd make a swell emcee if you could always see him, but over the air that treble trade-mark would hide the pep and magnetism of he-man Downey.

Backstage Briefs

Everett West, the sensational new tenor "find" on Al Pearce's show, is a Chicago boy... While stopping off here for a brief vacation on his concert tour, John Carter, last year's Met Auditions winner, proudly revealed that he had accompanied Nelson Eddy's mother across country and would escort her to Nelson's concert in New York... If you want to show Alec Templeton your appreciation for his remarkable piano-playing, just send him an old-fashioned music-box. He has collected them since childhood... Fran Allison, looking not at all the way she sounds as Aunt Fanny, was one of the wows of the Easter parade, dolled in dusty rose, with three matching orchids... On his stop-off here, Tommy Riggs revealed that it's a tough job to convince people he isn't a ventriloquist and doesn't pretend to be; he does "Betty Lou" as an impersonation with no attempt to mask his lip movement.

Hats Off

It was a mighty nice, human thing to do—Les Tremayne taking those two trips to visit people just because they were genuine air friends. It's a tribute to Les and a tribute to the ties that radio engenders.

Mrs. Erickson of Milledgeville, Ill., has called herself Les' "Aunt Fanny" for five or six years. She's been such a peach of a fan that Les thought it only fair to take a little jaunt out to see her. Then the following week, while he was in this visiting spirit, Les motored all the way to Paris, Tenn., about 600 miles, to pay the same sort of visit to another real fan, Mrs. Darby. Les himself had a swell time getting acquainted with his loyal listeners and their families. And it was not a publicity gag, which makes the deeds all the more praiseworthy. It's a good example of a democratic spirit of camaraderie which is healthily prevalent among the radio folk here.

Peaches and Queen

Tom, Dick and Harry had a novel chore to perform March 30. They traveled down to Mt. Vernon in southern Illinois, called Little Egypt, to judge a contest for Egyptian peach queen. For all three it was something of a homecoming. Dick is really Marlin Hurt, of Duquoin, Ill.; Tom and Harry are Bud and Gordon Vandover, who grew up in St. Louis, Mo., and rambled around southern Illinois. The trio, a sort of "Ritz Brothers of the air" outfit, sing and cut up at present on Mutual's "Your Sunday Date" and NBC "Plantation Party." Added news sidelight is that Dick, who was one of the pioneers of double-voice performing, is only now getting deserved notice through his "Plantation Party" work as Colonel Marlin and also as the maid, Beulah.

THE RADIO PLAYBILL: THIS WEEK—"SECOND HUSBAND"

BRENDA CUMMINGS (played by Helen Menken) possesses a rare combination of dramatic genius and wholesome good sense. Married a second time, and at the beginning of a movie career, her life is full of the problems of bringing up her children, reconciling them with their stepfather; of succeeding as an actress in spite of her husband's emphatic disapproval

GRANT CUMMINGS (played by Joe Curtin) is Brenda's "second husband." A forceful character and eminently successful, Grant tries in vain to dissuade Brenda from pursuing a career, then comes to Hollywood and buys a half-interest in KDF Studios, to which she is contracted. One of his hardest tasks has been to win the love of Brenda's children

BILL CUMMINGS (played by Carleton Young) is Grant's brother. Just the opposite of Grant, he is a gambler at heart, constantly getting into scrapes. Brenda has made him her personal manager in order to help him get on his feet. Bill, recognizing in Brenda a staunch ally, always brings his troubles to her BRILLIANT Brenda Cummings, widowed mother of two children, faces two serious problems. First, she is trying to make a success of her second marriage to rich, successful Grant Cummings, who disapproves of her preoccupation with the second problem — her desire for a movie career. Milton Brownspun, head of KDF Studios, has already starred Brenda in one picture, but threatened loss of her eyesight and the jealousy of Irma Wallace, a minor actress, present new difficulties. In addition, a natural resentment on the part of her children, Fran and Dick, toward their "new" father, complicates the already serious problem of adjusting her professional work to the responsibilities of mother and wife. Greatest comfort to Brenda is her old friend, Ben Porter, who sets himself the task of smoothing out the snags which continually arise. Helen Menken's "Second Husband" is broadcast every Tuesday night over CBS at 7:30 p.m. EST; 6:30 p.m. CST; 5:30 p.m. MST; 4:30 p.m. PST.

Photographs by Charles P. Seawood

MILTON BROWNSPUN (played by Ralph Locke) is the Hollywood producer who gave Brenda her big chance in pictures. His friendship for her stood him in good stead when Grant saved him from ruin by purchasing a half-interest in KDF Studios. Brownspun's accent and constant misuse of words lends comic relief

NEXT WEEK:
"MALCOLM CLAIRE, CHILDREN'S STORIES"

IRMA WALLACE (played by Joy Hathaway) is an ambitious young woman whose success in a minor role of Brenda's first movie has encouraged her to try, by fair means or foul, to supplant Brenda as star of KDF Studios. Pretended love for Bill, who is easily led, is one of the means she uses. Irma resents Brenda's stardom, intends to ruin her if she can

BEN PORTER (played by Jay Jostyn) is Brenda's old and faithful friend, who assisted in her upbringing back in Montana. A wise and canny man who has been at Brenda's side through all the difficulties she has encountered, Porter remains in Hollywood to help her, although Grant has offered him a lucrative position in the New York office of his company

FRAN (played by Janice Gilbert) is one of Brenda's children by her first husband. At first, she and her brother resented Grant, only gradually came to accept him as their father. Until recently in New York, separated from their mother, they now go to school in Hollywood

DICK (played by Tommy Donnelly) is Brenda's son. Dick and Fran are two normal children who get into a normal amount of mischief and provide the Cummings home with plenty of excitement. For some time Brenda's chief worry, Fran and Dick now have a more pleasant role

ANDRE BARUCH is the popular announcer of "Second Husband." Born in Paris, he got his job with CBS in 1930, partly because he could speak seven languages fluently. His hobbies are painting and photography; his favorite sports, table tennis, golf, and swimming

The Screen Guild show could hardly have selected three more diverse personalities than those who will appear on this week's revue. They are Gary Cooper—the strong, silent he-man; Patsy Kelly—the strong, but not at all silent antithesis of femininity; and Deanna Durbin—the sweet and young lady, who will sing three songs on the show.

"The Professor" is in again this week in the Radio Guild series, recently resumed by NBC as a step in radio's gallant campaign to do something significant with drama. This week's is the second of two plays by Ben Lee, and, though each is a complete unit, "The Professor" has a lot to do with the story of both. In the current play, "Once Bitten," he is the man who prevents the young man from throwing away a victory once it is won. You'll like Ben Lee's sympathetic character study in this understanding dramatization.

Orson Welles may be a one-man theater, but in one respect Cornelia Otis Skinner goes him one better. She not only writes some of her own productions and directs herself in them, but she enacts all the roles herself. She's truly a one-woman show, in the literal sense, and her great distinction in the field of drama is her popularizing of the dramatic monolog, or solo drama, in which field she stands virtually alone as a prominent figure. Some of her outstanding characterizations will be heard this week when she appears on "Tune-Up Time."

Science with a whimsical twist takes its place in the broad scope of Arch Oboler's repertoire, which includes psychology, philosophy, sociology and plain old horror. This week's play in the series which NBC has turned over to the brilliant radio playwright for the exploration of radio-drama potentialities is "The Last Man." Starred in the play will be Betty Winkler, one of the foremost radio actresses, whose popularity is one of the big factors in making "Girl Alone" an outstanding favorite among serial sketches. Betty is a Chicago girl who prefers her radio work to Hollywood, despite her genuine charm. It may not have anything to do with "The Last Man," but Betty's young, lovely, and single. She's a real artist, and that will have something to do with "The Last Man."

GETTING A HEAD Sunday, NBC

The insidious monotony of throbbing tom-toms, tribal chants and the wash of tropical torrents form a weird background "The World Is Yours" this week. "Head Hunters!" There's a gruesome title that tells a true story in comparison with which Boris Karloff is a Lord Fauntleroy and Arch Oboler writes Pollyanna prattle. Of course, we don't want the kind of world where human heads are considered a prize catch. We even shudder in sympathy with our forefathers, whose danger was only the loss of scalps. We like to think of ourselves as using our heads in more noble pursuits. But there are those three human heads, shrunken to the size of an orange, reposing in their cases at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington. They aren't just relics of the savagery of the dark ages, either. They are reminders that even today there are evidences of such bestiality—and in the New World, too! Those three shrunken skulls are the skeleton in the closet of the Western Hemisphere. They hold the story which will be dramatized by "The World Is Yours," the story of the Jivaro Indians of Ecuador, South America, last remaining head-hunters of the New World. Revenge is the life motive of this strangest of cults. Shrunken heads are evidence to their ancestors of fulfilled blood obligations. The story of a soldier of fortune, a newspaper reporter, a Spaniard and an ethnologist and their experiences with the Jivaros makes a stirring, if hideous piece of drama.

