Beer Barrel Polka Becomes National Anthem

No More Wasted Love: Stick your head in the nearest tavern, tune in the handiest radio station, or just ask the conductor of your favorite dance orchestra for the hit of the day, and the chances are you'll hear "Beer Barrel Polka." After "Three Little Fishes," this seems to be the tune on everybody's tongue. It has an interesting history. "Beer Barrel Polka" is one of the things Hitler didn't get when he grabbed Czechoslovakia. Over there where it was originally written, it was known as "Skola Lasky," Czech for "Wasted Love." Its unhappy words were: "Wasted love that I gave to you, my eyes today keep on crying. My youth disappeared as in a dream. All I have in my heart is a memory of you." In 1934, many a Czech cried in his beard as their orchestras played the piece in 2/4 time. The author, Jaromir Vejoda, forgot the thing after a while, and never expected it to be a hit. He reckoned without the coin machines you see nowadays in any tavern. Will Glahe made a recording that we beer-tippers played for a nickel. The tune, renamed for U. S. consumption and with slick Yankee Doodle lyrics, took with the public. It hit the networks late last March. A new 4/4 time pepped it up and made it danceable. Now even the Czechs have quit crying over their "Wasted Love" and are indulging regularly and frequently in the Beer Barrel Polka.

Cover Girl: Miss Sally Rutter Tritschler posed for this week's cover. You can hear her each week as the heroine of "Hollywood Playhouse," and see her on the screen in "Daughters Courageous." The name to look for, by the way, is Miss Gale Page. Back in Spokane, Washington, before Peggy (for short) Tritschler thought of radio or movies, she once sat on Teddy Roosevelt's knee. She still remembers the man's zest, and apparently got infected by it, for she has been doing things ever since. Reaching radio stardom in Chicago, she once planned to write a story for RADIO GUIDE titled "Why I'd Rather Eat Than Go to Hollywood." The gal likes to eat. Before the tale was finished, however, Hollywood had grabbed her and placed her under contract. That's where she lives and works and acts these days—and eats as often as her contract permits.

Picture of the week is Pat Friday clowning with John Scott Trotter of the "Kraft Music Hall." Pat Friday has had a great build-up as a Bing Crosby discovery who wanted a diploma instead of a career. Tune in Thursdays to the "Kraft Music Hall" and see if you agree that little Pat, with Trotter coaching and Crosby backing, is going places.

Bill Stern

Stern's Debut: Bill Stern, who announced the recent Louis-Galento collision, has been making debuts one place or another all his life. Starting in Ithaca, N. Y., his birthplace, he debuted next in Hollywood, but digging post-holes on the RKO lot for $5 a day and not acting. Then he announced local sports for an assortment of stations. Next, he stage-managed the Roxy Theater, then the Radio City Music Hall. He still wanted to announce sports. By appealing to a friend at NBC, he got a chance to broadcast part of a football game, and fans wrote in to say he was just what the Saturday afternoon listener wanted. Most important debut was the Louis-Galento fight, where he presented a new technique of fight-talking. Instead of blow-by-blow reports, he summarized each flurry. When a blow meant something, he reported it. We believe application of his new method will mean better listening for fight fans.

Squalus Scoop: When news of the sinking of the Squalus sent the news hounds of a dozen networks and news agencies streaking for the scene of the disaster, station WLAW of Lawrence, Mass., scored a notable scoop. It was WLAW's own crew which hired a launch and transported its portable transmitter to the waters directly above the doomed sub. Its flashes were picked up by a shore station and subsequently relayed Coast to Coast by the National Broadcasting Company. Ahead of all others by about fifteen hours, WLAW's initiative is typical of the sort of service being provided daily by hundreds of American stations. Too often we think of network programs as the best programs. Where huge money expenditures are required, this may be true. Where originality, enthusiasm, and independence are required, the local station is the winner almost every time. In our own hasty story of how radio covered the Squalus disaster, we failed to give credit to WLAW. We want to correct the omission and say WLAW's example is one every station can emulate.

Malone's Poetry: Among the good things held in store for us this summer is the poetry of Ted Malone. So many listeners have written to say that they resent the arbitrary way in which broadcasting shows such as Ted Malone and "Columbia Workshop" are shoved from one spot to another in order that commercial salesmen may present their programs. That Ted is back is all to the good, however, and you may hear him over NBC at 3:45 p.m. EDT on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. Which reminds us that next week's RADIO GUIDE will carry the most important program service feature of the summer. It is the Annual Summer Program Locator, and it will be invaluable in finding both your favorites and the dozens of exciting new shows which make this radio's most brilliant summer. On sale July 20.

Ted Malone

Press Women's Orchids: Each year the National Federation of Press Women selects and praises outstanding radio shows. Among this year's are awards to: "Getting the Most Out of Life" for the best forenoon program. "America's School of the Air" for the best afternoon program. H. V. Kaltenborn for best interpretation of the news. Dorothy Thompson for best program by a woman. Ford Motor Company for good taste and restraint in advertising announcements. "Salute to Nations" (World's Fair series) for the most original idea. "National Farm and Home Hour," best for rural listeners. Irene Wicker for best program for children under twelve, and "NBC Music Appreciation Hour" for children over twelve. Orson Welles for best plays adapted to radio. "America's Town Meeting" for most effective building of American ideals.

ASSETS

Rudy Vallee has a big heart, a talent for business, and a love of beauty—in women!

THRIFT: Wealth accumulated by hard work and saving enables Rudy to entertain at several summer homes

CHIVALRY: Protecting and shielding lady friends has been cause for some of gallant Rudy's fights

GENEROSITY: Rudy gave Bergen (l.), Cantor, Bob Burns, Alice Faye, others, first start in radio

The ENDLESS

HUBERT PRIOR VALLEE is a mixture of French, Irish and Down Eastern Yankee, and that's a cock-eyed biological concoction for any man's veins to handle. Therefore he's one-third romanticist and a top hand with the ladies, one-third scrapper and he really can sock, and one-third bluenose—perspicuous, pernickety and cantankerous, cold as a witch's kiss.

He is famous for the music he has made, the money he has made, the stars he has made and the enemies he has made. He belongs to the stone age of radio and, in keeping with custom, should have become a memory back in the middle ages of broadcasting when crooners were catnip to the women and sulphur and molasses to men.

He has taken more kicks from the press than any other radio personality. His marital troubles would have driven a full-fledged Irishman to drink, a Frenchman to skepticism; but his Yankee blood wouldn't sour and brunettes are still sweet in his eyes, strange eyes protected by slanting eyelids.

The man is thirty-eight and his favorite book is that Peter Panish thing called "Life Begins at Forty." The man reads it often. The man can take it. And there are, in this fair land of free speech, many men who once called Vallee a saxophony and a microphony who have eaten their words with crow sauce and who now admit that the man can take it—and give it, too.

They are saying again that he is slipping. He once could find talent but never keep it. And now he can't discover stars. They say Kate Smith (off air for summer), who works the Columbia hour opposite Vallee's NBC hour on Thursday nights, is reducing his thunder to a few scattered claps, here, yonder and over the mountain. So they say the Vallee is coming to the jumping-off place, that the Vagabond Lover has cut his throat, that the Maine stein is empty, that deep night has fallen. They were saying that back when the stein song was our anthem and needle beer was our brew.

Somehow, one has a feeling that Hubert Prior Vallee some day will be a producer of movies. Be that as it may, Mr. Vallee has his first million. Some say he's still got the first dollar he ever made. He's got a record unchallenged in radio history. He's got something! They say he can't sing, he can't act, he can't play. Everybody is out of step but the critics.

He hates trick publicity, yet he posed in trunks and boxing-gloves, a picture that became the delight of every New York art editor. When he married the late Fay Webb, he saw newspaper men and introduced his bride. Her face and lashes were heavy with make-up, her clothes were extreme. "She's just a little home body," said Vallee. Mr. Vallee never has been very astute about publicity. Yet he lived down all his early mistakes. Babe Ruth did the same thing.

Hubert Prior was born on July 28, 1901, in Island Pond, Vermont, a speck on the road about as gay as Siouxtown, Idaho, in the middle of a rainy Sunday. His family moved over to Westbrook, Maine. Going to Maine from Vermont didn't call for naturalization. Father Vallee had a drug store in Westbrook with a gasoline pump out front. He put Hubert to work early in the store and reckoned (beg your pardon, calculated) the boy would grow up in the business. The Vallees had three children—Kathleen, who is married and a piano-teacher back home; Bill, who writes for the open market, and Hubert.

Hubert always was a serious boy. When he made up an ice-cream soda, it was just so. Hubert never put in too much, and between manufacturing sodas he handled the gas pump. Of course he went to school, too, and learned such harrowing truths as "As Maine Goes So Goes the Nation," and possibly that all America is divided into two parts, Maine-Vermont and the balance, a land on the wrong side of Boston.

Hubert didn't like the drug business. He liked chocolate syrup, however, and used to get sick on it. His father was interested commercially in the picture shows and Hubert used to hang around the projection-room and watch the boys grind away—reel one, reel two—"Will the Ladies Please Remove Their Hats"—"Buy at C. A. Vallee's Drug Store"—"Taft for President"—reel two of "The Clutching Hand" (or was that "Claw"?)—"Special Notice to Patrons!"—"The Birth of a Nation" will be shown in this theater soon."

The store began to handle Victor records and Hubert sold them. He played them over and over, for himself and customers, and could whistle all the tunes. A yearning to play some instrument gripped him and the saxophone fascinated him. His father wouldn't buy one for him, but the boy managed to borrow one here and there and began to pick out tunes. And he saved his money.

About that time he got a job as assistant operator at the Star Theater. He got seven dollars a week. The show didn't show on Sunday. Great guns, no! All the boy had to do for his seven dollars a week was daily to sweep out the Star early in the morning and between shows, oil the machines, change the carbons in the lamp-house, rewind the films, help put up the posters, take care of the furnace, polish brass, take up tickets and operate one of the machines. Later he got a job over in Portland at the Strand. The boy was coming along.

He bought a saxophone but couldn't find a teacher. His hero was Rudy Wiedoeft, a saxophonist, and young Vallee bought all the Wiedoeft records he could locate and tried to learn from them. Then he wrote Wiedoeft and asked for lessons by mail. He got them, and taught himself. At high school he talked so much about Rudy that the boys called him that. Later Wiedoeft became his personal teacher.

In 1917 we find him at New London, in the Navy, but he was discharged because he had enlisted under age. Next we see him playing here and there in Maine, for the Elks and Pythian affairs, at summer camps. He had decided to make music his life and was plugging along.

He went to the University of Maine for one year, then transferred to Yale, where he earned his way with his horn. At Yale he didn't make friends easily. Those who knew him then say he was a typical down-easterner, aloof and shy. He got jobs with various bands. He didn't sing in those days, but, according to a friend, "played sax like a fool." Rudy became a favorite musician of girl schools around New Haven. He was quite idealistic about women, and many times came back to Yale from some engagement starry-eyed with a new romance.

He formed his own band at Yale; played vaudeville in the summer and for school dances during the winter. Once he was on a vaudeville bill with Fred Allen, who was doing a juggling-and-patter routine. Vallee memorized the act and impersonated Allen. A few years ago Sheila Barrett asked Allen for permission to impersonate him and the wise-cracker said, "I'm flattered that you want to imitate me, Miss Barrett, but you'll have to see Rudy Vallee. He owns my impersonation rights."

Rudy also mimicked Maurice Chevalier in those days.

While still a student, he took his band to the Savoy in London, and there Rudy Vallee really made his first broadcast. He was popular in London, too.

Out of Yale in 1927, he did vaudeville and almost anything else that would net a dollar. Vincent Lopez hired him and Rudy worked and learned. Somewhere along the road he married a girl named Yvonne something, an incident his biographers skip, but the marriage didn't take.

The Heigh Ho Club hired him early in 1928 and he organized the Connecticut Yankees. They played over WABC, a little station in those days. His first broadcast brought in twelve letters. He had written "Vagabond Lover" and the words for "Deep Night," and suddenly folks began calling up the radio station and asking who this guy was. He sang his songs in that crooning way that some folks liked, and Rudy Vallee soon was an institution in America.

He opened the Villa Vallee and became the most popular bandleader in the nation.

On THAT Thursday in 1929 when the American god of dollars turned its clay feet up to the daisies, Rudy Vallee began his Fleischmann Hour, which last May 18 celebrated its five-hundredth date on the air.

He worked hard and made hay while the sun was shining. His schedule called for seventeen hours a day of work. At the top of the heap, he wrote a book, a rather naive effort called "Vagabond Dreams Come True." Mr. Vallee tells many things about himself except the things folks want to know. He also makes such sage observations as "You can't please everybody." He discusses many things, including education, in his book and concludes that college training never hurt anybody. Obviously, Mr. Vallee wrote the book himself, for he says text-books were written by great minds and expounded to students by specialists. This, he suggests, helps to mold the thoughts of the students. Even a ghost-writer would have known that many text-books are shot through with errors, that "historians are greater liars than poets," and that most teachers are not specialists but parrots.

One turns the book and discovers that it went into nine editions!

NEW YORK.—It didn't take Wayne King too long after his arrival in New York to grab a sponsor. Or was it because King's was voted the best dance orchestra in the RADIO GUIDE poll, proving he still is as popular as ever despite the fact that he has been off the air so long. He returns to the air for his new sponsor in the early fall . . . Tommy Riggs and Betty Lou will not be heard on Saturdays when they come back to the air in September. They will be heard on Monday nights in the spot occupied last season by Al Pearce, who has not been renewed by his sponsor . . . Paul Sullivan, the popular news commentator who has been heard for several years over WLW in Cincinnati and currently from WHAS in Louisville, graduates to the CBS network starting September 24.

much to the relief of the producers.

The studio used by Lowell Thomas for his newscasting looks more like a living-room than it does like a radio studio. It has several table-lamps, floor-lamps, a couch, a couple of easy chairs and beautiful drapes. His microphone stands in the center of a large desk, and announcer Hugh James sits at another desk with a microphone in front of him. Thomas has the timing of his script down pat, and when he gets toward the end he knows whether he has to increase his speed or slow down. His script is timed and marked in advance, and during the broadcast his production-man puts a card in front of him which tells him how many minutes he has left, which usually corresponds with the marking on the script. The Sunoco news-reporter walks into the studio about a half-minute before it's time for him to go on the air, and he is off to catch a train at Grand Central Station in less than a half-minute after he gets off the air.

Big Sister Loses Little Sister

A few hours before a recent "Big Sister" program went on the air, the writers and producers were in the studio hurriedly rewriting the program because they were advised that Hailla Stoddard, who played the part of "Sue," the little sister, would no longer be on the program, as she was going into a new legitimate show. The entire script had to be cut because Hailla had many lines to read during the program, and you can imagine the commotion it caused. They completed the rewriting a couple of minutes before airtime, which seemed to be the cue for Fred Feibel, the organist, to give out with a hot swing arrangement of "Hold Tight," while Martin Gable, who plays "Dr. John Wayne," seated himself on top of the piano to do the vocalizing. I still think Gable is a great actor. Lovely Alice Frost heaved a sigh of relief when that program was over and was looking forward to her vacation in New Hampshire, where she is as you read this.

Announcements About Announcers

The stork brought a boy to the home of my neighbor, NBC word-spieler Jack Fraser . . . The CBS announcers trounced the team of NBC gabbers in a softball game last week . . . When Bea Wain opened her first theater engagement at the Fox Theater in Philadelphia recently, the first wire she received was from her husband, Andre Baruch, which read: "All the sincere hopes for your success are only exceeded by my deep devotion. Your loving husband." Isn't that sweet? I saw it on the wall at Bea's dressing-room when I visited her while I was in Philadelphia, the day she opened at the theater.

Jim Fleming, who got his start at the Wisconsin state-owned station WHA and from there went to WGN in Chicago and then graduated to CBS in New York, sailed for Europe last Saturday and will be gone until September. He plans to visit Ireland, Norway, Sweden and England. He will visit relatives in Ireland whom he has never seen but corresponded with faithfully since he was a small boy . . . Howard Claney still is an absentee from his NBC announcing job. Howard is still over in Europe and continuing his study of art . . . Ralph Edwards, who, it is claimed, has a bigger income than any other radio announcer, got Harry von Zell's job on the Phil Baker show. One of his colleagues told me he'd be willing to settle as his salary for everything over one thousand dollars that Ralph makes. Not bad, is it?

"My Lucky Break" comes back to the air in the fall plus a sponsor, which is the lucky break this show has been looking for . . . Andre Kostelanetz and Walter O'Keefe return on August 21. In the meantime, Kostelanetz will conduct a series of concerts . . . Dave Elman's "Hobby Lobby" has been renewed and will continue throughout the summer . . . Elmore Vincent, who is better known to dialers as "Senator Fishface," auditioned a new character this week for CBS . . . Bert Parks had to fly out to San Francisco immediately after he completed his engagement at the Loew State Theater in New York with Eddie Cantor in order to be on time for the Benny Goodman program from the West Coast.

Behind the Scenes

Clifton Fadiman and F. P. A. sitting on top of a desk in the NBC press department, listening to the Joe Louis-Tony Galento fight . . . A certain conductor of a network interview program should be very careful of what he says about a certain bandleader when strangers are within hearing-distance. The stranger to him happened to be your reporter, who knows the bandleader very well, and it's lucky for the interviewer that I'm not a tattletale . . . At a recent "Johnny Presents" program the audience was invited to remain in their seats and were treated to a preview of a new radio game program idea called "You Said It," which may hit the air in the fall or sooner . . . When in Detroit recently I was told how a concert of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra was disrupted during the rendition of the "William Tell" overture, which happens to be the theme music of "The Lone Ranger." As you may have guessed, as soon as the orchestra started playing the selection a kid up in the balcony yelled "Hi-Yo, Silver," and the place was in an uproar.

The studio audience at the repeat broadcast of Fred Allen's last program was also in an uproar when Fred's friendly enemy, Jack Benny, walked on the stage and shook hands with everyone in the Allen cast but ignored Fred entirely. Allen was in his prime that night and his ad-lib remarks topped everything he has ever said during any of his previous broadcasts. If you didn't hear it, you missed one of the funniest broadcasts ever put on the air. Benny and his wife, Mary Livingstone, along with Andy Devine and his beautiful wife, were seated in the front row on the stage and got a tremendous kick out of Allen's quips, as did everyone else in the studio audience. The producers of the program didn't enjoy it so much because Allen's ad-lib cracks caused the program to run way behind time, and the last part of the program had to be hurried. They just were able to finish on the nose, as they say in radio,

Hollywood Showdown

By Evans Plummer

HOLLYWOOD.—If you ask Gabe Ward and his fellow Hoosier Hot Shots—Hezzie, Ken and Frank—of "Uncle Ezra" and "National Barn Dance" fame, who were here for their first time to appear in Gene Autry's new Republic picture, "In Old Monterey," this town isn't half as bad as it's cracked up to be . . .

"We thought Hollywood was just a big pot of glamour that boiled the life out of people in a few short years," he told your reporter, "but were we ever wrong! Our first studio call was for 4:30 a.m., and we sure went to bed at nine o'clock that night without coaxing. Never saw such hard-working people anywhere, not even back home in Indiana. Everybody awake and working at sun-up to make full use of the daylight. Then look at clean-cut, friendly Gene Autry, whom we knew at WLS. Why, say, he hasn't changed a bit. Three weeks here has taught us that Hollywood glamour is just a parlor name for hard work." Flash: Announcer Harlow Wilcox of the "Fibber McGee" show, met Mari Bishop, Oak Park, Illinois, girl and her folks in Reno and married her July 5. Brief honeymoon followed in northern California.

Sarie and Sallie, from WSM in Nashville, who also worked with the Hot Shots, the Ranch Boys and Autry in the picture, had their eyes opened, too. Said Sarie: "Shucks! Hollywood is just folks and 'bout the closest place to happiness we've ever known. Those gorgeous mountains and the mocking-birds alone are enough to make a body glad to be alive and here. Miss Sallie says she'd like to be in pictures forever just so's to have a make-up artist keep her face lookin' pretty. Yes, sir, by crackety, we'll take Hollywood any day. But I do wish it 'ould rain. Don't seem natural-like."

Rom-Antics and Eat-Togethers

Ed Bergen is laughing. His pal, Ken Murray, swiped Mary Healy from Bergen, who had snatched her from Rudy Vallee—so Bergen has cut Murray out with Jane Baker! . . . When ex-radio scribe Charles Martin escorted Joan Crawford to the Victor Hugo Cafe Sunday before last she volunteered to sing a song with Phil Ohman's band. The tune she selected was "The Lady's in Love"! . . . Mary Milford, single but the Grouch Club's "wife," has been lurching steadily with a handsome young stranger whose name she keeps a secret . . . The current object of the affections of George Fisher, Mutual's "Hollywood Whisperer," is Mary Barton of the Miami social-register Bartons, blond, twenty, and here to crack the studios.

Star of Stars Eddy Returning

Nelson Eddy winds up his vacation-honeymoon-concert tour in two weeks and returns to the Chase & Sanborn Hour August 6. Pinch-hitter Donald Dickson takes leave for a concert swing and then the Met opera in New York . . . Artie Shaw returns to Hollywood July 12 to make music for M-G-M's picture "Dancing Coed," starring George Murphy and the gorgeous Lana Turner. Incidentally, Bob Elliot Kitsis, Shaw's pianist, now featured on the summer Old Gold broadcasts, has sloughed off his last name since, on the air, it sounds like a sneeze . . . July 12 also brings Will Osborne's band to town to play at the CBS-miked Palomar Ballroom—indicating a switch from swing to sweet music for that spot . . . Funny! Johnny Mack Brown studied diction for a year to rid his southern accent; now CBS producer Ralph Scott is demanding the accent's return for Brown's "Under Western Skies" airings on Friday evenings!

Jack Smart, the 250-pound Bob Hope stooge, has joined the Al Pearce Gang to play the harassed customer in the "Eb and Zeb" sketches . . . Rudy Vallee's screen stiffness is only augmented by that of Sonja Henie (when off her skates) in "Second Fiddle," their new film with Tyrone Power. You'll like Mary Healy, however, singing Irving Berlin's "I'm Sorry for Myself" . . . But even if your movie budget's lean, see Gale Page and the Lane sisters in Warner Brothers' "Daughters Courageous" and Ginger Rogers and David Niven in "Bachelor Mother" . . . Chet (Abner's Lum) Lauck and Don Ameche now have horse-racing wives. The boys operate the L. & A. Stables, so their better halves have christened theirs the A. & L. Stables. Latter consists of one horse, Briareus!

Story of a Grouch

Jack Lescoulie, the Grouch Club's grouchmaster, was driving to Santa Barbara to stump for the club's national grouch convention July 16 at the Hollywood Bowl when he had a flat. He broke the jack trying to raise the car. After some delay, he flagged down another motorist and borrowed his jack. Then Lescoulie found his spare soft and had to pump it up. Next he couldn't get the car off the jack. Finally succeeding, he started speeding to make up time and was pinched. By that time he was gouching and growling plenty. The cop, listening to Lescoulie's troubles, said "You sound just like that sourpuss on the Grouch Club." "I AM!" Jack shouted in his nastiest tone of voice. The cop laughed. "I think you're a scream," he chuckled. "Guess I won't give you a ticket. I never knew you were a real grouch!" Lescoulie maintained his scowl so as not to disillusion the admiring officer, and drove on—more slowly.

Who Wears the Pants?

In Bing Crosby's "East Side of Heaven" and its sequel, "Unexpected Father," starring radio songbirds Shirley Ross and Joy Hodges, girl baby Sandy Henville twice plays the part of a boy. And in Camel's very funny air version of Columbia Pictures' "Dagwood and Blondie" film series, Baby Dumping, who is enacted on the screen by four-year-old Larry Simms, has given way to a female child mimic . . . Let's get together, lads, and picket for equal rights for men!

Vacationers . . .

Ned Sparks and his wife, whom he never mentions on the air, have gone to Canada for a vacation and to "renew old quarrels and start a few new ones" . . . His feud-mate, Jimmy Wallington, of the Texaco Theater, is broadcasting the San Francisco-Honolulu yacht-race from aboard the "Geoanna" and will meet his wife, Betty, in Hawaii for their vacation . . . Burns and Allen likewise are planning a Hawaiian jaunt next month . . . Unable to skip his weekly Kraft Hall chores, announcer-bellringer Ken Carpenter has shipped his family to Yosemite and is commuting there between broadcasts . . . Meredith Willson, the "Good News" maestro, is en route to Banff, Chicago and New York until September . . . Fibber McGee, resting at his new San Fernando Valley farm home, has been chosen "radio's homiest star" by 100,000 Iowans here, and he and Molly will be guests of honor at the Southern California Iowa Society's picnic August 12.

Radio sermons of Father Charles E. Coughlin, vociferous supporter of democracy, sound more like Nazi and Fascist propaganda. Frequently they are

Father Coughlin kisses the ring of his superior, Bishop Michael J. Gallagher of Detroit, who has not checked Coughlin's sensational broadcasts

IF CONSISTENCY is the hobgoblin of little minds, the Reverend Charles E. Coughlin has a massive intellect. In the ten years that he has been broadcasting sermons on politics and economics from the Shrine of the Little Flower in Royal Oak, Michigan, he has been as flexible in his convictions as he has been remiss in his facts. He has been a vociferous supporter of democracy and an advocate of the corporate state. He has hailed Franklin Roosevelt as the anointed of God and condemned him as "a liar" and "a scab." He has loudly proclaimed his love of organized labor and denounced the Congress of Industrial Organizations. He has reviled the speculators of Wall Street and made a tidy profit for the Shrine through silver speculations. He has flaunted his priestly humility and flouted a cardinal of his church. He has rejoiced that there is no anti-Semitic problem in the United States and published his own plagiarism of an attack on the Jews by Paul Josef Goebbels. He insists, to the embarrassment of many Catholics, that the encyclicals of Pope Leo XIII and Pope Pius XI have inspired all his utterances.

Although he changes most of his opinions as often as he changes his collar, Father Coughlin has one belief to which he has remained persistently faithful. He is firmly convinced that a return to the economy of the Dark Ages will cure all our ills. Since this sort of medieval economic philosophy has its modern counterpart in the economic philosophy of fascism, Coughlin's pronouncements frequently sound like German or Italian propaganda. As a matter of fact, they frequently are. A good part of the material used in Coughlin's recent anti-Semitic broadcasts was culled from the publication "World Service," which is put out by the Nazis in eight languages in order to disseminate their ideas throughout the world.

Father Coughlin has yet to reveal the slightest regard for even the simple amenities of his office. At various times during the past few years he has distinguished himself by publicly tearing off his Roman collar, by suggesting the use of bullets instead of ballots, and by attempting to beat up an inquisitive reporter. His behavior has brought down upon him the disapproval of his bishop and the censure of his pope. But he continues to hold forth weekly on subjects nicely calculated to arouse more prejudice than piety.

Coughlin's associates are fond of pointing out that he says mass, hears confessions, and visits his parishioners as if he were just an ordinary priest. They seem rather astonished that he is able to manage his pastoral affairs when he has so many other pressing matters to attend to. Actually his priestly tasks are something less than difficult, for in looking after his tiny flock he has the help of three assistants. In summer, of course, he has to entertain the pilgrims, but the rest of the year the shrine is virtually deserted, and Coughlin never has any trouble finding time for his extracurricular activities. He conducts his private enterprises from a bleak, inelegant office in the basement of the shrine, to which only his employes have easy access. At the moment, his staff consists of 105 young women who handle his correspondence and prepare the bales of propaganda with which he floods the country. Despite the fact that Coughlin's radio audience nowadays is less than half as large as it was in 1934, when he had an estimated following of 10,000,000 people, the girls on his pay-roll are kept very busy. Ever since he became openly anti-Semitic last fall, Coughlin has been inundated with mail.