BAT TO BATON Sunday, MBS

Jan Garber thought he'd like to be a big-league baseball catcher. He was playing catch one day and caught one on the nose instead of in the mitt. The pitch knocked him into the musical world. He heard the birdies sing so sweetly he decided to be a bandleader instead of just another Bill Dickey. Anyway, that's the gist of the story of Jan's switching of ambitions. He played semi-pro ball around Philadelphia until the passed ball changed his mind. He has played his violin in the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra. He organized a camp band during the War. Afterwards he went seriously into the business, gradually changing his style from hot jazz to the sweet rhythm with which his orchestra is now identified. Jan was born in Indianapolis and has an ambition to play an engagement there sometime. At present his schedule calls for an engagement at the Hotel New Yorker, beginning April 26,

The issue will get one of its many revealing treatments on the "University of Chicago Round Table." One of the foremost authorities on the war-or-peace question, Sen. Gerald P. comes this week from Great Britain—at an auspicious time. It is, of course, a week before the grand opening of the fair. Moreover, the day of the salute happens to be St. George's Day in Great Britain. It is also a time when the monarch of the British Empire is questioning the efficacy of the projected trip of the king and queen to the United States. Finally, it is a time when the clouds of a wholesale war hang lower and thicker than at any time since the last big slaughter-party. The New York World's Fair is supposed to promote better things, including international relations, for the "World of Tomorrow." The nations went grandly through the motions of subscribing to this theme in the series of radio salutes. YOUR RADIO Sunday, CBS

America is the only major country in the world in which radio is privately owned and managed, with no other restrictions except those governed by the Federal Communications Commission of operating in the public "interest, convenience and necessity." What benefits has this most democratic of radio systems given us? Certainly, almost unanimously we acknowledge the worth of radio as a medium of entertainment, education and culture. But how exactly does radio function in the public interest? Probably many listeners have ideas for the improvement of our system. If so, they can compare notes with the ideas of four other people who will participate in the "People's Platform" discussion this week. The four people are expected to be a representative of the Federal Communications Commission, an educator, a station manager and an ordinary representative listener, such as you others who will listen.

It's easy to take the Red Cross for granted. It's easy, unless you lived in the Ohio or Mississippi Valley in the winter of 1937, or on the New England coast in the fall of 1938, or unless you floundered in No Man's Land back in 1917. Then Red Cross has come to be a modern knight, attacking the dragons of flood, hurricane, famine, disease and war. The report on the activity of that organization during the past year will be presented this week at the national convention and over the air. At the opening session of the convention in Washington, Norman H. Davis, National Red Cross chairman, will be the principal speaker. That will be on Monday. On Tuesday Mr. Davis will introduce Secretary of State Cordell Hull, who will deliver an address from the Hotel Mayflower.

Arthur Krock, ace Washington correspondent of the New York paper and winner of such distinctions as Pulitzer prizes for his journalistic expertness, will be one of the guests this week. The other will be one of our famous feminine public figures, Alice Roosevelt Longworth, daughter of the famous president, Theodore Roosevelt, and widow of Nicholas Longworth, former czar of the House of Representatives. Mrs. Longworth is accustomed to speaking out in public often and forcefully. No political issues will be involved, but she can be counted on to have a prominent voice in the proceedings. Mr. Krock is one of the most distinguished journalists in the country, working for one of the most distinguished papers in the country. John

They were married in Peoria, the old home town, in 1918. They were just Marian and Jim Jordan after that—at least as far as the people of these United States were concerned—until they decided not to go to China with their vaudeville act because they couldn't get fresh milk there for their babies, and tuned to radio instead. The rest of the story of "Fibber McGee and Molly" is pretty well known. It has always been a topnotch show. It has never slipped. But Wistful Vista just wasn't the same to Fibber and to his listening friends when Molly got sick—to sick to be on the show for a long time. It's mighty good news to everybody concerned that Molly's back at her post of keeping the clamps on her husband's imagination and vocal

MARINE PAGEANT Saturday, MBS

"The fleet's in!" Thrilling words, those, and not only to the Lonely Ladies Society or to a besieged land waiting for succor. Even in these trying times not always does that cry herald an event of war. There's just something about the mighty warriors of the waters—something that causes chests to swell with pride, eyes to sparkle with the thrill of glamour, and nerves to relax with reassurance. The same old color and excitement will be attached when the United States fleet, comprising the Atlantic and Pacific squadrons, muscles its mighty wedges into New York harbor Saturday. The pageantry will be available to listeners. Mutual has arranged to cover the arrival of the 150 battle-wagons. The broadcast will come from strategic points—from the air, from the tower of the George Washington Bridge, and from vantage-points aboard key vessels.

TALE OF TURF Saturday, CBS

Say "Man o' War," and probably more people in America will think of race-horses than will think of a battleship. A lot of people will be interested, too, to know that the grand old horse of turfdom will be the guest of honor for a broadcast this week. He may even whinny a greeting. Many of the people who thrill to the sport of kings, and even many of the inveterate dopesters who "play" the horses are a bit hazy about all that goes on behind the track. Just what all goes into the training of a racing champion? What is the job of the breeder, the trainer, the stablehand, the jockey? How many hands as well as hoofs take part in building up to the winning of a fat purse? A week before one of racing's biggest events, the Kentucky Derby, "Americans at Work" presents a picture of the men behind the horses. The whole broadcast will originate in the stables of Man o' War, one of the most famous horses of all time and sire or grandsire of such champions as War Admiral. Paul Sullivan will conduct the broadcast from the Faraway Farm near Lexington, Ky.

The March of Music

Edited by LEONARD LIEBLING

"... An ampler Ether, a diviner Air..."—Wordsworth

Spare That Key!

RUMORS run that Magic Key broadcasts are to cease soon, although the report does not detail whether the withdrawal is temporary or permanent. It is to be hoped that the gossipers are wrong on both counts, as the cause of art on the radio is harmed whenever any program featuring good music goes off the air.

Consternation spread when General Motors discontinued its remarkable series with orchestra and famous soloists several seasons ago, and nothing came to take its place. The possible defection of Magic Key would make the void even more pronounced and lamentable.

There have always been far too few sponsored musical programs of high class, and with the disappearance of Magic Key, only Ford and Firestone would be upholding the banner.

It is difficult to understand why the large majority of sponsors shy at presenting such broadcasts. One can only imagine that they do not realize how wide an interest there is in the best music, and how tremendously it has spread through the very medium of radio. Anyone conversant with the statistics on the subject, especially the artists and managers, could verify how greatly attendance at concerts has increased during the past few years, and such competent observers are unanimous in crediting radio with the phenomenon.

It is true that the much-quoted and feared Crossley reports have not been favorable to sponsored musical programs; but some of us, with all due deference to that agency, are strongly inclined to doubt the conclusions represented by its figures. The incontrovertible fact remains that most listeners tune in to the broadcasts of Toscanini, the Metropolitan Opera and the New York Philharmonic, all of them unsponsored. Why, then, would the case be different if those performances were commercially supported? Truth to tell, the average listener far prefers to be spared the boostings of the salesman-announcers on any program, but especially between the numbers of a symphonic concert or the acts of an opera. All of us realize the necessity of such advertising when a sponsor spends a great deal of money on a broadcast, but that does not lessen the impatience of dialers expected to endure the flaming recommendations, solicitations and entreaties.

New York taxicabs are now almost universally provided with radios. Time and again when I have stepped into them while the chauffeur had his loud-speaker attuned to music, the program was not jazz, but a solo by a renowned singer, a symphony, an opera, or even chamber-music. Let the Crossley people ponder on that!

Speaking Up

By V. Vidal

With the RADIO GUIDE Star of Stars poll going full swing, the March of Music takes a backward glance over the winter season and picks out its own favorites.

The New York Philharmonic and NBC Symphony Orchestras tie for first place among symphonic programs. The Philharmonic broadcasts were more varied, with their top-rank soloists, of whom Walter Gieseking stands out for his performance of Rachmaninoff's third piano concerto. Toscanini gave new life and meaning to some of the most familiar examples of the orchestral repertoire. He practically brought down the house with the "William Tell" overture. He made Dvorak's "New World" symphony sound as though the ink were still wet on the manuscript. And his all-Wagner concert was the best argument in favor of Wagner in concert form that we've ever heard. That is, it was—until the last "Tristan and Isolde" performance from the Metropolitan, which easily takes the prize for this year's opera broadcasts. Both Flagstad and Melchior sounded fresher and in better voice than at any time during the season. And both remain our favorites among the more familiar artists.

Among the newcomers, the most promising was the brilliant young Hungarian violinist, Robert Virovai. The clean fluency and warm emotion of his playing made both his Philharmonic and Ford performances sensational.

The Ford Sunday Evening Hour still remains the best of the commercial music programs. Highlights were the two Richard Tauber appearances and Franco Ghione's program selections, the least hackneyed of the series.