COUGHLIN never underestimates his own importance. In ordinary conversation, he speaks of various Senators as if they were his personal delegates to the Congress of the United States, and freely prognosticates the defeat of any proposed legislation of which he does not approve. He loves to appear mysterious. He delights in hidden documents and apocrypha of all descriptions. He always describes the victims of his anathemas as "anti-God." He assumes the prerogatives of the Deity with all the confidence but none of the dignity of Father Divine, the wizard of Harlem.

Coughlin is sleek and stocky, with fat, pink jowls and a formidable double chin. Although he used to be quite an athlete, he hasn't taken much exercise in recent years, and today, at forty-seven, he carries a comfortable little paunch. Despite his bulk, however, he is extremely energetic. He is so anxious to do things in a hurry that he even celebrates mass in a faster tempo than is customary. His impatience with delays of any kind has frequently got him into some untidy squabbles. A couple of years ago, for instance, he decided to buy a triangular plot of land opposite the shrine. He succeeded in taking over all but one corner. The owner of the corner had a profitable gas station on his property, and was rather reluctant to make a sale. He wasn't coaxed. Without pausing to dicker, the father proceeded to build a gas station of his own as close to the other as he could legally get. Today the two establishments are still sitting side by side, and the original gas station, despite cloudy rumors that the proprietor preaches communism, continues to provide plenty of opposition for Coughlin's Super-Shrine Service. A good many of the citizens of Royal Oak are glad to help Coughlin's rival.

IN HIS own bailiwick, Father Coughlin is none too popular, and even some of the Catholics in his parish take delight in describing him as "The Mad Monk of the Shrine of the Silver Dollar."

Nobody knows very much about Coughlin's financial arrangements, and he has made quite certain that nobody ever will. He operates through a kind of holding company known as "The Social Justice Poor Society," which, as a charitable organization, is not required to publish any statements. While he refuses to discuss the actual resources of his Poor Society, he is not only willing but eager to talk about the expenses that he incurs throughout the year. He is proud of the fact that he is able to spend $1,200 a week to take care of his shrine and ten times that amount to put one "Golden Hour of the Little Flower" on a radio network of forty-six stations. "I like to spend money," he says. "It increases production and consumption. I spend enough of it, God knows, and I hope to keep on spending it until I've put millions in circulation."

To date the only tangible product of Coughlin's open-handedness with the money he has collected is the Shrine of the Little Flower. Because Coughlin has failed to attract a steady congregation to his church, the shrine may well become a diocesan white elephant if he is ever removed from the air.

Without the contributions of his radio audience, Coughlin would obviously have a hard time keeping the shrine out of bankruptcy. Whether or not this consideration has anything to do with the strange failure of his superiors to remove him from the air is a question that the ecclesiastics of the Detroit diocese, which embraces Royal Oak, have never discussed in secular circles.

Coughlin began to broadcast in 1926.

When he first went to Royal Oak, there was no parish there at all, and before he could begin to preach he had to build a little church. The shrine was barely completed when the Ku Klux Klan, which was flourishing at the time around Royal Oak, touched off a wooden cross one evening in the churchyard.

According to an official souvenir booklet distributed at the shrine, this inspired the father to take to the air. In prose that is singularly similar to Coughlin's, the booklet relates that "When the fiery cross, kindled by the hand of bigotry, spit out its angry flames within a few yards of the little shingled church, Father Coughlin said to himself, 'I shall build a cross which they shall not be able to burn.'" Whereupon, the booklet goes on, he announced to his parishioners that he was going to preach against bigotry on the radio. In the light of his present activities, this legend is neatly ironic, but like most legends it isn't precisely true. Coughlin actually went on the air to get money to clear up his parish debts and he was inspired to do so by a Detroit press-agent and promoter named Frank Ward.

Coughlin's first program was a children's hour, devoted to a discussion of the doctrines of the Roman Catholic Church. It was mildly popular until 1930. Then, with the gloom of the depression setting in all around, Coughlin decided to go to town. Abandoning his catechism, he delivered a series of discourses on the menace of communism. It wasn't until he started to talk about the menace of Hooverism, however, that he became a national figure. From that time until he made the mistake of trying to elect Lemke in 1936, Coughlin was seldom out of the news. He was compared with Richelieu and Savonarola, and frequently described as the most influential priest in the world. Under the circumstances, it was hardly odd that he should fall into the error of believing himself infallible. What is odd, though, is that the error should still persist, after he has been so often exposed.

IN HIS choice of friends and associates, Coughlin has never been particularly discriminating. Back in 1930, he was supported by Harry Jung, one of the founders of the American Alliance, a society of red-baiting patrioteers. A couple of years later, while passing through New York City, he fell in with George LeBlanc, an investment counselor, and Robert Harriss, a commodity broker, who both seemed anxious to have him act as a spokesman for the revaluation of the dollar and the remonetization of silver. At the time, Coughlin was talking a lot about saving the country from communism but was a trifle vague about the means of salvation. Beyond encouraging his followers to remember the spirit of St. Francis of Assisi and to read Pope Leo XIII's encyclical "On the Condition of Labor," he had little definite to recommend. Soon after meeting LeBlanc and Harriss, though, he blossomed out as an expert on monetary reform. His thesis was simple. Said he:

We have inflated our credit dollars beyond all bounds of reason. Instead of having 54,000,000,000 credit dollars outstanding against our gold deposits, we have gone on

FAMILY MAN

By

John Knight

A portrait study of Carlton Morse, creator of radio's
most famous family

Recently we began a series of portrait-stories about the people behind the people who move across radio's stage—that is, the radio writers. Second of the series, which we herewith present, deals with Carlton Morse, creator of the famous Barbour family. It is an intimate study, telling how this radio writer works, what manner of man he is.—Editor.

THIS business of rearing a family—especially when the family is large and composed of rugged individualists with varied tastes—isn't all it's cracked up to be. And you can take that from no less an authority on family affairs than Carlton Morse, who has reared just such a family for the edification of the radio public. For Mr. Morse is the creator, author, director and producer of "One Man's Family," which airs its heartaches and moments of supreme joy for millions of listeners each Wednesday evening over NBC at 8:00 p.m. EDT, 7:00 p.m. EST, 7:00 p.m. CDT, 6:00 p.m. CST, 5:00 p.m. MST, and on Sunday night to West Coast listeners at 8:30 p.m. PST.

How many times have you said to yourself, after listening to a broadcast of "One Man's Family," "The man who wrote that show must have some family!" How else could he have gained the material which so touches the heart of America with its simple forthrightness and honesty of emotion and experience?

As a matter of record, Carlton Morse has no family and, on occasion, has even made cutting remarks about the irritating traits of children. But that this is simply a defense mechanism against a deep love of children is evidenced in his plans to adopt, shortly, one child, and then in a year or so another, until he has his ideal family of five.

In 1932, Carlton Morse was a script-writer at NBC's San Francisco studios. His task had been to turn out mystery serials based upon the keen sleuthing and observation powers of one Professor Quoon, for West Coast consumption.

"After two years of this," he said with a humor which is almost always with him, "I was so fed up with crime that I couldn't look a policeman in the eye. I wanted to do something real and simple and sincere. It was this urge that made me decide to write—then and there—the family drama I had had in my mind for some time."

The idea had come to him in his reading of Galsworthy's "Forsythe Saga," long a favorite work with him and one whose influence is readily seen.

His original idea—to which he has clung with a tenacity resembling religion—was to present not just a picture of an average American family but to use the family, with its various members, to interpret particular phases of American life and problems.

"AMERICA was still in the post-war flapper period," he said. "War veterans were struggling to regain their perspectives and our whole nation was in a period of readjustment. So the set-up of characters in my first script included the parents of the older generation; a son, who was a veteran of the war; an unmarried daughter, too old for the flapper age and unable to adjust herself to conditions; two children in the flapper age; and a lad in the adolescent period. I called this family the Barbours."

It was strange that Morse—who had known nothing even remotely resembling family life for eleven years, when he had left his own home to enter newspaper work in Sacramento—should have such a clear-cut and vital insight into the problems confronting the American family of that day; or that he should be so certain of the various family types he would need in making his presentation. And yet, before he sat down to write his first script, he had selected all the members of his cast, looking keenly at their characteristics, capabilities and failings and using these observations to build—upon paper—his actual characters. Perhaps this is another key to the underlying soundness of the program—this fact that he had selected actors and actresses he felt were actually the characters he wanted to portray and then built his action around them.

"Often," he admits, "I am guided by happenings in the private lives of our cast, but—" and he says this proudly—"I also have found that members of the cast frequently use situations in 'One Man's Family' as patterns for their lives. For example, Hazel (Bernice Berwin in real life) had a baby in the script. It wasn't long after that that she had a baby in real life."

It is a peculiar commentary upon the utter sincerity of the man and his firm belief in the importance of the show that he should feel that an actress' action in giving birth to a baby in real life should follow upon and be the result of the mimical birth of a baby in a show he had written.

He himself was born of Pennsylvania Dutch parentage—the oldest of a family

AM I MY BROTHER'S KEEPER?

"I welcome this opportunity of stepping out of character, of talking seriously to you on a subject that is dear to my heart," says Eddie Cantor

By

Eddie Cantor

AM I my brother's keeper? That is the question so often put to me by persons disagreeing with my belief that the United States must do its part in sheltering refugees from European oppression.

It is their way of washing their hands of the refugee problem; of saying we have enough troubles of our own in this country without absorbing some of Europe's troubles. As an American, I am one hundred percent in agreement with those who believe that America's first duty is to Americans; that we cannot and must not take any steps that would endanger our national economy that would in the least injure any American citizen, present or future.

But I take exception to the peremptory "washing one's hands of the problem" because of indifference. It is inhuman, un-American. It is as cynical and unfeeling as was Pontius Pilate's never-to-be-forgotten "hand washing."

I am a professional comedian and, perhaps, as some say, I should stick to my "last." But being a comic, especially a radio comic, is a serious business. Facts are our stock in trade, the basic ingredients of present-day humor.

We no longer rely upon one routine as we did in our vaudeville days. Our humorous and emotional approaches to our audiences are no longer as generalized as they were in the "old days." We must necessarily document with facts—new facts—the old formula of the court jester.

Modern social service—the term for organized humanity—is similarly a serious business. And it is with facts that we must document our emotional approach to the problem of the refugee, of the unfortunate, homeless men, women and children knocking at our doors. To say that they need help and it is human to be helpful is not enough; perhaps it should be enough, but it is not in this day of realism. Fortunately, we can show that the refugee is not a liability to the United States; that he is potentially a great asset.

From my own studies of the subject, I know that opposition to refugee immigration is based upon two major objections:

1. The popular belief that hundreds of thousands of refugees were coming to this country annually; that America was literally being flooded with refugee immigration.

2. The belief that refugees take away our jobs, that they contribute to unemployment, and that they would further disrupt the sorely tried American economy.

Now, what are the facts about refugees?

Here they are:

There is no refugee horde descending on the United States. As a matter of record, the number of refugees who have come to this country during the seven years since the advent of National Socialism in Germany is so small as to make all talk of refugee hordes sound very silly.

Since 1932 and up to January first, 1939, 45,952 Germans—certainly not all of them were refugees—came into this country. This year there will probably be 27,370 more, for that is the amount allowable under our immigration quota.

THAT is an average of 11,000 immigrants a year, and certainly that is not a menace to the United States. Nor can an immigration quota of 27,000—the total allowance for Germany and Austria—be considered a menace.

So there simply is not any flood of refugees inundating the country.

I have spoken often for the so-called Wagner-Rogers Bill, which would admit 20,000 refugee children under fourteen years of age during the two years 1939 and 1940. I have hopes that this enabling legislation will be enacted. But what about those who have already come in? The German-Jewish Children's Aid, one of the affiliates of the National Coordinating Committee, informs me that only four hundred children have been brought to this country without their parents. It is interesting to note that Dr. Marion Kenworthy, of the Non-Sectarian Committee for German Refugee Children, has publicly announced that without solicitation 2,500 families have expressed a willingness to adopt, and bring up as their own, refugee children.

Having disposed of the misconception about the so-called "refugee horde," the next question is: Have these 75,000 German refugees displaced American labor; have they thrown out of gear the economy of a nation of 130,000,000 souls?

Dr. Henry Smith Leiper of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ reports: "On the face of it, it is ridiculous to believe that 75,000 refugees could ROLL THEM BONES, SISTER!

Now that television is on regular schedule in New York, radio artists have begun to worry about overweight and unsightly figures. Above is one novel device they're using to keep in trim

It's the Maclevy Roaler Massager, and "Nikki," assistant on "Adventures of Ellery Queen" (Sun. night), is the girl who uses the new "system of slenderizing by mechanical and passive exercise"

Before television, stars were too busy to care about a few extra pounds. Now they use rotating barrel to flatten out "spare tires," as does vocalist Paula Kelly of Al Donahue's orchestra here

Another device for speedy streamlining of figures is the Slendro Massager, which rolls over Paula's diaphragm, back and hips as she reads at ease

Bert Parks, singing announcer of Benny Goodman's program (NBC, Sat. night), uses Cycle Slenderizer, which gives all benefits of bike-riding

Less novel but just as effective in acquiring television charm is the vibrator belt, from which "Nikki" gets light massage for hips and thighs

BACKSTAGE IN CHICAGO

By Don Moore

CHICAGO.—Henry Burr, the "Dean of Ballad Singers," heard on the "National Barn Dance," has had a long and distinguished career in the world of music. But one of the most heart-warming of all his thrills came to him recently in a letter—a letter relating an experience unique enough to be a "Believe It or Not," a cross-section of life turned inside out. Mr. Burr gave me his kind permission to publish the letter. It speaks for itself:

"Dear Mr. Burr:

"I've put off writing to you since I first heard your voice again over the National network. At that time I failed to hear your name announced, but when your voice came into the room I said right out loud, 'That's Henry Burr.' The folks thought I was nutty, but I associate you with certain incidents in my life that you know nothing about. I am now writing you the letter of appreciation that is due you.

"I was disabled during the World War, but at one time during the war Henry Burr's voice did a good turn for me. I was a young punk in the navy, at the impressionable age of nineteen, a yeoman aboard the U. S. Cargo Transport West Chester.

"There I ran the canteen, the clothing-issue room, small stores, refereed boxing-matches and conducted Sunday services for the boys. I had a small phonograph and records, among which were several of yours. Do you remember 'Weeping Willow Lane' and 'Berry Picking Time'? I still hum them myself. And your 'Dreaming of Home, Sweet Home' sure made me yearn many times.

"One afternoon we were heading into the submarine zone with a full cargo when a squall hit us. One of our lifeboats was dangling outboard on one of its davits. About the only way to recover the boat was to climb out on her, swing free and be hauled in by the legs. Some said it would be suicide, but I shinned out on the davit. It was all over in less than five minutes and worked perfectly. I was drenched to the skin, but the only ill after-effects I suffered was a bad case of ants-in-the-pants. I couldn't remove a pent-up feeling inside me.

"One of the boys had brought out the phonograph and placed it on the mess-table. I lay on my bunk, fully dressed, to hear the records. I tossed—thought I was going nuts. I got up and went aft along the high railway, then returned to my bunk, desperately restless. At nine o'clock I left the phonograph with the needle resting on the outer edge of a disk.

"The lights were out, and I was lying there thanking God for being thus far preserved, praying for the folks at home and my two brothers in the service.

"But I couldn't sleep. Time wore on. The ship made dip after dip into the wild foam, and then came a sudden lurch.

"The next thing I knew your voice came out of the darkness—singing 'Sweet Genevieve.' Some of the boys giggled. I lay still and listened. In a moment after that record was finished I was off to sleep.

"There is the reason for this letter. I simply take this means after over twenty years of thanking you for what you did for me that night out there in the wild deep when I actually thought I was going batty. Believe me, this is true, and I am sincere.

"Put this among your fan mail, and, if you will, join me in one extra blessing for that silvery voice God gave you.

"Your true friend,
"Alfred W. Stelle,
"Santa Monica, Calif."

Behind the Beard

It's hard to decide whether Orson Welles is a genius or a showman—or both. Taking into consideration his all-round attainment, perhaps he's a genius. Unquestionably he's a showman. More power to him. Geniuses come a dime a dozen these days, but showmen are at a premium.

I sat in at the rehearsal of "Knickerbocker Playhouse" when Welles made his second appearance on that program, this time joining Elliott Lewis and Betty Winkler in "Fleurette." Of course the big young man with the deep voice, short beard and long dramatic sense gave his usual fine performance. Watching a rehearsal, though, it looks a bit incongruous to see Welles doing an emotional scene with one leg crossed nonchalantly behind the other, as though in a mock curtsy. Welles carries a cigar or pipe while he rehearses, does little burlesques. When he's on the air, he acts—that's the main thing.

A funny thing happened during an intermission in the rehearsal. The soundmen put a recording on their turn-table of Bill Thompson doing his Horatio K. Boomer characterization. Bill was doing the routine wherein he goes through his pockets surveying numerous screwy articles. Finally he said,

"Here's an interesting little pamphlet on 'How to Start a Fire,' by 'Arson' Welles." Welles perked up his ears and inquired, "Who's Bill Thompson? I don't listen to the radio much."

Hot Breakfast

I sat in at a "Breakfast Club" session recently—Friday, June 30—and it turned out to be a rare menu. The "B. C." is always lively but not exactly "hot." Well, at this meal the gang burned the toast and smeared "jam" all over the figurative table-cloth. Several new musicians have been added to the NBC staff orchestra till it's as streamlined as a bass-cleff symbol.

The orchestra was swinging out, with Walter Blaufuss at the head of the pack. Solo arson was committed on sax, xylophone and violin. And even the ad-libbing, always good, got hotter than ever, until the little thermometer McNeill was wearing in his lapel was heaving its sides like Dobbin at the plow. Of course there were the usual fine sober treats—"Memory Time," Jack Baker's interpretation of Schubert's "Serenade," and the Jack Baker-Nancy Martin duet of "Silver Threads Among the Gold." But it was fun to see the "B. C." coffee-pot intermittently boiling over. Didn't you think so, Clubbers?

Backstage Bric-a-Brac

During one of the recent post-program shows that Red Skelton puts on for the "Avalon Time" audience, he was asked to do his famous doughnut-dunking act. He didn't have the doughnuts. Whereupon doughnuts began flying from all corners! So Red sent out for coffee and delighted the audience by dunking their doughnuts.

Cecile Roy, versatile actress of "Sunday Dinner at Aunt Fanny's," was advised that she was a perfect television type in recent demonstration.

The Lone Ranger delivers a right hook to the jaw of a villain. The "Lone Ranger" series (Mon., Wed., Fri. nights, MBS) is one of the foremost "blood-and-thunder" shows, won first in Radio Guide poll for children's program

Guns and tense faces are in evidence at a performance of "Gang Busters," as above. This program, now off the air for the summer, aims at public service in crime-fighting but is considered by many too violent for children

VOICE OF THE LISTENER

Seldom has an article brought to our office more written comment pro and con than the story entitled "Kids Want Murder," by T. H. Trent, in the issue dated June 10.

So many letters have been received and such original and interesting ideas have been expressed that we have decided to devote this week's entire "Voice of the Listener" page to a "battle of letters" on "Kids Want Murder," or children's programs in general.

It is our hope that these letters may help guide others to a realistic understanding of this radio problem and perhaps scatter the seeds of a solution.—Editor.

Dear V. O. L.:

Mr. Trent's article, "Kids Want Murder," is very interesting, but isn't he a bit restrained in his championship of radio?

My three-year-old daughter once ran me down with her tricycle while shooting madly and screaming, "Out of my way! I'm Dillinger's pal!" At the time, we did not own a radio.

This incident occurred shortly after my two children had been plunked down in a neighborhood of little toughs. It was here that my son brought home his first black eye with tears and complaints about his playmates' naughtiness. I explained to him that, while I was still opposed to violence, we now lived among people who were not, and that, as long as we lived with these people, we must cope with them, he with the children and I with the grown-ups.

A series of black eyes and bruises followed, but there were no more tears or complaints. There were several rock-fights which had me clutching the living-room curtains and biting back screams of protest. But I reminded myself that the most serious injuries the children had suffered to date had been incurred under my watchful eye, and had been caused by that symbol of civilization, the automobile.

This treatment of children seems to remove all taste for violence from the less hardy and gives the more hardy a normal outlet for their blood-and-thunder instincts. The children continued to play "Cowboy and Indian," as their grandfathers had before them, with no unfortunate results. To be sure, there was that morning-after-the-night-before when Daddy staggered into the bathroom to be greeted by a sharp jab in the ribs and a piercing "Pow!" which completely unnerved him for the rest of the day. But into each life some rain must fall!

As for the radio, it is perfectly true that a mother who cannot prevent her children from listening to a program has no grounds for complaint. But why prevent them? Why not teach them to listen? The more they hear, the more they know. The more they know, the less they can be fooled. My nine-year-old son, when asked why the Germans were persecuting the Jews, replied, "I don't know. A Jew killed a German in Paris, but I know that isn't the reason, because that wouldn't be reasonable."

There is a constant cry now, "Why don't mothers of the world do something about war?" What can we do? I haven't the mental equipment for conceiving a perfect plan. My sole contribution to the cause of peace must be two young people who are as nearly propaganda-proof as I can make them. And radio is my greatest ally.

Mrs. A. M. Banks, Indianapolis, Ind.

Dear V. O. L.:

"Kids Want Murder," do they, Mr. T. H. Trent? Rot!

In your story with the above-quoted title in Radio Guide, Mr. Trent, you have a brand-new version of the theory that man is born in a state of sin. Your idea is that babies enter the world as hungry for crime as for milk, and we have to keep the poison diet away from them till they lose their appetite.

A pretty negative and passive view of humanity, Mr. Trent. Did you ever hear this: "Suffer the little children to come unto Me, for of such is the kingdom of Heaven?" Do you know Tiny Tim and Oliver Twist and Little Eva and Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm? Did they want murder? And don't you know many real kids like them?

No, Mr. Trent, movie and radio stories of violence didn't spring from the crime-hunger of children. If children—and grown-ups—do develop such an appetite, those stories have done a lot to whet the appetite. Babes are not born negative and must be made positive. They're born neutral, and can be made either negative or positive. Give the kids a break.

Mrs. Arnold Miller, New Orleans, La.

Dear V. O. L.:

My idea about children's "blood-and-thunder" programs is that mother should not turn off the radio and forbid the children to listen, but listen with them, and after the story ends pick out the good points and emphasize them. At the same time she should point out the impossible situations and the questionable morals of some of the characters.

I think this would work much better than forbidding them to listen, as in that way their curiosity is aroused and they will listen wherever and whenever possible. Carefully constructed criticism will soon teach them the real value of good programs, and they will seek them of their own wishes.

Mrs. A. H. Mitchell, Malone, N. Y.

Dear V. O. L.:

I've had a great deal of experience with children of various ages, and I have five children of my own. I say out of my experience that the younger they are the less they appreciate "murder." It is a cultivated taste.

Today it is almost impossible to prevent quite young children from hearing and seeing things that smack of gangsterism. They can read the comic—or rather "tragic"—strips almost before they know their ABC's. All about them is a "stick-em-up" atmosphere. Yet I can't help noticing how gentle, forgiving and generous some small children are before they go to school and learn to "rough it."

Mrs. G. Hamersley, Duncan, B. C., Can.

Dear V. O. L.:

Strange as it may seem, there are still some people who like those so-called "blood-and-thunder" programs. Would you banish an established American institution just because a few mothers of probably weak and spoiled children claim that their children have nightmares because of listening to children's programs? Well, it is not compulsory to listen to programs people do not think agree with them. So let the regular fellers listen to them, and let the rest of the "children" listen to the fairy-tales on the air. I am a boy thirteen years old and still enjoy "Orphan Annie," etc. I know there are many more like me who can take it or leave it.

Howard S. Brown, Jr., Ponca City, Okla.

Dear V. O. L.:

In your story called "Kids Want Murder" you say that children have a natural tendency to fall into violent habits. Well, to my mind, it's all a matter of degrees. A lot of kids will fight for big causes and little causes, but chiefly with fists, rocks and feet. Very few, if any of them, really incline to extreme violence.

I really think all the tempest about radio children's programs is a bit exaggerated. After all, both children and adults can hear and see and read fiction and be excited without always wanting to do the same things. We can be thrilled by the drama of a suicide, but certainly it doesn't inspire us to end it all. Very few kids who play "cowboy-Indian" games grow up to be hair-trigger outlaws or tomahawk-swinging Indian braves, now do they? The ones who do would probably have turned out the same way, all other things equal, whether they "bang-banged" with wooden pistols or not as kids.

Let 'em shoot. They'll get over it, like they get over calf-love. Just watch the real environment. That's the thing.

R. N. Winston, Tampa, Fla.

Dear V. O. L.:

It isn't so much that "Kids Want Murder" as maintained by T. H. Trent in one of your recent stories. They simply want excitement. So do Mom and Dad.

One point is important. Don't glorify the criminal, or even picture him as a brave man. If the radio must present modern crime violence, play up the law forces rather than the thugs.

Why not give the public more of the romantic excitement of fiction, like "Treasure Island," Dumas' stories, and even Tarzan's jungle adventures. They are exciting, but not so close to home as to inspire dangerous imitation. But go easy on the revolver and machine-gun stuff. That's where danger lies!

Waltz, Women and Wine

AT PRESENT there is a revue playing on Broadway called "From Vienna," staged and performed by actor refugees escaped from that city. To those of us who knew the former Austrian capital at its liveliest and loveliest and have heard the present New York production, the familiar old songs, polkas and waltzes stir a deep nostalgia and regret. I even noticed tears on more than a few eyelashes.

Neither the Austro-Prussian war of 1866, the World War nor the Anschluss of Hitler have eliminated the typical tunes of Vienna. Its theme-song is still "The Beautiful Blue Danube."

The wine may be a bit thin these days and the women less modishly garbed in the Fascist fashions, but the Strauss compositions retain all their original charm and spirit. Those two commentators showed critical genius when they called the Strauss waltzes "Symphonies for Dancing" and "Austria's Second National Anthem."

On a memorable evening in 1867, Strauss gave the premiere of his "Beautiful Blue Danube" at the Diana Hall. The scene has become historical. The auditors climbed on the chairs and shouted and shouted until the waltz was repeated again and again. Soon after, Strauss and his "Blue Danube" went to the Paris Exposition and captured the French public; then to London, and the English fell under its spell. And so it went on, all over the world. Even to the America of 1872, when the composer conducted concerts of his music in New York and Boston and was acclaimed with the wildest kind of enthusiasm.

Offenbach, Paris monarch of the operetta, visited Vienna during the earlier years of Strauss' reign there. The two great men of light music sipped wine together at the Golden Lamb Cafe, and Offenbach, enchanted with the Strauss measures, asked him, "Why not an operetta?" The Viennese musician obliged with a stream of them, and by 1875 or so his "Fledermaus" was sweeping every civilized country on the map. Its toast number, "To His Majesty, Champagne the First," is the keynote of the most sparkling and intoxicating operetta ever written.

Emperor Franz Joseph and Emperor Johann Strauss, as David Ewen calls them in his "Musical Vienna," met when the latter had been composing for fifty years. Said Franz to Johann, "Your music, like yourself, never grows older."