FOR programs which featured unfamiliar music, Alfred Wallenstein's Bach Cantata series deserves a special medal. It is the most courageous musical experiment on the air this year. It has probably done more than any other program to remove the "high-brow" stamp from Bach's music. And it was swell entertainment as well as a first-class educational feature.

Walter Damrosch's Music Appreciation Hour is still tops to teach the layman something about music, although the Milestones in Music ran him a close second, especially with its emphasis on American compositions. And among the latter, the best new work of the season was Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings," played by Toscanini.

We've left out a lot of excellent programs in this summary, but not because we didn't like them. We only liked them a little less than those we have mentioned.

Adolf Busch, violinist with the New York Philharmonic over a CBS network, Sunday afternoon

SPRING always seems to stimulate choral activity and there are some fine examples on the air this week.

Dubensky's new orchestral work is a novelty, and an instrument almost never heard on the air is starred on the Curtis Institute broadcast. Carlos Salzedo, renowned harpist, presents ten of his pupils.

SUNDAY, APRIL 23

Dr. Charles Courboin, organist, MBS. Three Chorale Preludes (Roger Sessions), Serenata (William Timmings), American Rhapsody (Pietro Yon).

Eastern 12:00 noon Central 11:00 a.m. Pacific 9:00 a.m.

The Radio City Music Hall of the Air, NBC. Tales of Hoffman (Offenbach). Olympia, Giulietta, Antonia (Rosemarie Brancato); Niklaus (Louise Bernhardt); Hoffmann (Jan Pearce); Krestel, Luther, Lindolf (Eugene Fry); Spalzani, Nathaniel (Louis Purdy); Cochenille (Robert Landrum); Coppelius, Dr. Miracle, Hermann (Llope de Olivares). Conductor Erno Rapee.

Jacques Offenbach (1819-1880) composed nearly 100 operettas, many of which were the rage of Paris and the rest of the world. The "Tales of Hoffman" (an opera-comique) was premiered in 1881. The title derives from the name of E. T. A. Hoffmann, German composer, conductor, poet and novelist, much admired for his varied talents by Weber, Beethoven, Schumann, Carlyle.

Offenbach's work treats three stories by Hoffmann, and has him relating them as his own love adventures to a group of his fellow students in a Nuremberg wine-cellar. After a short prologue, each of the three acts concerns itself with one of the tales; first, the hero's romantic attachment to a beautiful girl, who turns out to be a mechanical doll; then his betrayal by the faithless Venetian courtesan, Giulietta; lastly his wild passion for a soprano, Antonia, whose frail health moves him to make her promise never to sing again. A sort of Tribby, she is hypnotized by Dr. Miracle, who causes her to warble herself to death. In an epilogue, the mocking students leave Hoffmann to the consolations of his Muse. Is it necessary to mention the most famous number in this opera? The reader is given one guess.

The Magic Key of RCA, NBC. Symphony orchestra, conducted by Frank Black. Guests.

Eastern 2:00 p.m. Central 1:00 p.m. Pacific 11:00 a.m.

The New York Philharmonic Orchestra, CBS. John Barbirolli, conductor; Adolf Busch, violinist. Suite "Anno 1600" (Dubensky), String Orchestra;

Violin Concerto (Beethoven), Adolf Busch and Orchestra; Symphony No. 7 (Schubert), The Orchestra.

Arcaidy Dubensky (born Russia, 1890), came to America in 1921 and is a violinist in the orchestra that produces his new work today. His compositions are many and include some for most unusual mediums, like "Fugue for 18 Violins," "Variations for Eight Clarinets," "Suite for Four Trumpets" and other assemblings of the same kind.

"Anno 1600" is described by the composer merely as being written "in the style of that period." History tells that the period knew such eminent masters as Peri and Monteverde, Italian composers of the earliest forms of opera; Carissimi, distinguished for great church music; and Byrd and Gibbons, leaders in the classical English school.

Schubert's monumental C major symphony came to creation in the last year of his life, 1828. From the introduction of the first theme, by four horns, to the finale (aptly described as "a tidal climax of awe-inspiring and triumphant might") the work is a long-drawn-out (Schumann called it "of heavenly length") proclamation of romantic beauty and eloquence. Schubert never heard his opus performed.

Beethoven's Concerto needs no new encomiums or annotation. Almost every music-lover is familiar with the mysterious for drum-taps which open the work and have persistent rhythmic re-statement during the first movement. However, the effect is not original with Beethoven, but with Bach (who anticipated everyone else in music), for he starts a chorus exactly similarly in his "Christmas Oratorio."

Bach Cantata Series, MBS. Alfred Wallenstein, conductor. Genevieve Rowe, soprano; Mary Hopple, contralto; William Hain, tenor; Raoul Nadeau, baritone. Cantata No. 112.

The Ford Sunday Evening Hour, CBS. Fritz Reiner, conductor; Ezio Pinza, basso. Overture to "Fidelio" (Beethoven), The Orchestra; Largo from "Serse" (Handel), Ezio Pinza and Orchestra; Gigue in G (Bach), The Orchestra; Chi Vuole Innamorarsi (Scarlatti), Che Fiero Costume (Legrenzi), Ezio Pinza and Orchestra; Gypsy Song and Fandango from "Spanish Caprice" (Rimsky-Korsakoff), The Orchestra; "Il lacerato spirito" from "Simon Boccanegra" (Verdi), Ezio Pinza and Orchestra; Valse Triste (Sibelius), The Orchestra; Sweet and Low (Barnby), Now Is the Month of Maying (Morley), A Cappella Chorus; Navarra (Albeniz-Arbois), The Orchestra.

Handel's (1685-1759) long-neglected operas have come into some vogue again during recent years in Europe, and delighted with their wealth of elevated music. One of them is "Serse" (Xerxes).

Kathryn Meisle, contralto, will be this week's guest of the "Kraft Music Hall," Thursday night, NBC and modern listeners were astonished to find in it the famous Largo, originally written as a tenor aria, describing the cool shade of a palm tree. The Largo has become so popular as an instrumental number that there are hundreds of arrangements for solo as well as ensemble combinations.

Scarlatti was a contemporary of Handel, and Legrenzi died just after the latter's birth. Verdi's "Simon Boccanegra" (1857) is one of the strong attractions at the Metropolitan. The story of the opera was told in this department when the work was broadcast.

Sibelius' universally liked "Valse Triste," when first heard by Richard Strauss, made him exclaim: "So my Finnish colleague also writes tunes that can be whistled." Which may or may not be accepted by Sibelius as a compliment.

The soft sound of the harp is not often heard on the air, and therefore today's program comes with all the more purpose and effect. While most of the great composers did not especially feature the harp except as a part of the orchestra, it has developed into a greatly liked solo instrument, particularly because of certain outstanding artists, of whom Carlos Salzedo is the present leading exponent. He has advanced harp-playing immeasurably with the invention of many new technical effects and novel ways of shading tone. The performing group on this program are all his pupils.

One of the oldest instruments, the harp dates back into the mists of antiquity, for its picture was found by modern archeologists, painted about 1300 B. C., on the walls of a burying-ground at Thebes. (By the way, the best harps of today are made by an American firm in Chicago.) In former days, John and Thomas Aptommas (brothers), Elias Parish Alvars, Hasselmanns and Robert Bochsa (soloist to Napoleon) were admired stars of the instrument. Salzedo is also a composer of note, an expert transcriptionist, pianist and conductor.

Ezio Pinza, Metropolitan Opera basso, will be heard this week on the "Ford Sunday Evening Hour"

Something About Piano Concertos

By Leonard Lieblich

MUCH confusion exists in some unprofessional minds regarding the exact meaning of the word "Concerto." And no wonder, when they hear it applied to an opus for small orchestra, or for large orchestra, or for one or more solo instruments with orchestral accompaniment. In each case, however, the title is appropriate.

Originally the Italian term, Concerto (plural Concerti) comes from the Latin "concertus," the sounding together of separate parts. It was first used about 1603 by Viadana, designating his motets for voices and organ. He called them "Church Concerti." Torelli (1650-1708) pioneered in writing purely instrumental Concertos and constructed them in the form of the three-movement classical sonata. He was followed by Corelli and Vivaldi, and about a century later by Bach and Handel.

In the beginning, Concertos were more like symphonies, and consisted of two kinds, the Concerto da Camera (Chamber Concerto) for small orchestra and small halls; and Concerto Grosso, for full orchestra and larger auditoriums. Of the latter, those by Bach and Handel are the most familiar to the listeners of today. The Concerto came to have its chief meaning (still in vogue) a composition for one, two, and three or more instruments with orchestral accompaniment.

Toward the end of the eighteenth century, the Concerto began to acquire more individual and personal character, especially as the piano construction improved and the keyboard gave soloists greater opportunity for their own expressive art and technical skill. Handel was the real originator of that type of Concerto, broadening its ornamentation and introducing the cadenza when the orchestra comes to a full stop toward the end of the first and last movements and the soloist is allowed to interpolate his own showy, unaccompanied passages, but expected to base them on themes already heard. The purpose was to let the player exhibit his prowess as an extemporizer and virtuoso. Some of the cadenzas must have been of little worth, for later composers mostly wrote their own and incorporated them into the body of the score, as was the case generally with Mozart and Beethoven. In our day, the cadenza is obsolete except when written into their works by the composers.

The regular Concerto form usually has three contrasting movements, but sometimes only one or two, or as many as four. Bach's (and his sons') harpsichord Concertos are nearly all in three, and were written for one, two, three and four pianos. Mozart wrote for one, two, and three pianos, and set the style of the modern Concerto, which opposes the single instrument, with its individual possibilities, to a large orchestra. His Concertos (twenty-five or so) are simpler than Beethoven's five, which he enriched with novel touches by giving more prominence to the orchestra; occasionally making no pause between the second (slow) and third movements; and dispensing when he liked with the almost invariable practise of Mozart to start his Concertos with a rather lengthy orchestral introduction. Beethoven's fourth (G Major) starts with the piano alone, and his fifth ("Emperor") brings in the soloist at the second measure. Both scores are quite symphonic, more or less treating the piano as an integral part of the orchestra.

There were no further marked changes in the Concerto until the revolutionary Liszt, in his A Major and E Flat essays, fashioned them into one-movement works, with no pauses; although broadly speaking they still retained the Sonata basis, with one slow section set between livelier ones.

It is not necessary (even if it were feasible) to mention here all the important Concertos written after Bach and Handel, as many of them have fallen into disuse owing to changes of taste on the part of the performers and the public. A few of Bach's and Mozart's still are heard regularly, especially the lovely Mozart A Major and D Minor. Also Beethoven's Nos. 3, 4 and 5 retain popularity.

Brahms' two touch Parnassian heights, with the B Flat leading in appeal. Liszt's E Flat Major, a forthright virtuoso piece, continues to attract when done romantically enough and with the required glittering execution. Mendelssohn's two Concertos, once widely performed, are in the discard. Of Saint-Saens' five, only the G Minor appears occasionally. Grieg's lone Concerto is trotted out at intervals by some pianists, but not as often as Schumann's solitary opus with its indestructible charm; Chopin's two (now slightly redolent of lavender and old lace); Tschaiakowsky's B Flat Minor and Rubinstein's D Minor, both consistently melodious and exciting.

Such formerly much-used Concertos as those by Henselt, Litolff, MacDowell, and d'Albert are treasured chiefly by musical oldsters, and have been swallowed in the maw of time, together with those of Haydn, Hummel and other early classicists. Of the many hundreds that came to creation before 1900, not more than two dozen at most still hold a recognized place on the concert platform.

There are beetle-browed purists (including some selfish conductors) who say that Concertos have no justifiable place on a symphony program because the piano and orchestra do not really blend perfectly. Against that opinion is the fact that Bach, Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven and Brahms composed such works and played them in public. That ought to prove something conclusively.

AT HOME WITH RAY NOBLE

1. On the "Burns and Allen" program (Fri., CBS) Ray Noble is an expert orchestra-leader and an expert stooge with his extremely naive attempts to be a comedian. At home in Beverly Hills, Ray and his wife, Gladys, romp like a couple of kids

2. Ray is one of those camera fiends. He spends his spare time at home snapping posed or candid photographs of his wife and his two pets, a cat and a dog, with the musical names of Minor and Major

3. Every day is workday for an eminent maestro like Noble, even if it's only for a few hours at home setting up a new arrangement of a number. Mrs. Noble lends moral support to the English bandleader

BEHIND JERRY COOPER'S SONG

1. At WLW in Cincinnati, where "Vocal Varieties" originates for NBC (Tues., Thurs., Fri.), baritone Jerry Cooper (left) goes into a huddle with arranger Harry Raibourne and producer Sammy Fuller

2. With the number selected and arranged, Jerry and the director, the DeVore Sisters trio and the vocal ensemble get together to talk over the fine points of the presentation, then the rehearsal begins

3. Great pains are taken as Jerry rehearses his number with Hal Edison's orchestra, striving for best effects. After several hours the piece is ready for one of those smooth, melodic Tums' "Vocal Varieties" programs, voted tops in a recent radio poll

LISTENING TO LEARN

Person-to-Person

● Ohio State University in Columbus fosters more radio-education activity, research and study than any other educational institution in America. The home grounds of the evaluation of school-broadcasts experts I. Keith Tyler, J. Wayne Wrightstone and Alton O'Steen, it is a natural headquarters for the biggest annual radio-education meeting in this country. In 1930 the Institute for Education by Radio was established at OSU with the purpose of providing an annual confab for joint discussion by broadcasters and educators of the problems of educational broadcasting. On May 1, 2 and 3 the institute will stage its tenth annual meeting in Columbus, looking forward to an attendance of more than five hundred leading radio-education advocates from all parts of the United States.

● Columbia network's Professor Frederick is no longer alone in the Coast-to-Coast field as a reviewer of books. Joseph Henry Jackson, who has been broadcasting a book-review series on the Pacific Coast continuously for fifteen years, made his debut on Easter Sunday as a regular weekly feature of a Coast-to-Coast NBC network (5:30 p.m. EST, 4:30 CST, 3:30 MST, 2:30 PST). His style is homey, conversational, as he imagines himself discussing the latest books with a group of three or four people seated in a living-room. Jackson also conducts a daily book column, and a Sunday book section for the San Francisco Chronicle.

● Sterling Fisher, Columbia's director of education and talks, assured radio and radio-education representation at the White House Conference on Children in a Democracy by accepting Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins' invitation to join this confab. The meeting was called by President Roosevelt because of his conviction that a society founded upon democratic principles finds both its aim and its security in the happiness and well-being of its people, and especially its children. Miss Perkins will act as chairman at this parley, and Katherine Lenroot, chief of the Department of Labor children's bureau, will be executive secretary. Miss Lenroot is known to many through radio, having conducted NBC's The Child Grows Up series for several seasons.

● A comprehensive report revealing the kind and cost of equipment needed to make best use of the ultra-high-frequencies that were set aside for educational broadcasting by the Federal Communications Commission may be secured free upon request from the Radio Project of the U. S. Office of Education in Washington, D. C.

● Rutgers University's radio activity takes form in three educational broadcasts over station WOR, two of which are carried by the Mutual network. The programs, prepared by Rutgers' extension service, are both of an informational nature: Radio Garden Club, aired Tuesdays and Fridays, features timely and practical information for the amateur on all types of plant problems; The Homemakers Forum, aired Thursdays, is devoted to home-making in its various phases. The Forum is now engaged in a three-month series on child health, developed in cooperation with the New Jersey medical and N. J. dental societies.

Boston's World University

There is a radio station in Boston, Massachusetts, that has earned the title "World University of the Air." Broadcasting a full schedule of educational programs free from advertising, this station—WIXAL, with a powerful short-wave transmitter—may be heard in all parts of the world. Pioneering for education in the short-wave field, WIXAL has gained many followers throughout the world and points out to educators many of the advantages of short-wave broadcasting. With the introduction of WIXAR, a 20,000-watt sister-station to WIXAL, the World Wide Broadcasting Foundation now finds it possible to broadcast its interesting educational programs simultaneously on two different frequencies (see "On Short Waves," page 36).

WIXAL was founded in 1935 by Walter S. Lemmon, a young radio engineer with President Wilson, who envisioned in short-wave broadcasting a tremendous power for sending forth messages of education, culture, and good-will.

Education by radio, an uncharted field, was entirely a new idea to listeners. But under Mr. Lemmon's guidance, speakers were selected from the many colleges and universities in and near Boston. Faculty members presented enlightening material in an interesting, informal manner so that the average listener might find something of lasting value and enjoyment in the broadcast.

Each program—then and now—has behind it the underlying aim of WIXAL—"dedicated to enlightenment."

Today, this unique station offers many opportunities to listeners to continue their education, to keep abreast with world events. For men in all walks of life and all ages, there is the

Monday evening "Course on Modern Radio," broadcast at 8 p.m. EST (6.04 megs), by Dr. C. Davis Belcher. Printed texts supplement the lectures for students. On Friday evenings at 8 p.m. EST (6.04 megs) Prof. Hilding N. Carlson broadcasts a course on "Aviation," with texts.

For music-lovers, WIXAL conducts a course on "Understanding Music" each Wednesday evening at 8 p.m. EST (6.04 megs), by Mr. Donald J. Grout of Harvard University—with lectures on composers of the periods, their works, and an illustrative concert of the material.

"Round Table on American Public Policy," Tuesday evenings at 7:30 p.m. EST (6.04 megs) brings to students of government many thought-provoking discussions, led by Prof. William Y. Elliott of Harvard University, Department of Government, and associates from government, civil, legal, and educational fields.