Fortune remained kind to Strauss. He died in 1899 before imperial Vienna went to its downfall. On the afternoon of the composer's passing, a concert was being given in the public park when the sad news reached the conductor. He announced the catastrophe.

A few moments of stunned, terrible silence. Then he led the orchestra in a pianissimo performance of "The Beautiful Blue Danube."

Speaking Up

By V. Vidal

ON THESE hot summer nights, there's nothing like a good quiz with your glass of Coca-Cola to pep you up. So here are ten questions which are not as hard nor as easy as they look. The answers to most of them have been published at one time or another in the March of Music, so if you're an ardent reader, you'll remember them. Each question counts ten points. If you get seventy, you're fair. Eighty, good. Ninety, marvelous. One hundred—you're Toscanini!

- Name five otherwise prolific composers who wrote only one—
 - symphony
 - opera
 - quartet
 - violin concerto
 - piano concerto
- Name five operas titled after their heroines.
- Is a recorder a—
 - phonograph?
 - ancient wind instrument?
 - musical historian?
- Name the composer and his nationality of each of the following compositions:
 - "Symphonie Espagnole"
 - "Rhapsodie Espagnole"
 - "Caprice Espagnole"
 - Spanish Dances
 - "España"
- Who composed the following symphonies?
 - The "Heroic"
 - The "Domestic"
 - The "Fantastic"
 - The "Pathetic"
 - The "Romantic"
- Name five composers who died insane.
- Name five crowned heads who composed music.
- Who composed the following symphonies?
 - The "Rhenish"
 - The "Italian"
 - The "Alpine"
 - The "Scottish"
 - The "New World"
- Can you name five musical Strausses?
- Who was the first great tenor to sing on the radio in America?

Answers will be published in The March of Music next week. Happy landings!

Hans Kindler will conduct the "National Symphony Orchestra," heard on Sunday night over NBC

FORECAST

THIS week brings still another summer symphonic series, to be presented Sunday nights at 10:00 p.m. EDT and Wednesday nights at 10:30 p.m. EDT. The National Symphony Orchestra, playing from the Water Gate auditorium in Washington, D. C., was founded by Hans Kindler, who, by the way, will direct the opening programs. He will be followed later in the season by an impressive list of conductors. Mr. Kindler also conducts the "Toronto Promenade Concerts" this week.

from Symphonic Cycle "Ma Vlast" (Smetana), the Orchestra.

Mozart, born 1756, was still in his teens when he wrote this C major symphony in 1773 or 1774. His eminent catalogue, Koehel, says that the confusion in the year is due to the fact that the composer had scribbled somewhat over the date on the manuscript.

As with all the youthful works of Mozart, this one too shows his easy melodic invention and mastery of form and construction, starting with the direct, energetic opening and ending with the typical merrily bubbling finale. The slow movement is of especially sincere and simple sentiment.

Anton Arensky, Russian (1861-1906), although he produced operas, large orchestral scores and chamber-music, is best known now for his piano pieces ("The Dancing Doll," etc.) and a few songs. His music, always tuneful and graciously harmonized, has not the depth or passion of his blazing countryman, Tschalkowsky. Arensky studied with Rimsky-Korsakoff.

Friedrich (Bedrich) Smetana (1824-84), "the father of Czech music," was an intense patriot and employed predominantly the folk-tunes and dance rhythms of his native land. "Tabor" is one of a cycle of six symphonic poems under the generic title of "Ma Vlast" (My Country) dealing with historic sites and events. Tabor, a town about one hundred miles from Prague, dates from the Hussite period. On a hill stands the ancient fortified castle which played a large role in the early Bohemian wars.

At this late moment of writing it is not possible to glean detailed information about Wilde's piece. This American's competent, smooth pianism is familiar, however, and should sufficiently tell the story of his dance pages.

Lewisohn Stadium Concerts, CBS. Frieder Weissmann, conductor. Piano Quartet in G Minor (Brahms), (arranged for Orchestra by Arnold Schoenberg); Huella y Gato (Aguirre), Symphony No. 5 (Beehoven), Meistersinger Overture (Wagner).

Another concert under the baton of the young German guest conductor brings two uncommon numbers by Schoenberg and Aguirre.

Sixty-five-year-old Schoenberg, now teaching composition in Los Angeles, was at first post-Wagnerian in tendency, but later became anti-romantic and "expressionistic," formulating his own system of harmony, regarded by conservatives as decidedly ugly.

Beautiful, however, is his orchestration of the delightful string quartet by Brahms, music vibrant with feeling and joyful exuberance. In it are the elements of his early German classical training and the strong Hungarian influences gained during his residence in Vienna.

Schoenberg has changed nothing fundamental in the Brahms score, keeping all the clarity of its writing but amplifying orchestrally the composer's colorings and climaxes. When the new version was premiered in Los Angeles several seasons ago, and repeated later in New York, it won unanimously warm praises.

Julian Aguirre (1869-1924), born in Buenos Aires, taught piano and composition there at the Conservatory. He wrote chamber-music, songs and piano pieces, all tinged with Argentinian, French and Italian idioms.

Ernest LaPrade, guest conductor on broadcast from Interlochen Music Camp on NBC, Sun. afternoon

I had some difficulty with the translation of "Huella y Gato." All I could find in my faithful Spanish-American dictionary was that "huella" means "trail" or "footsteps," and that "gato" is "cat." Let us see if the music bears out those definitions.

Thursday, July 20

Toronto Promenade Concerts, NBC. Hans Kindler, conductor. Viggo Kihl, pianist. Festival Overture (Glazounow), Suite (Gluck-Mottl), the Orchestra; Concerto No. 4 (Beethoven), Viggo Kihl and Orchestra.

Hans Kindler comes north from his regular post as conductor of the Washington Orchestra to lead this outdoor concert with a program that offers no actual novelties.

Felix Mottl (1856-1911), young German musician fanatically devoted to Wagner in the early Bayreuth days, later became chief conductor of the Wagner Festivals there. In 1903-04 he was in New York, directing the "Parsifal" performances at the Metropolitan. He composed several operas of his own, but won main renown with his pen through sensitive, atmospheric orchestral arrangements of suites from the ballet music of Rameau and Gluck. They are affectionately established with concert-goers of today.

Kihl, born in Copenhagen, Denmark, 1882, was an international touring pianist before he settled in Toronto to teach at its Conservatory.

The G major piano concerto by Beethoven is an eloquent example of how a master can express himself greatly and yet simply and clearly. From the first page to the last the music is easily grasped and followed by even tyro adventurers in listening. Note the revolutionary idea of opening a concerto with five measures for the unaccompanied solo instrument stating the leading theme, and continuing with sixty-eight measures of orchestral introduction. Marvel also at the brief two pages of poetry departing boldly from the traditional long, slow movement. And chuckle with Beethoven in the merry, mischievous romping of the finale.

Tooth of Time Gnaws Music for Strings

BEFORE making the plunge into the repertoire of string instruments, let it be stated to a correspondent who requests an article on the music for piano duo (two pianos) that this series is confined mainly to material heard over the air. As ensemble compositions for the coupled keyboards are so regrettably infrequent in radio (still catering too much to singers), no article will be devoted to the subject.

From another correspondent: "You are wrong in saying that Weber was born fourteen years before Beethoven, for the former came into the world sixteen years after the latter." The music editor of RADIO GUIDE should have known better, but working from memory, got his dates twisted. He promises hereafter to have an encyclopedia always at his elbow. (And by the way, while one of those recent books gives Beethoven's birth year as 1770, another makes it 1772. The Bonn records show 1770, and that is generally accepted. However, Beethoven himself insisted that it was 1772. Vanity, perhaps, to make better appeal to some of the young women he courted?)

Perhaps this is the moment too for grateful mention of the letters received telling that the writers cut out and collect the present series as well as the one on "Musical Giants"—the latter to be resumed in the autumn.

In the violin, cello, viola and double-bass divisions we scanned concertos and other orchestral affiliations. Now it is in order to tour quickly through the sonata and solo exhibits for the string family.

If you turn back to the early concerto period in these essays, you will find mention of many ancient composers. Most of them wrote no solos for string instruments with piano accompaniment—sonatas not coming in that class, for of course in such works the piano does not merely accompany but is as important as its string partner. Purcell, Corelli, Tartini, Handel, Bach and their forerunners and immediate successors registered with sonatas, partitas and suites for violin as well as cello. Bach even used those instruments singly without any accompaniment at all, and incidentally made an unapproachable job of it. Some of those examples have several of his best-known preludes and gavottes, while the fourth partita (or sonata) includes the immortal "Chaconne," a battle-horse of all the great fiddle virtuosos even today.

Mozart's sonatas for violin and piano rank with those of Beethoven and Brahms, the three being "tops" in that field, as our present generation would say. Mozart also wrote some sets of violin variations. Haydn's piano-violin sonatas are completely forgotten now. He and Mozart wrote none for piano-cello, but Beethoven and Brahms did, and again shine preeminently.

Sonata writing for violin and cello continued after the passing of the greatest Classicists and Romantics, but only a few of the later efforts remain consistently in the repertoire of the twentieth century—outstandingly Franck, Ravel, Faure, Debussy, Richard Strauss, Rachmaninoff and several others. It is a pity that all the ingratiating music in those forms, from Grieg, Rubinstein, Rheinberger, etc., is being swept into gradual oblivion. To replace them, younger men of the present come forth with sonatas from time to time—even American composers try valiantly—but we hear nearly all of them as premieres, and then silence. On some of those occasions, the programs might well have said: "First—and last—performance."

For violin solo, Brahms' "Hungarian Dances" continue to stir with their Magyar tunes and rhythms. Sarasate's "Gypsy Airs" (and Spanish dances), Ernst's "Airs Hongrois," and characteristic short pieces by Wieniawski and Vieuxtemps continue to coax the fingers and bows of some of our best fiddlers. Paganini's "Caprices" and other brilliancies of that necromancer are abidingly with us. So are Saint-Saens' "Capriccio" and "Havanaise."

In the cello section, the oldest music seems to be the most lasting. For a while, nineteenth-century Servais, Davidoff, Popper, and their contemporaries, all concert artists, supplied the knee-fiddle with many acceptable works, but of late the instrument has suffered from dearth of new literature.

With the coming of Fritz Kreisler, the real era of transcriptions began, and now it seems to be the effort of composers to arrange for violin, cello, or piano, every possible kind of music not originally written for them. Kreisler went even further, and published some compositions of his own, which he called "editings" of Francoeur, Pugnani and other ancients, and affixed their names to the title pages. Serious musicians naturally gave him fits for the unethical procedure, even though the pieces are undeniably attractive. However, he started a transcription and arrangement fad which flourishes to such an extent that the regular repertoire for violin and cello has been driven alarmingly into flight. Most of the present-day performers are enthusiastic transcriptionists—Heifetz, Eilman, Spalding, Hartmann, Cassado, Piatigorsky, etc.

Of Kreisler's original compositions, the "Caprice Viennoise" is the most popular, and has been honored even with arrangements for jazz bands.

Once in a while pianists get revenge by transplanting violin or cello music to the keyboard. Rosenthal did it with Davidoff's "At the Fountain," Saar with Bach's E Major Prelude, and our own Morton Gould with Kreisler's "Caprice." Long ago Bach set the fashion by remaking Vivaldi's four-violin concerto into one for four pianos!

LISTENING TO LEARN

Person-to-Person

● The Columbia University Press is now publishing word-for-word transcripts of Columbia's "Americans at Work" programs, which have won the praise of many authorities as a record of American people and what they do for a living. The possible uses of these booklets are many — by schools as well as by listeners who have followed the program regularly on the air, and the unfortunate who want to listen to it but are unable to do so. To date three are ready for distribution: The Publicity Worker, The Cab Driver, The Social Worker.†

● Three American universities honored two members of NBC's education department staff recently when Walter G. Preston, Jr., was elected to the Yale Alumni Board for three years, and Dr. Franklin Dunham was chosen to conduct lecture courses at Columbia and Harvard. Preston, Yale graduate in 1925, is assistant to John Royal in charge of education. Dr. Dunham, who has been educational director of NBC since 1931, was an educator of wide national repute before coming to radio. At Teachers College, Columbia University, he will conduct a course on utilization of radio in schools; and at Harvard he will give a total of twenty lectures on the public service phases of broadcasting.

● Twice a year the University of Kentucky publishes a little booklet titled Radio Programs, in which may be found an outline of the University's broadcasts for a six-month period plus a wealth of helpful information and suggestions for listeners. According to the most recent edition, covering July to December, the University will present twenty-seven different series of programs, many of which are designed for classroom use. Listeners within the range of station WHAS, over whose facilities most of the University's programs are broadcast, will be interested to know that the booklet may be secured by addressing a request to the University of Kentucky, Louisville, Kentucky.

● Director of "Science Everywhere," school-term classroom series presented over NBC by the American Association for the Advancement of Science, is Dr. Carroll Lane Fenton. With "Science Everywhere" off the air for the summer months, Dr. Fenton begins a ten-week series of discussions on the other A. A. S. program, "Science on the March."‡ Widely known as an author of science books for children as well as adults, Dr. Fenton will discuss important books on popular science, will emphasize the use of books as preparation for travel and in recreation near home. Data to supplement the broadcasts, including complete scripts of the programs, illustrations and reviews of books, may be found in an A. A. S. publication, also named Science on the March, which may be secured at bookstores or through Nature Book Distributors, 1212 Sixteenth St., Washington, D. C.

At the Rockies' Timberline

Timberline is that point above sea level beyond which trees do not grow. In the tropics it is highest, gradually descending toward north and south. This line in the Himalayas is about 11,800 feet above sea level, in the Alps a mere 6,400, and in the Rockies it varies from 9,000 to 12,000 feet.