"The Living Bible" series by Prof. John C. Scammell of Boston University, "Splendors of Literature," "The World of Natural Science," The Harvard University series, "L'Heure Symphonique," "Home Towns of America," "Behind the Headlines of the Week," "Tuesday Socials," with Louise F. Ryerson interviewing interesting, average people—these are just a few of the broadcasts each week.

Good-will broadcasts to Greece, France, Scandinavia, Latin America, the Netherlands, in the languages of these countries, round out WIXAL's goal "to foster, cultivate and encourage the spirit of international understanding, and to promote the enlightenment of individuals throughout the world."

Printed programs may be secured by writing to WIXAL, the University Club, Boston, Mass., U. S. A.

Child Listening-Habits

Should parents supervise the listening-habits of their children? This question is arousing a great deal of attention today, and in the minds of expert authorities there is no doubt that the choice of programs in a child's listening schedule is definitely the parents' responsibility. Assuming that this is a mother's and father's job, to whom can they refer for reliable advice on the problem? Needless to say, it is wisest to follow the counsel and recommendations of those who are in close daily contact with both radio and education—this puts the problem right in the laps of the radio-educator. For years while the rest of the world, including not radio-minded educators, have been ignoring the potentialities of broadcasting, the radio-educator has been studying the many phases of this new medium of communication, and now is best prepared to answer these perplexing questions that finally are coming to the attention of the public.

Another question that this new problem raises is: How should parents decide what programs are suitable for child consumption? RADIO GUIDE's own Educational Program Classifier will prove to be a great help. In this monthly index are listed the outstanding educational programs that are presented over the networks, classified according to allied interests. Using this classifier, parents can immediately put their fingers on several network broadcasts that are ideal for the child's listening-schedule as well as their own. Further information about network programs may be found in pamphlets that are distributed free by NBC and CBS. Sustaining Educational and Cultural Broadcasts is the title of Columbia's leaflet that lists the CBS programs ideal for child and adult schedules; NBC Presents is the title of the National Broadcasting Company's pamphlet that serves this same purpose.

In making up a child's listening-schedule, local programs should not be overlooked. In every community there is available today a great number of worth-while local programs that belong in the child's schedule and, in many cases, will serve the purpose in mind much better than network programs. Where and when to find these good local programs is a question for which the community's board of education or parent-teacher organization should have the answer. In Chicago, Cleveland, Toledo, New York, San Francisco, Los Angeles—to mention only a few examples—the local board of education makes available to the public a list of recommended radio programs that may be heard over stations in that vicinity, and this list includes the network programs as well as those broadcast as local features.

This new parent responsibility is not as difficult to cope with as it may appear at first glance. There are radio-educators in every community that are able to give reliable information, advice and help on this problem, and will gladly do so upon request. However, if you are unable to get help in your own community, send a post card to this department and you will be forwarded a list of suggested aids that have been prepared and approved by reliable authorities. Address your request for information about how parents may wisely direct their children's listening-habits to the Education Editor, RADIO GUIDE, Chicago.

DISCARD YOUR OLD AERIAL

It is Most Likely Corroded and Has Poor or Loose Noisy Connections

No MORE BUZZES, CLICKS and shorts from summer rains and winter snow and sleet by using an F & H Capacity Aerial Eliminator. Anyone can connect and adjust in a moment's time in the radio set—occupies only 1 1/2 inch by 4 inch space behind the set, yet enables your radio to operate without an aerial and tune in stations over the entire broadcast band frequencies and short wave channels.

Attach this unit to your radio—make your set anywhere—no more roof climbing, unsightly lead-in or aerial wires.

NOT NEW—VALUE ALREADY PROVED

On the market five years, 100,000 customers in U.S. and foreign countries. In use from the Arctic Region of Norway to the Tropics of Africa. Each factory tested on actual long distance reception. Cannot harm set—Easily connected to any radio, including radios having no ground or radios for double aerial. Note: It will not operate on battery or automobile radios.

5 DAYS TRIAL Mail coupon at once. Pay postman $1.00 plus a satisfied, return within five days and your dollar will be refunded without question.

WHAT USERS SAY

Does away with Aerial and leads—Just place an F & H Capacity Aerial Eliminator (size 1 1/2 in. x 4 in.) within your set. Simple instructions furnished with unit. Easily connected by anyone to aerial and ground of set. Your radio will then operate and tune in the same manner as if it were connected to an aerial. Operates on both short and long waves.

F & H Radio Laboratories, Dept. 80, Fargo, N. Dak.
 Send F & H Capacity Aerial, with postage 31 plus few cents postage. If not pleased will return within 5 days for $1 refund. Check here if sending $1 with order—thus saving postage cost—same refund guaranteed. Check here if interested in dealer's proposition.

Short-wave programs of American stations are shown along with the regular listings beginning on page 20. These are indicated, for example, by (sw-11.87) in parentheses following a program listing. This means that on 11.87 megacycles the same program may also be heard over an American short-wave station. Please note that foreign stations do not always adhere precisely to their announced program schedules.

NEWS COMMENTARIES FROM EUROPE: All ears are again tuned to Europe as another crisis in the struggle between the democracies and dictator countries for control of Central Europe becomes imminent. News commentaries overshadow all other radio programs in importance at the moment. You can tune in English news periods direct from the capitals of the "Big Four" countries, as follows: London, daily, at 4:30 p.m., over GSD and GSP; at 7:45 p.m., over GSB and GSD, and at 11 p.m., over GSB, GSC and GSD; Paris, daily, at 11 p.m., over TPB7; Berlin, daily, at 6:00, 8:15 and 10:30 p.m., over DJB, DJD and DJZ; and Rome, daily at 7:30 p.m. EST, over ZR03, ZR04, ZR06 and IRF. Don't miss H. Wickham Steed's shrewd political analysis, "World Affairs," to be heard from London, on Wednesday, April 26, at 7:30 p.m. EST, over GSB and GSD. The "Press Review," from Berlin, on Wednesdays at 9 p.m. EST, over DJB, DJD and DJZ is of interest from the standpoint of giving the totalitarian slant on current affairs.

On Saturday, April 29, the English soccer season once again comes to a spectacular climax with the Cup final, which will be broadcast in its entirety, starting at 8:50 a.m. EST, over stations GSF, GSG and GSJ.

From April 23 to May 28, the eyes and ears of the world's music-lovers will be focused on London, attracted by what is probably the greatest organized event in Britain's musical history—the London Music Festival. The festival has attracted the most distinguished conductors and artists of the present day—Toscanini, Bruno Walter, Sir Thomas Beecham and Kreisler, to mention only a few. The festival will include nine concerts of chamber-music, nine opera and ballet performances, thirteen orchestral concerts, nine programs of church music and six dramatic performances. Nine of the principal orchestral concerts and forty-six events in the five-week program will be broadcast over the Empire stations at Daventry, England. The inaugural ceremony, which will take the form of a service at Westminster Abbey, the address being given by the Archbishop of York, will be broadcast on Sunday, April 23, at 4:30 a.m. EST, over GSF, GSG and GSJ. On Monday, April 23, at 2:15 p.m. EST, the opening orchestral concert at Queen's Hall, in which Bruno Walter is to conduct the London Symphony Orchestra, will be broadcast over stations GSD and GSG. The Lerner String Quartet will be heard on Thursday, April 27, at 2:30 p.m. EST, over GSD and GSG.

Don Williams of Santa Ana, Calif., writes the new Saigon, French Indo-China station on 6.116 megs, broadcasts an English program week-days from 8:45 to 9 a.m., and on Sundays from 8 to 9 a.m. EST. The power is 1,000 watts. Reports are solicited, and these should be sent to P. O. Box 238, Saigon, French Indo-China.

Weekly transmissions are being made by the New York World's Fair Radio Club on Fridays at 9:45 and 10:15 p.m. EST. The first QST originates on the 5-meter band and is rebroadcast by numerous amateur stations on other bands. The second transmission originates on the 10-meter band and is also rebroadcast by various amateurs on other frequencies. Kay I. Kibling, W2HXQ, 336 Oakland Beach Ave., Rye, N. Y., chairman of the entertainment committee of the club, rebroadcasts both transmissions on 3.95 and 14.2 megs, respectively. Anyone hearing these unique transmissions should report them both to the World's Fair Radio Club, Flushing, N. Y., and to the station over which they heard the rebroadcast. By doing so they will receive a QSL card from both places, and the World's Fair Radio Club cards are most attractive.

Radio Press Service reports a clandestine short-wave transmitter is in operation in or near Damascus, Syria. During the broadcasts, which take place on a frequency of approximately 9.68 megs, an Arab voice may be heard inciting the Syrians to resistance and to a rising.

SHORT-WAVE SHORTS: According to information from Roumania, an experimental station at Bucharest, power 300 watts, is broadcasting experimentally on a frequency of 9.23 megs. Listeners, however, report this transmitter as being heard on a frequency of 8.57 megs irregularly from 8:15 to 10:30 a.m. and from 4 to 7 p.m. EST. . . . The General Electric Company of Schenectady, New York, has received a license for its new 100,000-watt transmitter, which will soon be put into operation on any one of the following frequencies: 6.19, 9.53 or 21.59 megs. Other 100,000-watt short-wave transmitters are said to be in operation at Rome, Italy, and at Moscow, U. S. S. R. The one at Moscow is being used in connection with experimental broadcasts over RV96 (9.52 and 15.18) . . . With the introduction of WIXAL, a 20,000-watt sister-station to WIXAL, the World Wide Broadcasting Foundation of Boston, Mass., now finds it possible to broadcast its interesting educational programs simultaneously on two different frequencies. . . . The new Guatemala City station, TGWC, relays TGWA on 2.32 megs, rather than 2.308 megs previously reported.

Jacques Jacquemard of Alger, Algeria, writes commercial station TPZ (8.95) of that city, is broadcasting a program to Asia on the first and third Tuesday in each month, starting at 4 p.m. EST. . . . XEQQ (6.98), a new Mexico City station, is relaying broadcast station XEQ of that city, nightly.

As an "Oddity in the News," on Walter Winchell's program of April 9, he reported German and Italian short-wave stations were said to be broadcasting in the 40-meter amateur band, off of their assigned frequencies. The amateurs were consequently doing their best to drown out these encroaching transmissions. During the Cairo Conference of 1938, that section of the 40-meter amateur band extending from 7.2 to 7.3 megs, inclusively, was reassigned as a new broadcast band for the use of European short-wave stations, to be effective on September 1, 1939. The following frequencies in this band have already been assigned: 7.22 to 2R011 at Rome, Italy; 7.28 to TPB11 at Paris, France; 7.29 to DJI at Berlin, Germany, and two tentative frequencies to Great Britain for use in connection with two powerful new transmitters being built for express service on this band. These stations, therefore, have a legal right to broadcast on these frequencies after September 1, and presumably to conduct test transmissions prior to that date. The only station that thus far has been broadcasting at all regularly on this new band is, oddly enough, "Paris Mondial" (7.28) of Paris, France, a democratic station, and not one of the dictator-operated stations of Germany or Italy.

one of the biggest gem outfits in the country had a branch showcase. The jewel firm's records disclosed that during the time the Bennys were paying their first visit to the hostelry, someone had purchased a diamond bracelet and two clips to match—three pieces that tallied exactly with the stuff Mary wore in Hollywood later. Inasmuch as the transaction had been cash on delivery, and delivery had been made forthwith, no record of the purchaser had been kept.

Was the purchaser Buck Benny? The answer to that one wasn't to be forthcoming so easily, for the salesgirl who had handled the transaction was no longer in the jewel firm's employ. What was more, her whereabouts was not known!

The Federal gentlemen gritted their teeth and decided to open Napoleon's tomb, if necessary, in order to find that girl. The search lasted two weeks, and the young lady was found working elsewhere, with nothing in the world to hide. She identified photographs of Jack Benny and Mary Livingstone.

Now we come back to that snapshot that had been found in Chaperau's effects—the one of him and Jack Benny. The two boys were in bathing-suits in the picture. There was, of course, no way of knowing where it had been taken, but from the appearances of things in the background of the shot it looked as if the camera had clicked somewhere along the French Riviera.

After it was discovered that Benny had bought the jewelry in Paris, that picture assumed paramount importance. It was now a clew to the belief that Chaperau and Benny had actually contacted one another in Europe. And proof of a contact of the two men there was necessary to round out the Government's case. That contact would serve as the connecting link in the chain of guilty circumstances. Benny had bought the jewelry in Paris, you see, and hadn't declared it upon his return to the United States. That indicated that he himself didn't bring it in, because George Burns admitted that Chaperau gave it to him for delivery. Thus, if the customs men could prove that Benny contacted Chaperau anywhere on the other side, following purchase of the jewelry, that would constitute an overt, or guilty, act on Benny's part, in view of the unearthed evidence relating to what had happened after the actual purchase of the bracelet and clips. Records at the Ritz revealed that the Bennys had had luggage forwarded from there to Cannes, the famous French watering-resort.

Next investigative point: Cannes. The investigators found that the Bennys had registered at one hotel while Albert N. Chaperau had been at another hostelry not far away! Not only that, but bellboys and other hotel attaches recalled Benny and Chaperau visiting each other.

Now the sleuths examined the beach, and found the actual background that had appeared in the photo seized in the New York hotel suite! It reads a little like fiction, but it happens to be cold fact.

It was ascertained, too, that when the Bennys left Cannes for the return to Paris, the elegant Mr. Chaperau was at the railroad depot to see them off.

So now there was quite a case. It is doubtful if Benny realized just how strong it was, for he continued to insist he was going to the mat with Uncle Sam.

It is understood that Jack Benny even went to his sponsors and offered to tear up his long-term contract if his troubles embarrassed them, and that they refused his generosity.

Just what caused Jack not to go to the mat with Uncle Sam will probably never be known publicly. After several postponements, his case came to trial and he walked into the Federal Court April 4, 1939, and pleaded guilty to three counts charging smuggling. John T. Cahill, newly appointed U. S. Attorney—chosen by President Roosevelt for the express purpose of taking some of the New York courtroom thunder away from District Attorney Tom Dewey—read a lengthy statement about Buck to Judge Vincent L. Leibell.

Judge Leibell fined Benny $10,000, gave him a suspended sentence of a year and a day, and placed him on probation for a similar period. Counting civil fines automatically imposed on the undeclared jewelry and the dough Jack laid out to buy it back from Uncle Sam, Mary's bracelet and clips ran him over $14,000, just ten times the original cost. George Burns' purchases ran equally high.

As to turning over the jewelry to Chaperau, United States Attorney Cahill had this to say:

"During the latter part of August, defendant Benny and his wife went to Cannes, France, where they encountered codefendant Chaperau, whom they had previously met in Hollywood, California, the year before. While in Cannes, defendant Benny aided and abetted codefendant Chaperau to defraud the United States Customs by turning over the said jewelry to Chaperau at the Cannes railway station, just prior to the departure of defendant Benny and his wife."

The Judge gave Buck the tongue-lashing of his life, telling him that this country had been pretty good to him, what with Benny's huge earnings, but that Benny had been pretty small in his attempt to evade payment of a measly $700 duty.

After the trial and sentence, Jack passed out statements of explanation to members of the press which read:

"I feel that some explanation is due my fans of the radio and screen concerning the circumstances of this case:

"I was accused of having brought a bracelet and two clips into the United States without paying duty. There is not now and never has been any dispute about the facts. The jewels, which cost $1,400, were bought in France as a present to my wife. They were brought into the United States by Mr. Chaperau, whom I had previously met as a businessman of standing. I understood from him that there would be a perfectly legitimate saving in the amount of duty which would have to be paid. I had no intention of defrauding the Government.

"However, subsequent to my plea of not guilty, and after my attorneys and the United States District Attorney's office in New York had each made a thorough investigation and freely exchanged the results obtained, I was informed by my attorneys that in their opinion my actions constituted violation of customs laws of the United States.

"Therefore I instructed them to change my plea. I would have changed my plea long before had it not been that I was required to be constantly at the studio in Hollywood engaged in the making of my latest motion picture, as well as for my broadcasts.

"I want to take this opportunity of assuring my friends and fans of both the radio and screen that while I know that this is a technical violation, I had no guilty knowledge that a crime was to be committed or was being committed. I regret most deeply that through a stupid mistake on my part, however natural and honest it may have been under the circumstances, I have offended against the laws of the United States.

"I claim no credit for never having violated any laws before; I am appreciative of my opportunities and privileges as an American citizen. I have endeavored through many years of hard work to bring happiness and clean entertainment to people who listen to my programs and who see my pictures. And it is because of this fact that I most deeply regret that I should have so stupidly and carelessly become involved in a situation of this kind."

Thus ended the big diamond-smuggling mystery that brought two of radio's best-loved performers within the very shadow of prison doors. How two such smart men could be taken in by Chaperau is understood by those who know Chaperau's record. He was a smooth operator.

One bright rift in the whole messy business is that the Burnses and Bennys are still the good friends they have always been. Despite the fact that George had to "tell on" his pal, their understanding is such that they are close as ever. So are their wives.

As for their popularity, if the week-to-week polls conducted by audience-measurement agencies mean anything, it has not decreased. The fact that Jack Benny paid Uncle Sam $256,000 in income tax last year is evidence to many that regardless of the newspaper headlines, he is doing his full share to support his Government.