The July 15 program in the "Nature Sketches" series will be picked up at the Colorado Rockies' timberline on Trail Ridge, where Park Naturalist Raymond Gregg will have the Junior Nature School for a stroll among the trees. Here they will find (and we, as listeners to the trailside discussion that is picked up along the way, will learn) that the incessant severity of life conditions force the upward surge of tree life back from its climb up the mountain slopes.

Trees thirty to fifty feet long and but a few feet high (see picture below) will be studied and discussed. Raymond Gregg will tell the story of trees that grow to great size and height in one place and become groveling, twisted dwarfs but a short distance away. In his ad-lib discussion with the Junior Nature School class, trees will come to life in roles in which we never expected to find them. He will tell of trees that "started to China," Christmas trees "with their own candles," the Limber Pine "with no bones in its arms."

"Nature Sketches" may be heard Saturdays over NBC at:

EDT 11:45 a.m.	—	EST 10:45 a.m.
CDT 10:45 a.m.	—	CST 9:45 a.m.

Darrow in New York

Some very encouraging developments have been taking place in western New York (state) schools since Ben Darrow became director of education on the staff of station WBEN. A meeting recently called by a district school superintendent made evident the fact that teachers in the vicinity are becoming actively aware of the educational potentialities of radio in response to Mr. Darrow's efforts to present programs for classroom use over WBEN. This meeting, called by Mabel Sarbaugh, was the first radio conference ever held in western New York; but more important is the fact that it was arranged without any suggestions from outsiders because forty of the sixty schools in Miss Sarbaugh's district had listened to the newly created "school of the air" and had shown so much interest that she desired to make a clean sweep of the use of radio in all her schools.

The purpose of the meeting was to discuss radio and how it may be used more widely and more effectively in the cause of education. Speakers were all active participants in WBEN's Western New York School of the Air: Mary Helen Scapellitti, story-teller; William Mayhew, announcer; Mrs. Kate V. Wofford, president of the advisory committee, and Mr. Darrow, director. Recordings of WBEN's school-of-the-air broadcasts were played and methods of preparation and follow-up, as well as things to be done during the broadcast to insure retention, were discussed. The teachers took an active part, many of them telling how they accomplished these objectives with each separate broadcast.

Most often recurring statement by teachers at the meeting was, in effect, that the use of radio increased the power of concentration and alertness of the pupils. Teachers further claimed that the broadcasts broadened the children's world, increased their wealth of information, fostered initiative and stimulated the desire for further study.

Key man in WBEN's Western New York School of the Air project is Ben H. Darrow, a trail-blazer in the radio-education movement. His first work in this field dates back to 1924-25, when he was conducting the "Little Red Schoolhouse" series over WLS, Chicago. He next founded and for nine years directed the Ohio School of the Air. In 1937 he accepted the position he now holds as director of education at station WBEN. By the fall of 1938, his third venture in broadcasting for schools, the Western New York School of the Air, was ready to be launched. That this series after one school-term's run is arousing active interest among teachers in the educational possibilities of radio augurs well for the future development of radio-education in western New York.

Mr. Darrow, in addition to his broadcast work in this field, has written a book, Radio, the Assistant Teacher,†† that attempts to follow the radio-education movement from its origin and early growth to a look at the future through the expert eyes of its author.

NEW PROGRAMS

"The Man I Married" (Oxydol), a new dramatic serial that replaced "Central City," can be heard Mondays through Fridays at 8:00 a.m. CST (7:00 MST).

PROGRAM CHANGES
 "Your Hit Parade" (Lucky Strike Cigarettes), usually heard at 8:00 p.m. CST (7:00 MST), changed time with the broadcast of Saturday, July 8, and is now on the air at 7:00 p.m. CST (6:00 MST).

"Saturday Night Serenade" (Pet Milk) can be heard Saturdays at 7:45 p.m. CST (6:45 MST). This time change was effective with the broadcast of July 8.

Edwin C. Hill (Jorgens Loton) is substituting for Walter Winchell while he is vacationing. The program can be heard at the same time Sundays at 7:30 and 9:00 p.m. CST (6:30 and 8:00 p.m. MST).

Guy Lombardo's orchestra (Lady Esther) will move to a new time Monday, July 17, when the program can be heard weekly at 7:30 p.m. CST (6:30 MST). Horace Heidt's orchestra (Tuma), formerly broadcast on Thursdays and Fridays, will be heard on Mondays, beginning July 17, at 7:30 p.m. CST (6:30 MST).

"Doctor T. Q." (Mars Candy) moved to a new time and network Monday, July 10, where it can be heard weekly at 7:00 p.m. CST (6:00 MST).

Bob Crosby's orchestra (Camel Cigarettes) moved into Benny Goodman's spot Tuesday night, July 4, at 7:30 p.m. CST (6:30 MST). However, on Saturdays, at 8:00 p.m. CST (7:00 MST), Benny Goodman and his orchestra can be heard in a weekly "Jam Session," assisted by Louise Tobin, singer; Bert Parks, m.c., and the Goodman Trio.

"Knickerbocker Playhouse" (Teel and Dreng), featuring Elliott Lewis and well-known guests, can be heard on Wednesday nights at 7:30 p.m. CST (6:00 MST). This day and time change went into effect with the broadcast of Wednesday, July 12.

Every Sat. Nite
Tune in
The
Alka-Seltzer
NATIONAL
BARN DANCE

IF YOU want to enjoy radio at its best—a program that is different, and with never a dull moment—tune in the Alka-Seltzer National Barn Dance and enjoy a full hour of old-time singing, dancing and wholesome fun every Saturday night. This is one of the oldest radio programs on the air. Uncle Ezra, Joe Kelly, Henry Burr, The Hoosier Hot Shots, Maple City Four, and 40 outstanding radio artists crowd this happy, carefree hour full of exciting fun and matchless entertainment. NBC Coast to Coast Network.

INTRODUCING THE NEW

SCOTT Masterpiece

CUSTOM BUILT

Equipped to Receive TELEVISION SOUND

"This is one of the most amazing, superbly toned, precision built instruments ever produced in my engineering laboratories. Final tests revealed such tremendous capabilities on both broadcast and short wave bands that there was only one way to describe it... a 'Masterpiece'! I believe its performance is unapproached by any other make of radio in the world today. Many far advanced features including television sound up to 60 megas are incorporated into this magnificent new instrument."

30 DAYS TRIAL • GUARANTEED 5 YEARS

Hand made with fine watch precision, yet costs no more than many production type radios. SOLD ONLY DIRECT FROM SCOTT LABORATORIES. Budget plan if desired. Mail the coupon NOW!

SEND FOR INTRODUCTORY OFFER!

E. H. SCOTT RADIO LABS. INC.
4476 Ravenswood Ave. Dept. 31M9 Chicago, Ill.

DISCARD YOUR OLD AERIAL

It Is Most Likely Corroded and Has Poor or Loose Noisy Connections
 NO MORE BUZZES, CLICKS and shorts from summer rains and winter snow and sleet when using an F & H Capacity Aerial Eliminator. Anyone can connect it in a moment's time to the radio set—receives only 1/2 inch by 4 inch space behind the set, yet enables your radio to operate without an aerial and tune in stations over the entire broadcast band frequencies and short wave channels.

ELIMINATE THE AERIAL FOR GOOD

Attach this aerial to your radio—make your set complete in itself—forget aerial wires and troubles—move your set anywhere—no more roof climbing, unsightly lead-in or aerial wires.

NET NEW—VALUE ALREADY PROVED

On the market five years, 150,000 customers in U.S. and foreign countries.
 In use from the Arctic Region of Norway to the Tropics of Africa. Each factory tested on actual long distance reception. Cannot harm set—Easily connected to any radio, including radios having no ground or radio for double antenna. Note: It will not operate on battery or automobile radios.

5 DAYS TRIAL Mail coupon at once. Pay postman $1.00 plus few pennies postage on delivery. If not entirely satisfied, return within five days and your dollar will be refunded without question.

F & H Radio Laboratories, Dept. 92, Fargo, N. Dak.
 Send $1.00 in Capacity Aerial Eliminator. Plus postman $1.00 plus few cents postage. If not satisfied will return within 5 days for $1 refund. Check 1 how I will send you $1 with order—plus paying postage cost—same refund guaranteed. Check here if interested in dealer's proposition.

End of Friday Programs

"Men Behind the Stars"

The subject of the July 21 broadcast is the star-group Capricornus, also called the Sea Goat. Capricornus is one of the twelve constellations of the Zodiac and is associated with the southernmost position of the sun. For that reason when the sun is farthest south in the sky the line on the earth directly beneath it at noon is known as the Tropic of Capricorn. On a map of the world this imaginary line running east and west passes close to the center of Australia and South America and near the southern tip of Africa. We see Capricornus low on the southeastern horizon on midsummer nights, but it is not an easy group to identify or describe. Aratus writes:

The Goat
Dim in the midst, but four fair stars surround him,
One pair set close, the other wider parted.
"Men Behind the Stars," presented by the Hayden Planetarium of the American Museum of Natural History, may be heard Fridays over CBS at:
EDT 5:45 p.m. — EST 4:45 p.m.
CDT 4:45 p.m. — CST 3:45 p.m.
MST 2:45 p.m. — PST 1:45 p.m.

On Short Waves: Edited by Chas. A. Morrison

President, International DX'ers Alliance

Times given are Eastern Daylight Time. For EST and CDT subtract 1 hour; CST, 2 hours; MST, 3 hours; PST, 4 hours.

BBROADCAST service to South America, Asia and the Antipodes from General Electric's short-wave station W6XBE, located at the Golden Gate Exposition on Treasure Island, San Francisco Bay, was almost doubled, starting on Saturday, June 24. The new schedule calling for twelve and three-quarter hours of programs daily is as follows: On 9.53 megs, from 1 to 4 a.m. and from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. EDT, directed primarily to Asia, and on 15.33 megs, from 7:30 p.m. to 12:15 a.m. EDT, directed to Latin America. The increase in service was motivated by the thousands of letters that have been received from listeners in South America, Asia, New Zealand and Australia. The weekly schedule of W2XAF (9.53) at Schenectady, New York, has also been increased by ten hours.

A new station, KZEH, located at Manila, in the Philippines, has been heard testing lately near 8 a.m. EDT, on a frequency of 9.585 megs. Reports were solicited and these should be sent to P. O. Box 119, Manila, Philippine Islands.

Ashley Walcott of San Francisco, Calif., informs me that ZHJ, Penang, Straits Settlement, is now being heard on a frequency of 6.09 megs, until 9:40 a.m. EDT, or sometimes later, with relays of programs from Daventry, England; that MTCY (15.20) Hsingking, Manchukuo, sent a special report to NBC at San Francisco, one afternoon recently, but due to interference from DJB, Zeesen, Germany, operating on the same frequency, the network cut the program; that JFO, Taihoku, Taiwan, has not shifted in frequency to 9.69, but is still operating on 9.63 megs, while the Taihoku station on 9.69 megs is a new one which transmits simultaneously with JFO. Still another Taihoku station on 7.32 megs, the loudest of the three, may be heard daily from 9 to 11:20 a.m. EDT. A QSL card from "Radio Saigon" at Saigon, French Indo-China, states that this station operates on 6.116 megs, with a power of 12,000 watts, daily from 7:45 to 9:30 a.m. and from 12:45 to 1:15 a.m. EDT, and on a frequency of 11.78 megs, from 1:15 to 1:45 and from 9:30 to 10:45 a.m. EDT.

CB946 (9.46), a new 5,000-watt station that will relay broadcast stations CB118 and CB150 at Santiago, Chile, is now under construction. CB1174, "Radio Hucke," Santiago, may be heard nightly to 11:30 p.m. EDT, on a frequency of 11.745.

B. E. Long of Palmira, Colombia, South America, writes that English listeners in that country now have to depend upon reception from 11-meter-band stations in the United States, since the other North American international stations are radiating programs almost wholly in Spanish or Portuguese. W8XNU of Cincinnati, Ohio, and W9XUP of St. Paul, Minn., are the most dependable, he says, but there is seldom a day on which one or more of the 11-meter stations can not be heard up to about 10 p.m. EDT. This item should serve as an encouragement to broadcasters on the 11-meter band to make every effort toward providing an interesting and satisfactory program service on this new band.

Alan Breen of Dunedin, New Zealand, is proud of the QSL card he has just received from Y15KQ, the Qasr El-Zehoor Broadcasting Station at Baghdad, Iraq. The cream-colored card bears a likeness of Prince Faisal, Crown Prince of Iraq. The call letters are in black with blue shading and the address is given in English, and arabic characters. The power of the station, which operates on 7.2 megs, is given as 1,000 watts.

SHORT-WAVE SHORTS: Desmond Callan of Readville, Mass., writes that "Radio Eireann" of Athlone, Ireland, will operate on the following schedule for the next few weeks: On 17.84 megs, daily from 8:30 to 10 a.m. and on 9.595 or 17.84 megs (alternate days), from 12:30 to 4:30 p.m. EDT. Short-wave station CSW of Lisbon, Portugal, has been assigned new frequencies of 9.67, and 15.155 megs, in addition to its present ones of 9.74 and 11.04 megs. Two and a quarter hours of additional program time becomes available for listeners in Western Canada as the result of the British Broadcasting Corporation's introduction into Transmission 1 from Daventry of a frequency directional on that area. This frequency, GSD (11.75), may be heard nightly from 1 to 3:20 a.m. EDT. According to August Balbi of Los Angeles, Calif., Bangkok, Siam, may now be heard over HS6PJ (19.02), Mondays from 9 to 11 a.m. and over HS8PJ (9.51), Thursdays and Saturdays, and occasionally Fridays, from 9 to 11 a.m. EDT. VK2ME (9.59) of Sydney, Australia, now operates Sundays, from 1 to 3, from 5:30 to 9:30, and from 11:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. EDT. A new coastal harbor radiotelephone station to use frequencies of 2.738 and 2.55 megs, will be erected at Mackinac Island.