As We Go to Press

New York, April 11, 1939.—The final chapter to the smuggling plots was written in Federal Court in New York today when Mrs. Elma N. Lauer, wife of Supreme Court Justice Edgar J. Lauer, was sentenced to three months in jail and fined $2,500. She must remain on probation for one year and a day. Judge Vincent L. Leibell imposed sentence on her, expressing sympathy but pointing out that she had brought her troubles on herself. Mrs. Lauer had to be assisted from the courtroom, as she was in a dazed condition. When the sentence was pronounced she virtually collapsed. U. S. Attorney John T. Cahill had recommended a six-month penalty to the court, pointing out that Mrs. Lauer was not a first-offender. In 1937, she was caught smuggling clothes and jewelry and was fined $10,000, he recalled. Said Judge Leibell: "You have suffered from an insane vanity. Your constant breaches of the customs laws are comparable to the thefts of those people who are called kleptomaniacs and for which there seems to be no cure." The judge refused to allow her to return home for a few days before starting her sentence.

Albert N. Chaperau, chief instigator of the plot, was sentenced in Federal Court here today to five years in prison and fined $5,000. He appeared passive and indifferent while in court.

As a side issue of the case, it was revealed today that Rosa Weber, the German maid formerly employed by the Lauers and who gave the Government the tip when she got mad at Mrs. Lauer over a Nazi remark, may receive $6,712 as a reward for her information.

WHY YOU CAN'T AFFORD TO MISS NEXT WEEK'S

RADIO GUIDE

1 Next week, 999 programs change time and network. And all because Chicago and New York, two great radio centers, swing over to daylight-saving time. Your RADIO GUIDE will give you indispensable information about all the changes which affect your favorite programs. From this point of view alone, next week's issue will be one of the year's most important.

2 Also in next week's RADIO GUIDE will be a dynamic and timely article about POISONED NEWS—and how it gets into our homes. Do newspapers and radio stations paint the news to suit their own bias? Did we get the real truth of the 1936 presidential campaign or of the Spanish War or of the latest Hollywood divorce scandal? What do we know of the propaganda agencies—of Japan, of governmental departments, of big business—which may be the first phase of a system which will give us POISONED NEWS? The article will attempt to answer such questions. It will ask others.

GOOD RECORDS

A department reviewing the recordings of your radio favorites

Tannhaeuser Twice:

When Wagner's "Tannhaeuser" got its first hearing in Dresden, there was no ballet included, no Venusberg music. Wagner was forced to write the ballet music to satisfy the Paris audiences, and even then he met with great disfavor for putting it at the very beginning of the opera instead of in the second act so that the smart set might not miss it should they get up from the dinner table late and miss Act I, as they always did. The smug young society boys of the Paris Jockey Club tried twice to ruin the performance with catcalls, whistles, and pipes, but the opera and Mr. Wagner have survived the unmannerly reception given it some eighty years ago in Paris.

This month, two freshly recorded versions of the famous and magnificent overture to "Tannhaeuser" are released—one the Dresden version without the Venusberg music, the other the so-called Paris version. It is typical of the two conductors of these two sets that British Sir Thomas Beecham, the conservative, should present the straight overture, in a scholarly and powerful reading to be sure . . . (Three sides. Columbia set 123. $3.25) . . . and that Leopold Stokowski, on the other hand, may be counted on to play more on the showmanship, the emotionalism, and the longer version, which includes the celestial Venusberg music. Mr. Stokowski recorded this work some years ago for Victor, but the new album brings it up to 1939 mechanical standards, adds a women's chorus where needed, and also includes three sides of the Prelude to Act III of the opera. This set is naturally longer and more expensive. (Victor album 530. $9), but your decision should rest in your personal likings—the academic or the theatrical.

Debussy Once:

Walter Gieseking widens your scope of the Preludes by Claude Debussy way beyond the much-played "Girl with the Flaxen Hair" and "Wind in the Plain" in a new album of twelve sides. There are varied moods and pictures, but all in the mystic and formless Debussy style, constantly enjoyable. The matching of artist and composer is well-nigh perfect, and it's a happy buy for the pianophile or the Debussy fan. (Columbia set 352). An added pocket is provided for the alert citizen who already bought the "Engulfed Cathedral," so that it all makes a cozy batch.

Artie Shaw:

Considerable pooh-poohing is going on in musical circles as to the merit of Artie Shaw's band and clarinetting, and whether his phenomenal rise to fame is due him. This department has not yet mentioned his album of six records on Bluebird, which runs the gamut of popular American tunes such as "My Heart Stood Still," "Lover, Come Back to Me," a couple of hidden beauties such as "Supper Time" from "As Thousands Cheer," and "Villia" from Vienna. The album doesn't pack the wallop of his previous records, but makes a fat package for the Shaw fan. Artie has two new records of merit out—one with a fine Dietz-Schwartz tune on it that never got its deserved success, "Alone Together" from "Flying Colors," with "Rose Room" on the other side.

Even newer is "Deep Purple" and a notable original by Mr. Shaw, "Pastel Blue." This department thinks that Benny Goodman still produces the finer music, but enjoys seeing Artie Shaw gather what he may while he may. (Bluebird all.)

LOUIS ARMSTRONG has made his best platter since "Shadrack" in a rollicking thing with a real spiritual choir called "When the Saints Go Marching In." (Decca.)

SIDNEY BECHET of the soprano sax casts a real spell in an extraordinary tune called "Chant in the Night." (Vocalion.)

MARY LOU WILLIAMS, pianist with Andy Kirk's band, wrote "Mary's Idea," which she and the band turn out for one of the better buys of the swing crop. (Decca.)

Pop:

"Little Sir Echo" is one of those simple tunes that catch on fast. It's the one that has "hello, hello, hello" all through it, and has attracted all the syrupy bands and singers such as Lombardo on Decca, Wayne King on Victor, and Dick Todd on Bluebird. No, thanks.

"Shoemaker's Holiday" supplies one of the best Jimmy Lunceford records in some time, and should be given a whirl. (Vocalion.)

Dr. Christian's Thrill

The visit of Crown Prince Frederik and Crown Princess Ingrid, of Denmark, to Los Angeles, was the occasion for a civic luncheon in their honor, which was attended by prominent Danes, among them the most notable Jean Hersholt of the screen and "Dr. Christian" of the air. The latter was thrilled to the heights when a waiter placed a note from the Crown Prince on his table. The Prince had recognized Hersholt from his motion pictures and sent the note with "best wishes, which your many friends in Denmark asked me to accord you." Hersholt read the note and tears came into his eyes . . . Incidentally, "Dr. Christian" returns to the air this fall.

Just Too Automatic

Kay St. Germain, the Cantor songbird and Bergen heart, long dreamed of two possessions—a convertible coupe and a dog to ride in it beside her. Bergen provided the latter, but only last week did she acquire the former—a shiny new model with an electric-operated push-button top. The dog, "Skinnay Dugan," watched the top operate just once, then fled from the car and refused to ride in it again. A few days later, Miss St. Germain parked the coupe on a steep hill while visiting a friend. Both heard a crash. They looked down the hill and saw the car wrapped around a tree. Its brake had released itself and the result was a heap of junk. Kay has decided that dogs know more about cars than she does.

The C. I. O. of Philadelphia threatened a boycott of General Foods. Boake went into a huddle with them and emerged to declare an armed truce. Economic self-preservation usually precedes preservation of opinion, so Boake announced he would suspend all direct comment on labor, adding as a prop to his stubborn convictions that he would thus let the labor group flounder in obscurity.

Still he continued to flail the New Deal administration and to insist privately that he was being pulled apart on the Washington rack. Newspaperman Paul Y. Anderson reported that Ambassador Joseph E. Davies, whose wife is a member of the General Foods board of directors, wanted to fire Carter from his cereal-selling radio job, but that Colby M. Chester, president of General Foods and a persistent administration heckler, turned thumbs down on any bouncing of Boake.

Be that as it may, came the termination of Carter's contract with General Foods, and it was not renewed. All parties concerned announced that there were no governmental implications, but that fall-time changes caused Carter's program to reach the West Coast too early and no better time was available. So on August 26 of last year Carter sang his radio swan-song, and General Foods put Joe Penner in his air spot.

Immediately thereafter, Carter set out on a speaking-tour across the country to keep the echoes of his downfall ringing. From Schenectady to Sacramento he packed them into auditoriums.

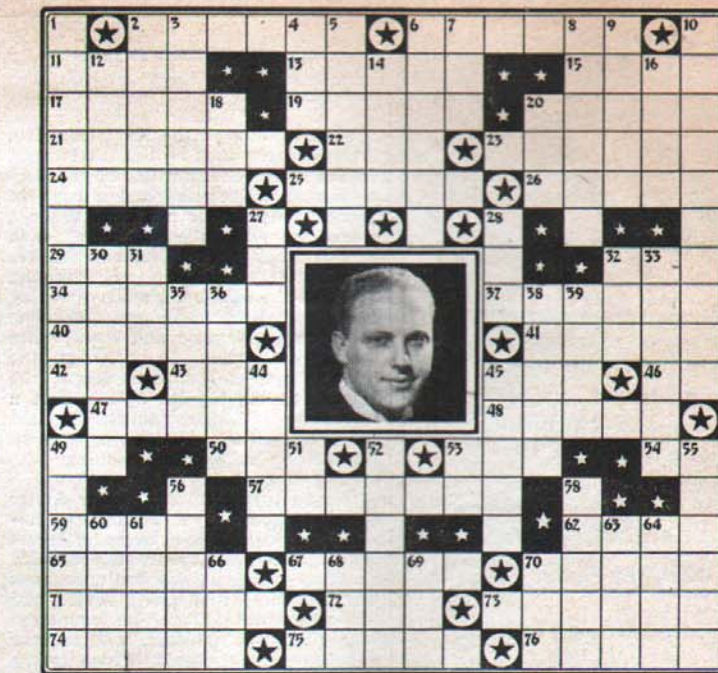

Everywhere he went he told the same story in forceful, specific terms. The story was, in effect, that indirectly the "Great White Father in Washington" had forced him off the air. He said Stephen Early, White House press secretary, had "suggested" to the CBS lobbyist that the radio would possibly be "unable to find time for General Foods."

It is the Carter theory that, since radio stations must apply to the Federal Communications Commission every six months for renewal of operating licenses, and since the F. C. C. has the power to determine whether the stations have acted in the public interest, all broadcasting is in the throes of indirect censorship. There is yet no official censorship in radio, but it is undeniable that the licensing and judging power of the F. C. C. is a potential whip. NBC recalls with a shudder the Mae West affair, and CBS keeps in mind the Orson Welles episode. Both cases gave rise to censorship scares.

Does this fear complex of the broadcasters constitute indirect censorship? That is Boake Carter's contention.

If Carter was the victim of such a situation, he may surely be pardoned for considering it a personal injustice to him. He was somewhat persecuted, to be sure, in such instances as were illustrated by Congresswoman Virginia Jenckes inferring in the Congressional Record that he was a Russian and that his name "Boake" was the Anglicized form of Baku, the Russian town of his birth.

Perhaps, though, in Carter's opinionated viewpoint, the threat to free speech in general is more ominous than the situation justifies. After all, the commentators form a very small handful, and when the privilege is given them to sway the public, it might be considered to constitute itself a dictatorship of opinion. Many may be asking themselves these questions: "What does Boake Carter, Hugh Johnson or Dorothy Thompson have that millions of others do not have, that they should be paid to mold public political opinion? And who can tell that they do not express the opinions of their sponsors, which would mean propaganda?"

The network attitude, as summarized by A. A. Schechter of NBC in an interview, is in general that when one person talks on a controversial subject on sustaining time, then equal time and facilities and conditions must be offered for the expression of the opposing viewpoint. However, the network cannot give away time for a rebuttal by the opponents of a viewpoint expressed on a commercial program.

Of course, Boake Carter would be less than human if he did not hope that his stump-speaking appeals might result, if not in a wholesale reform of the radio set-up, at least in lifting him back into the radio spotlight. He realizes, surely, that it is a forlorn hope insofar as his past status is concerned. If he does return to the air—which is not unlikely—it will probably be in a modified capacity—as a narrator, like Gabriel Heatter, a feature reporter, like Lowell Thomas, or an analyst, like H. V. Kaltenborn. Even Carter doubts strongly that he will ever again be the free-swinging radio editorialist as in the past, even though in his newspaper column, "But—Says Boake Carter," and in his books, such as "This Is Life" and "Johnny Q. Public Speaks!" he can still lambast away with impunity as he can no longer do on the air.

With characteristic tenacity he still insists: "Washington got me, but Johnny Q. Public had better wake up."

Johnny Q. Public, you're the judge and the jury.

AIRIALTO LOWDOWN

Was talking with Kay Lorraine, lovely blond soloist on the Hit Parade, during dress rehearsal Saturday afternoon and noticed she had a book of French songs under her arm. When I asked her what she was doing with French songs, she told me she had her own private method of studying French. She asks her French-speaking friends what the words mean and how they are pronounced and then writes the pronunciation in between the lines of music—and then learns the French by singing it. I looked at a few songs and, sure enough, she had the pronunciation written in her own private type of phonetic spelling.

Having seen CBS announcer Andre Baruch at many rehearsals, I've noticed that in afternoon dress he favors brown suede shoes, loudly striped socks, corduroy sports jackets and open-neck shirts. When I told him I envied him his comfortable attire, he countered with, "Yes, but you don't have to wear a tuxedo every night." Which is the main reason why radio folk wear comfortable sports clothes during the day... Saw Paul Whiteman last Wednesday and we got to talking about his recent swing around the country. Paul started out with a special baggage-car to carry the band equipment—about 5,000 pounds worth—and he says it was a lucky thing the baggage-car wasn't filled when he left, because it certainly was when he came back to New York. The extra space was taken up with two horses, a steer and a crate of chickens gathered en route. The steer, a gift from his Texas admirers, has been presented to the New York World's Fair... When I saw Jimmy Lunceford Sunday at the rehearsal of Columbia's new Dance Hour he told me he had invited fifteen youngsters to be his special guests at the broadcast. The fifteen had stated in an article in Tommy Dorsey's magazine, Bandstand, that they didn't go for Jimmy's music. Lunceford said that after the broadcast they were going to have a "swing forum" and find out the why and the wherefore of their likes and dislikes. At this writing no news of the outcome of the forum has come through, but it will be noted here in this same space next week... Radio actors and actresses usually while away their spare time at rehearsals by reading or knitting, but over at CBS' Studio X, where Orson Welles and his Campbell Playhouse cast does its work, they've found another way to pass the time. There is a wheel of chance left-over from the production of "County Fair," and although they haven't any kewpie dolls to give away, there's usually somebody twirling the wheel to see who is going to buy whose lunch. When I walked in Friday, actor Ray Collins had just won a cheese sandwich and a milk-shake from red-headed actor Everett Sloane. The only one who always ends up the winner is the page-boy—he goes out and gets the sandwiches and he also gets the tip.

Went over to watch the new audience-participation show called "Where Am I?" I mean, "Where Are We?" or rather "Guess Where?" The program has had all three titles even before it went on the air, so I'm a bit confused. However, I understand it will remain "Guess Where?" and the reason for the several changes, I'm told, was to avoid lawsuits. After watching this show, which replaced the amusing and entertaining "What's My Name?" I think the sponsor made a big mistake in making the change. Bud Hulick, who is the emcee, comes out on the stage a few minutes before broadcast time, tells a few stories and then the ticket stubs are selected from a glass jar. Those whose numbers are called go up on the stage. Twelve people are selected from the audience, and if time doesn't permit all of them to participate in the program, they still collect five dollars and a pack of ciggies. Charlie Cantor acts in the dramatizations that give the clue to the location. He's a busy actor in radio because he can speak in almost any dialect.

Next stop was at the first show of Robert Ripley's new series (this Lewis fellow does get around, doesn't he?), after which we all went to a party in honor of the occasion. I got to bed at four in the morning, boss; that's why I wasn't in the office when you called me from Chicago the following morning. Getting back to the program, which still offers unusually interesting tales, I noticed that Ripley has changed considerably. When I visited his program last year I wrote about his being so nervous while up in front of the mike. All during the program he used to finger his eyeglasses and make many other nervous gestures. Now, believe it or not, he is very calm and all his mike fright has disappeared. The only bad part of the program is the production-man, who is a pain in the neck to the audience with his unnecessary motions. He used to be an actor and apparently he hasn't forgotten it.

Two weeks ago I told you of an amusing incident that took place at a recent Jim McWilliams "Ask-It-Basket" program and promised to tell you more about the program itself, so here goes. I walked into the studio just as McWilliams was selecting the contestants. He walks up and down the aisle looking for three men and three women who look intelligent. He asks their name and occupation and whether they think they can answer the questions, and if they answer in the affirmative they go up on the stage. One woman proved that looks are deceiving when she was asked "What is a bathysphere?" and replied, "A thermometer used to test the temperature of the water in a bathtub." By the way, I found that little yellow basket so many singers have been hunting. It's basket number five used on the program. There are six differently colored baskets numbered from one to six from which the questions are selected. After the broadcast was over a gentleman got up enough nerve to walk up to the stage and tell McWilliams that one of the answers given by the winning contestant, which he stated was correct, was absolutely wrong, and many people in the audience confirmed it. However, it wouldn't have made any difference in the final score because the contestant was way ahead of the others. McWilliams put on a grand show for almost an hour after the broadcast and his entertainers included members of the audience, two of the ushers, CBS announcer Charles Stark, and Bob Byron, the CBS whistler-pianist. Learning that your reporter was in the studio, he introduced us and went on to tell the audience he heartily endorses RADIO GUIDE's campaign to eliminate whistling by the studio audience, a request he made before the program went on the air.