Short-wave programs of American stations are shown along with the regular listings beginning on page 19. These are indicated, for example by (sw-11.87) in parentheses following a program listing. This means that on 11.87 megacycles the same program may also be heard over an American short-wave station. Please note that foreign stations do not always adhere precisely to their announced program schedules.

THE ENDLESS VALLEE

We will not go deeply into Vallee's marital maze. Fay Webb is dead. Those who know Vallee (if anybody does) say he loved her. Their separation and her efforts to collect a hunk of money made lurid reading. Vallee won. The court accepted as evidence some exhibits which sought to establish that she had jumped the traces. So let's pass that chapter up.

Vallee's romances have furnished many headlines and cocktail-hour cracks. Alice Faye apparently is the only blonde ever to catch and hold Mr. Vallee's interest. He gave her the start that made her famous, but "they say" (I've always wondered who "they" are) there was more to the Vallee-Faye association than his personal-management contract. Vallee took her to the West Coast, and when Fox offered her a contract Rudy released her to give her the golden opportunity.

Then something happened to smash the friendship, or romance. He returned to the Coast after Miss Faye had spurted up the ladder and was celebrating his birthday out there. Miss Faye personally took him an expensive present and went to his party. Mr. Vallee refused the present. He didn't refuse Miss Faye her ice cream and cake.

A year ago Vallee was playing at the Cocoman Grove and Miss Faye and her husband, Tony Martin, appeared. Vallee turned his back to cameramen who sought to take a shot of the three together. The Martins got peeved and left. The rift has been healed, however.

Since Miss Faye and Vallee parted, his steady has been Judy Stewart. The two have dated for several years, but Vallee has found time to entertain other charmers and be entertained. His dates in Hollywood have included Gloria Youngblood, Dorothy Lamour, Mary Healy, Marjorie Weaver, Lorraine Sender and a host of others.

Mr. Vallee is not timid with women. He has a weakness for raven tresses, brown eyes and supple bodies. But who hasn't? His gals are the kind our pious great-grandpas used to like—"females well taken up, with salt in their craws and pepper in their blood."

He doesn't like women who pretend they do not enjoy a kiss. He's allergic to most perfumes. Some friends say Vallee likes to date singers who have been pushed around a bit and therefore understand his temperament. Mr. Vallee perhaps thinks he's one of those misunderstood men, and the best remedy for that ailment is the oldest, the ancient, reliable cure—raven tresses and brown eyes. A good home-cooked meal every now and then helps, too. Our personal prescription for misunderstood women is a new purse with folding money in it, a hair-do and a compliment. For men, we recommend complete silence before breakfast, good coffee at meals and flattery.

Back when Rudy really was earning his batter cakes by crooning, some of the boys called him sissy. Mr. Dempsey has a high voice, too, and when you talk to him on the phone you might slip up and say, "Yes'm." But it's wise to be certain there is a telephone line between you. So Mr. Vallee didn't want to be called sissy and went forth with a chip on his shoulder to prove he wasn't. He would fight at the drop of a press-agent's hat. He liked to pick on newspaper men because reporters picked on him. It was a rather silly performance on both sides.

Some say Mr. Vallee's brawls were publicity build-ups. I don't believe it, for Mr. Vallee often stuck out his chin, and stars don't risk their chins for stories. We believe Rudy lost his temper on several occasions and fought, a perfectly acceptable American pastime.

The most famous of his fights was in Boston and the papers skinned him. As a matter of fact, Mr. Vallee was protecting a lady, Miss Judy Stewart. Miss Stewart visited him in Boston. She had told her boss in New York that she was sick and had taken French leave.

Folks get fired for things like that. A Boston cameraman saw Judy and Rudy together and, smelling romance, flashed their picture. Rudy insists that he first asked the cameraman, nicely, not to shoot the picture, then not to develop it.

He didn't tell the cameraman that if Judy's picture appeared with his in Boston she would get the sack. Perhaps if he had told the photographer that, the lensman would have thrown away the shot. Photographers are, generally, a soft-hearted gang. Perhaps, on the other hand, if Vallee had told the story the lensman would have realized that his picture really was valuable from a news point and would have told Rudy to go chase himself.

Photographers are hired to get pictures, not to be father-confessors or accessories after the fact of French leave. It would have been a gallant but stupid gesture for the photographer to have heeded Vallee. After all, Mr. Vallee is a grown man. Miss Stewart is a grown lady. There is no reason why a newspaper man should protect them.

Anyway, the lensman and Vallee had words and Mr. Vallee punched him.

THE newspapers, some of them, nailed Mr. Vallee's hide on the wall and he squirmed. He realized he had been quite foolish. He obviously regretted the incident and went on the air and told his side of the story. That was another mistake. The public forgets quickly. We believe Mr. Vallee was really sorry for his behavior and had courage enough to lay his story before the public. But the public wouldn't accept it. Some folks said Mr. Vallee was whining. Others yelled publicity again. The public often is very unfair. And entertainers are at a great disadvantage. If they do anything good, somebody yells publicity. If they do something silly, it's publicity again.

Vallee dislikes reporters and publicity men—not the men personally, or their jobs, but he hates publicity, for when he gets it he's always afraid somebody will say he was seeking it. It's a rather childish way to look at matters, but Mr. Vallee is supersensitive. He doesn't mind candid-camera men shooting him. Those shots are natural, never phonies, he says.

About a year ago Vallee was heckled at the Cocoman Grove while trying to do a serious job. He requested the heckler to lay off. The heckler took another drink and laid it on thick. Mr. Vallee left the bandstand, went to the heckler, shook him sober and turned him loose. The man slipped under the table, a delightful place to be at times. The papers made much of it—Tarzan Vallee was on the loose again, get the ba'r guns, boys.

Tommyrot! Surely some waiter or head man, or something, of the house should have handled the heckler. If they wouldn't, and maybe he was an important guy, more power to Mr. Vallee.

But Vallee is marked. If he says "boo," the story will be that he practiced mayhem. Just recently a waiter accidentally bumped into him. The waiter apologized. Vallee said to forget it, and the story grew until the public was told that Mr. Vallee had started throwing fists again. Mr. Vallee is getting middle-aged. He wants to be left alone. As a New York reporter, I, with many others, wrote some rather sharp stories about Mr. Vallee. Many of us did. Now we all are getting up in the thirties. Personally, I can't read that "Life Begins at Forty" business. Mr. Vallee loves it.

Let's lay off the man. He's proved he can take it. We as reporters haven't.

James Street's second and concluding article about the amazing Vallee appears in next week's issue.

Rudy Vallee may be heard Thursday night on NBC at:
EDT 8:00 p.m. — CDT 7:00 p.m.
EST 7:00 p.m. — CST 6:00 p.m.
MST 5:00 p.m. — PST 4:00 p.m.

pyramiding our obligations until the greatest prosperity debt in the history of civilization is confronting us. The only two ways out are revaluation of our gold ounce or repudiation of our debts. One way is Christianity. The other way is bolshevism.

This sounded fine, and so did his speeches in favor of the remonetization of silver, and his followers proudly hailed him as the greatest authority on finance in the country. Early in 1934, however, the Treasury Department revealed that Amelia Collins, one of Coughlin's secretaries, had been speculating in silver futures. Miss Collins, it turned out, had bought 500,000 ounces of silver with the funds of the Radio League of the Little Flower. Since she was obviously acting as a front for Coughlin, the father's subsequent orations on silver sounded hollow.

From the beginning of his career as a demagog, Coughlin advocated not only monetary reforms but industrial reforms as well. He insisted that every worker was entitled to join a union of his own choosing and to receive a just annual wage. He encouraged industrialists to soften their hearts toward their workers and permit Jesus Christ to act as board chairman at their meetings. While acting as a champion of the working-class, he saw nothing wrong in refusing to employ union workmen in building his shrine. He saw nothing wrong, either, in proposing that the Government take over the functions of collective bargaining, thus openly admitting that he favored the fascist method of dealing with the problems of labor. Coughlin has always hankered to dabble in union affairs. When the independent union that was eventually to become the United Automobile Workers of America was founded in 1935, he attempted to formulate a program for it. Although his program wasn't adopted, he remained on very friendly terms with the head men of the union, and they frequently dropped in to see him at the shrine. When Homer Martin, lately deposed president of the UAW, evinced a desire to dicker privately with Henry Ford, it was Coughlin who arranged the meeting.

Later on, by releasing to the Dies Committee a stenographic copy of some off-the-record comments made by Martin at a private meeting at the shrine, Coughlin did his bit to ruin Martin's standing in the UAW. Martin's private comments were to the effect that most of the UAW leaders were Communists. By compelling Martin to acknowledge them in public, Coughlin made it virtually impossible for the union leader to get together with fellow union officials. Coughlin's motive in double-crossing Martin was apparently to render the split in the UAW irreparable. He hates everything connected with the CIO and is anxious to wreck its unions.

Coughlin has never been loyal to anybody but himself. In his personal relationships he is just as opportunistic as he is in his political beliefs. Back in 1930, his closest adviser was Representative Louis McFadden of Pennsylvania, who enjoys the unwholesome distinction of having delivered the only anti-Semitic address ever heard in the House. One day in December, 1931, McFadden made a speech in the House of Representatives demanding the impeachment of Herbert Hoover, which resulted in his being attacked by every Republican paper in the land. In the midst of the critical bombardment, McFadden requested Coughlin to say a few words in his favor. "I certainly will," Coughlin responded, "just listen to me next Sunday." When McFadden tuned in on the priest a few days later, he heard him say: "Representative McFadden should be expelled from Con-

GOOD RECORDS

A department reviewing the recordings of your radio favorites

McDonald and Menotti:

Harl McDonald looms as one of the most formidable of modern American composers with each release of his music on records, the Cakewalk from his Third Symphony being one of them. McDonald has a knack of sprightliness plus a tremendous lyric quality, well exemplified in this single disk by the Philadelphia Orchestra, Eugene Ormandy, conductor. On the other side, another modern American is represented by the overture from his first successful work, the opera "Amelia Goes to the Ball," by Gian-Carlo Menotti, whose opera for radio, called "The Old Maid and the Thief," was performed by the NBC Symphony. A good buy. (Victor 15377. $2.00.) McDonald's Concerto for Two Pianos and Orchestra is currently out on Victor records, will be reviewed here soon.

Radio Names on Wax:

MARTHA RAYE: The success of Peter de Rose's "Deep Purple" undoubtedly inspired the reviving of "Park Avenue Fantasy," the smooth and beautiful strain which has been given lyrics and called "Stairway to the Sky." It makes good copy for Martha Raye, whose singing oftentimes tops the caliber of her jokes on a certain soap program. It serves to introduce her on Brunswick.

MILDRED BAILEY: The newest theft from the classics is "The Lamp Is Low," utilizing the very melodic strains of Ravel's "Pavane." For some reason it is not half as annoying a degradation as "Our Love," which cheapened the Tchaikowsky overture, "Romeo and Juliet," so flagrantly. And with Mildred Bailey to sing it, "The Lamp Is Low" goes well. Another Gilbert and Sullivan swing job is on the other side, "Tit Willow."

THE CROSBYS: Bing and Bob are doing much to hark us back to the days when Bing was making such a hit out on the West Coast with Gus Arnheim and his orchestra, while Bob was still taking his lessons. Bing sings two that were favorites in those days . . . "I Surrender Dear" and "It Must Be True," backed by Trotter's unison fiddles and the Music Makers. One of Bing's best. (Decca.) Brother Bob's latest swingeroo is "Them There Eyes," another from the same era. (Also Decca.)

"BING CROSBY" is the title of the latest Calypso record from Trinidad. Those who have followed these screwball dialect records from the Lesser Antilles may get a laugh out of this one, which extolls the virtues of Bing's voice, family and reputation in general. However, it is one of the sloppiest of all Calypso jobs. (Decca.)

EDDY DUCHIN's band is less like itself than usual with the two Jack Meakin arrangements on their newest record. However, the variations are patterned around Duchin's amazingly naive piano playing. "London Bridges" and "Norwegian Dance," by Grieg, are the tunes. (Brunswick.)

gress for making such charges against our President." He has behaved in a similar fashion in many other instances. Among his former pals only a few have escaped his betrayal, the most prominent exception being Huey Long, who was assassinated while his friendship with Coughlin was still hot.

Ordinarily Coughlin speaks with unctuous kindness about practically everybody. His description of Franklin Roosevelt as a man with "an honest heart" is identical with his description of Huey Long. Today, of course, Coughlin considers Roosevelt, his former hero, virtually a Communist, while he considers Long an example of the "true democrat."

Compared with Long, Coughlin is a political Pipsqueak. Whereas Long, with his "Share the Wealth" clubs, was astute enough to introduce into the United States a brand of demagoguery ostensibly free from any alien taint, Coughlin has made his pulpit the sounding-board for ideas openly imported from Germany. Instead of waiting to consolidate his position as a pseudo-radical, the father has flopped heavily into the diametrically opposite camp. He has thus disqualified himself to play with any degree of plausibility the role of the savior of down-trodden labor. Although he still rants endlessly about "social justice," he has pursued such an opportunistic course that he has baffled even his followers.

Coughlin's following, which used to include a great many Protestants and Jews in his earlier money-reform incarnation, is today overwhelmingly Catholic. The applause he receives from Fritz Kuhn's Bund is not worth much, since its membership is extremely small. The loud approbation of Adolf Hitler's anti-Catholic press for the Royal Oak preacher is one of the curiosities of the father's scrambled politics. That Coughlin should be permitted by his spiritual superiors to exploit his connection with the Roman Catholic Church to attract an audience for his evangelism of intolerance is not easy to understand. In a land where feelings against religious minorities have usually taken the form of anti-Catholicism, a priest in the role of preacher of intolerance toward any minority is surpassingly strange. From the point of view of Catholics who deplore his activities, it is regrettable, to put it mildly, that he should be able to boast that his bishop, with his imprimatur, authorizes everything he says.

Coughlin is a man that nobody can trust. He is a dangerous friend and a scurrilous enemy. Politically unpredictable, he has held his followers during the depression by supplying them with various scapegoats for their misery and discontent. Although his influence is waning, a recurrence of the conditions of 1932 would undoubtedly restore a great deal of his popularity. On his record, he is a political incompetent, who will never be anything more than the advance man for a shrewd and capable mob-leader. Meanwhile, he is a rather pathetic creature, suffering from delusions of grandeur and demonstrating somewhat sadly "the effect of unlimited power on limited minds."

Father Coughlin may be heard Sunday over a special network at:

EDT 5:00 p.m. — EST 4:00 p.m.
CDT 4:00 p.m. — CST 3:00 p.m.

Not broadcast by stations in Mountain and Pacific Time zones.

CARLTON MORSE: FAMILY MAN

of six children—and he spent his early years on a large ranch in Oregon. There, far removed from neighbors and outside social influences, the family learned to depend upon itself for amusement and diversion. The family ties which grew up as a consequence were much stronger than those of the average city dweller, and Morse carries today a fondness for his family members which seems almost exaggerated to one unaware of the facts. On each May 30, a reunion of the Morses is held, and last year more than sixty-five members—running into the third generation—were present.

"But my own family enters into the dramatizations of 'One Man's Family' to a surprisingly small degree," he will tell you. "Then I use incident rather than family philosophy, for we were strict Presbyterians, isolated on a ranch. The Barbours are more modern in their philosophy. Frequently when you hear Henry relate an anecdote it is drawn from the store of stories told me by my grandfather. Incidentally, Henry is the closest approach to any of my actual family you will find in the script."

There is something about the big, bear-like man that is basically sound, and the sturdy Dutch ancestry stands out prominently in both his mental and physical make-up. But under the stolid Dutch exterior of the man—and his easy-going, almost sloppy dress—lies an unexpressed desire to emulate the suave men-about-town he finds all around him in the movie colony. Providing, of course, the conversion wouldn't take too much effort.

He was so impressed by a scene in the picture "The Thin Man," in which William Powell saunters up to the bar and says, "Give me a flock of Martinis," that he waited two years to emulate the scene. It was at a hotel in Santa Barbara, where he and Mrs. Morse had gone for Easter sunrise services, at 5:30 in the morning, that he astonished a sleeping bartender, Mrs. Morse and—I am certain—himself, by picking up the phone and ordering twelve Tom Collinses. The bartender gasped and the gasp so pleased Morse that, a half-hour later, he phoned again, "Send up twelve more Tom Collinses."

HIS outstanding characteristic is a keen ability to analyze people, readily and accurately. At first meetings, he either likes or dislikes acquaintances and can give the reason why. He is a notably poor conversationalist and never dictates to a stenographer, as do most script-writers. He can find expression for his stories and ideas only at the typewriter. He never works at home, but reports at the office early—at 8:30—after a breakfast of steak and rich cream, tosses off his coat, dons an old sweater and a pair of easy slippers and goes to work. He has a deadly fear—almost a phobia—of colds and keeps his windows closed tightly. An inveterate chain smoker, the room is soon so filled with smoke that you can cut it with a knife.

How feverishly he works depends entirely upon how close to his deadline he is. His script is due for mimeographing on Thursday afternoons. On Monday he comes to the office, sticks a sheet of paper in the typewriter and dawdles around, finally throwing the sheet away. On Tuesday, likewise. On Wednesday he goes to work, writing faster and faster. He is strictly a deadline writer, doing his best work under pressure of time, and he has never been late with a script.

He spends most of his leisure time at home, where he reads, plays games, works crossword puzzles. He is an avid movie fan, and some day—if current difficulties are ironed out—"One Man's Family" may become a movie. But Morse insists that he have full say about story and dialog, the selection of the cast and—most important—that the characters use the actual voices (by dubbing in) of his radio characters so as not to dispel illusions built up by radio listeners. The movie studio feels that he is being cranky and a prima donna. He feels that he is keeping faith with his listeners.

Around the studios they say that this attitude is but another evidence of his stubborn Dutch streak which crops up continually. He refuses to make any changes in a script when it is finished, and the only criticism he will take at all is an occasional suggestion from his wife, Patricia. Pat, as he calls her, is a tiny blonde who bosses him around. Intimate friends say that she resembles a tiny ringmaster leading a big, bald-pated bear around, and she fusses and fumes over him. And he loves it.

MR. FAIRFAX

Mr. Isaac Jones, Detroit, Mich.—Silly Watson, formerly heard on the "Fibber McGee" program, was portrayed by Hugh Studebaker. When the show moved to Hollywood, Studebaker stayed in Chicago, thus Silly Watson was eliminated from the "Fibber McGee" cast. Hugh Studebaker may be heard in the role of Dr. Bob Graham in "Bachelor's Children." Pick and Pat are not on any network program at the present time.

Mrs. Henry Adams, Penn Yan, N. Y.—In "Pepper Young's Family" Curtis Arnall portrays Pepper, Elizabeth Wragge has the role of Peggy Young, Jack Roseleigh is Sam Young, Mary Young is portrayed by Marion Barney, John Kane plays Nick Havens, Eunice Howard plays Linda Benton, Jean Sothorn portrays Edie Gray, Biff Bradley is portrayed by Laddie Seaman, Curt Bradley is played by Edwin R. Wolfe, Greta Kvalden is Hattie, "Butch" (Hattie's baby) is characterized by Madeleine Pierce, and Frank Hastings is played by Jim Krieger. The theme song of this serial is "Always."

careless, and I deserved what I got. But I'll fight him again, and next time I'll beat the bum. He's not as tough as they say he is, nowhere near as tough as he's rated. He can be hit, and he can be hurt. He can't take it. If my handlers had let me fight him the way I wanted to, in there swinging every minute, roughing him up, I'd have beat him out there tonight. I'd be champion of the world right this minute.

"Something got in my eyes, too. I couldn't see out of my eyes.

"Louis can't hit, either. K. O. Christner hit me harder than Louis did. This guy is a good fighter, but not as good as they rate him. He didn't knock me down. He pushed me. What'd they stop it for, anyway? I wasn't down. I was still on my feet. If they give me a return bout and if my handlers let me fight my own fight I'll stop the tramp."

"Galento is patched up now after a fashion, at least the bleeding has stopped, and he's going into the showers. As soon as he's dressed he's going to leave the Yankee Stadium here and head for his home in Orange, New Jersey. There was some talk before the fight that win, lose or draw, Tony was going down to Jimmy Kelly's place in Greenwich Village and throw a party, but there are more important things than that in store for him. For one thing, he's got to go to a doctor and get those cuts fixed up. After that, he'll go to his tavern in Orange, where there'll be hundreds of his friends waiting to welcome him. Two-Ton Tony may have lost the fight, but he came within one punch of winning, and even in defeat he looked like the grand fighter he is."

Tony Galento did stop at the doctor's on his way home. It was a long stop—a twenty-three-stitch stop. It took nine (Continued on Page 40) seriously complicate an unemployment problem that affects ten million wage-earners. It must also be remembered that a large number of the 75,000 German refugees are women and children, as well as men too old to be competitors in the labor market.

AM I MY BROTHER'S KEEPER?

Referring to a number of rumors concerning refugee displacement of Americans and the official investigations made of these rumors, Dr. Leiper concluded:

"These instances do not prove that no American has been displaced by a refugee; they do indicate, however, that when these rumors are run down they are usually found to be baseless. Anyone acquainted with the strange word-of-mouth process by which a rumor grows into a widespread whispering campaign will understand how the employment of one refugee in a job created by him can be magnified into a trend that threatens the security of American workmen."

More generally it can be said that the general public assumes, in the manner of careless thinking of the masses, that surplus population is the basis of the present business depression, and that future immigration would only make things worse. But with this point of view many economists disagree.

R. F. Harrod, lecturer in economics at Oxford University, says:

"The notion that existence of unemployment is a good reason for discouraging immigration appears wholly fallacious."

Professor Bernhard Ostrolenk writes in the Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science:

"One important factor making for relatively more jobs is population growth. It can be shown that in large part the present depression is the consequence of the cessation of population growth."

Observe the results, please, of refugee immigration in other countries.

Only recently Sir Samuel Hoare, British Home Secretary, told the House of Commons that 11,000 refugees in England had given employment to 15,000 Britons. A Dutch Commission for Economic Advice to German Emigrants reported that the number of workers in Holland who had been brought into employment by the direct economic activity of the refugee was approximately the same as the number of refugees who had come into Holland.

Although German refugee immigration to the United States is a recent development in this country, there are already indications that the experiences of England and Holland are being duplicated in this country. A woolen hosiery mill that formerly exported merchandise from Germany to the United States is now located in Lawrence, Mass., where it employs forty-five persons, thirty-eight of whom are Americans. This firm, owned by three refugees, brought over its own machinery from Germany and established in this country an industry new to it that now has an annual production of $150,000.

Another refugee firm, this one with a factory in New Jersey, is producing a new type of flexible, synthetic rosin on the basis of a patent brought to this country from Germany. This firm employs forty-five persons, forty-three of whom are Americans.

In the early days of Hitlerism, a far-seeing German left his native country with a large portion of his capital intact. Coming to the United States, he used his capital to go into business with two Americans. The result is a building project in Long Island with an annual production of $600,000 and an employment roll of over two hundred, all of them American citizens.

Another refugee founded a dress firm in New York City that employs eighty persons, seventy-five of whom are Americans.

In Chicago there is a firm manufacturing ladies' shoes that employs 203 people, 147 of whom are Americans.

Another refugee settled in Long Island City, where he manufactures springs for chairs, an industrial project employing seventy persons, sixty-seven of whom are Americans.

I have seen a listing of over one hundred refugee firms, large and small, that employ several thousands of American citizens, to say nothing of the amount of American raw materials and manufactured goods used by these firms in their manufacturing and business projects. Whereas the case against refugee displacement of Americans is one built largely on rumors that have been proved untrue, an unimpeachable case for the refugee can be built through a listing of the refugees employing Americans.

Yes, I believe that every man is his brother's keeper; that the more advantageously placed of us must care for our more unfortunate brethren. I feel that as Americans living happily in this great country of ours we owe it to ourselves to befriend and assist those who, through no fault of their own, have been dislodged from their traditional home ties by the fallacious racial theories of an unscrupulous dictator. It is true that charity begins at home, but it should not end there.

I am, however, happy that in the case of the refugees we can—as I hope this article shows—assist them while at the same time benefiting ourselves. The high caliber of the German refugee immigration, and the economic laws themselves, all combine to make our being humane and charitable so easy.

stitches to close a cut running from the right side of his nose to the outer corner of his mouth; eight to close his lower lip and six to patch up a badly damaged left eye.

By the time Tony, Mike Jacobs, and the other members of his entourage reached Orange, it was nearly two o'clock Thursday morning. Two thousand last-ditch fans had dwindled to a mere five hundred when the cavalcade of cars bearing Galento and his handlers pulled up in front of the Tony Galento Cafe.

"There's Tony now. His face is dotted with bandages. He looks bad. There are a few scattered cheers from the crowd."

"Tony has ducked into the kitchen in back of the bar, and Joe Jacobs is talking to the crowd now, trying to get them to leave. He's telling them that it's two o'clock, and that if the place isn't closed down Tony will lose his liquor license. They aren't paying much attention. They want to see Tony.

"Not tonight. Jacobs has five policemen with him, and he has just ordered them to clear the place out. They're doing it, too. Except for a few photographers and reporters, the place will be empty in a minute or two. Then maybe we'll see old Two-Ton Tony. The last of the crowd is being pushed through the doors now, and here comes Galento himself, at last! Tony looks as if he'd fallen into a cement-mixer. His face is covered with assorted bumps, bruises and cuts. There are bandages all over him. He hasn't said a word. Not one word! There's a picture for you: Tony Galento, the loudest and longest talker in the prize-fight picture today, in his own tavern after a fight, and not a word to say for himself.

"He's going over to the cash-register. He's just rung up 'no sale'—maybe you heard the bell just then—and now he's counting the night's receipts. Tony, you know, can spot a dollar farther away than most men can see the Empire State Building, and he doesn't care who knows it. He made $43,000 tonight, but he isn't going to let that interfere with his regular routine, which is to come here to his tavern every night at two o'clock and clean out the cash-register. A couple of waiters have just come up with some more money, and Tony's counting that, too. Somebody who looks like a reporter has just asked him a question. He looks up from the money in his hand. He's annoyed at something. LOOK OUT! Wham! Tony just hauled off and clipped the fellow under the eye. A nice little punch, that one. Evidently he didn't leave everything he had behind him in the ring at Yankee Stadium.

"Old Two-Ton is leaving now, and so's everybody else. He's going out through the kitchen. There's a gray-haired old lady out there, the cook, and she just said good night to Tony. Only she called him 'Anthony.' 'Good night, Anthony,' she said. Tony said, 'Good night,' the first word he's spoken since he came in. I guess the fight is finally over, so we'll say good night too. Good night it is."

Listeners interested in condition of former champion Jack Dempsey during critical illness by this time know his recovery is assured. He is seen here with wife, former Hannah Williams of stage; daughters, Barbara Judith and Joan

Admiring throngs during American Legion parade staged for Bob Hope as he came to Minneapolis for first theater personal appearance seemed to please the radio and film comic no end; also his wife, Dolores Reade of vaudeville

When Ben Bernie and All the Lads played a one-night stand in Charlotte, N. C., recently, it was so hot that nobody wanted to dance, and the Lads, sweltering in evening clothes, weren't so peppy, either. So during intermission, just before Bernie's CBS broadcast over WBT, the Ol' Maestro outfitted his Lads in swimming-trunks. When broadcast time arrived, the whole orchestra pranced onto the stage as they appear above, with Ben at mike in trunks
